Where, after the opening of the commission, the name of the bankrupt had been erroneously altered by the clerk of the solicitor, the Lord Chancellor refused to allow the commission to be amended, and directed that it should be superseded. In re Stammers, 1 Mont. & Mac. 290.

Where there was error in the description of the petitioning creditor in the petition and commission, but the docket papers were correct, the petition and commission were ordered to be amended and made conformable to the docket papers, after the commission had been prosecuted. Ex parte Guthrie, 1 Glyn & J. 245.

An alteration in the description of a bankrupt refused. Ex parte Thompson, 9 Ves. jun. 207.

A commission could always be resealed, and amended to correct a mistake in a name, if not opened. Ex parte Cheeswright, 18 Ves. jun. 480; 1 Rose, 228: S. P. Burrow's case, 10 Ves. jun. 286; Ex parte Harman, 2 Glyn & J. 25.

So, a fiat may be amended where no proceedings have taken place under it. In re Graham, 1 Deac. & Chit. 458.

The Lord Chancellor has no jurisdiction to order a fiat to be amended. In re Wright, 1 Deac. & Chit. 547.

If the fiat has been filed, the court of review has power only to order the fiat to be taken off the file of the court, for the purpose of the Lord Chancellor amending it, if he shall think fit. The court cannot amend the fiat, they having nothing to amend by. Ex parte Walker, 1 Deac. & Chit. 381.

4. Validity.

(a) Bankrupt's Instance.

A commission issued at the desire and request of a bankrupt is good at law. Shaw v. Williams, R. & M. 19—Abbott.

Although it is supersedeable. Ex parte Gardner, 1 Rose, 377: S. P. Ex parte Gang, 1 Mont. & Mac. 399.

It is said to be an invariable rule, that a commission taken out at the instance of the bankrupt cannot be supported, however hostilely it may be prosecuted. Ex parte Grant, 1 Glyn & J. 17.

But in one case the court refused to supersede, merely on that ground. Ex parte Staff, Buck, 249.

Semble, where the circumstances are such as to make the bankrupt the agent of the petitioning creditor, such a commission would be bad at law, on the ground of an implied concert on the part of the petitioning creditor. Id.

In one case, a commission was established under strong circumstances of suspicion, particularly that the affidavit and bond for the docket were written by the bankrupt, whose brother was the petitioning creditor. Ex parte Steele, 16 Ves. jun. 161.

No commission shall be superseded, nor any fiat annulled, nor any adjudication reversed, by reason of concert between the petitioning creditor and the bankrupt, or their agents, except where there is a petition to supersede pending. 1 & 2 W. 4, c. 56, s. 42.

The declarations of the petitioning creditor (since dead), made after the commission, are not evidence against the assignees, in an issue to try whether the commission was concerted between the petitioning creditor, the bankrupt, and the attorney. Harwood v. Keys, 1 M. & Rob. 204—Patteson.

(b) In breach of Faith.

If a commission be sued out by one of several creditors, in breach of good faith to the others, it is in general supersedeable. Ex parte Lowe, 1 Glyn & J. 78.

Application may be made to the court to supersede it, notwithstanding that it is supersedeable at the bankrupts office for want of prosecution. Id.

Though the requisites for sustaining a commission have been complied with, and the commission be legally valid, yet, if it has been taken out against good faith, and with a view to force compliance with an arrangement then pending between the parties, the court will supersede it upon the general principle which all courts apply in controlling the abuse of their process. The commission of bankruptcy introduced by the 4 Geo. 3, c. 33, is within that general principle. Ex parte Harcourt, 2 Rose, 203.

To dissolve a Partnership.]—A commission issued merely to dissolve a partnership is supersedeable. Ex parte Christie, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 314.

Although there be a trading, a debt, and an act of bankruptcy, yet if the commission be taken out for a purpose foreign from its object, as to work a dissolution of partnership, it is invalid and supersedeable at the costs of those who take it out. Ex parte Browne, 1 Rose, 151.

V. & Co., creditors of U. & Co., being displeased with the conduct of Wilbran, one of the partners in the firm of U. & Co., arrested U. & Co.; all the partners of which firm, except Wilbran, put in bail, but he continued in prison two months, and a commission having issued against U. & Co. it was superseded on the petition of Wilbran, on the ground that it was taken out for the purpose of dissolving the partnership as to him. Ex parte Wilbran, 5 Madd. 1; S. C. nom. Ex parte Wilbeam, Buck, 459.

To determine a Lease.]—If a commission be issued by a landlord for the purpose of determining a lease, it is invalid. Ex parte Gallimore, 2 Rose, 424.

Quere, how far a landlord issuing a commission may affect his interest, as landlord, in competition with the creditors? Id.

To compel a Compromise.]—Where the intention is to force the bankrupt to a compromise, the commission is invalid. Ex parte Harcourt, 2 Rose, 203.

The practice of striking a docket for the purpose not of a commission of bankruptcy, but of compelling a composition disapproved and was not aided. Ex parte Masterman, 2 Rose, 444.

Where the time for opening a fiat expires by the voluntary act of the petitioning creditor, and it appears that it was issued under suspicious circumstances, namely, for effecting a compromise with the creditors, and not with a bona fide intention of working it, and a second fiat is issued by another creditor under Lord Loughborough's general order, the court will not supersede the second fiat merely because it was issued by a creditor who was a party to the intended compromise under the first, unless it is clearly for the advantage of the general creditors that the first should stand, and the second be superseded. Ex parte Anjer, 2 Deac. & Chit. 67.

Where a party, by pretence of coming into a proposed arrangement with other creditors, protracts the prosecution of the fiat over the fourteen days, and then applies for a new fiat and to supersede the first, even if such second fiat be granted, the court will supersede the second, and order the first to stand: a fortiori, if the second be not in fact granted, but the first is proceeded with, the court will sustain the first under such circumstances. Ex parte Baker, 1 Deac. & Chit. 533.

To defeat Actions and Executions.]—Where a commission is taken out for the purpose of putting an end to an action by the bankrupt against the petitioning creditor, and not for the purpose of its operating as a commission for the benefit of the creditors, it will not be permitted to stand, even though an intention of working it for the legitimate purposes of a commission be afterwards adopted. Ex parte Bourne, 2 Glyn & J. 137.

It is no objection that it was sued out with intent to defeat a previous execution, if no collusion appear on the part of the bankrupt. Mensham v. Edmonson, 1 B. & P. 369; S. P. Ex parte Gardener, 1 Rose, 377; 1 Ves. & B. 45; Ex parte Edmonson, 7 Ves. jun. 303; Ex parte Arrowsmith, 14 Ves. jun. 209; Ex parte Bowes, 11 Ves. jun. 541. And see Smith v. Broomhead, 7 T. R. 300.

(d) Fraud.

If fraud be established, the court will supersede the commission before the finding of the commissioners. Ex parte Bather, Buck, 426.

A commission was superseded with costs for fraud and misconduct. Ex parte Conway, 13 Ves. jun. 62.

But a commission will not be superseded for fraud, where purchases have been made under it. Ex parte Edwards, 10 Ves. jun. 104.

A separate commission was superseded for fraud, after the bankrupt had obtained his certificate under it, and had entered into trade again, and the separate effects had been delivered up to the assignees under a joint commission, issued after the separate commission. Ex parte Poole, 2 Cox, 227.

Though a commission be taken out for an undue purpose, yet, if that purpose can be defeated without superseding the commission, the court will not interfere; otherwise, if the fraudulent object can only be prevented by the superseding of the commission. Ex parte Bourne, 2 Glyn & J. 137.

If it appear that persons have conspired together in the issuing of a fraudulent commission, the Lord Chancellor will direct the necessary documents to be laid before the Attorney-General, with a view to the institution of criminal proceedings against the parties. Ex parte Emery, Buck, 422.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 126, a certificated bankrupt may plead his bankruptcy to any action for a debt which was proveable under the commission.

By s. 127, where a bankrupt has been before a bankrupt, or has compounded with his creditors, or been discharged under any insolvent act, his certificate only protects his person from arrest and imprisonment, unless his estate produces 15s. in the pound; and his future estate (except tools, furniture, and wearing apparel) vests in his assignees, who may seize the same.

Semble, that s. 127, extends to cases where the former bankruptcy and certificate were anterior to the statute:—But held that the section, where applicable, does not entitle a creditor to proceed against the bankrupt after a second certificate, for a debt which he might have proved under the commission. Robertson v. Scora, 3 B. & Adol. 338.

Section 127, does not apply to a bankrupt who had obtained his certificate under a subsequent commission, before the statute passed; and, therefore, where A., after being discharged under an insolvent act, had a commission of bankrupt issued against him, and obtained his certificate before the passing of that statute, but did not pay 15s. in the pound, and he was afterwards sued on a bond executed before his discharge under the insolvent act, but not inserted in his schedule, it was held that his certificate did not bar the action. Carew v. Edwards, 4 B. & Adol. 351.

Under s. 127, the assignees under a second commission, where the bankrupt has not paid 15s. in the pound, take from the date of the assignment a present vested interest, by operation of law, in all future estate acquired by the bankrupt. Ex parte Robinson, 1 Mont. & Mac. 44.

A commission against an uncertificated bankrupt is void at law, and a nullity. Nelson v. Cherrell, 1 M. & Scott, 452; 8 Bing. 316; S. P. Martin v. O'Hara, Cowp. 823; Ex parte Brown, 1 Ves. & B. 60.

Inasmuch as there is nothing upon which it can operate, all the bankrupt's property being vested in the assignees under the first commission. Till v. Wilson, 7 B. & C. 684; 1 M. & R. 580. And see Ex parte Storks, 2 Rose, 179; 3 Ves. & B. 105.

A bankrupt is not entitled to be discharged out of custody for a debt contracted previous to a second commission issued against him, under which he had obtained his certificate, where he had not obtained his certificate under the first commission. Id.

The ground that he is a reputed owner of property by consent of the assignee under the first commission does not avail. Nelson v. Cherrell, 7 Bing. 663; 5 M. & P. 680.

Whether separate or joint. Ex parte Martin, 15 Ves. jun. 114; S. P. Ex parte Crew, 16 Ves. jun. 236.

A commission having issued against A., B., & C., and it being subsequently discovered that B. was an uncertificated bankrupt, the commission was ordered to be wholly superseded. Ex parte Wray, 1 Mont. & Mac. 195.

Quære, whether a joint commission sued out against three persons, pending two previous separate commissions against two of them, is valid in law as against the third. Butts v. Bilke, 4 Price, 240.

A joint commission was held not supersedable on the ground of a previous separate commission in Ireland. Ex parte Cridland, 3 Ves. & B. 94; 2 Rose, 164.

Where a prior and joint commission has been issued, but never acted on or superseded, such commission, not being in legal operation, does not invalidate a second separate commission. Warner v. Barber, 2 Moore, 71; 8 Taunt. 176; S. P. Ex parte Bullen, 1 Rose, 134.

A commission was issued against two partners. Subsequently a commission was issued against one of them, and three other persons: this latter commission was then superseded as to the partner who was included in the first commission, without prejudice as to the other three bankrupts. The assignees under the second commission sold an estate belonging to one of the three partners; the purchaser objected, that the second commission was altogether void, but the court held otherwise, and made a decree for specific performance. Burlton v. Wall, 1 Tam. 113.

A person against whom a second commission of bankrupt has been issued, and who has not paid 15s. in the pound, is liable to an action by any of his creditors, notwithstanding they have signed his certificate. Philpott v. Corden, 5 T. R. 287.

Even if the first commission had been superseded by consent. Thornton v. Dallas, 1 Dougl. 46.

It is a sufficient answer to an action by assignees, to prove that the party is an uncertificated bankrupt under a former commission still in force, and that on that occasion his effects were duly assigned; and this evidence may be given to invalidate the subsequent commission, without the notice required by 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 90. An award, stating such former bankruptcy as the answer to an action by subsequent assignees, must expressly shew that the effects were assigned under the first commission. Phillips v. Hopwood, 1 B. & Adol. 619.

The bankrupt's property continues liable, notwithstanding his certificate under a second commission not paying 15s. in the pound, only by judgment in an action; it is not to be taken by the assignees under the commission. Ex parte Hodgkinson, 19 Ves. jun. 291; 2 Rose, 172.

Doubts have been entertained whether an action may be maintained for a debt due before the commission, against a certificated bankrupt under the second commission where 15s. has not been paid. Bicke v. Nokes, M. & M. 303—Tenterden.

Where a bankrupt under a second commission has not paid 15s. in the pound, but has effects whereon to levy, a creditor may take out execution upon a judgment recovered before the second commission. Austin v. Denniford, 9 D. & R. 600.

The sheriff having levied upon goods which were in the possession of the defendant, who was a bankrupt, paid over the proceeds to the assignees on their claiming them; and the defendant afterwards again become bankrupt, and obtaining his certificate, but not paying 15s. in the pound, (and therefore not protected by 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 9,) a second execution issued for the same debt:—Held, that the latter execution was regular, without the first writ having been returned. Priest v. Milnes, 2 Chit. 114.

An action against a bankrupt who has obtained his certificate under a second commission, on a cause of action accruing previous to his second bankruptcy, may be maintained before a dividend has been made, or the period for making it allowed by 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 37, is elapsed, if evidence be adduced to shew that it is not probable from the state of the effects in the hands of the assignees, that the bankrupt will be able to pay 15s. in the pound. Jelfs v. Ballard, 1 B. & P. 467. And see Edmonson v. Parker, 3 B. & P. 185.

And to make the certificate a bar to the action it must appear affirmatively that the estate has produced 15s. in the pound: evidence that it probably will produce so much is not sufficient. Coverly v. Morley, 16 East, 225; 2 Rose, 119.

Where, on the defendant's pleading his bankruptcy, issue is joined, on the fact whether he had been discharged under a former commission, the plaintiff must shew that the defendant obtained his certificate under that commission, either by the regular proof of it, or by secondary evidence after a notice to produce it: without such notice the defendant's affidavit of conformity under the former commission was held insufficient. Graham v. Grill, 4 Camp. 282—Ellenborough.

If a defendant rely on a certificate under a second commission of bankruptcy against him, under which he has not paid 15s. in the pound, the plaintiff, in order to deprive him of the benefit of it, may produce the proceedings under the former commission, and prove that he submitted to it, without proving the trading, the act of bankruptcy, and the other facts which are necessary to support the commission as against third persons. Haviland v. Cook, 5 T. R. 655: S. P. Gregory v. Merton, 3 Esp. 195.

It would be no answer to the action to produce such certificate, unless the defendant could shew that under it he had paid 15s. in the pound. Id.

Where a docket has been struck, a second commission, obtained upon a subsequent docket, cannot be sustained without an order of supersedeas for the first. In re Hall, 1 Smith, 120.

It is in the discretion of the great seal to supersede a second commission against an uncertificated bankrupt, and even under circumstances on the petition of the bankrupt. Ex parte Lees, Poulden, 16 Ves. jun. 473.

In general, the second will be superseded, but special circumstances, as consent, fraud or laches in the creditors under the first, will support the second, and supersede the first; and though it is wrong to encourage a bankrupt to trade pending a commission, and to sue out a second, yet if it does happen, and the assignees will pay creditors under the first 20s. in the pound, and all the costs, the first will be instantly superseded. Ex parte Brown, 2 Ves. jun. 67; 4 Bro. C. C. 210.

A second commission superseded, and a proce-dendo issued on a former commission, which had expired. The petitioning creditor under the first commission having been prevented from prosecuting his commission by the artifices of a person, who was desirous of covering certain transactions, between himself and the bankrupt, by a lapse of two months. Ex parte Knight, 2 Rose, 319.

No second commission to be sent to the Lord Chancellor, without a note of what has passed on the first. Ex parte Freeman, 1 Ves. & B. 34; 1 Rose, 380.

(f) Where three Commissions.

Where a bankrupt has been a bankrupt before, or compounded with his creditors, or taken the benefit of the Insolvent Act, his future effects belong to his assignees under the commission, notwithstanding he obtains his certificate, unless his estate pays 15s. in the pound. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 127.

Where a defendant had been three times declared a bankrupt, and had not paid 15s. in the pound under the second commission, the court held, that the third commission was not void on that account, but voidable only. Todd v. Maxfield, 5 D. & R. 258; 3 B. & C. 222.

But it is void in equity, and may be superseded on the petition of a person summoned to attend the commissioners as a witness. Ex parte Lane, 1 Mont. 12.

A commission was sustained where one of the bankrupts had been the subject of two former commissions, and although he had obtained his certificate, yet he had not under the second paid 15s. in the pound. Ex parte Hodgkinson, 2 Rose, 172; 19 Ves. jun. 291.

A third commission issued against a trader who had not paid any dividend to his creditors under a first and second commission, is a nullity: and where a bankrupt had obtained his certificate under such circumstances:—Held, that he was not entitled to be discharged out of custody, although the debt for which he was detained was contracted before the issuing of that commission. Fowler v. Coster, 10 B. & C. 427.

It is no objection to the proof of a debt under a third commission, that the creditor might have proved it under the second commission, under which the bankrupt has obtained his certificate, if the bankrupt has not paid 15s. in the pound under the second commission. Ex parte Morley, 2 Deac. & Chit. 45.

(g) After Composition and Commission.

A debtor having compounded with his creditors became bankrupt, and obtained his certificate, but without paying 15s. in the pound; another commission, afterwards issued against him, is not supersedeable on the ground that all his property belonged to the assignees under the first commission. Ex parte Baker, 1 Rose, 452.

Where a second commission issued against a person who had, previously to the first commission, compounded, the Lord Chancellor refused to supersede the second, because 15s. in the pound had not been paid under the first. Ex parte Welsh, 1 Mont. 276.

Under the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 127, no action can be maintained against a certificated bankrupt for a debt due before his commission, although he has compounded with his creditors before his commission, and his effects have not produced 15s. in the pound under it. Eicke v. Nokes, M. & M. 303—Tenterden.

The proving a debt under a commission of bankruptcy issued against a person who had before compounded with his creditors, and whose estate under the commission had not, nor would, produce 15s. in the pound, but who, before he became bankrupt, paid the creditors with whom he compounded the full amount of their debts, was held to discharge the bankrupt, in respect of his future estate and effects, from an action for the debt so proved. Read v. Sowerby, 3 M. & S. 78; 2 Rose, 288.

A deed of composition, embracing all the creditors, under which many of them came in, is, in case of a subsequent commission of bankruptcy, such a "compounding with his creditors," as will, within the stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 9, deprive the bankrupt of the benefit of his certificate, to protect his future effects from being liable to be taken in execution, although some of the creditors did not come in under the deed of composition. Slaughter v. Cheyne, 1 M. & S. 182; 2 Rose, 110.

But a deed of composition, framed only for the joint creditors of two bankrupts, under which seven of the joint creditors, whose debts exceeded 2000*l.*, accepted of the proffered composition of 3*s.* in the pound, but which was not signed or accepted by three other joint creditors, whose debts amounted to 92*l.*, nor by the separate creditors of one of the bankrupts, is not such a "compounding with his or their creditors," as will within that statute avoid the effect of a subsequent certificate under a commission, to protect the future estate and effects, as well as person, of one of the bankrupts, who was afterwards sued to judgment, and had execution levied on his goods, by one of his separate creditors. Norton v. Shakespeare, 15 East, 619; 1 Rose, 347.

(h) After a Scotch Sequestration.

Semble, that English creditors are precluded from suing out or sustaining a commission against a debtor who was the subject of an antecedent and operative Scotch sequestration. Scotland (Bank) v. Stein, 1 Rose, 462, App.

Whether an English commission or a Scotch sequestration is to be preferred, as the mode of administering the debtor's effects, depends upon their priority. Id.

Where a petition for a sequestration against a party domiciled in Scotland was on the 25th of January, and the first deliverance upon that petition on the 26th of January, and the sequestration awarded by interlocutor of the 16th of August, and a commission of bankruptcy issued on the 15th of March, upon an act of bankruptcy committed on the 4th of January, held that the sequestration had the priority. Geddes v. Morat, 1 Glyn & J. 414.

5. Impeachment of Validity.

(a) By Bankrupt.

In what cases.—It is not competent for a bankrupt to set up a former act of bankruptcy, in order to invalidate his commission. Rex v. Bullock, 1 Taunt. 71; 2 Leach, C. C. 966; 14 Ves. jun. 452; S. P. Mercer v. Wise, 3 Esp. 221; Kennett v. Duff, 2 Smith, 44; 9 East, 21.

But a bankrupt, who has obtained his certificate under a joint commission issued against him and others, may, in an action of trover against a stranger, controvert the validity of the commission, or take advantage of its illegality, because between such stranger and the plaintiff there is no reciprocity. Butts v. Bilke, 4 Price, 240.

A bankrupt after he has obtained his certificate may petition to supersede because he was not a trader. Ex parte Lewis, 2 Glyn & J. 208.

It is in the discretion of the court to supersede a commission, whether the bankrupt has or has not got his certificate under it; but the court would not do so upon the petition of joint creditors who suffered a considerable time to elapse without having obtained an order to prove, for the purpose of assenting to or dissenting from the certificate, in a case where the certificate was lying for confirmation, and no misconduct was imputed to the bankrupt. Ex parte Cutten, Ex parte Appleton, Buck, 68.

Quære, whether a bankrupt, or any person in the same circumstances, can impeach the commission upon a prior act of bankruptcy, and a debt sufficient to support a commission, of which a third person may avail himself as a defence to an action by the assignees? Ex parte Donovan, 15 Ves. jun. 6.

Though a bankrupt would be restrained from repeated attempts to supersede the commission, amounting to vexation, he was not prevented from bringing a second action; and an inquiry was directed relative to an estate, by the sale of which he proposed to pay his debts; and the commission was ordered to proceed in the usual course. Ex parte Bryant, 1 Ves. & B. 506; 2 Rose, 1.

A bankrupt was permitted to petition against the commission in forma pauperis. Ex parte Northam, 2 Rose, 140.

A bankrupt, like a pauper, loses his privilege by misconduct; therefore where, after two petitions dismissed, he presented a third for the same purpose, it was dismissed with costs, and not being able to pay them he was committed, but the court would not make an order to restrain him from presenting any more. Ex parte Shaw, 2 Ves. jun. 40.

Must not be attainted or committed.—A person attainted of felony cannot be heard by petition to the Chancellor to supersede a commission of bankruptcy issued against him, whether his attainer directly arose out of the commission of bankrupt, or is wholly irrelevant to it. Rex v. Bullock, 1 Taunt. 82; 14 Ves. jun. 452; S. C. not S. P. 2 Leach, C. C. 966.

In one case held that a bankrupt could not supersede his commission with consent of all the creditors, while under commitment by the commissioners. Ex parte Bean, 1 Rose, 211; 17 Ves. jun. 47.

Afterwards held that a bankrupt under commitment might petition to supersede. Ex parte McGennis, 18 Ves. jun. 289; 1 Rose, 60.

So, a commission was superseded on the petition of the bankrupt, under commitment for not answering, with the consent of all the creditors. Ex parte Brown, 2 Swans. 290.

When also Proceedings at Law.—A bankrupt bringing an action to try the validity of the commission, cannot at the same time proceed with a petition to supersede it on the same ground. Ex parte Burgess, Jacob, 559.

A bankrupt was not allowed the costs of his petition to supersede the commission, where he was in a situation to try its validity at law in the first instance. Ex parte Marks, 1 Glyn & J. 70.

If it appear by the petition of a creditor to supersede a commission, that an action is commenced to try its validity, the court will not supersede the commission till the event of the trial is known. Ex parte Price, Buck, 230.

When a bankrupt petitions to supersede, and at the same time brings an action against the petitioning creditor to try the validity of the fiat, he must elect which remedy he will pursue. Ex parte Drake, 2 Deac. & Chit. 91; 1 Mont. & Bligh, 486.

Under the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 17, a bankrupt cannot proceed on a petition to supersede, and also have an issue at law; he must elect his remedy, and if the petition be part heard he is precluded from an issue. Ex parte Williamson, 1 Deac. & Chit. 549.

A petition by the bankrupt to supersede the commission was dismissed without a counter petition, the commission having been established by an action at law, the bankrupt not appearing. Ex parte Caponhurst, Buck, 476.

Where a bankrupt has, in an action against the assignees, established that there was no act of bankruptcy, the court will not, unless under very special circumstances, delay superseding the commission till after another trial. It is not a sufficient ground that the assignees have evidence to support the commission, which they were prevented doing by surprise. Ex parte Dick, 1 Rose, 51.

Where a bankrupt is in a situation to try the validity of his commission at law, the court will leave him to his action, putting him upon terms as to the time of the trial. Ex parte Billiald, Buck, 220.

Surrender necessary.—A bankrupt cannot supersede his commission before a surrender. Ex parte Bean, 1 Rose, 211; 17 Ves. jun. 47; S. P. Ex parte Jones, 11 Ves. jun. 409; Ex parte Roberts, 1 Madd. 72.

The court of Review will not hear the petition of a bankrupt to supersede a fiat until he has surrendered, notwithstanding the petition is presented before the forty-second day, and the petition comes on before the time for surrendering has expired. Ex parte Drake, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 486; 2 Deac. & Chit. 91; S. P. contra, Ex parte Nichols, 2 Glyn & J. 101.

A commission may be superseded by consent, without surrender. Ex parte Glyn, 1 Mont. 124.

But not after the forty-second day. Ex parte Peaker, 2 Glyn & J. 337.

Although the adjudication has been reversed, a creditor has no right to the annulling the fiat, even on a petition presented before the forty-second day, if, up to the hearing of petition, the bankrupt has never surrendered. Ex parte Clarke, 2 Deac. & Chit. 194.

A bankrupt who has neglected to surrender, cannot supersede his commission, with the consent of his creditors, without first obtaining leave to surrender. Ex parte Jones, 8 Ves. jun. 328.

The rule that a commission shall not be superseded under which the bankrupt has not surrendered was dispensed with, upon application of all the creditors who had proved, the bankrupt being out of the country, and not, according to the belief of the petitioner, having heard of the commission. Ex parte Hopkins, 1 Rose, 228.

A bankrupt presented a petition to supersede his commission, and then died before the last meeting of the commissioners, without having surrendered himself; the petition was revived by his personal representative. The commission was ordered to be superseded. Ex parte Whittington, Buck, 235.

The petition of a personal representative of a bankrupt, who had died after the last meeting of the commissioners without having surrendered, was dismissed. Ex parte Gardiner, Buck, 458.

If a bankrupt die without surrendering, a petition presented by his representative to supersede the commission cannot be heard, unless it make out a case that would induce the court to permit a surrender if the bankrupt were living. Ex parte Crowther, Buck, 480.

The Lord Chancellor would supersede a commission to which the bankrupt had been prevented surrendering through ignorance or mistake. In this case a separate commission issued against one of two partners, to which the bankrupt did not surrender, a joint commission was afterwards taken out, to which he had surrendered, and had afterwards been committed to take his trial for not appearing to the first. Ex parte Lavander, 1 Rose, 55.

If a bankrupt be unable, in consequence of illness, to attend an adjourned third meeting, and the commissioners, therefore, adjourn the meeting, the court will, upon consent of all the creditors, supersede, without another surrender. Ex parte Norcott, 1 Mont. 281.

A commission under the circumstances was superseded, on a petition for that purpose, signed by the solicitors of the bankrupt, and all the creditors who had proved, and upon the certificate of such signature by the commissioners, the bankrupt being abroad and not having surrendered. Ex parte Carling, 2 Glyn & J. 35.

Operation of Discharge out of Custody.—If a bankrupt obtain his discharge out of custody in an action, by a judge's order, on the ground of his bankruptcy, he is afterwards precluded from contesting the validity of the commission in a court of law. Goldie v. Gunston, 4 Camp. 381—Ellenborough.

Although a person, against whom a commission has issued, and who has obtained his discharge out of custody in an action pending against him on the ground of his bankruptcy, cannot afterwards dispute the validity of the commission in a court of law, he may, if the commission be irregular, apply to the great seal for a supersedeas. Watson v. Wace, 7 D. & R. 633; 5 B. & C. 153; 2 C. & P. 171.

Semble, that under the provisions of stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 59, a bankrupt in custody, by insisting on his discharge previous to proof of a debt, does not estop himself from disputing the validity of the commission. Mott v. Mills, 3 C. & P. 197—Park.

If a creditor apply to prove his debt, and the bankrupt, upon such application, say to the creditor, "you must give me my discharge before you prove," and he is discharged accordingly, but at the same time saying, that it is his intention to dispute the commission as he is not a trader, it is unsettled whether he can maintain an action to dispute the commission. Id.

Operation of Acquiescence.]—Signing a deed reciting the bankruptcy, &c. is an acquiescence in the validity of the commission. Ex parte Hall, 1 Mont. 354. And see Ex parte Hill, 1 Mont. 9.

If a trader, against whom a commission has issued, as acquiesced in it so far as to go to the different creditors to solicit them to vote for particular persons as assignees, he cannot afterwards question the commission in an action for money had and received against those persons, whether he is an object of the bankrupt laws or not. Like v. Howe, 6 Esp. 20—Mansfield.

A commission after a considerable acquiescence by the bankrupt, cannot be superseded without a trial at law. Ex parte Kirk, 15 Ves. jun. 464.

A petition by a bankrupt to supersede for want of an act of bankruptcy presented two years after the issuing of the commission was dismissed. Ex parte Abell, 1 Glyn & J. 199.

Where the bankrupt acquiesces, the Chancellor will, upon petition, restrain him from proceeding at law. Ex parte Leigh, 2 Glyn & J. 332.

Injunction granted to restrain an action of ejectment brought by a bankrupt, at the instigation of the petitioning and another creditor, to recover the possession of premises sold under a commission acquiesced in for seven years. Ex parte Grant, Buck, 90.

Taking the allowance under a commission does not preclude an application by the bankrupt to supersede. Ex parte Giles, 1 Deac. & Chit. 548; 1 Mont. & Bligh, 268.

A trader, who has been declared a bankrupt, does not preclude himself from trying the validity of the commission in an action against the assignees, by having surrendered under the commission, and by having presented a petition to the Chancellor to enlarge the time for his surrender. Mercer v. Wise, 3 Esp. 219—Kenyon.

A bankrupt, who had abandoned a petition, presented by him in June, 1821, for a supersedeas, and had joined in a conveyance of part of his property, and solicited and procured the requisite signatures to his certificate, was restrained from proceeding in an action brought by him against the messenger to impeach the commission. Ex parte Cutten, 1 Glyn & J. 317.

If a person, against whom a commission issues, acquiesces in it so far as to take a part in the sale of his own effects under the commission, he shall not afterwards be allowed to question it. Clarke v. Clarke, 6 Esp. 61—Heath.

But a bankrupt who assists in the sale of his own goods under the commission, for the purpose of protecting his property, and seeing that it is sold to the best advantage, is not thereby estopped from disputing the validity of the commission. Hearne v. Rogers, 4 M. & R. 486; 9 B. & C. 577.

Neither is he so estopped by giving notice to his lessors of a farm that he is a bankrupt, and is willing to deliver up the lease, which they accept, his assignees not being parties or privies to the transaction. Id.

A bankrupt may petition to supersede his commission on the ground that he was no trader, though he has obtained his certificate under it, if, upon an action by the assignees against a creditor, their title is successfully resisted, and the commission becomes inoperative. Ex parte Bass, 4 Madd. 270.

A bankrupt who had never surrendered, was restrained by order from proceeding in actions against the assignees and a purchaser under the commission, to try its validity, after long acquiescence and acts of co-operation in the proceedings consequent upon the commission done by him or under his authority. Ex parte Horaby, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 1.

A bankrupt cannot petition to supersede a commission on the ground of insufficiency of the petitioning creditor's debt, when he has lain by two years, without adopting any proceeding for that purpose. Ex parte Hooper, 1 Deac. & Chit. 117.

Mode of Proceeding.]—An injunction was ordered upon an interpleading bill, filed by a debtor against the bankrupt and his assignees, but the court would not suffer a bankrupt by means of such a bill to try the validity of his commission. Lowndes v. Cornford, 1 Rose, 180.

To a bill by a bankrupt who had taken the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors' Act, and his assignees under that act, against his assignees under the commission, and others, stating improper conduct and collusion, and that all or most of the creditors under the commission were satisfied, and praying an account; a demurrer on the ground that the mode of proceeding was by petition in bankruptcy was allowed. Sutton v. Davis, 1 Rose, 79.

On demurrer, held, that a bankrupt cannot file a bill against a debtor to his estate, on the ground of the invalidity of the commission, and of collusion between his assignees and the debtor; the proper course being an action to try the validity of the commission, or a petition to remove the assignees. Hammond v. Attwood, 3 Madd. 158.

(b) By other Persons.

Assignee.]—Assignees may apply to supersede even for defects appearing on the proceedings, but such applications will be watched with great jealousy, and it is their duty to do all in their power to clear away doubts as to the validity of the commission before they apply. Ex parte Graves, 1 Glyn & J. 86.

An assignee who has proved his debt, and against whom, upon petition, an action has been directed to be brought, cannot dispute the validity of the commission; if he does, it is at the hazard of his proof. Ex parte Jecks, 1 Rose, 393.

Petitioning and other Creditors.]—A petitioning creditor cannot dispute the validity of a commission sued out by himself, although in an action brought against him by the assignees, it appearing that, on the balance of accounts, the bankrupt was indebted to him in a less sum than 100*l*. Harmer v. Davis, 1 Moore, 300; 7 Taunt. 577.

Though the commission is not opened, the petitioning creditor cannot proceed at law if it is capable of prosecution. Ex parte Prowse, 1 Glyn & J. 92.

A commission sealed, but not opened, is not supersedeable at the instance of the petitioning creditor, without notice to the bankrupt. In re —, 1 Glyn & J. 23.

Or shewing that he cannot be found. Ex parte Perth, 1 Mont. & Mac. 10.

A commission sealed, but not opened, decided to be superseded at the instance of the petitioning creditor, reserving to the bankrupt in the order all his rights, whether by action or petition. Ex parte Palmer, 1 Mont. & Mac. 211.

A judgment creditor having been directed to try the validity of the commission, succeeded upon the trial: the petitioning creditor was directed to pay the costs of superseding the commission and of the petition. Ex parte Heming, Buck, 350.

Where a commission is superseded at the cost of the petitioning creditors, and some of them pay the whole costs, the court has no jurisdiction in bankruptcy to order the rest of the petitioning creditors to contribute. Ex parte Wilmhurst and Brooks, 1 Glyn & J. 4.

A commission of bankruptcy was superseded on consent of the petitioning creditor. Ex parte Trigwell, 1 Ves. & B. 348; 2 Rose, 109.

Where the petitioning creditor petitions to supersede, a petition by the bankrupt, except for the assignment of the bond, does not lie. Ex parte Sylvester, 1 Mont. 125.

A creditor having proved a debt under a commission, is not thereby prevented from impeaching the commission in an action against himself. Stewart v. Rickman, 1 Esp. 108—Kenyon. But see Walker v. Burnell, 1 Dougl. 305, and Collins v. Forbes, 3 T. R. 322.

A creditor who has proved is not thereby precluded from applying to supersede the commission. Ex parte Bonsor, 2 Rose, 61.

A creditor petitioning to supersede must not only state that he was a creditor at the time of issuing the commission, but also at the time of presenting his petition. Ex parte Flight, 1 Deac. & Chit. 78.

Other Persons.]—Where a party had presented a petition in bankruptcy, seeking relief and benefit under a commission in respect of a particular transaction, he was restrained by an order of the court from putting in issue the validity of the commission in an action commenced against him by the assignees in respect of the same transaction. Ex parte Anderton, 1 Mont. & Mac. 177.

Although an order in council licensing a person to export and import certain goods to and from an enemy's country, does not authorize his residence and trading in the enemy's country, yet if he be there for the fair purposes of his licence, it is not a ground for superseding a commission founded on his petition. Ex parte Buglehole, 1 Rose, 271; 10 Ves. jun. 525.

In an action for goods of a bankrupt against the person who sold them, an advertisement of the defendant's describing them as the goods of the bankrupt, precludes him from disputing the bankruptcy. Maltby v. Christie, 1 Esp. 342—Kenyon.

In an action of trover by the assignees of a bankrupt, the defendant's attorney admitted that the party had been duly declared bankrupt:—Held, that the defendant was thereby precluded from objecting to any of the proceedings under the commission, unless he had given notice to dispute it. Perring v. Tucker, 3 M. & P. 557.

An attorney having given an undertaking to put in bail for his client, which he neglected to do, an order was made upon him to put in such bail, and an attachment issued against him. The attorney became a bankrupt. The plaintiff in the action has a sufficient interest under these circumstances to support an application to supersede the commission. Ex parte Bold, 1 Cox, 423.

6. Abatement by Death.

Death of Bankrupt.]—By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 26, no commission abates by reason of a demise of the crown; or by the death of the bankrupt after adjudication.

But a commission cannot proceed after the death of the party, against whom it issued, before adjudication. Ex parte Beale, 2 Ves. & B. 29; 2 Rose, 140.

Where the bankrupt died before adjudication, the commission was held null and void, without any writ of supersedeas. Ex parte Green, 1 Deac. & Chit. 230.

Though a bankrupt dies, not having surrendered, the commission may proceed. Ex parte Dewdney, 15 Ves. jun. 494.

An assignment of commissioners after the death of the bankrupt was good. Troughton v. Gitley, Amb. 630.

A separate commission established, though the other partner died before the assignment. Ex parte Smith, 5 Ves. jun. 295.

A petition to supersede, presented in the lifetime of the bankrupt, ordered to stand over, on his death, until his personal representatives, or those entitled to take out administration, were served. Ex parte Leworthy, 1 Mont. 54.

Death of Petitioning Creditor.—Where a petitioning creditor died after issuing the commission and before adjudication, it was ordered that the commissioner should be at liberty to adjudicate upon the deposition of his executors. Ex parte Tanner, 1 Mont. & Mac. 292: S. P. Ex parte Winwood, 1 Glyn & J. 252.

A commission having issued on the petition of four partners, one of whom died before the day of fiat and of the commission, it was ordered to be superseded forthwith, with liberty to the surviving partners to lodge new docket papers and issue another commission. Ex parte Wakefield, 1 Mont. & Mac. 291.

7. Renewed Fiat.

If by reason of the death of the commissioners, or for any other cause, it becomes necessary, a commission might be renewed upon payment of half fees only. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 26.

A renewed commission was granted on the petition of a creditor, the bankrupt, the commissioners, and the assignees being dead. Ex parte Hobbes, Buck, 134.

Where a renewed fiat is prayed by a creditor, by reason of the death of commissioners, the assignees must be served with the petition. Ex parte Ray, 1 Deac. & Chit. 341.

If a commission is renewed to a distant place from where the majority of the creditors reside and the original commission was worked, for the convenience of the creditors, the court will renew it back to the original place. Ex parte Waring, 1 Mont. 216.

A petitioning creditor being unable to obtain adjudication under the commission sued out by him, he was permitted, under the circumstances, to take another commission directed to another list upon the same docket papers. Ex parte Stead, 1 Glyn & J. 301.

A renewal may issue for the bankrupt to surrender previous to superseding. Ex parte Galpin, 1 Mont. 207.

Where commissioners take more than the statutable fees, the commission will be renewed to other commissioners. Ex parte Kirby, 1 Mont. & Mac. 405.

A renewed commission transfers all the commissioners' authority to the new commissioners. Ex parte Hill, 1 Mont. 5.

Upon issuing a renewed country commission, it is the duty of the assignees or their agent (the solicitor) to ascertain whether the commissioners are able and willing to act; otherwise they are liable to the costs of a new fiat, if it be necessary, from inability or unwillingness to act on the part of the commissioners who are named in the renewed fiat. In re Wilkinson, 2 Deac. & Chit. 112.

8. Auxiliary Commissions.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 20, auxiliary commissions might issue for proof of debts under 20*l.* or the examination of witnesses when necessary.

Before that statute, a commission having issued in London against A. & B., bankers at Shrewsbury and Chester, auxiliary commissions were directed to issue to those places, for the purpose of taking the proofs of creditors holding notes under 20*l.* Ex parte Perry, 1 Rose, 12.

Liberty to examine the bankrupt under an auxiliary commission was refused. Ex parte Scott, 1 Rose, 12: S. P. In re —, Buck, 523.

Parties claiming debts, and summoned to attend in the country, for examination under a commission, are not "witnesses" within the statute, so as to entitle them to an auxiliary commission for their examination. Ex parte Kirby, 1 Mont. & Mac. 440.

Where a commission against a distant country bank was executed in London, another commission was ordered, on account of the holders of small notes in the country, to be executed there for the purpose only of receiving proof of debts there; the proofs so taken to be received under the London commission. Ex parte Upham, 17 Ves. jun. 212.

An auxiliary commission to receive proof of debts in the country was limited to notes under 20*l.* Id.

9. Joint or separate Fiat.

(a) Validity.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 16, a commission may be sued out against any one or more partners of a firm, by any creditor who would be entitled to a commission against all. By the same statute, a joint commission may be superseded as to one party; and the validity of the commission is not to be affected as to any person as to whom the commission is not ordered to be superseded.

A joint commission, invalid in its concoction, may be superseded as to one of the bankrupts only. Ex parte Bygrave, 2 Glyn & J. 391.

Formerly, if a joint commission were invalid as to one partner, it was bad as to all. Ex parte Martin, 15 Ves. jun. 114.

But it is now doubted whether a joint commission, invalid as to one partner, can, after a supersedeas as to that one partner, be rendered valid against the remaining partners. Ex parte Wray, 1 Mont. & Mac. 195.

And whether a commission can be superseded as to one of two bankrupts, to give validity to a subsequent commission against the other with a third, quære? Ex parte Burlton, 2 Glyn & J. 344.

A joint commission against two out of three partners is bad. Allen v. Hartley, 4 Dougl. 20.

Even where one partner is an infant or lunatic, there cannot be a joint commission of bankruptcy against the others; separate commissions must be taken out. Ex parte Layton, 6 Ves. jun. 440; S. P. Ex parte Henderson, 4 Ves. jun. 163.

Where there was a separate commission against one of three partners, and afterwards a commission against two of the firm, the first commission was ordered to be superseded, and the costs paid out of the joint estate. Ex parte Smith, 1 Glyn & J. 256.

Where a joint fiat issues against A. & B., and the debt is separate, it is void, and the subsequent superseding it as to A. cannot make it good as a separate fiat against B. Ex parte Clarke, 1 Deac. & Chit. 544.

In such case, a petition praying to supersede against B. need not state the objection that is relied on. Id.

(b) Proceedings when both are issued.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 17, if a separate commission be issued after a joint commission, it was directed to the same commissioners, who were to convey to the same assignees; after which proceedings under it were to be stayed, and it was to be annexed to the joint commission; provided that the chancellor might direct either a joint or separate procedure.

The former course in bankruptcy was, that a joint and a separate commission stood together: now, the joint commission alone stands. The assignees can at law recover both the joint and separate estate, and the same distribution is made as if both commissions stood. Ex parte Martin, 15 Ves. jun. 115: S. P. Ex parte Brown, 2 Ves. jun. 69; 4 Bro. C. C. 21. And see stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 17.

Although a second commission, where a former one is in operation against any of the same parties, is void, yet, where the convenience of administering a partnership fund requires it, and it can be done without prejudice to transactions which have taken place under the first commission, the court will so dispose of the first commission as to prevent its being an impediment to the prosecution or validity of the second. Ex parte Mason & Rawlinson, 1 Rose, 425: S. C. nom. Ex parte Rawson, 1 Ves. & B. 160.

It is a settled rule, in case of different commissions, to support that which will do the most ample justice, superseding all the rest. Id.

Either commission is now, however, superseded, as may best answer the ends of justice. Ex parte Crew, 16 Ves. jun. 236.

The court will invariably, by superseding the separate commission, give effect to the joint one, unless there be a strong reason against the court's so interfering; and it is not a sufficient reason, that by such interference a separate creditor to a great amount will be divested of his right of voting in the choice of assignees. Where a separate commission is superseded, to give effect to an arrangement of this nature, the petitioning creditor is to be reimbursed his costs out of the joint estate. Ex parte Pachelor, 2 Rose, 26.

Joint and separate estates are not consolidated, when it is practicable to keep them separate. Ex parte Sheppard, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 415.

A separate commission will not be superseded at the instance of the creditors under a joint commission, if the joint commission cannot be sustained. Ex parte Roberts, 1 Madd. 72; 2 Rose, 378.

A separate commission is superseded to give effect to a subsequent joint one, upon the principle of convenience and general advantage to the creditors; and the prior petitioning creditor, unless he has been acting mala fide, receives all the costs of superseding. Ex parte Brown, 1 Rose, 433; 1 Ves. & B. 60.

Sales, &c. having taken place under a separate commission, the court, in preference to superseding, yet in order to give a joint effect to a subsequent joint one, directed it to be impounded in the office of the secretary of bankrupts. Ex parte Rowlandson, 1 Rose, 416.

A commission against T. C. and three others, superseded as to T. C. on the petition of the assignees, under a commission previously issued against T. C. and another. In re Coleman, 1 Mont. & Mac. 15.

Two commissions having issued, and one being superseded, the proofs under that were ordered to be received under the other. Ex parte Upham, 17 Ves. jun. 212.

A separate commission having been sued out against A., and a joint commission having also issued against him and B., and the assignees under the separate commission having recovered a verdict in trover against C.; the court ordered the amount of the verdict to be brought in to abide the event of a petition to the Chancellor to supersede such separate commission. Hodgkinson v. Travers, 2 D. & R. 409; 1 B. & C. 257.

Where the joint and separate creditors, at a meeting duly convened for that purpose, agree to consolidate the two estates, the court of Review will refer it to the commissioner, to inquire whether such consolidation is for the general benefit; but will not, upon such a resolution alone, bind the interest of the absent creditors of both classes. Ex parte Part, 2 Deac. & Chit. 1.

IX. DECLARING PARTY A BANKRUPT.

1. Adjudication.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 24, the commissioners, upon proof of the petitioning creditor's debt, and of the trading and act of bankruptcy, shall thereupon adjudicate him a bankrupt.

This power is now given to any one or more of the six commissioners of the court of bankruptcy. 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 7.

Upon the reversal of any adjudication, the chancellor may order a fiat to be rescinded or annulled; and such order will have the force of a supersedeas of a commission. 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 19.

Adjudication stayed, on affidavit that the party owed no debt to the petitioning creditor, and had not committed an act of bankruptcy. Ex parte Fletcher, 2 Deac. & Chit. 90.

In one case, the lord chancellor refused to stay proceedings under a commission not opened, upon an allegation that there was no petitioning creditor's debt, the commission and adjudication being a matter of right under the statute. Ex parte Lancaster, 1 Rose, 220; 17 Ves. jun. 512.

The lord chancellor had not authority to compel the commissioners to declare a party against whom a commission had issued a bankrupt: his authority was limited to ordering them to proceed in their judgment. Ex parte Perrin, Buck, 510.

Upon every application for an appointment for opening any fiat, the registrar shall, in the presence of the solicitor applying for the same, allot such fiat by ballot to one of the commissioners of the court, according to the regulations to be from time to time presented by the Court of Review, except in cases of second or renewed fiats, which shall go to the same commissioner before whom the former commission or fiat was prosecuted. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxv.

2. Advertisement in Gazette.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 25, after adjudication, the commissioners are to publish notice thereof in the Gazette, and thereby appoint three public meetings for surrender, the last of which is to be on the forty-second day.

Altered to two or more public meetings, the last to be on the forty-second day after publication of the bankruptcy in the Gazette. 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 20.

In lieu of attaching a copy of the Gazette to the proceedings in each bankruptcy, the deputy registrar shall make a memorandum of the appearance of the advertisement in the Gazette, and of the date thereof, with proper reference to the file, to facilitate search. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxvi.

An order was made, under circumstances, restraining the insertion in the Gazette of the declaration of bankruptcy, until the proceedings should be laid before the lord chancellor. Ex parte Fletcher, 1 Ves. & B. 350.

The insertion of adjudication in the Gazette was suspended by the lord chancellor, where, upon inspection of the proceedings, it appeared that the act of bankruptcy had not been proved. Ex parte Lanchester, 17 Ves. jun. 512; 1 Rose, 220.

The insertion was suspended, only where, on inspection of the proceedings, no bankruptcy was found; or, under a country commission, to give the opportunity of producing the evidence. Ex parte Tarleton, 19 Ves. jun. 464.

The advertisement will not be stayed if the requisites are sufficient. Ex parte Edwards, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 255.

An application to suspend was refused, where there was no apparent defect. Ex parte Ainsworth, 2 Glyn & J. 89.

The advertisement will be suspended upon an affidavit denying the bankrupt's insolvency, and his having committed an act of bankruptcy. Ex parte Preston, 1 Rose, 259; S. P. Ex parte Foster, 17 Ves. jun. 414; 1 Rose, 49.

But the operation of the commission in other respects is continued. Ex parte Fletcher, 1 Rose, 336.

The publication of the advertisement will not be postponed, although a large majority of the creditors consent. Ex parte Raffenstein, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 84.

An advertisement was suspended on the petition of a creditor until the next Gazette day, when, upon the consent of all the creditors, the commission was superseded. Ex parte Ogilby, 1 Glyn & J. 250.

The advertisement will not be postponed to give effect to a compromise, where the commission is not disputed. In re Hambden, 2 D. & C. 219.

If there be a bona fide intention to prosecute a commission, an advertisement in the Gazette of the adjudication may be dispensed with, as where notice of the adjudication in a country commission was given at the bankrupt office on the 28th day, in order to obtain a certificate for the purpose of inserting the adjudication in the Gazette; it was held to be sufficient to support the commission. Ex parte Soppit, Buck, 81.

3. Disputing Adjudication.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 17, if the bankrupt shall be minded to dispute the adjudication, and present a petition, praying the reversal thereof, to the Court of Review, within two calendar months, if he shall be within the United Kingdom, or within three months if in Europe, or within one year if elsewhere, or within such time as the court shall allow, not exceeding one year from the date of the adjudication: the court shall hear and decide upon the petition, or, if wished by the bankrupt, at his costs, direct an issue, to be tried by a jury, before one of the judges of the court; and the determination on the petition, or on the verdict, is to be conclusive: provided that an appeal is given to the Chancellor.

By sect. 18, after any such issue tried, the chancellor, on petition, may order another fiat to issue.

Upon a petition by the bankrupt under s. 18, to reverse the adjudication, he is entitled to have copies of the depositions upon which the commissioner adjudicated, he undertaking to prosecute the commission. Ex parte Jackson, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 394.

If assignees are chosen before the petition is heard, they may adduce further evidence of the act of bankruptcy; but, if the question was only between the bankrupt and the petitioning creditor, quære? Id.

A bankrupt is not prevented by the 17th sect. from applying to supersede, although two months have elapsed from the date of the adjudication. Ex parte Palmer, 1 Deac. & Chit. 341.

PROOF OF DEBTS.

1. Generally.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 46, at the meetings appointed by the commissioners, creditors may prove their debts on their own oaths, or if they live remote from the place of meeting, they may prove by affidavit, sworn, if in England, before a judge or commissioner of the bankruptcy court; 1 & 2 Will.

4, c. 56, s. 34,] master in ordinary or extraordinary in Chancery, or, if abroad, before a magistrate, and attested by a notary public, British Minister, or consul: provided, that the commissioners may examine upon oath, either by word of mouth or by interrogatories, persons claiming to prove, and require such further proof and examination of other persons as they may think fit.

By sect. 47, bona fide creditors may prove, notwithstanding a secret act of bankruptcy.

The 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 30, authorizes the commissioners of the bankruptcy court to adjourn the proof of a debt to be heard before a subdivision court, and to direct issues to try disputed debts if desirable.

All debts which may be proved are discharged by the certificate but such debts which are not provable are not discharged. Bamford v. Burrell, 2 B. & P. 1.

The proof of a debt, which must at all events be due, is not to be rejected because there is a question to be tried between the bankrupt's estate and the creditor, although it is proper that no dividend should be paid on that proof until the question be determined. Ex parte Ackroyd, 1 Glyn & J. 391.

Proof cannot be mounted on proof. Ex parte Smith, Buck, 492.

2. Nature of Debt.

(a) Must be liquidated.

Though unliquidated damages cannot be proved, yet if the demand be partly of that nature, and partly liquidated, the creditor, having a security, may apply it first to the former, then to the latter, and may prove for the residue. Pulteney v. Warren, 6 Ves. jun. 94.

Where a creditor has a debt which is capable of being ascertained without the intervention of a jury, and the debtor becomes a bankrupt, it may be proved under the commission. Uttersen v. Vernon, 3 T. R. 539.

Proof was allowed on promissory notes given for liquidated damages by compromise of an action for seduction per quod servitium amisit. Ex parte Mumford, 15 Ves. jun. 289.

Bankruptcy is no bar to an action of trover, though the conversion happened before the bankruptcy; and where a plaintiff has an election to bring trover or assumpsit, he may bring the former, though the bankruptcy would be a bar to the latter. Parker v. Norton, 6 T. R. 695.

In a case of fraud by a bankrupt, a party is not bound to prove his debt under the commission, but he may waive the contract, and sue for the tort. Parker v. Crole, 2 M. & P. 150; 5 Bing. 63.

Bankruptcy and certificate are no bar to an action in tort against a broker for selling out plaintiff's stock contrary to orders. Id.

If the owner of bank stock give to a stock-broker a power of attorney to sell, with orders not to sell without directions, and the broker sells the stock without the knowledge of the owner, and conceals the sale till a commission issue against him, his certificate is not a bar to an action in tort. Id.

If a person undertake with A., to settle with certain bankers, a balance due to them on an acceptance of A.'s, but he neglect to take up the bill, and he give to A. a new undertaking to deliver up to him his acceptance within a month, or give him a bond of indemnity, but does not perform either, and the bankers sue A., and pending a rule for a new trial, the person becomes a bankrupt, the certificate is not a bar to an action by A. Yallop v. Ebers, 1 B. & Adol. 700.

A bankrupt is liable to the judgment on a bail-bond. Cockerill v. Owston, 1 Burr. 436.

(b) Must have accrued before Act of Bankruptcy.

A debt accrued subsequent to an act of bankruptcy, and previous to the issuing of the commission, is not provable. Bamford v. Burrell, 2 B. & P. 1.

The stat. 46 Geo. 3, c. 135, s. 2, does not restrain a creditor from proving a debt contracted before the act of bankruptcy, on which the commission issued, but after notice of a prior act of bankruptcy. Ex parte Bowness, 2 M. & S. 479; 2 Rose, 266.

School money for the education of defendant's son, payable half yearly, is not a debt due until the end of the half year, so as to be provable under a commission against the parent who becomes bankrupt a few days before the end of the half year, though he had, just before his bankruptcy, taken his son home for the holidays, the contract not being thereby put an end to; and consequently the bankrupt's certificate under the statute is no bar to an action for the half year's education, &c. Parlow v. Dearlove, 4 East, 438; 1 Smith, 281; 3 Esp. 78.

Where, by agreement between the plaintiffs, bankers at Carlisle, and the defendants, bankers at Newcastle, plaintiffs were weekly to send to the defendants all their own notes, and the notes of certain other banking houses; and the defendants were in exchange to return to the plaintiffs their own notes, and the notes of certain other bankers, and the deficiency, if any, was to be made up by a bill drawn by the defendants in favour of the plaintiffs, at a certain date:—Held, that the notes so sent by the plaintiffs to the defendants constituted a debt against them, which the defendants might pay by a return of notes according to the agreement, but if they made no such return, or a short return, and gave no bill for the balance, such balance remained as a debt against them, which was provable by the plaintiffs under a commission issued against the defendants on an act of bankruptcy committed after the time when the bill for the balance, if drawn, would have been due; and that the plaintiffs could not maintain an action, to recover damages as for a breach of contract against the defendants, who had obtained their certificates. Forster v. Surtees, 12 East, 605.

If a trader agree to purchase goods, to be delivered on a future day, which has not arrived when the commission issues: the difference between the value of the goods and the purchase money is not provable. Boorman v. Nash, 9 B. & C. 145.

Where a person, who had contracted for a certain quantity of oil to be delivered to him at a future day at a certain price, became bankrupt before that day arrived, and obtained his certificate:—Held, that he was nevertheless liable to an action for not accepting and paying for the oil, and that the proper measure of damages was the difference between the price which he had contracted to pay for the oil, and the market price at the time when the contract was broken. Id.

Upon a bankruptcy, proof of a debt under bonds securing an annuity was rejected, on the ground that a bill accepted for the arrear not being dishonoured till after the bankruptcy, the bonds were not forfeited at the bankruptcy. Ex parte James, 5 Ves. jun. 709.

A father, being tenant for life of an estate, with remainder to his son in tail, the father and son join in mortgaging the estate for the debt of the father. The father becomes bankrupt, and the mortgaged estate is sold under the commission. The son cannot prove any debt under the commission in respect of his interest in the estate, not being damnified until after the bankruptcy. Kittier v. Raynes, 1 Cox, 105.

A broker acting under a commission del credere paid money to the principal on a loss which happened before the bankruptcy of the underwriter, but the payment was not made until after the bankruptcy. Quære, whether this debt can be proved by the broker under the commission against the underwriter? Ex parte Dubois, 1 Cox, 310.

If a surety become bankrupt the creditor cannot, under the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 8, prove the debt if it became due after the bankruptcy. Ex parte McMillan, Buck, 287.

A bankrupt sued by his surety, or person who was liable for his debt, at the time of the commission issued against him (though the surety became such after the act of bankruptcy, and paid the debt after the issuing of the commission), cannot, without specially pleading it in like manner as after the stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 7, avail himself of his certificate under the stat. 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 8, which discharges the bankrupt, having his certificate, from all such demands at the suit of every such person, in like manner to all intents and purposes as if such person had been a creditor before the bankruptcy. Stedman v. Martinnant, 12 East, 664; 1 Rose, 106. And see S. C. 13 East, 427.

(c) When discharged.

After a commission has issued, the statute of limitations does not affect debts not previously barred. Ex parte Ross, 2 Glyn & J. 46, 330.

If a debt which is barred under a commission, be revived prior to a second, it is provable under the latter. Roberts v. Morgan, 2 Esp. 736—Eyre.

A debt due on a bill from which the drawer has been discharged by want of notice is not provable under a commission issued against him. Ex parte Rohde, 1 Mont. & Mac. 431: S. C. nom. Rohdor v. Proctor, 6 D. & R. 510; 4 B. & C. 517.

Proof under the bankruptcy of one joint debtor, after receiving a composition from the other, was expunged, the release to one being a release to both. Ex parte Slater, 6 Ves. jun. 146.

Where a lender, having taken out execution on a warrant of attorney, gave up the proceeds received from the sheriffs, under an agreement with the assignees of the borrower (who gave him a release), that he should come in with the other creditors for the balance due to him: such agreement held to mean a provable balance, and would not let in the debt if affected with usury. Ex parte Banglay, 1 Rose, 168.

A. being agent of, and also partner in the Leith Banking Company, opened an office at Carlisle, and circulated there promissory notes, drawn by the Company's cashier in Scotland, and made payable to the bearer on demand at the company's office in Leith:—Held, this was in violation of the statutes passed for the protection of the Bank of England, and that a debt formed of notes so issued could not be proved under a commission of bankruptcy. Ex parte Randleson, 1 Mont. & Mac. 86.

A seller abroad of contraband goods is entitled to prove, unless he be a participator in smuggling them. Ex parte Cavalierre, 2 Glyn & J. 227.

A debt arising out of a contract to convey British goods to a market in an enemy's country, cannot be proved under a commission of bankruptcy after peace has been established between that country and Great Britain. Ex parte Schmalding, Buck, 93.

A proof may be made of a debt to a broker of the city of London, arising out of a transaction in which he acted as a merchant, although in contravention of his duty in his office and the bond given by him. Ex parte Dyster, 2 Rose, 349.

A bill was indorsed to a broker in consideration of the money paid by him in effecting insurances, one of which was illegal; the acceptor becoming bankrupt, the petition of the indorsee to prove was dismissed, as to what arose upon the illegal insurance, and the bankruptcy being some years ago, an inquiry was directed as to the rest. Ex parte Mather, 3 Ves. jun. 373.

If one of three partners obtain by forgery a sum from the sale of stock, which he, in fraud of his partners, pays into the banking-house, and withdraws it, it is provable against the joint estate by the stock proprietor, although he has not prosecuted or given evidence against the convicted felon. Ex parte Bolland, 1 Mont. & Mac. 315.

An order for an inquiry before commissioners, or an issue, to try whether a debt proved was usurious, merely on a deposition of the bankrupt as to the usury, was refused. Ex parte Burt, 1 Madd. 46.

If an assignee who has received effects become bankrupt, a creditor under the commission in which he was assignee, but who proved his debt after the bankruptcy of the assignee, is not entitled to any proof under the assignee's commission. Ex parte Stonehouse, Buck, 531.

Two of three assignees become bankrupt, the solvent assignee pays a debt due from the three to the estate:—Held, that he is entitled to prove a third of the debt against each of the other assignee's estates. Ex parte Hunter, Buck, 552.

If either of the estates should prove deficient, quære, whether he can prove a moiety of the deficiency against the estate of the other assignee? Id.

Two assignees, one solvent, the other a bankrupt with a partnership to which he had advanced money which he had as assignee, the solvent assignee cannot prove this under the joint commission, there being no contract with him. Ex parte Apsey, 3 Bro. C. C. 265.

An assignee, having purchased goods at a sale under the commission, becomes bankrupt:—ordered, that such of the goods as remained in specie should be redelivered, and that what he had resold should be proved as a debt. Ex parte Spong, 1 Rose, 133.

At a dividend meeting under a commission against A., a claim was entered on behalf of B., and a sum ordered to be appropriated in the hands of C., the sole assignee, to answer eventually the amount of the several sums proved and claimed; but before the claim of B. was perfected into a proof, C. misapplied the money so placed in his hands, and became bankrupt:—Held, that B. was not entitled to recover from the estate of A. his proportion of the sum appropriated in the hands of C., and misapplied by him. Ex parte Grant, 1 Mont. & Mac. 77.

3. Annuities.

(a) Proof for.

Statute.—By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 54, annuity creditors, by whatever assurance the same be secured, and whether there be arrears or not, may prove for the value of the annuity.

What Annuities are provable.—The giving up of a business on consideration of an annuity is not such a consideration as can be valued under the statute, it being confined to money considerations. Ex parte Saxe, 2 Deac. & Chit. 172; S. C. contra, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 134.

The bankruptcy and certificate of one of several joint grantors of an annuity and covenantors for payment, discharges the bankrupt, but not his co-defendants. Baxter v. Nicholls, 4 Taunt. 90; 2 Rose, 111.

Where an annuity has been granted for a sum paid as a consideration for it, that is money had and received from the time of the grant; if the annuity is at any subsequent time set aside, and the grantor become bankrupt after the grant, but subsequent to its being set aside, it is barred by his certificate. Walker v. Liscarray, 6 Esp. 98—Ellenborough.

If the penalty in a bond for securing an annuity have once become forfeited, before a bankruptcy, the value of the annuity may be proved. Wyllie v. Wilkes, 2 Dougl. 519: S. P. Ex parte Rowlatt, 2 Rose, 416.

If the bond be not forfeited till after, it cannot be proved, and the obligor may be taken in execution on a judgment thereon. Perkins v. Kempsland, 2 W. Black. 1106.

Where there is a bond and covenant to secure an annuity, though the bond be barred by the certificate, the penalty being forfeited by a breach, the annuitant may proceed upon the covenant for subsequent breaches, which could not be proved. Ex parte Fell, 10 Ves. jun. 351.

Where bonds were void under the annuity act, a petition to be admitted a creditor for the sums advanced was dismissed, on the ground that the petitioner having insisted on his securities at the date of the commission, it was not the same debt. Ex parte James, 5 Ves. jun. 709.

A. purchases an annuity of B., secured upon lands in fee simple, falsely represented to be of equal value with the annuity, and under that representation not inrolled. Upon a petition to prove for the value of the annuity, the Chancellor gave liberty to prove, without prejudice to a bill reserving dividends. Ex parte Wright, 1 Rose, 308.

Where B. purchased an annuity from C., through the agency of the bankrupts, and the consideration money was received by the bankrupts as agents for C., and placed by them to C.'s account, and they afterwards became bankrupts:—Held, that B. could not prove the consideration paid for the annuities under their commission, unless it were established that the grant of the annuities was merely a colourable contrivance for the purpose of obtaining B.'s money in payment of the debt due from C. to the bankrupts. Ex parte Shaw, 2 Glyn & J. 106.

An annuity granted by A. to B. was secured by a covenant by C., a surety, to pay the annuity in case A. made default, and by a judgment entered up against A. and C.; the annuity remained unpaid from January, 1823, and A. having left the country, in February, 1824, C. became bankrupt, and afterwards obtained his certificate; C. having died, B. filed a bill to have the arrears of the annuity paid out of his real and personal estates:—Held, that neither the value of the annuity, nor the sum due on the former judgment was provable under C.'s commission; and, therefore, that his certificate was not a bar to the plaintiff's demand. Johnson v. Compton, 4 Sim. 37.

Sale of Security.—The commissioners are not authorized to order a sale of an estate on which an annuity is charged, for payment of the value of the annuity. In re Deloe, 1 Mont. 492. And see Ex parte Slack, 1 Glyn & J. 346.

An annuity creditor who has a policy of insurance cannot prove without a sale of the policy. Ex parte Tierney, 1 Mont. 78.

Where the grantor of an annuity secured by real property becomes a bankrupt, and arrears of the annuity become due after the bankruptcy, the real security will, on the petition of the grantee, be ordered to be sold, and the produce applied in satisfaction of so much of the arrears and value of the annuity, as the same would extend to satisfy, and the grantee be allowed to prove the residue under the commission. Ex parte Key, 1 Madd. 426.

(b) Mode of Valuation.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 54, the commissioners in ascertaining the value are to have regard to the original price given, deducting therefrom such diminution in the value as shall have been caused by lapse of time since the grant to the date of the commission.

In valuing an annuity for proof under a commission, the commissioners since the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 54, cannot enter into the consideration of the altered state of the health of the annuitant. Ex parte Fisher, 2 Glyn & J. 102.

Where the consideration is not money, but property, the price paid by the grantee for that property is not the criterion of value, provided such value be altered by accidental circumstances, whether general or local, or by improvement of the property. Id.

The state of the money market is not a circumstance which can affect the rule. Ex parte Webb, 2 Glyn & J. 29.

If an annuity be granted in consideration of the relinquishment of a business, the creditor is entitled to prove for the market value, without reference to the original consideration given, or the lapse of time since the grant. Ex parte Saxe, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 134: S. C. contra, 2 Deac. & Chit. 172.

The same principle was held on the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 17, which required a valuation of annuities, but contained no directions as to the mode of doing it; under that statute, the commissioners were to ascertain the value by the price paid, and the time of enjoyment, and not by the stipulated price for redemption, nor the original price simply. Ex parte Whitehead, 19 Ves. jun. 557; 2 Rose, 358; 1 Mer. 127.

Yet, where the purchase might have turned out to the disadvantage of the grantee, he ought to be allowed the benefit of circumstances which have caused it to operate in his favour. Ex parte Thistlewood, 1 Rose, 290; 19 Ves. jun. 236.

Where it was agreed between a mother and a son, that she should join in conveying her life interest in an estate to a purchaser, the son undertaking, in consideration thereof, to secure to her an annuity; but after the execution of the conveyance, and before the annuity was secured, the son became bankrupt:—Held, that the mother was not entitled to prove for the value of her life estate, but only for the value of the annuity, and the arrears at the date of the bankruptcy. Ex parte Brockless, Buck, 406.

(c) Annuity Sureties.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 55, persons entitled to annuities granted by bankrupts cannot sue persons who are collateral sureties for payment, until they shall have proved against the bankrupt's estate for the value and arrears; and if the surety after proof pay the amount, he may be discharged, but if not, he may be sued for accruing payments until the annuitant shall have been satisfied the amount proved with 4 per cent. interest; and after payment, the surety is to stand in the place of the annuitant; and the certificate of the bankrupt is a discharge from the claims of both annuitant and surety, in respect of the annuity, provided that the surety shall be entitled to credit in account with the annuitant, for dividends received by the annuitant, before the surety shall have paid the amount proved.

The grantor of an annuity having become bankrupt before the passing for the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, the grantee sued the surety for arrears subsequently accruing after that statute came into operation:—Held, that he could not maintain the action until after proof of the annuity under the commission, in pursuance of ss. 54 & 55. Bell v. Bilton, 1 M. & P. 574; 4 Bing. 615.

So, where judgment was entered up on a warrant of attorney against the grantor and his surety before 1st April, 1825, after which day the former became bankrupt:—Held, that no execution could issue against the surety until the value had been ascertained by the commissioners under s. 54. Hone v. Morgan, 4 M. & R. 559.

If a surety covenant to pay the annuity in case default is made by the grantor, and the surety become bankrupt before default, the value of the annuity is not provable. Ex parte Thompson, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 219; 2 Deac. & Chit. 126.

A surety, who is compelled by the annuity creditor after the bankruptcy and allowance of the certificate of the principal, to pay several sums of arrears due after the issuing of the commission, is not within stat. 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 8, and therefore may have an action against the principal for such sums, and hold him to bail. Welsh v. Welsh, 4 M. & S. 333.

The surety, who pays arrears of the annuity after the bankruptcy of his co-surety, cannot prove under the commission the value of the annuity, by s. 17, of 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, and therefore the certificate is not a bar to the action for contribution. Browne v. Lee, 6 B. & C. 689; 7 D. & R. 701.

A surety, redeeming the annuity after the bankruptcy and certificate of the grantor, is entitled to the benefit of the grantee's proof, under the grantor's commission, and to proceed by action against the grantor for the arrears of the annuity subsequent to the commission. Watkins v. Flanagan, 3 Russ. 421; 1 Glyn & J. 199.

So, he may maintain an action against him for the value of the redemption of the annuity. Watkins v. Flanagan (in error), 8 Moore, 480; 1 Bing. 413; 13 Price, 24; 3 B. & A. 186.

And the court of Chancery will not restrain him by injunction from issuing execution for the arrears: quære, as to the price of redemption? Watkins v. Flanagan, 6 Madd. 280.

4. Apprentices Fees.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 49, where a bankrupt shall have apprentices at the time of the issuing of the commission, it shall be a discharge of their indentures; and if any sum shall have been paid as an apprentice fee, the commissioners may order such part of it as they may think reasonable to be returned.

Where the agreement of apprenticeship is concluded, and the apprentice fee is paid, and the apprentice is actually serving under the concluded agreement, and the execution of the indentures has not taken place from mere inattention, the father is entitled to a return of part of the fee under that section. Ex parte Haynes, 2 Glyn & J. 122.

5. Attachments, and Orders for Payment of Money.

An attorney in custody when a commission issues against him, upon an attachment for non-payment of money, is discharged by his certificate. Re v. Edwards, 9 B. & C. 652.

A certificate discharges a debt arising from the receipt of money by the bankrupt, in his character of an attorney. Ex parte Culliford, 8 B. & C. 220.

Where an attorney, employed by both vendor and purchaser, receives the purchase money and omits to pay it over, and afterwards becomes bankrupt, and obtains his certificate, the court will not make a rule compelling him to pay the amount, unless fraud be shewn: otherwise if there be fraud. In re Bonner, 1 Nev. & M. 555.

An attachment will not lie against an attorney, for non-payment of money pursuant to the master's allocatur after his bankruptcy. Baron v. Martell, 9 D. & R. 390.

An order of the court of Chancery for payment of a sum of money may be proved under the commission, and will be barred by the certificate. Wall v. Atkinson, 2 Rose, 196; Coop. C. C. 199.

A certificated bankrupt ordered to be discharged out of custody, upon an attachment for disobedience of an order of Chancery for payment of money. The act of the court was an indemnity to the jailor. Id.

A party committed under an order in bankruptcy, for disobedience to an order for payment of money and costs, which were taxed, afterwards becoming bankrupt and obtaining his certificate, ordered to be discharged. Ex parte Eicke, 1 Glyn & J. 261.

An attachment of the bankrupt after commission has issued, for non-payment of money into court under an order in a suit instituted against him before the commission issued, is not such an election to proceed against the person of the bankrupt as will satisfy the debt. Ex parte Benjamin, Buck, 41.

A defendant compromised an action for libel, by agreeing to apologise, and pay the plaintiff's costs. The apology was made, and a rule of court obtained, ordering the defendant to pay the costs, amounting to 67*l.* On default made, an attachment issued, and the defendant was committed. While in custody he became bankrupt, and obtained his certificate:—Held, that the sum named in the rule of court was a debt which might have been proved under the commission, and that the defendant was entitled to be discharged out of custody. Riley v. Byrne, 2 B. & Adol. 779.

6. Bastardy Liabilities.

A defendant's liability as surety in a bastardy bond is not discharged by his bankruptcy and certificate. St. Martin (Overseers) v. Warren, 1 B. & A. 491; 2 Stark. 188.

Nor is a bankruptcy a discharge of a promise to allow a weekly sum for the support of an illegitimate child; but if any arrears accrued before the bankruptcy, the certificate will be a discharge as to such arrears. Millen v. Whittenbury, 1 Camp. 428—Ellenborough.

7. Bills and Notes.

Exchange of Paper.—Where there was cross paper dishonoured on each side, and both parties were bankrupts, the proof, as between the two estates, was confined to the cash balance with regard to the dishonoured bills. Ex parte Earle, 5 Ves. jun. 833.

In such case, no proof can be made in respect of the bad paper, or the excess of damage eventually sustained on that account. Ex parte Walker, 4 Ves. jun. 373.

A. draws a bill on B., payable to his own order, which B. accepts, and B. draws a bill on A. payable to the order of B., which A. accepts, for their mutual accommodation; both bills are payable at the same time, have the same dates, and contain the same sums: one is a good consideration for the other, and neither is an indemnity; so that, if either party become a bankrupt, the bill accepted by him may be proved under his commission, and consequently, to an action brought on it, his bankruptcy may be pleaded. Rolfe v. Caslon, 2 H. Black. 570. And see Storey v. Barnes, 7 East, 435; 3 Smith, 441.

The defendants gave the plaintiff their own bills, accepted by third persons, in exchange for acceptances of other bills drawn by them upon him, the different sets of which tallied in the gross amount, (except as mentioned, &c.) but no stress was laid at the time on these trifling differences:—Held, that the transaction being that of an absolute exchange of securities, each party was confined to his remedy on those securities; and that the law would not raise an implied promise in the defendants, who had become bankrupts, to repay to the plaintiff the amount on the balance of his acceptances, paid after such bankruptcy. Buckler v. Buttivant, 3 East, 72.

A. and B. interchangeably accept accommodation bills; B.'s bills are discounted with C., who, upon their becoming due, agrees to renew them; but A. having fallen into discredit, C. does not take his name to the bills, but draws for the amount on B. only: before these new bills became due, A. becomes bankrupt: Semble, B. might have proved, under A.'s commission, for the former accommodation bills, this being a payment, as it were, of those bills. B. having arrested A. for the amount of the bills paid to C., after A. obtained his certificate, the court discharged A. upon filing common bail. Frances v. Dubeis, 2 Smith, 36.

Where A. and B. were bankrupts, proof was allowed in respect of a cash balance due from A. to B., but the dividends were retained to reimburse the estate of A. what it should overpay upon a distinct transaction on an advance of bills from A. to B., some of which were dishonoured. Ex parte Metcalfe, 11 Ves. jun. 404.

Six persons were in partnership as bankers, under two firms, and J. and W. J., two of them, carried on a distinct trade; and G. accepted a bill for J. and W. J., and, in exchange, they delivered to him, at the same time, a bill to the same amount, drawn and accepted by the six, but not indorsed by J. and W. J.:—Held, that it was a purchase by G., and that, having paid his acceptance, and the bill he received being dishonoured, he was entitled to prove the amount against J. and W. J. Ex parte Hustler, Buck, 171; 1 Glyn & J. 9; 3 Madd. 117.

Pledge of Bills and Notes.]—The pledgee of a bill or note, (though for part only), may prove the whole amount. Ex parte Crossley, 3 Bro. C. C. 237.

Where A., at request of B., and upon the security of a bill from him for the amount, delivered goods to C., and such goods were afterwards partly paid for by C., and then B. became bankrupt:—Held, that A. could only prove, as against the estate of B., the sum remaining due for the goods, and not the full amount of the bill. Ex parte Reader, Buck, 381.

Transferred without Indorsement.]—A person giving cash for a bill or note without the indorsement of the person from whom he takes it, cannot prove it under his bankruptcy. Ex parte Shuttleworth, 3 Ves. jun. 368; S. P. Ex parte Harrison, 2 Bro. C. C. 615.

Unindorsed bills, given by the bankrupt, must be sold, and the holder may prove for the residue. Ex parte Smith, 2 Cox, 209.

Payment after Bankruptcy.]—Where A. lent his acceptances to the defendant before his bankruptcy, but which were not paid till afterwards, A. may maintain an action against the defendant, for money paid to his use, notwithstanding his bankruptcy and certificate, and notwithstanding the defendant, before his bankruptcy, gave his receipt to A., acknowledging the receipt of so much money as the acceptances amounted to. Smith v. Gale, 7 T. R. 364.

Defendant draws a bill upon the plaintiff, payable to defendant's own order; plaintiff, at his request and on his promise to indemnify them, accept the bill, which becoming due after defendant becomes bankrupt, they pay it to prevent being sued: plaintiffs cannot prove this as a debt under the commission: so the defendant cannot plead his certificate in bar of this action, on the promise to indemnify, &c. Young v. Hockley, 3 Wils. 346; 2 W. Black. 839.

Where the plaintiff lent his indorsement upon a bill at the desire of the drawer; but without any privity with the defendant (the acceptor), who had himself no consideration at the time for such acceptance; and the day before the bill became due the defendant became bankrupt, and it was immediately after taken up by the plaintiff (the indorser) out of the hands of the indorsee:—Held, that the bill was provable as a debt under the defendant's commission. Houle v. Baxter, 3 East, 177. And see Forster v. Surtess, 12 East, 605.

A. draws a bill on B., in favour of C., who indorses it to D., who discounts it: before the bill is due, A. becomes a bankrupt and obtains his certificate; when the bill is due, payment is refused; upon which C. refunds the money to D. which was advanced in discount, and takes back the bill. To an action brought by B. against A. on the bill, A. cannot plead his bankruptcy. Brooks v. Rogers, 1 H. Black. 640.

The defendant drew a bill on the plaintiff, but promised to pay it himself when due, and afterwards became a bankrupt; upon the plaintiff being afterwards sued, and obliged to pay the bill:—Held, that he could not prove any debt under the commission. Vanderheyden v. De Pailba, 3 Wils. 528; S. P. Chilton v. Whiffen, 3 Wils. 13.

A., the payer of a bill, indorses it in blank, and delivers it to B.; B. writes above the blank indorsement, "Pay C. or order." B. takes up the bill after a commission of bankruptcy had issued against the acceptor. Petition that he may be at liberty to prove it under the commission dismissed with an offer of a case. Ex parte Isbester, 1 Rose, 20.

If the payee of a note pay the amount of it to an indorsee after the bankruptcy of the maker, he may recover against the maker, notwithstanding his bankruptcy and certificate. Hewie v. Wiggins, 4 T. R. 714.

But if A. give a note to a trader, and also an ordnance debenture as a collateral security; and the trader pledge the debenture, and the note, being indorsed by him, is paid by A. when due, and afterwards the trader becomes a bankrupt, then A. redeems the debenture, and brings an action against the bankrupt for what he pays for such redemption, the bankrupt's certificate may be pleaded in bar to the action. Johnson v. Spiller, 1 Dougl. 167, n.

If A., at the instance of a trader, accept a bill payable to his order, not having any effects of the trader in his hands, and the trader becomes a bankrupt before the bill becomes due; and A. pays it when due to an indorsee, it is not a debt against the trader till actually paid, and therefore is not discharged by his certificate. Heskuyson v. Woodbridge, 1 Dougl. 166, n.

If the acceptor of a bill, not due, become bankrupt, and the indorser be afterwards obliged to take up the bill on account of non-payment by the acceptor, he may prove the amount under the commission; and if the acceptor afterwards obtain his certificate, he will be discharged from the debt, and the court will enter an exoneration on the bill piece, in an action against him at the suit of the indorser. Joseph v. Orme, 2 N. R. 180. And see Stedman v. Martinant, 13 East, 427; and Cowley v. Dunlop, 7 T. R. 565.

The drawer of a bill, which had been accepted, and was not refused payment by the acceptor till after the bankruptcy of the drawer, is discharged by his certificate, inasmuch as such debt is made provable under his commission, by the statute 7 Geo. 1, c. 31. Starey v. Barns, 7 East, 435; 3 Smith, 441.

Acquired after Bankruptcy.]—A bill or note having been indorsed after the bankruptcy of the acceptor, the indorsee can only prove such debt, as the indorser could have proved at the time of the bankruptcy. Ex parte Deey, 2 Cox, 423.

Notes bought up after the bankruptcy of the maker cannot be proved unless it be shewn that the persons from whom they were purchased were individually entitled to a proof, in respect of the notes. Ex parte Rogers, Buck, 490.

Other Cases.]—The holder of notes payable in cash or Bank of England notes, who did not receive them immediately from the maker, was held not entitled to prove the amount as for money had and received against the estate of the maker. Ex parte Davison, Buck, 31: S. P. Ex parte Ineson, 2 Rose, 225.

Where a note, payable with interest twelve months after notice, was expressed to be "for value received," and the maker became bankrupt before any notice was given:—Held, that the payee might prove it under the commission. Clayton v. Goeling, 5 B. & C. 360; 8 D. & R. 110.

Where part of the account between two mercantile houses, which became bankrupt, consists of bills that may be proved against both estates, there can be no proof in respect of bills as between the two houses, unless there is a surplus after satisfying the holders of the bills. Ex parte Reason, Jacob, 274.

Proof was allowed under a commission, in respect of a bill alleged to be lost, but the most extensive indemnity was ordered to be given, and to be settled by the commissioners. Ex parte Greenwoy, 6 Ves. jun. 812.

The costs arising from the protest of bills shall be proved under a commission, only when incurred antecedent to the act of bankruptcy, not to the issuing of the commission. Ex parte Moore, 3 Bro. C. C. 597.

8. Bonds.

Voluntary Bonds.]—Voluntary bonds, though given under a strong moral obligation, as a marriage contracted, and property received as husband, or by a man having a wife living at the time, are not provable, being void as against creditors. Gilham v. Locke, 9 Ves. jun. 613.

A voluntary bond, though void against creditors, being valid as between the parties, its surrender is a consideration that will sustain a substituted bond against creditors, unless with a fraudulent design, as by an insolvent to substitute a valid for an invalid security against creditors; and therefore such substituted bond may be proved. Ex parte Berry, 19 Ves. jun. 218.

Bonds of Indemnity.]—A bond of indemnity to a surety for payment of instalments, the first of which was not due till after the bankruptcy of the principal, cannot be proved, though payable before the bankruptcy. Ex parte Walker, 4 Ves. jun. 385.

Where there is a bond of indemnity, and the petitioners have paid part before bankruptcy, and part after, they may prove the whole. Ex parte Cockshot, 3 Bro. C. C. 502.

Where the bankrupt had given an indemnity bond, and the amount of damage was not ascertained, the court of Review directed a claim to be entered. Ex parte Marshall, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 242.

Other Bonds.]—A bond payable by instalments, given in consideration that the obligee would marry and settle a small estate upon a servant woman, and also maintain a bastard of the obligor, is within the 7 Geo. 1, c. 31, and may be proved under a commission of bankrupt against the obligor. Ex parte Cotterell, Cowp. 742. And see Brooks v. Lloyd, 1 T. R. 17.

A bond for the payment of an annuity for a term of years, is within the statute 7 Geo. 1, c. 31, s. 1. Patterson v. Banks, Cowp. 543.

A bond, conditioned for the payment of a sum to the executors of the obligee, and interest in the mean time to him, on certain days or within twenty days after demand, is not provable under a commission against the obligor, though no interest has been paid, and there has been no demand, for, until neglect to pay after demand only, the bond was forfeited. Winter v. Mousely, 2 B. & A. 802. And see Parker v. Ramsbotham, 5 D. & R. 138; 3 B. & C. 257.

If a bond by a principal and surety has not been forfeited before the bankruptcy of the surety, the debt is not barred by the certificate. Alsop v. Price, 1 Dougl. 160.

Where a bond was given under the statute 4 Geo. 3, c. 33, s. 1, by a trading member of parliament, and judgment was obtained in the suit in which the bond was given after the bankruptcy, but before the certificate:—Held, that the bankruptcy and certificate were no discharge to the bond. Campbell v. Jameson, (in error), 8 Moore, 281; 1 Bing. 320; 5 B. & A. 250: S. P. Hunter v. Campbell, 1 Chit. 731; 3 B. & A. 273.

Where a commission issued against one of the bail of the sheriff, after the quarto die post, but within the four days, it was held, that the penalty of the bond was provable under the commission, and therefore barred by the certificate. Coulson v. Hammond, 4 D. & R. 160; 2 B. & C. 626.

Where the defendant was arrested on the 27th March, on a writ returnable on the 16th April, and gave a bail-bond to the sheriff, and became bankrupt on the third of that month, and obtained his certificate on the 26th June following:—Held, that as the bankruptcy took place before the bail-bond was forfeited, the debt was barred by the certificate, and provable under the commission. Littlewood v. Crowther, 3 D. & R. 533.

A., B., & C. being bankers in co-partnership, were appointed treasurers of a corporate body, and executed a joint and several bond in a penalty of 20,000*l.*, conditioned for the performance by them of various duties as treasurers, and especially that they would, "when thereunto required by the said company," &c., pay all balances in their hands, &c. A commission issued against A., B., & C., who had at the time a large balance in their hands as treasurers, but no demand under the bond having been made by the company before the bankruptcy:—Held, that there was not a sufficient breach of the condition to constitute a debt provable against the separate estates of the bankrupts. Ex parte Lancaster Canal Company, 1 Mont. 27.

9. Contingent Debts, and Debts payable at a future Time.

(a) Statute.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 56, debts payable on a contingency which has not happened before the issuing of the commission may be proved, the amount of the value being ascertained by the commissioners; or if the value had not been ascertained before the happening of the contingency, the creditor may after the contingency has happened prove in respect of the debt, and receive dividends with the other creditors, not disturbing former dividends, provided he had no notice of an act of bankruptcy when the debt was contracted.

By s. 51, where credit has been given to the bankrupt upon valuable consideration, for money, or other matter or thing whatsoever, which shall not have become payable at the time of the act of bankruptcy, whether upon any bill, bond, note, or other negotiable security or not, the creditor may prove such debt, bill, bond, note, or other security, as if the same were payable, and receive dividends, deducting a rebate of interest at 5 per cent.

By s. 53, obligees in bottomry or respondentia bonds, and assured in policies of insurance, may claim, and after the loss or contingency has happened may prove and receive dividends; and persons effecting policies with underwriters may prove for losses, though not beneficially interested, if the persons are not within the realm.

(b) Contingent Debts.

There must be an actual debt to constitute a contingent debt. Ex parte Lancaster Canal Company, 1 Mont. 44.

Contingent debts, when the contingency is remote, are not provable. Ex parte Davis, 1 Mont. 121.

A demand for goods bargained and sold, to be delivered at a future day, which is after the commission, is not provable as a contingent debt. Boorman v. Nash, 9 B. & C. 145. And see Ex parte Barker, 9 Ves. jun. 110.

A debt on a guarantee, which did not become absolute before the bankruptcy, is provable as a contingent debt. Ex parte Myers, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 229; 2 Deac. & Chit. 251.

Under a guarantee, the debt is contingent only; therefore a debt accrued by default, after the bankruptcy of the surety, cannot be proved under the commission. Ex parte Gardom, 15 Ves. jun. 286.

Held otherwise, where a man had guaranteed the payment of the debt of another on a day certain, which had not elapsed. Alsop v. Price, 1 Dougl. 160. And see Hoffman v. Foudrinier, 5 M. & S. 21.

Where the contingency depends upon the separation of husband and wife, and of a widow's not marrying, it is not within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 56. Ex parte Davis, 1 Mont. 297.

S., by his marriage settlement, covenanted with the petitioners, as trustees, to pay an annual sum of 80*l.* for himself for life, then to his wife for life, and after her death to any issue of the marriage; and that his heirs, executors, or administrators, should within twelve calendar months after his death, pay to the petitioners the sum of 4000*l.* on various trusts. S. became bankrupt:—Held, that the 4000*l.* was not capable of valuation by the commissioners, and that the trustees were entitled to prove against the separate estate of S. within the meaning of the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 56. Ex parte Eagle, 1 Mont. & Mac. 422.

A. advanced 2000*l.* to B., to be repaid on a day certain, and secured by the bond of C., conditioned that if B. made default in payment on the day named, C. should pay within one week. C. became bankrupt; and B. afterwards made default:—Held, that the debt was provable under the commission against C. Ex parte Lewis, 1 Mont. & Mac. 426.

If a demand be payable at all events, though at a future day, it may be proved under a commission against the debtor, or set off in an action brought by his assignees; but if it rest in contingency whether it will be paid or not, it cannot be so proved or set off, unless it be secured by a penalty which is forfeited at law. Hancock v. Entwisle, 3 T. R. 435. And see Browne v. Lee, 6 B. & C. 689; 9 D. & R. 700.

If A. give a warrant of attorney to B. to confess a judgment immediately, with a defeasance that judgment shall not be entered up until a subsequent day on a contingency, and A. become bankrupt before that day, though B. afterwards enter up judgment on the happening of the contingency, he cannot prove this debt under A.'s commission. Staines v. Planck, 8 T. R. 386. And see Utterson v. Vernon, 4 T. R. 570; 3 T. R. 539; and Winter v. Mauseley, 2 B. & A. 802.

For legal debts at the time of the bankruptcy only are provable. Id.

A debt payable at a future uncertain period—as within three months after the decease of two obligors in a bond, or the survivor—cannot be proved. Ex parte Barker, 9 Ves. jun. 110.

(c) Debts payable at a future Day.

Where it was agreed, upon a loan to the bankrupt, bearing interest, that six months' notice should be given before repayment was required, the debt is provable, though no notice were given before the bankruptcy. Ex parte Downman, 2 Glyn & J. 241; S. P. contra Ex parte Downman, 2 Glyn & J. 85; Ex parte Minet, 14 Ves. jun. 189.

Monies were advanced by the petitioner to the bankrupt, secured by a note, whereby the bankrupt promised to pay, after three months' notice, the monies advanced, with interest at 5 per cent. Two years' interest had been paid before the commission, but no notice had been given:—Held, that the petitioner was entitled to prove the principal monies, and interest up to the commission. Ex parte Elgar, 2 Glyn & J. 1.

The defendant, on certain considerations, undertook to pay the balance due on a bill of which the plaintiff was acceptor; and he afterwards, by a new undertaking, engaged to deliver up the acceptance to plaintiff within a month, or to indemnify him against it. Defendant became bankrupt, and did not pay or give any indemnity; and plaintiff was obliged to take up the bill, the bankrupt having then obtained his certificate. An action being brought by the plaintiff for the breach of promise:—Held, that he could not have proved in respect of it under the defendant's commission, either for a debt not payable at the time of the bankruptcy, or for a contingent debt, or in the character of surety; and, therefore, that the bankruptcy was no defence. Yallop v. Ebers, 1 B. & Adol. 698.

The stat. 7 Geo. 1, c. 31, s. 1, which enabled debts payable at a future day to be proved under the commission, was confined to written securities. Parslow v. Dearlove, 4 East, 438; 1 Smith, 281; 5 Esp. 78. And see Hoskins v. Duperoy, 9 East, 498; 6 Esp. 58.

Therefore, school-money for the education, &c. of defendant's son, payable half-yearly, was not a debt due till the end of the half-year, so as to be provable under a commission against the parent, who became bankrupt a few days before the end of the half-year; though he had just before his bankruptcy taken his son home for the holidays. Id.

That statute extended to all personal securities for a valuable consideration, where the time of payment was certain though future. Patterson v. Bankes, Cowp. 543.

(d) Policies of Insurance.

An insurance upon a life within the statute

19 Geo. 2, c. 32, s. 2, and therefore provable under a commission of bankrupt, though the loss happened after the bankruptcy. Cox v. Listard, 1 Dougl. 166, n.

Debts upon the insurance of ships are only provable against the separate estate of the partner who signs the policy, the insurance by a partnership being against the 6 Geo. 1, c. 18. Ex parte Angerstein, 1 Bro. C. C. 399.

The defendant covenanted with the plaintiffs for the due payment by H. of the annual premium on a policy effected on the life of R., and given by R. to the plaintiffs by way of security for a debt due from him to them. The defendant became bankrupt before, and obtained his certificate after a default by R.:—Held, that the defendant was not discharged from liability for the premium which the plaintiffs had been obliged to pay, to keep the policy on foot. Attwood v. Partridge, 12 Moore, 431; 4 Bing. 209.

10. Covenants.

A collateral independent and express covenant, by the assignee of a lease to indemnify the lessor, is not discharged by the assignee's becoming bankrupt. Mayor v. Steward, 4 Burr. 2439.

Where A. sold a ship to B., with a covenant that he had a good title, though in fact he had none, and B. afterwards became a bankrupt, and A. sustained damage by paying the value of the ship to the true owner:—Held, in an action on the covenant by A. against B., stating the special damage, that B.'s certificate was no bar. Hammond v. Toulmin, 7 T. R. 612.

A sum covenanted by the husband to be paid when demanded by the trustees on the request of the wife, is, if demanded before the bankruptcy, provable. Ex parte Brenchley, 2 Glyn & J. 174.

Proof allowed in bankruptcy under a covenant by the bankrupt in consideration of marriage, immediately after the marriage, or whenever afterwards requested by the trustees, to transfer 200l. stock alleged to be standing in his name, though not the fact; but the specific time of the request must be ascertained. Ex parte Campbell, 10 Ves. jun. 244.

A covenant, within seven years, or when requested, to convey lands of a given value in particular counties, under a bankruptcy, after the expiration of the seven years, and no request made, proof was not admitted upon the covenant, unless secured by a penalty. Ex parte Mars, 8 Ves. jun. 335.

11. Debts compounded for.

Where a composition was made between a debtor and his creditors, to pay them 9s. in the pound, by four instalments, with a proviso, that, in case the composition should not be duly paid them, the release should be null and void; and the debtor paid three instalments, and became bankrupt before the time for payment of the fourth:—Held, that the creditors were not remitted to their original debt, but entitled to a proof only for the amount of the remaining instalment. Ex parte Peela, 1 Rose, 435.

A., being in embarrassed circumstances, a deed of composition was executed between him and his creditors, by which they agreed to take 10s. in the pound on their respective debts, by instalments, to be secured by his promissory notes; and it was provided, that if they should not be paid then, the covenants on the part of the creditors whose debts should be so unsatisfied should be null and void. The first instalment was paid, and the second not:—Held, that the creditors were entitled to retain the first payment, and to prove under the commission for the residue of the original debt. Ex parte Vere, 1 Rose, 281.

Where there is an assignment in trust to pay the creditors who should execute the deed, with a covenant by the debtor, that if the creditors should not, out of that fund, be paid in full within two years, to pay the deficiency within a month afterwards. In the event of a bankruptcy before the end of two years, the creditors under the deed are entitled to prove the deficiency, after application of the trust fund, subject to a rebate. Ex parte Richardson, 14 Ves. jun. 184.

A testator, uncle to the bankrupt, forgave him a debt of 600*l.*, on condition that he paid his sister 60*l.* a year; if he failed in punctual payment, his executrix to call in the money: this is a debt provable under the commission. Ex parte English, 2 Bro. C. C. 610.

12. Interest.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 57, the holders of bills or notes whereon interest is not reserved, and due at the issuing of the commission, may prove for interest upon the same, to be calculated by the commissioners to the date of the commission, at the rate allowed in K. B.

Before the statute, a debt for interest was not provable on a bill of exchange, unless such interest was expressed in the body of the bill. In re Burgess, 2 Moore, 745; 8 Taunt. 660.

No interest on the balance of a stated account was provable under a commission, unless by express contract. Ex parte Furneaux, 2 Cox, 219.

If, upon the sale of an estate, the vendor covenant that on payment of the purchase-money he will grant, sell, &c., and the vendee covenant to pay the purchase-money on or before a day certain, or whenever a good title should be tendered to him; and it is agreed that the vendee, on or before the day named for payment, may require the purchase-money to remain a charge upon the premises, so that, upon the completion of the conveyance by the vendor, the vendee should execute to him a proper mortgage, for securing the purchase-money, with interest; but if the interest should be in arrear for thirty days, the vendee should be considered as a tenant to the vendor, from the date thereof, at a yearly rent, with power to the vendor to distrain as for rent reserved by lease, to the end that the interest and costs should be fully satisfied; and the vendee requires the purchase-money to remain a charge, and he is let into possession, and receives the rents; and the vendee becomes bankrupt, and half a year's interest being in arrear for more than thirty days, the vendor distrains on the tenants, and the assignees satisfy the distress; and the vendee obtains his certificate, and the vendor brings an action against the bankrupt, to recover interest accrued subsequent to the certificate; the certificate is a bar, as the claim for interest was provable. Hope v. Booth, 1 B. & Adol. 498.

13. Marriage Contracts.

What a provable Debt.—Sums secured under a marriage settlement are provable under a commission of bankruptcy, so far as they are certain. Ex parte Mitford, 1 Bro. C. C. 398.

A voluntary settlement by a bankrupt, though void against his creditor, subsists for all other purposes. Ex parte Bell, 1 Glyn & J. 282.

If a sum on bond is due to the wife of a trader, and settled in trust by a post nuptial settlement upon the wife, the settlement is, by the old bankrupt statute, void as against the assignees, under a commission against the husband. Wombwell v. Luvor, 2 Sim. 360.

A covenant in a marriage settlement to transfer stock into the names of the trustees, to forbear giving the notice during the life of the covenantor, is a contingent debt, not provable under his bankruptcy, not being equivalent to or superseding the necessity of notice. Ex parte Alcock, 1 Rose, 323; 1 Ves. & B. 176.

A trader, upon his marriage, having given to trustees a bond for 3000*l.* to be settled upon himself for life, remainder to his wife and children, the trustees, upon his bankruptcy, are entitled to prove for the whole sum secured, and to retain the dividends during the life of the bankrupt, until the whole is made up. Ex parte Turpin, 1 Mont. 443; 1 Deac. & Chit. 120.

On the marriage of W. W., then in good circumstances, he gave a bond to trustees for 4000*l.*, conditioned to pay them 2000*l.* within one month after demand, and for payment to them, in the mean time, of interest upon the 2000*l.*, by half-yearly payments, upon such trusts as were contained in an indenture of settlement. By the settlement, it was provided that the trustees should not call in or demand payment of the 2000*l.*, or any part thereof, during the life of W. W. The interest of the 2000*l.* was several years in arrear. W. W. afterwards became bankrupt, never having consented to a demand upon him for the 2000*l.*:—Held, that the 2000*l.* was provable against the separate estate of W. W. Ex parte Elder, 2 Madd. 282.

A covenant in marriage articles, that, in case the wife should survive the husband, or he should leave any issue by her, his heirs, executors, and administrators should raise 500*l.*, &c.:—Held, upon a petition by the trustees to be admitted his creditors under a commission of bankruptcy against the husband, that the debt was contingent, and not provable, though a warrant of attorney to confess judgment had been granted previous to the bankruptcy, and judgment entered up. Ex parte Jacob, 1 Eden, 174.

Where trustees under a marriage settlement lend the wife's money to the husband with her consent, and the husband becomes bankrupt, they cannot, on behalf of the wife, prove for interest of money, but only for the principal; she having been supported by her husband since the marriage, upon the principle applicable to wife's pin-money. Ex parte Green, 2 Deac. & Chit. 113.

Semle, otherwise if they prove to save themselves from the consequences of their own act, her consent not having been given. Id.

A settlement after marriage of stock standing in the name of the wife, the husband being insolvent, and soon after a bankrupt, was set aside upon the bill of the assignees after the death of the husband: the stock did not survive, but was decreed to the assignees, subject to a provision for the widow. Pringle v. Hodgson, 3 Ves. jun. 617.

Gooda, the property of a widow and children, were, upon her second marriage, assigned to trustees, in trust to suffer the husband to enjoy them, on condition that he should pay to the trustees, for the use of the children, 800*l.* by yearly instalments of 100*l.* from July, 1783: he continued in possession of them till 1797, having paid only 250*l.*; the day before his bankruptcy the trustees repossessed themselves of the goods:—Held, that this was fraudulent, as against creditors, and that the assignee of the bankrupt was entitled to the goods, under the 21 Jac. 1, c. 19. Darby v. Smith, 8 T. R. 82. And see Jarman v. Woolton, 3 T. R. 618; S. P. Haselinton v. Gill, 3 T. R. 620, n.

Where, by a marriage settlement, the trustees covenanted to permit the husband to receive, during his life, the dividends arising from bank stock vested in their names; if the husband become bankrupt, and the trustees authorize a third person to receive the dividends, and pay them over to the bankrupt's wife, they are liable to his assignee in an action for money had and received. Allen v. Impett, 2 Moore, 240.

By marriage settlement, S. covenanted to cause 4000*l.* to be paid to his wife's trustees within twelve months after his own decease, in trust to pay her the interest for her life in case she survived him, and afterwards the principal to their children; but, if they had no children, to the survivor of them, S. and his wife, his or her executors or administrators:—Held, that this was a debt on a contingency, provable under a commission against S. within the meaning of the statute 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 56, and that the valuation should be the present worth of 4000*l.* payable twelve months after the death of the bankrupt. Ex parte Tindal, 1 M. & Scott, 607; 8 Bing. 402; 1 Mont. 462; 1 Mont. & Mac. 415; 1 Deac. & Chit. 291.

Upon a contract by a trader to pay, when required, to the trustees of his marriage settlement, a sum, the interest to himself for life or till his bankruptcy, and then to his wife, and having received upon the marriage 150*l.* from the wife, and after payment has been requested by the trustee he becomes bankrupt, without having made any payment, the whole debt is provable, and the dividend applicable first to raise the 150*l.*, the interest of which to be applied to the wife; and, after 150*l.* be raised, the interest on any further sum to be paid to the assignees for the life of the bankrupt, and afterwards according to the trusts of the settlement. Ex parte Shute, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 385.

Under a marriage settlement, the personal estate of the wife was vested in trustees, upon trust to assign 1000*l.* stock to the husband, and in case the wife should die during the life of the husband without issue, to transfer one moiety of the remainder to the husband, and the other to the nearest and next of kin to the wife in equal shares, and the husband covenanted that if the wife should die in his life-time without leaving issue to survive her thirty days, he would within three months after her decease transfer 500*l.* stock to the trustees, for the sole use and property of her nearest and next of kin. On the death of the wife without issue during her husband's life, her brother was declared entitled to a moiety of the trust fund in exclusion of the nephews and nieces; and the husband having become bankrupt before the death of the wife, his assignees are entitled to his moiety of the trust fund without deduction of the sum due by virtue of his covenant, which did not create a debt provable under his commission. Brandon v. Brandon, 3 Swans. 312; 2 Wils. C. C. 14.

Though a bond by a husband to pay a sum in the event of his bankruptcy or insolvency to trustees for the purpose of settlement, cannot stand against the creditors, the property of the wife may be limited to the husband until he becomes bankrupt, &c., and from that event for his wife and children; and, where in articles for such a settlement, the husband covenanted to give a bond for 5000*l.* upon the same trusts, and had received all her fortune without making any settlement, proof was admitted under his bankruptcy, not only for the amount of her property agreed to be settled, but the 5000*l.*, or so much as the value of the property of the wife would extend to beyond the sum agreed to be settled. Ex parte James, 8 Ves. jun. 353.

A settlement, previous to marriage, of money, the property of the wife, upon the event of the husband's bankruptcy, is valid; and part being lent to the husband upon his bond under a power for that purpose, was proved under the commission. Ex parte Hinton, 14 Ves. jun. 598.

If, in a marriage settlement, the bankruptcy of the husband be made the event upon which the sum agreed to be settled upon him shall become payable to the trustees, the proof of the trustees under his commission will be limited to the amount of the wife's fortune which he has received. Ex parte Young, Buck, 179; 3 Madd. 124.

By settlement previous to the marriage of the bankrupt, 6000*l.* stock, 3000*l.* of which was the fortune of the wife, was assigned to trustees in trust, to pay the dividends thereof to the bankrupt for life, or until he should become bankrupt, and from and after his decease, or from the time of his becoming bankrupt, if the wife should be then alive, to pay the same to her for her support, and on her receipt, notwithstanding her coverture, the same, after the death of the bankrupt, to be in the nature of her jointure and in bar of dower; and the trustees were thereby directed to stand possessed of a bond for 2000*l.* given by the bankrupt to the trustees in trust if there should be no issue of the marriage, or being such, all should die in the life-time of the bankrupt as therein mentioned: after the death of the bankrupt, if the wife should survive, to raise the sum of 2000*l.*, and pay the interest thereof to the wife for life by way of increase to the provision thereinbefore made for her in the nature of jointure, in the events thereinbefore mentioned; and in case of issue of the marriage living at the death of the bankrupt, the bond was to be delivered up to be cancelled:—Held, the wife living and no issue, that the bond was not provable. Ex parte Taaffe, 1 Glyn & J. 110.

Sufficiency of Contract.—A debt in consideration of marriage is not provable without a memorandum in writing. Ex parte Barter, 1 Mont. 135.

A debt on letters in the nature of a marriage settlement is provable. Ex parte Sütger, 1 Mont. 100.

Proof was allowed by the widow of a bankrupt under an engagement by the settlement to settle money which he falsely represented himself to possess. Ex parte Gardener, 11 Ves. jun. 40.

A trader, before marriage, agrees by parol to settle all his stock on his intended wife, which stock it appeared afterwards amounted then to 450*l.* 3 per cents.; but in the marriage articles it was stated to be 340*l.* stock; and the deed executed after marriage settled the same sum; this mistake (proved and accounted for by the witness who prepared the deed and the bankrupt) was admitted and agreed by the bankrupt, after his bankruptcy and absconding, to be rectified by the alteration of the sum as it stood in the articles and the deed from 340*l.* to 450*l.* stock; which was accordingly done, and the instrument re-executed, with the consent of the bankrupt and his wife, and the trustees; and the old stock having been sold out by the bankrupt before his bankruptcy, and the amount paid into the hands of the trustees before such alteration, who, before the bankruptcy purchased other stock with the money:—Held, that, however such an alteration might avoid the instrument, if done with the consent of the parties interested, yet inasmuch as one of the parties (the female covert, to whom no fraud was imputed,) was incapable, by such consent, of exonerating the trustees, the trustees who had received such money under the instrument when it existed in a valid form, held it subject to the purposes of the trust, and not for the benefit of the bankrupt's estate; and that the assignees could not recover in assumpsit from the trustees the value of the stock originally included in the marriage articles and deed, but only the surplus, which they were entitled to recover at law under the circumstances. Shaw v. Jakeman, 4 East, 201; 1 Smith, 14. And see Montefiori v. Montefiori, 1 W. Black. 363.

An agreement on marriage by the husband as speedily as may be to settle 40*l.* a year upon his wife, to be paid upon his decease; a sum of money to be invested in stock for the purpose of raising that annual sum; the dividends for the husband for life; the capital for the issue, &c.: under the husband's bankruptcy, proof was allowed by the wife and children for 800*l.*, amounting to a covenant to pay that sum upon the marriage and upon the principle of arrears of an annuity due before the bankruptcy. Ex parte Granger, 10 Ves. jun. 349.

14. Overseers.

A specific sum of money received by an overseer of the poor, is not such a debt as can be proved under a commission against him, before his accounts are delivered in. Rex v. Egginton, 1 T. R. 369.

Proof under a commission of bankruptcy against an overseer of the poor, in respect of money in his hands at the time of his bankruptcy, before the period of accounting. Ex parte Leigh, 6 Ves. jun. 811.

An overseer who has been committed for not delivering his account, and paying over the balance due, may be discharged out of custody, if he has become bankrupt and obtained his certificate, although he became so before the expiration of the year for which he acted. Rex v. Tucker, 2 Chit. 286; 5 M. & S. 508.

15. Rent.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 74, no distress for rent made and levied before an act of bankruptcy upon the goods of the bankrupt, whether before or after the issuing of the commission, shall be available for more than one year's rent accrued prior to the date of the commission; but the landlord must come in as a creditor for the overplus.

By s. 75, if the assignees accept the bankrupt's leases, he shall not be liable to pay any rent accruing after the date of the commission; and if they decline, he is not liable if he deliver up the lease to the lessor within fourteen days after he shall have had notice of their having declined.

Before the statute, it was held that a certificate discharges a bankrupt from an action of debt on the reddendum in a lease, whether the rent accrued due before or after the bankruptcy. Wedham v. Marlowe, 2 Chit. 600; 4 Dougl. 54; 1 H. Black. 437, n.; 1 T. R. 91. And see Gill v. Scrivens, 7 T. R. 27.

But that the bankruptcy of the defendant could not be pleaded in bar of an action of covenant for rent. Mills v. Auriol, 1 H. Black. 433; 4 T. R. 94.

A petition by the lessor of a bankrupt lessee for payment of rent due after the bankruptcy, and for a compensation for hay and straw sold and carried off the premises by the assignees, was dismissed on the ground that the court had not jurisdiction except in cases under the statute 49 Geo. 3, c. 12, s. 19, or where the petition made out a case for an injunction. Ex parte Warwick, Buck, 326.

A landlord may distrain for rent after an act of bankruptcy; therefore, money paid to him by a bankrupt tenant to avoid a threatened distress, is a protected payment; and the money cannot be recovered back by the assignees. Stevenson v. Wood, 5 Esp. 200—Ellenborough. And see Mavor v. Croome, 8 Moore, 171; 2 Bing. 261.

If goods are distrained for rent, and replevied by the tenant, and afterwards (the tenant becoming a bankrupt) they are sold by the assignees, the landlord succeeding in the action of replevin, and obtaining a retorno habendo, cannot recover the amount of the rent against the assignees in an action for money had and received. Baddyll v. Jones, 4 Dougl. 52.

The assignees of a bankrupt having entered into the possession of land in the middle of a quarter, which the bankrupt had agreed to take upon a building lease, upon the terms of paying the rent half yearly:—Held, that an action for use and occupation would lie against them for the whole year, though they had not occupied during all the time. Gibson v. Courthorpe, 1 D. & R. 205.

When a bankrupt holds under a lease, rendering rent, the assignees are not liable for rent becoming due after the bankruptcy, if they have never taken possession of the premises occupied by the bankrupt. Bourdillon v. Dalton, 1 Esp. 223; Peake, 238—Kenyon.

Assignees may assign a lease, of which the bankrupt was lessee, to an insolvent person, to exonerate themselves from future claims for rent. Onslow v. Corrie, 2 Madd. 330.

Covenant for rent. Plea, that, before the rent became due, the defendants, by deed, assigned all their interest in the demised premises to A. B., subject to the payment of the rent, and performance of the covenants contained in the lease; and that A. B., by the assignment, covenanted to pay the rent, and perform the covenants contained in the lease; that the defendants delivered the lease to him, and he accepted the same, and entered on the premises by virtue of the assignment: the plea then stated, that A. B. became bankrupt, and that the arrears of rent accrued after the date of the commission; that the assignee of his estate declined the lease, and that the bankrupt, within fourteen days after notice of that fact, delivered up such lease to the plaintiffs, devisees of the reversion:—Held, upon demurrer, that the plea was bad, inasmuch as the statute 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 75, did not put an end to the lease, but merely discharged the bankrupt from any subsequent payment of the rent or observance of the covenants. Manning v. Flight, 3 B. & Adol. 211.

Assignees assigning the bankrupt's lease, are not entitled to a covenant of indemnity, either for themselves or the bankrupt, against the covenants with the lessor. Wilkins v. Fry, 2 Rose, 371.

16. Stock Contracts.

A bond upon a loan of stock to secure a re-transfer and dividends in the mean time, is provable. Ex parte Day, 7 Ves. jun. 301.

The sum to be proved is the amount of arrears, and the value of the stock. Id.

The value calculated according to the price at the date of the commission, if the condition be to replace generally. Id.

Or if a time be fixed, according to the price at that time. Id.

No proof under a bond to replace stock and pay the dividends, unless forfeited, either as to the capital or dividends, before the bankruptcy. Ex parte King, 8 Ves. jun. 334.

Upon an agreement to replace stock upon demand, if demand be made before the bankruptcy, the price may be proved. Ex parte Mare, 8 Ves. jun. 337.

But if A. lend stock to B., to be replaced as stock, without naming any particular day, and B. become a bankrupt before any request by A. to replace the stock, A. cannot come in under B.'s commission. Uttersen v. Vernon, 4 T. R. 570.

Upon a loan upon a parol engagement to give security to replace stock by a given day, the positive contract failing by an intervening bankruptcy, proof may be made in respect of the contract implied by law from the loan. Ex parte Coming, 9 Ves. jun. 115.

A bankrupt, before his bankruptcy, on a loan of stock gave a bond to re-transfer the principal within three years, and pay the amount of the dividends in the mean time, and also agreed to convey a real estate as a security. No re-transfer made, nor any dividends paid:—Held, that, on his bankruptcy, the security should be sold, the dividends paid out of the produce, and that stock should be purchased; and, if not sufficient to re-purchase the whole principal stock, that proof should be made under the separate estate for the remainder; and that the assignees were not entitled to have three years to re-transfer the stock. Ex parte Fisher, 3 Madd. 159; Buck, 188.

17. Proof by Sureties.

(a) Statute.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 52, sureties, or persons liable for debts of the bankrupt, or bail for the bankrupt either to the sheriff or to the action, if they have paid the debt, or any part thereof in discharge of the whole (although after the commission issued), if the creditor shall have proved, shall be entitled to stand in the place of such creditor as to the dividends, and all other rights under the commission; or if the creditor shall not have proved, shall be entitled to prove the demand in respect of such payment as a debt, not disturbing former dividends; and may receive dividends with the other creditors, although they may have become surety, liable, or bail, after an act of bankruptcy, provided they had no notice of it.

A surety for a bankrupt is not discharged by the creditor's signing the bankrupt's certificate, even after notice from the surety not to do so. Browne v. Carr, 7 Bing. 508; 5 M. & P. 497.

(b) Who are Sureties.

The 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 8, contained a similar enactment; under that statute it has been held, that the words "person liable" will comprehend all persons rendering themselves responsible for the debt of another; or an acceptor of a bill for the accommodation of the drawer. Ex parte Yonge, 2 Rose, 40; 3 Ves. & B. 31.

The drawer of a bill, though not strictly a surety for the acceptor, who is generally primarily liable, may be in the nature of a surety; but the drawer, if first liable by the real nature of the transaction, with reference to the distinction whether the acceptor had effects or not, is liable to have relief as a "person liable" within the stat. 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 8. Id.

The drawer of a bill payable to his own order, but drawn by him for the accommodation of the first indorsee, is not "surety for or liable for the debt" of that indorsee, within 49 Geo. 3, c. 21, s. 8. Mayer v. Meakin, Gow, 183—Holroyd.

The acceptor of an accommodation bill is a surety within the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 8, and must prove his debt under a commission against the drawers. Van Sandau v. Corsbie, 2 Moore, 602; 3 B. & A. 13; 1 Chit. 16.

The certificate is a bar, not only to any action at the suit of the surety for the recovery of the money paid in discharge of the original debt, but to any action for the consequential damage accruing from the non-payment by the bankrupt of such debt when due: therefore, where the acceptor of an accommodation bill brought an action against the drawer after he had become bankrupt and obtained his certificate, for not providing him with funds, whereby he had incurred the costs of an action, and been obliged to sell an estate in order to raise money to pay the bills:—Held, that the certificate was a good bar to the action. Id.

The plaintiff having accepted a bill payable at a future day for the accommodation of the defendant, the latter afterwards, and before the bill became due, committed an act of bankruptcy, followed by a commission, which was afterwards superseded, and time was given to the bankrupt by his creditors; and the plaintiff thereupon accepted another bill for the same debt, with the addition of the interest and stamp:—Held, that this was a continuation of the same suretyship by the plaintiff for the defendant, which existed before the act of bankruptcy and the first commission: and a second effectual commission having afterwards issued upon the same act of bankruptcy, before the plaintiff's second acceptance became due, which was paid when due:—Held, that the amount was provable as a debt under such commission, by virtue of the stat. 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 8. Stedman v. Martinnant, 13 East, 427. And see S. C. 12 East, 664; 1 Rose, 106.

A., in consideration of 1l. 10s. 7d. received of B., undertook, in writing, to make himself liable for the due payment of a note upon which H. was then indebted to B., and B. thereupon consented to furnish H. with more goods; and then A., before the note was due, became bankrupt:—Held, that A.'s undertaking was intended as a collateral engagement only, in case H. should not pay the note when due; consequently, as it rested on a contingency whether it would ever become a debt or not, it could not be proved as such under A.'s commission. Ex parte Adney, Cowp. 460.

A bill, after proof under a commission against the acceptor, was paid by the drawer, who, after a dividend, having arrested the bankrupt for the balance, and being also a surety for him on another bill, he was ordered to discharge him, and restrained from lodging any detainer under the stat. 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, ss. 8 & 14. Ex parte Lobbon, 17 Ves. jun. 334; 1 Rose, 219.

Under the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 52, it has been held that an accommodation indorser is a person liable to pay the bill for the party accommodated; against whom, therefore, if he become bankrupt, such indorser, though not called on to pay the bill till after the bankruptcy, may prove the amount. Bassett v. Dodgin, 9 Bing. 653; 2 M. & Scott, 777.

Where the plaintiff, who was surety for the defendant for the payment of an annual rent, sued the defendant for money paid, and stated in the replication that he had paid it for rent due by the defendant after the bankruptcy:—Held, that he could recover, as he was not a surety within that statute. McDougal v. Paton, 2 Moore, 644; 8 Taunt. 580.

A surety by bond for general advances, under a limited penalty, paying that sum, is entitled to a proportion of the dividends under the proof by the creditor to a greater amount under the bankruptcy of the principal debtor. Ex parte Rushforth, 10 Ves. jun. 409.

A surety in a bond may compel the creditor to prove under the bankruptcy of the principal debtor; and the creditor will be a trustee of the dividends for the surety, paying the whole. Id.

A covenant in an indenture made between A. and B., (assigning to A. 4350l., payable under articles of agreement by J. S. to B. by instalments,) that, in case the said sum, or any instalment thereof, should not be paid to A. at the times and in the manner provided for by the articles, B. would, upon demand, pay to A. the said sum, or so much thereof as should not be paid at the times, &c., was held not to be a matter provable under the commission either by s. 9 or s. 17 of 49 Geo. 3, c. 121. Hoffham v. Foudrinier, 5 M. & S. 21.

Where A., B., and C. entered into a bond to the king, the condition of which was, that A., as sub-distributor of stamps, should truly account for all stamped vellum which he should receive, and should pay to the commissioners the duties payable for the same, and also the price of such vellum, together with all monies which he should receive on account of the duties on personal legacies and stage-coaches; and A., being indebted to the king in a certain sum, became bankrupt, and afterwards obtained his certificate; and a scire facias having afterwards issued on the bond, B., one of the sureties, paid a sum of money to compromise the suit, and a certain other sum in defending the same:—Held, in an action brought by the surety to recover these sums from the bankrupt, that B. was a person "surety for, or liable for a debt" of the bankrupt, within the meaning of the 49 Geo. 3. c. 121, s. 8, and consequently that the latter was protected by his certificate, and that the general plea of bankruptcy was well pleaded. Westcott v. Hodges, 5 B. & A. 12.

Where A. became surety for B. for a debt due to C., and, after a commission of bankruptcy issued against B., paid part of the debt to C., and obtained from him an indemnity against personal liability for the remainder, the whole of the debt having been proved under the commission by C.:—Held, that A. might maintain an action of indebitatus assumpsit against B. for the money so paid, as having been paid to his use, notwithstanding the statute 49 Geo. 3. c. 121, s. 8. Soutten v. Soutten, 1 D. & R. 521; 5 B. & A. 852.

Where A. wrote orders to B. for the delivery of goods to C., which were accordingly delivered to the latter upon the credit of the former; and the usual credit of the trade was four months, and the bills of parcels were made out in the name of C., and the period of credit was enlarged from time to time without the knowledge of A.; and, C. becoming bankrupt, B. proved the amount of the goods under the commission, which exceeded more than two-fifths of C.'s debts, and signed his certificate without any communication with A., who at the time of the bankruptcy was abroad, and did not return to this country till eight years afterwards:—Held, that A. was still liable as surety for C. to B. Langdale v. Parry, 2 D. & R. 337.

A surety is within the meaning of the statute 7 Geo. 1, c. 31; therefore, a plaintiff to whom he was bound must prove the debt under a commission against the surety; and a fieri facias, which had been issued, was set aside. Brookes v. Lloyd, 1 T. R. 17.

A. & Co. guaranteed to B. & Co. payment for any goods which they might supply to C. within a certain period, at a credit of two and two months. C. becomes indebted to B. & Co. for goods, and gives them three bills of exchange in payment, indorsed by A. & Co., who shortly afterwards became bankrupts: one of these bills was dishonoured before, and the other two bills after their bankruptcy. C. was likewise indebted to B. & Co., before the bankruptcy of A. & Co., for some goods, for which they had a right only to call on C. to give them a bill at two months at the time of A. & Co.'s commission:—Held, that in an action brought upon the guarantee against A. & Co., their certificate was a good defence, by virtue of the statute 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 9. Gaskell v. Lindsay, Holt, 212—Le Blanc.

(c) Bail.

Bail above were not sureties within the statute 49 Geo. 3, c. 121. Newington v. Rees, 4 B. & A. 493; S. P. Hewes v. Matt, 2 Marsh. 192; 6 Taunt. 329; 2 Rose, 455.

Bail could not prove as a creditor under a commission till he had actually paid the debt; and, if the act of bankruptcy were prior to the bail's paying the debt, he could not prove it under the commission at all. Goddard v. Vanderheyden, 3 Wils. 262; 2 W. Black. 794; 2 B. & P. 8, n.

But bail are within the statute 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 52, whether they are bail to the sheriff or to the action.

(d) Surety must have satisfied Debt.

If a surety do not pay the debt of the principal till after his bankruptcy, though called upon and liable to pay it before, the debt cannot be proved under the commission. Paul v. Jones, 1 T. R. 599.

So, a surety in a bond who pays the debt after a commission of bankruptcy issued against his principal, is not barred by the certificate, though the penalty of the bond was forfeited before. Taylor v. Mills, Cowp. 525.

Where one of two assignees of a lease gave a bond to the lessee, by whom the assignment was made, conditioned for the payment of the rent to the lessor, and the performance of the other covenants in the lease, and for indemnifying the lessee against the non-performance of the covenants, both the assignees of the lease having become bankrupt, and the bond having been forfeited before the bankruptcy:—Held, that the lessee could not prove for the damages which had accrued previous to the bankruptcy, not having paid them to the lessor. Taylor v. Young (in error), 3 B. & A. 521; 2 Moore, 326; 8 Taunt. 315.

If A. be bound with B. as a surety for the payment of a sum certain, and take an absolute bond from B. payable the day before the original bond will become due, and B. becomes a bankrupt before the day of payment, A. may prove this debt under the commission, and B.'s certificate will be a bar to an action by A. on the counter bond, though A. does not pay the original bond till after B. has committed an act of bankruptcy. Martin v. Court, 2 T. R. 640. And see Toussaint v. Martinnant, 2 T. R. 100.

X. became bound as a surety in a bond with Y. to A. on the 10th of August, 1778, conditioned for payment in six months; on the 1st of March, 1780, he became bound with Y. to B. conditioned for payment in six months; on the 4th of March, 1780, Y. became bound to X. also in a bond conditioned for payment of the two former bonds, and likewise to indemnify X. against those two bonds: the money secured by the second bond not being paid on the day when it became due, it was held that the last bond was thereby forfeited, though X. was not called on to pay the money in the second bond until afterwards, and that X. might prove it as a debt under the commission of bankrupt that issued against Y. after the forfeiture, and before payment. Hodgson v. Bell, 7 T. R. 97.

A surety in a bond for the bankrupts, after the bankrupts are certificated, joins with them and a new surety in a new bond to the representatives of the creditor, and the old bond is delivered up to the surety:—Held, that it was not a payment by the surety within the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, so as to enable the surety to prove under the commission. Ex parte Sergeant, 2 Glyn & J. 23; 1 Glyn & J. 183.

A surety paying a debt after the act of bankruptcy, but before the commission taken out against the principal, cannot prove this debt under the commission; nor can he stand in the place of the creditor, if the debt be paid by the surety before any proof made by the creditor under the commission. Ex parte Badger, 1 Cox, 28.

A surety paying the debt after proof by the creditor under the commission, is entitled to stand in the place of the creditor for the debt paid, not only in respect of dividends, but of the certificate. Ex parte Gee, 1 Glyn & J. 330.

The surety is not entitled to the benefit of proof against other estates upon a distinct security. Paley v. Field, 12 Ves. jun. 405.

18. Proof against Trustees.

H. W. assigned to R. S. 600*l.* in trust to invest, to pay the interest or dividends thereof to H. W. for life, and after her death in trust that R. S. should pay all interest or dividends, except of the principal sum of 100*l.*, part of the 600*l.*, which it was declared R. S. might deduct and retain for his care and pains during one year next after the death of H. W., for the benefit of the children which H. W. might leave; and if H. W. should die without issue, then in trust as to the remaining stock, and the dividends or interest due thereon unto A. W. and M. W., the sisters of H. W., or their children, in case of the death of either of them, in equal proportions; and H. W. thereby agreed that R. S. should retain, out of the trust monies, all costs and charges in respect of his trust, and the clear yearly sum of 20*l.* for his care and trouble, and also the said sum of 100*l.* for one year's allowance for such care and trouble which he should have from the death of H. W., and then the said annual sum of 20*l.* from the end of such year until the trusts should be completed. R. S. applied the 600*l.* to his own use, paying the interest to H. W. during his life. H. W. died in July, 1819, and, in January, 1822, R. S. became bankrupt. Upon a petition by the parties entitled upon the death of H. W.:—Held, that the proof should be only for the 500*l.* Ex parte Kettlewell, 1 Glyn & J. 321.

Bequest of stock to A. and B., in trust to pay the dividends to testator's brother for life, and after his death to testator's sister, and upon the death of the survivor, to A. absolutely. A., the surviving trustee, sold out the stock, applied the proceeds to his own use, and became bankrupt. Upon a petition by testator's sister and her husband, to prove the value of the stock sold, it was ordered that the commissioners should compute the value of the stock so bequeathed at the date of the commission, and that the husband should be at liberty to prove the amount of such value, the dividends to be paid into the Bank, subject to the further order of the court. Ex parte Fairchild, 1 Glyn & J. 221.

Where two are trustees of money in the funds, and sell it for the benefit of one of them who becomes bankrupt, the persons interested may prove against his estate. Ex parte Shakeshafte, 3 Bro. C. C. 197.

Proof was allowed in respect of trust property of infants continued by the administratrix in the trade in which the testator was engaged, carried on by the bankrupt's constituting a new firm of which the administratrix was a member; and the infants might prove either against the separate estate of the administratrix, or the joint estate, as might be most advantageous for them. Ex parte Watson, 2 Rose, 259; 2 Ves. & B. 414.

Bequest to J. B. and J. T., in trust for the wife of J. B. for life, and after her death for the children of the wife of J. B. in such shares as J. B. and his wife, or the survivor, should appoint, and in default of appointment for all the children, equally to be divided at twenty-one. There were five children. J. B. sold out and advanced part of the trust funds to J. B. the younger, and G. F. B., two of the children, who became bankrupts:—Held, that M. B. the younger, one of the five children who had each a vested interest in one fifth part of the trust funds after the death of their mother, subject to the power of appointment, was entitled to prove one fifth part of the trust funds so misapplied against the estate of J. B., the dividends to be paid into the bank, subject to the further order of the court. Ex parte Beilby, 1 Glyn & J. 167.

Where some of the members of a firm are trustees of funds which they misapply by making use of them for partnership purposes, if such misapplication be with the knowledge of the other members of the firm, the cestui que trusts may prove against the joint estate. Ex parte Heaton, Buck, 386.

19. Wages.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 48, where a bankrupt is indebted to any servant or clerk for wages or salary, the commissioners may order so much of what is due, not exceeding six months' wages or salary, to be paid out of the estate; and the servant or clerk may prove for the residue.

The provision as to servants is not confined to trade clerks. Ex parte Gough, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 417.

The proviso as to servants extends only to yearly servants. Ex parte Skinner, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 417.

If a clerk and foreman is engaged at a weekly salary, and to have two suits of clothes per annum, it is a yearly hiring within the section. Ex parte Humphreys, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 413.

The words "six months" in that section, mean "six lunar months." Id.

Weekly labourers, and workmen employed as excavators and bricklayers, are not servants. Ex parte Crawfoot, 1 Mont. 270.

The workmen of a coachmaker, who worked by the piece, and received a specific sum for each job, under separate and distinct contracts, and where there was no hiring for a specific time, are not servants within the act. Ex parte Creller, 1 Mont. 264; S. C. contra, 1 Mont. & Mac. 95.

A person engaged as traveller at an annual salary, is a servant or clerk within the act. Ex parte Neale, 1 Mont. & Mac. 194.

20. Creditors holding Securities.

(a) Statute.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 108, no creditor having security for his debt, or having made any attachment in London or any other place, by virtue of any custom there used, of the goods and chattels of the bankrupt, shall receive upon any such security or attachment more than a rateable part of such debt, except in respect of any execution or extent served, and levied by seizure upon, or any mortgage of, or lien upon, any part of the property of such bankrupt before the bankruptcy: provided that no creditor, though for a valuable consideration, who shall sue out execution upon any judgment obtained by default, confession, or nihil dicit, shall avail himself of such execution to the prejudice of other fair creditors, but shall be paid rateably with such creditors.

A security for a separate demand does not extend to a joint demand. Ex parte Freen and Morrice, 2 Glyn & J. 246.

(b) Mortgage Debts.

Legal Mortgages.]—A creditor who proves his whole debt, and exhibits a mortgage for part, and receives a dividend, forfeits the mortgage. Ex parte Eggington, 1 Mont. 72.

A mortgagee having given up his mortgage, and proved under a commission against the mortgagor, is not allowed to retract. Ex parte Downes, 18 Ves. jun. 290; 1 Rose, 96.

The directors of a company assigned their salaries and shares to the company to secure debts due from them on their private accounts, and empowered the company to direct the treasurer to retain their salaries and dividends, and to sell their shares for payment of their debts. One of the directors became bankrupt, but the power given to the company had not been exercised, and his shares still remained in his name:—Held, that they passed to his assignees as being in his order and disposition, but that the company had a right to set off against the bankrupt's debts the dividends and salary due to him at his bankruptcy. Nelson v. London Assurance Company, 2 Sim. & Stu. 292.

Sale of Premises.]—A mortgagee with a power of sale may apply to the court to have the premises sold; and the assignees are not permitted to bid in their private character. Ex parte Hodgson, 1 Glyn & J. 12.

It is necessary for a mortgagee of premises sold under a commission, who wishes to bid for them at the sale, to obtain the leave of the court for that purpose. Ex parte Hammond, Buck, 464.

A mortgagee who was the sole assignee and principal creditor, there being only one other creditor to a small amount, was permitted to bid for the estate, subject to the approbation of the master, the mortgagee undertaking to make good the deficiency between the sum bid and the price to be fixed by the master in case he should not approve of the bidding. Ex parte —, Buck, 245.

Costs of the application of a mortgagee to bid at the sale ordered to be paid out of the proceeds of such sale. Ex parte Say, 1 Deac. & Chit. 32; 1 Mont. 364; S. P. Ex parte Brown, 1 Deac. & Chit. 34.

The lord chancellor had no authority in bankruptcy to compel a second mortgagee not complaining under the commission, but resting upon his security, to join in a sale obtained by a prior mortgagee under the general order, 8 May, 1794. Ex parte Jackson, 5 Ves. jun. 357.

The court of review has jurisdiction to order the sale of an estate legally mortgaged, on the application of the mortgagee, giving him leave to bid. Ex parte Bacon, 2 Deac. & Chit. 181.

The commissioners have jurisdiction under the general order March, 1794, to take an account of the expenses attending the sale of the mortgaged premises, and to tax the costs of all parties attending the sale. Ex parte Mathew, 1 Glyn & J. 342.

Where the mortgagee of a bankrupt's estate called on the commissioners to direct a sale, under Lord Loughborough's order of March, 1794, and became the purchaser at such sale:—Held, in an action for money paid, brought by the solicitors to the assignees, that he was liable to reimburse them the expenses of advertisements, and the commissioners' fees for their attendance to perfect such sale, although the estate sold was insufficient to cover the sum originally advanced by such mortgagee. Bowles v. Perring, 5 Moore, 290; 2 B. & B. 457.

Where it is merely a question of convenience, it will be left to the assignee to choose whether mortgage accounts should be taken before the commissioners or a master. Ex parte Ansley, Buck, 292.

If a petitioning creditor is assignee and equitable mortgagee, the petition for a sale must be served on the bankrupt and a creditor. In re Parker, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 394.

Equitable Mortgages.]—An equitable mortgage may be proved in bankruptcy, though it cannot be the foundation of the commission, as the petitioning creditor's debt. Ex parte Yonge, 3 Ves. & B. 31; 2 Rose, 40.

Under the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 65, the equitable mortgagee of a bankrupt tenant in tail is entitled to have his lien made good, as against the fee-simple of the premises of which the bankrupt was seized as tenant in tail. Ex parte Rose, 1 Mont. & Mac. 65.

An equitable mortgagee is not entitled to the rents and profits of the mortgaged estate previous to the sale. Ex parte Alexander, 2 Glyn & J. 275. But see contra, Ex parte Bignold, 2 Glyn & J. 273.

The court will not, in general, refer it to the commissioners to ascertain the existence of an equitable mortgage, but will themselves decide the question. Ex parte Smith, 1 Deac. & Chit. 441.

The court in bankruptcy will decide itself on the validity of an equitable mortgage, without a reference to the commissioners; but when the equitable mortgage is established, a reference is made to the commissioners to take an account of what is due upon it. Ex parte Jennings, 1 Madd. 334; 2 Swans. 360.

An equitable mortgagee of one partner, for a debt due from the other, may prove his whole debt against the separate estate of that partner, and retain his security against the first. Ex parte Rogers, 1 Deac. & Chit. 38.

A joint creditor took an equitable mortgage from one of two partners, as a security for his debt; after which that partner died, and the other became bankrupt:—Held, that the creditor might prove the amount of his debt, without the previous sale of his security. Ex parte Bowden, 1 Deac. & Chit. 135.

If a trader, before his bankruptcy, deposit a lease as a security for money, but no mortgage or assignment of it then takes place, the assignees may recover it; it confers no legal title on the party to whom it is delivered. Doe d. Maslin v. Roe, 5 Esp. 105—Ellenborough.

Where the mortgagor in possession was by express contract tenant at will to the mortgagee:—Held, that the mortgagee was not entitled to the crops upon the mortgaged premises at the bankruptcy of the mortgagor, or at the time of the order for sale by the commissioners. Ex parte Temple, 1 Glyn & J. 216.

Though assignees consent to abandon property under equitable mortgage, yet the court requires an affidavit to shew that such abandonment will be for the benefit of the creditors. Ex parte Wright, 1 Deac. & Chit. 573.

A. borrows 4000*l.* from B., and deposits title deeds as a security for that sum. He afterwards obtains further advances, and after an act of bankruptcy signs an agreement subjecting the deposit to such further advances:—B. declared to be entitled to a lien for the whole amount. Ex parte Langston, 1 Rose, 26.

In April, 1826, A. having contracted to purchase an estate from B., and having had the title deeds delivered to him, agreed to deposit the same with C. as a security for the loan of 5000*l.*, and to give him the mortgage as soon as the legal estate was conveyed to him. B. afterwards conveyed the estate to A.; but before such conveyance was made, and after the title deeds had been deposited with C., the latter refused to complete the mortgage, unless A. would agree to pay usurious interest upon the sum of 5000*l.* A. having so agreed, delivered to C. the deed of conveyance of the estate from B. to A. A. afterwards became bankrupt, and in an action of trover brought to recover the deeds, it was held that the original possession of the title deeds being perfectly good, gave C. a right to the estate whenever B. should have conveyed that estate to A.; and that he, and not A.'s assignees had a right, therefore, to the deed of conveyance from B. to A. Wood v. Greenwood, 10 B. & C. 679.

Sale of Premises.—An order was made, on petition, for the sale of premises, subject to an equitable mortgage, the general order 8th March, 1794, applying only to legal mortgages. Ex parte Payler, 16 Ves. jun. 434.

Mode of proceeding where the assignees apply as mortgagees for a sale. Ex parte Cowdry and Pitt, 2 Glyn & J. 272.

There is no authority on the petition of an equitable mortgagee by deposit of deeds, to order a sale of the estate, where there is a subsequent mortgagee of the equity of redemption who objects, and has not proved under the commission; the proper remedy being by bill. Ex parte Topham, 1 Madd. 38; 2 Rose, 446.

A bankrupt, while in partnership with K., deposits a lease with the creditor, and the partnership is afterwards dissolved, when certain arrangements are made between the bankrupt and the insolvent partner:—Held, that no subsequent arrangements of the kind will affect the rights of the creditor under the original deposit, and that he is entitled to the usual order for the sale of the property. Ex parte Booth, 2 Deac. & Chit. 59.

Where deeds relating to freehold and leasehold property were deposited with an equitable mortgagee, but the memorandum accompanying the deposit merely related to the leasehold property:—Held, that the mortgagee might nevertheless pray a sale of the freehold as well as the leasehold property, subject, however, to the payment of the costs of the sale. Ex parte Robinson, 1 Deac. & Chit. 119.

A lease, containing a proviso against an assignment, having been deposited by the lessee to secure a debt, it was ordered on the petition of the depository to be sold under the lessee's commission. Ex parte Sherman, Buck, 462.

On an application for a sale of an equitable mortgage, and liberty to bid, one mortgagee being also an assignee, a separate solicitor must be appointed for the sale, and the assignee is not to have the conduct of it. Ex parte Greenwood, 1 Deac. & Chit. 542.

A petition for the sale of property in respect of which the creditor holds a legal security, will be dismissed with costs. Ex parte Moore, 2 Deac. & Chit. 7.

Although an equitable mortgagee may waive his privilege to bid, the assignees must still have the conduct of the sale. Ex parte Smith, 2 Deac. & Chit. 60.

Where an equitable mortgagee, with a power of sale, had executed the power by putting up the estate to sale, when it was sold to him for 300*l.*, and he applied afterwards for the usual order:—Held, that the estate must be put up at that sum. Ex parte Francis, 1 Deac. & Chit. 274.

Costs of Sale.—In all cases where there is an equitable mortgage, by a written instrument specifying the terms of the agreement, the mortgagee, upon the usual petition for the sale of the premises, is entitled to his costs. Ex parte Sikes, Buck, 349.

Upon an application for the sale of an equitable mortgage, the costs of the assignees are to be paid out of the proceeds of the estate. Ex parte Garbutt, 2 Rose, 78.

Costs of the application were given to a mortgagee by deposit, upon a petition for the usual order, there being a written instrument specifying the agreement for the deposit. Ex parte Brightwen, Buck, 148.

An equitable mortgagee, who applies for a sale, will not be allowed the costs of an action at law brought for the mortgage money. Ex parte Fletcher, 1 Mont. 454.

Quære, whether a third mortgagee is entitled to his costs of petition to sell, &c., or whether he ought not to apply to the commissioners under the general order. Ex parte Robinson, 2 Deac. & Chit. 110.

The clerk of a creditor, claiming an equitable mortgage, drew up and signed a memorandum accompanying the deposit of a lease by the bankrupt; but it was not signed by the bankrupt himself, nor was it alleged that the clerk was authorized by the bankrupt to draw up such memorandum, or that it was ever shewn to the bankrupt:—Held, under these circumstances, that the equitable mortgagee was not entitled to the costs of the sale. Ex parte Reid, 1 Deac. & Chit. 250.

Where an equitable mortgagee applies to bid at the sale of the mortgaged premises, the ordinary and proper practice is that he should pay the costs of the order. Ex parte Robinson, 1 Mont. & Mac. 261.

A mortgagee applying for leave to bid must always pay the costs of the petition, unless by consent it is otherwise. Ex parte Williams, 1 Deac. & Chit. 489.

Where an equitable deposit is made, accompanied with a memorandum for a debt subsequently discharged; and on a fresh debt contracted, it is verbally agreed that the deposit shall continue as security for the latter debt, the mortgagee is not entitled to the costs out of the produce of the sale. Ex parte Pigeon, 2 Deac. & Chit. 118.

The petitioner, an equitable mortgagee of leasehold property, obtained an order for a sale, at which 950*l.* were bid for the mortgaged premises, but they were bought in by direction of the assignees. The petitioner afterwards applied to the commissioners for another sale, but the order they made being unsatisfactory to him as to the time of sale, he refused to accept it, and the assignees afterwards obtained another order, when the highest bidding was only 650*l.*:—Held, that the petitioner, by applying for a second sale, waived any claim against the assignees for the difference in the amount of the bidding at the first and second sales; but that he was entitled to be indemnified from the ground rent, and all expenses incurred since the first sale. Ex parte Baldock, 2 Deac. & Chit. 60.

(c) Property Pledged.

A bankrupt's property pledged must be sold, and the excess proved as a debt. Ex parte Two-good, 19 Ves. jun. 231.

The proof of a creditor who claims to retain property against, or has interests inimical to the general creditors, ought not to be rejected (for the amount of his debt beyond the value of his securities) on the ground that he will by his proof be enabled to elect himself an assignee. Ex parte De Tastet, 1 Rose, 324; 1 Ves. & B. 281.

There is a difference between bills deposited as a security, and property which cannot be properly ascertained till a sale: if the creditor is willing to take the bills of exchange at their amount, as they cannot produce more, the estate cannot be damnified, and his proof should be admitted for the difference. Id.

A creditor who has a bond may apply it to part of the debt, and prove for the residue. Ex parte Amphletts, 1 Mont. 77.

A creditor who holds a security, and is desirous of voting in the choice of assignees, is entitled to have the security taken at its value, and to prove for the difference. Ex parte Nunn, 1 Rose, 322.

Where debts were secured by a deposit of hops, the court directed a value to be set upon them according to the market price at the day of the choice of assignees, and permitted the creditors to prove for the difference between the price so fixed and the debts secured, and to vote in the choice of assignees. Ex parte Greenwood, Buck, 323.

A creditor having joint property of the bankrupts in pledge, and selling the same after the bankruptcy, may, notwithstanding, prove the remainder of his debt under the separate estates of the bankrupts, if there is no other joint property. Ex parte Geller, 2 Madd. 262.

The discretion of the court to order proof upon a valuation, instead of a sale of securities, is regulated by circumstances; and not too readily exercised. Ex parte Smith, 1 Ves. & B. 518; 2 Rose, 63.

Under special circumstances, the court refused to order the sale of a bond which was pledged as a security for a debt, permitting the creditor to prove his whole debt under the commission. Ex parte Smith & Strickland, 2 Glyn & J. 105.

An application by a creditor holding property of the bankrupt, the title to retain which was disputed, to take it at a fixed value, and prove for the difference, and vote in the choice of assignees, was allowed. Ex parte Barclay, 1 Glyn & J. 272.

A depositary has a right to avail himself of his pledge to its utmost extent in point of proof, and to his fullest and most complete indemnity at the time of proving. Thus, a creditor with whom a bill of exchange had been deposited as a security, first proves his debt against the estate of the drawee, his principal debtor, and thereby and by other means reduces his debt to 14*l*. Subsequent to that, the acceptor becomes bankrupt; under his commission he was entitled to prove, not only the 14*l*., but all the interest upon his debt at the time of making that proof to the complete liquidation of the account in respect of which he held the bill as a security. Ex parte Martin, 1 Rose, 87.

(d) Lien.

An application by a vendor, who had not conveyed, for a sale of the premises, in discharge of his lien for the unpaid purchase-money, and to prove for any deficiency granted. Ex parte Glyde, 1 Glyn & J. 323.

Upon the bankruptcy of a purchaser, quære, whether the vendor has a lien for timber felled, and may prove for the deficiency? Ex parte Gwynne, 12 Ves. jun. 379.

(e) Foreign Attachment.

Property attached in Jersey, being by the laws of that island vested in the creditor attaching, upon confirmation by the court of the island, in case of a bankruptcy, it was held, that the creditors attaching were entitled to hold the property attached, and to prove for the residue, where the act of bankruptcy was subsequent to the completion of the judicial act, whether on the same or any other day; but, where the act of bankruptcy was previous, they could not hold against the assignee. Ex parte D'Obree, 8 Ves. jun. 82.

A creditor in England, and subject to the bankrupt laws, having attached the bankrupt's estate abroad, must restore it. Benfield v. Solomons, 9 Ves. jun. 80.

An injunction was granted against proceeding under a foreign attachment by a joint creditor, upon a separate commission overreaching the attachment by relation of the act of bankruptcy. Barker v. Goodair, 11 Ves. jun. 78.

(f) Securities of Bankrupt and Others.

A creditor has a right to prove, and avail himself of all collateral securities from third persons, to the extent of 20*s*. in the pound: therefore, where bills are drawn and accepted by the same persons as constituting distinct firms, proof may be made against the acceptor, without deducting the value of a security from the drawer. Ex parte Parr, 18 Ves. jun. 65; 1 Rose, 76.

A bankrupt, previous to the commission against him, procured persons to assign an interest in copyhold premises, as a security to a creditor of his. The creditor may prove under the commission, without delivering up such security. Ex parte Goodman, 3 Madd. 373.

The obligee of a bond given by a principal and surety for payment by instalments, who has proved against the principal the whole debt, and received a dividend of 2*s*. 7*d*. in the pound, may recover against the surety an instalment due, making a deduction of 2*s*. 7*d*. on the amount of such instalment; and the surety is not entitled to have the whole dividend applied in discharge, but only rateably in part payment of each instalment as it becomes due. Martin v. Bucknell, 2 Rose, 156; 2 M. & S. 39.

The holder of a bill may be compelled to prove against the acceptor, for the benefit of the drawer. Wright v. Simpson, 6 Ves. jun. 734.

The deduction of a security is never made in bankruptcy, except when it is the property of the bankrupt. Ex parte Parr, 1 Rose, 76; 18 Ves. jun. 65.

(g) Securities of Others only.

Creditors having securities of third persons to a greater amount than the debt, may prove, and receive dividends upon the full amount of the securities, to the extent of 20*s*. in the pound upon the actual debt. Ex parte Bloxham, 6 Ves. jun. 449, 800.

A joint creditor, having separate security from one of his co-debtors, was admitted to prove his debt against the joint estate, without surrender or sale of his security. Ex parte Peacock, 2 Glyn & J. 27.

21. By whom Proof may be made.

(a) Particular Creditors.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 34, creditors may prove their debts by affidavit, sworn before a judge or commissioner, or a master in Chancery, ordinary or extraordinary, if in England; or a magistrate, attested by a notary public, British minister, or consul, if abroad.

An affidavit to prove a foreign debt must be attested by a notary. Ex parte Moens, 1 Mont. 15.

A creditor in Scotland was within the meaning of stat. 5 Geo. 2, as to the mode of proving debts under a commission by creditors in foreign parts. Ex parte Macdougall, 2 Cox, 8.

Where a creditor is disabled by age or imbecility of mind, from proving by his own oath, a debt against the estate of a bankrupt, the commissioners will be directed to admit proof upon such evidence as shall be satisfactory to them, though the debt be of considerable amount. Ex parte Clark, 2 Russ. 575.

The commissioners under the 51 Geo. 3, c. 16, for issuing Exchequer bills to manufacturers, &c. admitted, under the s. 48 of the act, to prove, (by their secretary) the full amount of their principal, with interest up to the complete payment of the principal, in preference to all other creditors of the bankrupt. Ex parte Holden, 1 Rose, 173.

A proof cannot be made by one person on behalf of several creditors entitled to prove, unless from necessity, or by consent. Ex parte Bank of England, 2 Glyn & J. 363.

One partner may act for all in proving debts. Ex parte Hodgkinson, 19 Ves. jun. 293; 2 Rose, 172: S. P. Ex parte Mitchell, 14 Ves. jun. 597.

A trustee cannot prove a debt alone; the cestui que trust must join in the proof. Ex parte Debois, 1 Cox, 310.

One of three executors becoming bankrupt, the two others may prove against his estate. Ex parte Brown, 1 Deac. & Chit. 119.

(b) Agents for Creditors.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 46, all bodies politic and public companies, incorporated or authorized to sue or bring actions, either by charter or act of parliament, may prove by an agent, provided that such agent shall swear, in his deposition, that he is such agent, and that he is authorized to make the proof.

Corporations may prove debts under commissions of bankruptcy, by the affidavit of a person authorized by a general power of attorney; and vote in the choice of assignees, by a person authorized by a special power of attorney, under their common seal. Ex parte Bank of England, 1 Swans. 10; 1 Rose, 142.

The Bank of England was admitted to prove, by their clerk, without a power of attorney. Id. Overruling S. C. Ex parte Bank of England, 18 Ves. jun. 229.

An agent for a public company abroad may, to the prejudice of the bankrupt, prove, with the consent of the assignees, on behalf of the company, on bills of exchange. Ex parte Cotesworth, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 92; 1 Deac. & Chit. 281.

On a petition by the assignees, ordered, that the respective agents of several societies be allowed to tender their respective proofs of their debts before the commissioner, but not to have any power over the certificate, or choice of assignees. Ex parte Ellis, 1 Deac. & Chit. 463.

If an executor, who is directed to carry on his testator's partnership trade, exceed his authority, by employing the assets in his trade to an extent not warranted by the will, and the surviving partner and the executor become bankrupt, the excess of the assets so employed may be proved by the executor under their commission. Ex parte Richardson, Buck, 202, 421; 3 Madd. 138.

An executor and trustee having committed a devastavit, is precluded from proving under his bankruptcy; liberty to prove was given, in the first instance, and without previous application to the commissioners, to a legatee on behalf of himself and others, with a direction that the dividend should be paid into the Bank in trust in the matter. Ex parte Moody, 2 Rose, 413.

An executor, bankrupt, cannot, without an order of the court, prove under his own commission, in respect of a debt due from him to the testator's estate. Ex parte Shaw, 1 Glyn & J. 127.

Where the bankrupt and another are executors of a creditor of the bankrupt, the court will permit the other executor to prove the debt, though there be a suit depending in the ecclesiastical court as to the executorship. Ex parte Shakeshaft, 3 Bro. C. C. 198.

Proof in bankruptcy, in respect of trust property of infants continued by the administratrix in the trade in which the testator was engaged, carried on by the bankrupt, constituting a firm of which the administratrix was a member. Ex parte Watson, 2 Ves. & B. 414; 2 Rose, 259.

Where a bankrupt is executor, and money of his testator comes to the hands of his assignees, he shall be admitted a creditor for that money: but the dividends shall be paid into the Bank, for the use of the creditors of the deceased. Ex parte Leeks, 2 Bro. C. C. 596.

22. When Proof may be made.

The petitioning creditor under a commission of bankruptcy must prove his debt at a public meeting. List's case, 2 Ves. & B. 273; 2 Rose, 24.

If a creditor, through accident, omits to prove at the final dividend, he may be permitted to prove, without disturbing any payment made by the assignees, and placing the creditors not paid in the same situation as if he had originally proved. Ex parte Day, 1 Mont. 212.

On petition to expunge a proof, founded on an affidavit of a creditor, who died before the proof was made, the commissioners were directed to review the proof, although two dividends had been paid. Ex parte Bridges, 4 Madd. 269.

23. Proceedings to claim Proof.

Course of Proceedings.—An application to the chancellor before the decision of the commissioners to receive or reject a proof, with the view to the choice of assignees, is improper. Ex parte De Tastet, 1 Ves. & B. 280; 1 Rose, 324.

A petition to prove a debt in bankruptcy is irregular, because the creditor did not go before the commissioners till after it was presented, and because brought to hearing without stating what passed before them. Ex parte Wright, 2 Ves. jun. 41.

Proof was refused, where the party claiming the debt being charged by the examination of the bankrupt with the receipt of money, refused a disclosure as to the receipt and application, on the ground that it might tend to criminate him. Ex parte Symes, 11 Ves. jun. 521.

If, at a dividend, a proof is rejected from the creditor's inability through accident to produce the security, the dividend may be opened on immediate notice to the assignees to suspend payment. Ex parte Barclay, 1 Mont. 126.

Assignees, applying to prove, are not bound by the same laches as might bind a mere individual creditor. Ex parte Smith, 1 Deac. & Chit. 267.

The court of review will make no order for proof of a debt, in anticipation of a probable objection that may be made to such proof by the commissioner. Ex parte Beaumont, 1 Deac. & Chit. 360.

When any application of this nature is made previous to the choice of assignees, the petitioning creditor should be served with the petition. Id.

Where the commissioners have once rejected the proof of a debt, the creditor may petition to prove, notwithstanding the commissioners referred him to a subsequent meeting, at which he declined to attend. Ex parte Skipp, 2 Deac. & Chit. 88.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 30, any one of the commissioners may, if he think fit, adjourn the examination of a proof of a debt to be heard before a subdivision court; which court shall proceed, and finally, and without appeal, except upon matter of law or equity, or of the refusal or the admission of evidence, determine on the proof: provided that, by consent, the validity of the debt may be tried by a jury on an issue to be prepared by the commissioner, to be tried before a judge of the court of review.

Petition.]—A petition by many creditors to prove is not multifarious if they have a common object. Ex parte Bousfield, 1 Mont. 128.

Nor is a petition to prove and remove assignees. Ex parte Howell, 1 Mont. 129.

The petition of three creditors for an order to prove three distinct debts, held to be multifarious. The court will not permit the claims of different persons to be united in the same petition. Ex parte Saer, 1 Mont. & Mac. 280.

A petition to be admitted to prove a debt which the commissioners had rejected, should state the ground of their rejection. Ex parte Curtis, 1 Rose, 274; Ex parte Schmalding, Buck, 93; Ex parte Wilson, 1 Cox, 308.

A petition to prove a debt and stay certificate should state the grounds on which the commissioner rejected the proof; and the court refused leave to amend. Ex parte Pearse, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 262; S. P. Ex parte Worth, 2 Deac. & Chit. 4; 1 Deac. & Chit. 574.

A petition to prove a debt and stay the certificate must state that the proof will turn the certificate. Ex parte Skipp, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 262; 1 Deac. & Chit. 497.

Costs.]—When a petition to prove under a commission is unnecessary, the petitioner is liable to costs. Ex parte Rogers, 1 Deac. & Chit. 38.

Where a creditor petitions to prove a debt which is not in its nature provable, the petition will be dismissed with costs, notwithstanding the commissioners rejected the proof for an insufficient reason. Ex parte Worthington, 1 Deac. & Chit. 288.

No costs given upon petition by joint creditors to prove against the separate estate, there being no joint effects or solvent partner. Ex parte Bradshaw, 1 Glyn & J. 99.

An order was made by the vice chancellor, and confirmed on appeal to the lord chancellor, that the petitioner should be admitted to prove a debt which the commissioners had rejected from an error in judgment:—Held, that the costs of all parties should be paid out of the estate. Ex parte Fiske, 1 Mont. & Mac. 93.

24. Amount to be proved.

Upon a sale of goods to be paid for at the end of the year in which they were purchased, but if paid for before the end of the year, 20l. per cent. discount to be allowed, which were not paid for within the year:—Held, on the bankruptcy of the purchaser, that proof could not be made of the whole debt, without deduction for discount. Ex parte Pigou, 3 Madd. 136.

A creditor who borrows money, which he afterwards pays with interest, after a secret act of bankruptcy, is considered as having never borrowed, and he shall prove his whole debt. Ex parte Congalton, 3 Bro. C. C. 47.

M. & S., being trustees of money in the funds, sell it for the benefit of S., who dies insolvent. K. becomes bankrupt. The person interested in the funds may prove against the estate of K. the value of the funds at the bankruptcy, though S.'s estate be first liable. Ex parte Shakeshafte, 2 Bro. C. C. 197.

A., being an indorsee of B., C., & Co.'s acceptances for 1364l., sues out a separate commission against B. At the time of suing out the commission, D., the person for whom A. had discounted the acceptances, had, by payments on account, reduced the debt to 420l. A. is entitled to prove for the whole amount, and for all that is received above 420l. will be a trustee for D. Ex parte De Tastet, 1 Rose, 10.

Upon a consignment with authority to sell to reimburse advances on the consignment, the deficiency to be made good, and the surplus, if any, restored, where part of the goods were sold to the consignees, proof under their bankruptcy was limited to the balance of the original advance. Ex parte Thompson, 18 Ves. jun. 134; 1 Rose, 165.

A contingent interest was assigned to secure in part a debt exceeding the value of the interest, the assignee insured against the contingency, and upon its taking effect received the sum insured:—Held, upon the bankruptcy of his debtor, that the sum so recovered, minus the premium and expenses, must be deducted from his proof. Ex parte Andrews, 2 Rose, 410; 1 Madd. 573.

A creditor on a bill of exchange made affidavit of a debt due of 2500l., which proof was admitted for only 1200l.; the residue was claimed. It appeared afterwards that the creditor was entitled to prove the whole against the bankrupt, but in the meantime he had received 500l. from some other party to the bill. The former affidavit cannot now be received as a proof of the remainder of the debt, but a new proof must be made; and 500l. having been actually paid to the creditor, he can only prove the residue after deducting the 500l. Ex parte Worrall, 1 Cox, 309.

25. Effect of Proof.

(a) Abandonment of Suit.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 59, no creditor who has brought any action or suit against the bankrupt, in respect of a demand prior to the bankruptcy, or which might have been proved, shall prove or enter a claim without relinquishing the action or suit; and the proving or claiming shall be an election to take the benefit of the commission with respect to the debt proved or claimed: provided that the creditor shall not be liable for the costs; and that, when the action or suit is joint, relinquishing as regards the bankrupt shall not affect the other parties.

A creditor who has proved, will, upon petition by the assignees, be restrained from issuing execution against the property of the bankrupt in the possession of the assignees. Ex parte Bernasconi, 2 Glyn & J. 381.

If a creditor has both proved his debt under a commission of bankrupt, and commenced an action against the bankrupt, before the passing of the statute 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 14, that act does not compel him to relinquish his action. Atherstone v. Huddleston, 2 Taunt. 181. And see Linging v. Comyn, 2 Taunt. 246.

The 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 14, which enacts, that creditors who shall have brought an action against the bankrupt, shall not be at liberty to prove under the commission without relinquishing such action, extended to prevent a creditor who was suing two partners from proving his debt under a separate commission issued against one. Blansin v. Tayler, Gow, 199—Holroyd.

A creditor who is suing the bankrupt at law is not entitled to benefit under the commission, and has no resource to the great seal, unless he gives up his legal proceedings. Ex parte Joseph, 1 Rose, 184.

In another case previous to the statute, the court of C. P. refused to order a common appearance to be entered, on the ground that the plaintiff had proved his debt, and been chosen assignee under a commission against the defendant. Hill v. Reeves, 1 B. & P. 424. And see Oliver Ames, 8 T. R. 364.

A creditor is not compelled to elect in bankruptcy if the debts are of a different nature, as a note and a bond. Ex parte Grosvenor, 14 Ves. jun. 588.

Where the proof of the petitioner's debt was refused under the commission, and he brought an action against the bankrupt, obtained a verdict, entered up judgment, and took out a capias ad satisfaciendum in order to fix the bail; and the bankrupt surrendered himself in discharge of them: the petitioner was admitted to prove his debt, and the certificate was stayed. Ex parte Arundel, 1 Rose, 143; 18 Ves. jun. 231.

A creditor having the bankrupt in execution before the bankruptcy, was not bound to elect until a dividend. Ex parte Warwick, 14 Ves. jun. 136.

A creditor was not bound to elect to proceed at law, or under a commission of bankruptcy before a dividend; therefore, a creditor having the bankrupt in custody on mesne process, was permitted to vote in the choice of assignees. Ex parte Sharpe, 11 Ves. jun. 203.

Exception to the general rule, that election to come in under a commission of bankruptcy or proceed at law cannot be compelled before dividend, the creditor having, for the purpose of taking both remedies, split an entire demand, and, being the assignee, delayed a dividend. Ex parte Grosvenor, 14 Ves. jun. 587.

Proof or claim by a creditor for any debt operates under the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 14, as a relinquishment of an action previously brought for a distinct demand, but not as it seems of an action subsequently brought for a distinct demand. Ex parte Glover, 1 Glyn & J. 270.

A creditor accepting an assignment of a debt proved, is substantially a creditor proving a debt within the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 14, and thereby relinquishes an action brought by him against the bankrupt. Ex parte Taylor, 1 Glyn & J. 399.

A party tendering the proof or claim of a debt under a commission, is entitled to the judgment of the commissioners upon his right to prove or claim, before he discharges the bankrupt, or relinquishes the action; but the bankrupt must be discharged, and the action and all benefit from it relinquished, before the proof or claim is admitted upon the proceedings. Ex parte Frith, 1 Glyn & J. 165.

A verdict creditor having proved his debt, and otherwise acted under the commission, has made his election, and shall not afterwards resort to the bankrupt's bail. Aylett v. Harford, 2 W. Black. 1317.

Where the plaintiff, in an action against a bankrupt, makes his election to proceed under the commission, the defendant is entitled to have some entry or suggestion, recording the election, put on the record. Kemp v. Potter, 6 Taunt. 549.

A creditor having the bankrupt in execution at the time the commission issues, may elect. Ex parte Knowell, 13 Ves. jun. 193.

If a bankrupt be taken in execution after the commission issued, the effect is an election without regard to the particular motive. Id.

If a bankrupt, surrendered in discharge of his bail, be discharged by the creditor, having never been charged in execution, this is no election, and the creditor may be permitted to prove. Ex parte Cundall, 6 Ves. jun. 446.

A creditor proceeding at law obtains an order for inquiry before the commissioners, and afterwards takes out an execution. Ordered to withdraw that execution, with costs. Ex parte Bozannet, 1 Rose, 181.

(b) Relinquishment of Right to sue.

By the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 14, it was enacted that the proving a debt should be deemed an election by the creditor to take the benefit of the commission. The plaintiff proved a debt under a commission sued out against the defendant by virtue of that act, and, after the passing of the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, (which repealed the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121,) arrested the defendant for the same debt. The court directed the defendant to be discharged from custody; holding that the plaintiff's election to prove under the commission operated as a final abandonment of his claim against the person of his debtor. Adams v. Bridger, 1 M. & Scott, 438; 8 Bing. 314.

The proof of a debt, though, by the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 14, a conclusive election to adopt the commission, does not affect the remedies of the party proving for the recovery of his debt unpaid. Ex parte Buckle, 1 Glyn & J. 32.

In cases within the 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 9, creditors who had obtained an order to prove under a second commission, in which 15s. in the pound was not paid:—Held, to be entitled to prove their debts unpaid under a third commission. Id.

It seems that the proving a debt under a commission, is an election by the creditor within that statute, which deprives him of his remedy by action against the bankrupt in the cases excepted in statute 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 9. Read v. Sowerby, 3 M. & S. 78; 2 Rose, 288.

Proof under a commission is equivalent to payment. Ex parte Horseby, Buck, 351.

Where A., having proved a debt under a commission against B., brought an action and obtained judgment against B. for the amount so proved, a sum attempted to be proved, and other sums advanced after the bankruptcy; and upon this judgment sued out execution, and caused property of B., in possession of his assignees, to be taken in execution: the court ordered the execution to be withdrawn altogether. Quære, whether the court would have so interfered if the judgment and writ of execution had not included the sum proved under the commission. Ex parte Chambers, 1 Mont. & Mac. 130.

A bill, after proof under a commission against the acceptor, was paid by the drawer, who, after a dividend, having arrested the bankrupt for the balance, and being also surety for him on another bill, was ordered to discharge him, and restrained from lodging any detainer, under 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, ss. 8 & 14. Ex parte Lobbon, 1 Rose, 219.

Though a creditor having received a dividend under a bankruptcy may refund and proceed at law, he cannot, if he has signed the certificate. Ex parte Freeman, 4 Ves. jun. 836.

Several Debts.—Where a party has clear separate demands on a bankrupt, he may sue for one, and come under the commission for the other, but not if they are only different securities for the same debt. Ex parte Crinsoz, 1 Bro. C.C. 270.

If a creditor prove one debt under a commission of bankruptcy, he is not thereby precluded from suing upon another, although it was due at the time of his proving the first. Bridget v. Mills, 12 Moore, 92; 4 Bing. 18.

By the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 14, a person having two debts cannot come in under the commission for the one, and proceed at law for the other. Ex parte Hardenburgh, 1 Rose, 204.

Two parcels of goods were sold at different times, and paid for by bills; the vendee afterwards becoming bankrupt, the vendors proved under the commission for the amount of the first parcel, they then holding the bill given in payment for the same; the bill for the other parcel having been negotiated by them prior to the bankruptcy, and being then outstanding, was afterwards dishonoured:—Held, that the vendors were not precluded by the statute 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 14, from suing the bankrupt for the amount of the last parcel of goods. Watson v. Medex, 1 B. & A. 121.

So held on the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 59. Ex parte Edwards, 1 Mont. & Mac. 116.

Where a creditor proved one of several bills accepted in payment of the same debt, and afterwards declared against the bankrupt on the others:—Held, that the election of the creditor to take the benefit of the commission was confined by the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 14, to the debt actually proved, and did not extend to distinct debts ejusdem generis due at the same time. Harley v. Greenwood, 5 B. & A. 95.

A creditor cannot proceed at law upon one of two bills for goods sold, which became due and was dishonoured before proof of the other, but returned after the proof. Ex parte Schlesinger, 2 Glyn & J. 392.

A creditor for goods sold may prove on a bill for part of the debt, and proceed at law on a bill for the remainder, which he has negotiated before the bankruptcy and taken up after the proof. Ex parte Sly, 2 Glyn & J. 163.

A person to whom several debts were due from a bankrupt, arising out of separate sales of goods, proved some of the debts under the commission; another person, who was suggested to be a trustee for him, sued at law upon a note which the bankrupt had given for other part of the goods sold. The court of C. P. refused to interfere in a summary way to stay proceedings on the bail-bond in this action. Howell v. Gollidge, 5 Taunt. 175; 2 Rose, 130.

Different Parties.—The statute 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 14, which enacts, that creditors proceeding under the commission shall be deemed to have made their election not to sue, does not extend to prevent a creditor who proves a joint debt under a commission against one partner from suing the others. Young v. Glass, 16 East, 252; S. P. Heath v. Hall, 4 Taunt. 326; 2 Rose, 271.

The proving against the principal, is not an election not to proceed against the surety. Ex parte Hughes, 5 B. & A. 482.

Where an attorney, in order to get possession of papers belonging to A., in the hands of A.'s former attorney, who had a lien upon them for the amount of his bill then in dispute, undertook that A. should enter into a reference:—Held, that A. having subsequently become bankrupt for the second time, and without paying fifteen shillings in the pound, the proof of the debt under the commission was not an election by the former attorney under 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 14, so as to dispense with the reference. Id.

A. and B. having dissolved partnership, an award was made, by which B. was directed to pay A. a certain sum, and to pay several partnership debts. B. gave a warrant of attorney for securing the money awarded, with a stipulation in the defeazance, that, if A. should be called upon to pay any of the partnership debts, he should be at liberty to enter up judgment. B. became bankrupt, and A. proved his private debt under the commission, and received a dividend thereon. A. was afterwards sued for a partnership debt, and entered into an arrangement with the creditor to pay it by instalments, and then entered up judgment, and took out execution on the warrant of attorney, before B. had obtained his certificate:—

Held, that A. was not deprived of his remedy by 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, ss. 8 & 14. Dally v. Wolferston, 3 D. & R. 269.

The drawer of a bill of exchange, who has paid the amount to the holder after a commission of bankruptcy issued against the acceptor, may sue the acceptor before he has obtained his certificate, and arrest him upon the bill, notwithstanding the holder has proved the bill under the commission. Mead v. Braham, 3 M. & S. 91; 2 Rose, 289.

Joint creditors having taken out a commission of bankruptcy, proving, and voting in the choice of assignees, may afterwards join the bankrupt in an action as a co-defendant, upon giving a full indemnity, undertaking to take no advantage of the verdict or judgment against him, with costs of petition. Ex parte Read, 1 Ves. & B. 346; 1 Rose, 460.

(c) Relinquishment of Securities.

A creditor having a lien on property of the bankrupt for his debt, held to be concluded by proving his debt, voting in the choice of assignees, and signing the certificate, and ordered to deliver up the property on which he had a lien. Ex parte Solomon, 1 Glyn & J. 25.

If a creditor, who has an additional security for his debt, take the bankrupt's acceptances, it is his duty when he proves the debt, to state that fact to the commissioners; and where a creditor had not done so, the proof was ordered to be expunged, with liberty for him to go again before the commissioners and tender his proof. Ex parte Hoesack, Buck, 390.

Separate creditors, who had taken a joint security, permitted, on giving it up, to resort under a commission of bankruptcy to their original debts. Ex parte Lobb, 7 Ves. jun. 598.

Proof under a commission is equivalent to payment; therefore, where solicitors had obtained an order to have their bill taxed, and to prove for the amount, it was held that they had relinquished their lien upon the papers in their hands belonging to the bankrupt. Ex parte Hornby, Buck, 351.

A creditor who has obtained goods of his debtor just before bankruptcy, shall not prove for the residue without accounting for the goods so obtained. Ex parte Smith, 3 Bro. C. C. 46.

(d) Discharge of Bankrupt.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 59, if a bankrupt be in prison, or in custody at the suit of or detained by a creditor, he shall not prove or claim without giving a discharge in writing for the bankrupt.

Where a creditor who petitions to prove his debt, holds the bankrupt in arrest under meane process, he is entitled to his discharge instant, upon the order for the proof. Ex parte Irving, Buck, 423.

A creditor issued a writ against the bankrupt, and then proved his debt under the commission: the bankrupt was afterwards arrested and several detainers were lodged against him:—Held, that the bankrupt should be discharged, and the arresting creditor to pay all the costs. Ex parte Moore, Buck, 521.

Arresting the bankrupt before commission, and keeping him in execution after, is an election not to proceed under the commission. Ex parte Warder, 3 Bro. C. C. 191.

Under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 120, which authorizes the discharge of a certificated bankrupt taken in execution for a debt provable under his commission, the court has incidentally the power of staying, before judgment, proceedings against such a bankrupt for such a debt. Sadler v. Cleaver, 7 Bing. 769; 5 M. & P. 706.

But the defendant having created unnecessary expense and delay to the plaintiff, he was required to pay all the costs incurred, from the day the cause might have been tried to the time of the application to stay the proceedings. Id.

26. Reduction and expunging Proof.

(a) By Commissioners.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 60, if it shall appear to the assignees, or to two or more creditors, who have proved to the amount of 20l. or upwards, that any debt proved is not justly due, either in whole or in part, they may make a representation thereof to the commissioners, who may summon and examine on oath the party proving together with other witnesses; and, in their discretion, the commissioners may expunge the same, either wholly or in part: provided, that the persons requiring investigation sign an undertaking for costs, and that either party may apply by petition.

Commissioners cannot expunge a proof as long as it remains upon the proceedings, it must be considered as a debt. Ex parte Graham, 1 Rose, 456.

Where a creditor proved in respect of several bills of exchange drawn by the bankrupt and discounted by the creditor, and one of those bills was subsequently wholly paid:—Held, that so much of the proof as related to that bill must be expunged. Ex parte Barratt, 1 Glyn & J. 327.

Where a creditor holding bills of exchange proves the amount of his debt, with a statement that he holds the bills as security, and any of the bills are subsequently paid by the other parties to them, the amount so paid must be deducted from the proof and the dividends; or, if the dividends have been paid upon the whole of the proof without such deduction, the assignees are not thereby concluded, for the Lord Chancellor will order them to be refunded; it makes no difference whether the bills have been deposited without indorsement, or have been indorsed by the bankrupt to the creditor. Ex parte Burn, 2 Rose, 55.

Where the indorser of a bill of exchange becomes bankrupt, and the holder proves his bill under the commission, and afterwards compounds it, and discharges the acceptor without notice to the assignees of the indorser, he also discharges the indorser's estate, and the proof of his debt must be expunged. Ex parte Smith, 3 Bro. C. C. 1.

(b) By the Court.

The court of Review will not expunge a proof, morely because the creditor has instituted process in a foreign country for the recovery of his debt, in the absence of all evidence as to the nature of the process abroad. Ex parte Cotesworth, 1 Deac. & Chit. 281; 1 Mont. & Bligh, 92.

A petition by creditors to expunge proofs, to admit proofs, and to remove assignees is not multifarious; but the removal of assignees being refused, the petition becomes multifarious. Ex parte Grazebrook, 2 Deac. & Chit. 186.

A petition by the bankrupt to expunge the proofs of various creditors, dismissed as being multifarious; costs not given out of the estate, on the ground that it would be hard upon the creditors whose debts were indisputable. Ex parte Coles, Buck, 256.

Upon petition to expunge a proof on grounds not taken before the commissioners, the respondent will have his costs out of the estate. Ex parte Ellis, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 254.

An examination taken before the commissioners upon an inquiry, is not evidence to expunge a creditor's proof, who was not a party to the inquiry. Nor is it evidence to ground an order for an inquiry as to the validity of the proof. Ex parte Coles, Buck, 242.

Whatever it is necessary to decide collaterally to the point of proof, might give jurisdiction in bankruptcy. Ex parte Rowton, 1 Rose, 15.

One of two partners, the other being abroad, proves a debt, and dies, service of the petition to expunge the debt upon the attorney appointed to receive the dividends, ordered to be good service upon motion. Ex parte Peyton, Buck, 200.

27. Proof against joint or separate Estate.(a) Joint Debt against separate Estate.

No joint Estate.—Joint creditors admitted to prove their debts on the separate estate of one partner, there being no joint estate. Ex parte Hayden, 1 Bro. C.C. 454; S. P. Ex parte Machell, 2 Ves. & B. 216.

Proof by joint creditors under a separate commission, there being no joint estate or solvent partner. Ex parte Sadler and Jackson, 15 Ves. jun. 52.

Joint creditors are not permitted to prove against the separate estate, where there is a joint property, however trifling in amount. Ex parte Peake, 2 Rose, 54.

An insolvent, who has applied to take the benefit of the act, is not insolvent within the rule which allows a proof against the separate estate, if there is a solvent partner. Ex parte Morris, 1 Mont. 218.

Where a commission of bankrupt had issued against one of two partners, and the other partner was insolvent, but no commission had issued against him:—Held, that the joint creditors could not come in competition with the separate creditors, and receive a dividend out of the separate estate of the bankrupt. Ex parte Janson, Buck, 227.

Joint creditors admitted to prove against the separate estate, by consent. Ex parte Cobham, 1 Bro. C. C. 576.

Joint creditors may petition to prove against the separate estate, on account of a fraudulent abstraction of joint funds, without a previous application to the commissioners. Where one partner is intrusted with the entire management of the partnership business, and openly without disguise or concealment enters in the partnership books the monies withdrawn by him from the joint stock for his separate use, it is not a fraud which will entitle the joint creditors to prove against the separate estate of that partner. Ex parte Smith, 1 Glyn & J. 74; 6 Madd. 2.

Proof by assignees, under a joint commission, against the separate estate of one partner for money taken out without the privity of the other. Ex parte Harris, 1 Rose, 129, 437; 2 Ves. & B. 210.

For what purpose.—By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 62, joint creditors may prove under separate commissions against one or more partners, only for the purpose of voting in the choice of assignees, and of assenting to or dissenting from the certificate, but shall not receive any dividend out of such separate estate, until all the separate creditors shall have received in full, unless such joint creditor be petitioning creditor.

The joint creditors permitted to prove for the purpose of voting in the choice of assignees and taking dividends, provided they pay the separate creditors. Ex parte Chandler, 9 Ves. jun. 35.

A joint creditor not admitted to prove under a separate commission of bankruptcy, for the purpose of receiving dividends with the separate creditors, though there was no joint property, there being a solvent partner. Ex parte Kensington, 14 Ves. jun. 447.

Joint creditor admitted to prove under a separate commission, for the purpose of keeping separate accounts, and assenting to or dissenting from the certificate, but not to receive dividends with the separate creditors. Ex parte Clay, 6 Ves. jun. 813.

Joint creditors admitted to prove under a separate commission of bankruptcy, for the purpose of assenting to or dissenting from the certificate, &c. not to receive dividends with the separate creditors. Ex parte Trit, 16 Ves. jun. 193; S. P. Dutton v. Morrison, 17 Ves. jun. 209; 1 Rose, 213.

Upon petition of joint creditors to be admitted to prove under a separate commission, it was ordered that they should be admitted, but not to receive a dividend; and that the dividend should be reserved till an account was taken of what they have or might have received from the partnership effects. Ex parte Elton, 3 Ves. jun. 238.

A joint creditor taking out a separate commission of bankruptcy, may prove and receive dividends with the separate creditors, though, as to part, a trustee for another joint creditor, who upon the general rule could have proved only to affect the certificate, not to receive dividends. Ex parte De Tastet, 17 Ves. jun. 247.

Joint Debt changed to separate.]—Judgment of outlawry against two of three joint debtors, does not make the debt a separate one, as against the third debtor, and it cannot be proved under his separate commission. Ex parte Dunlop, Buck, 253.

If a creditor has a joint and several bond, and, as a collateral security, a joint warrant of attorney and judgment, the liability on the bond is merged, and the creditor is not entitled to prove against the separate estate. Ex parte Christie, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 352; 2 Deac. & Chit. 155.

A father, member of a bank, transfers a sum of money to the credit of his son with the partnership, for this credit the son is entitled to prove under a commission against the firm. Ex parte Skerratt, 2 Rose, 384.

(b) Partnership Debts.

Generally.]—A partnership debt may be proved under a separate commission. Ex parte Hodgson, 2 Bro. C. C. 5.

Where a joint creditor sues out a commission against A., as surviving partner of B., he can claim only against the joint estate. Ex parte Barned and Moxley, 1 Glyn & J. 309.

Where a firm consists of four persons, the creditors of a firm of three of them who are bankrupts may, under the general order, prove under the commission against the four, and no order is necessary for that purpose. Ex parte Worthington, 3 Madd. 26.

By the bankruptcy of one his interest is divested and vested in the assignees, by relation to the act of bankruptcy; therefore, joint creditors under a judgment in foreign attachment of the same date with the commission, but subsequent to the act of bankruptcy, cannot have execution against the joint property, which must be applied amongst all the joint creditors. Dutton v. Morrison, 1 Rose, 213; 17 Ves. jun. 193.

A., B., and C. carried on trade in partnership, and A. and B. were partners in a distinct trade, and became bankrupt; D., being a creditor of the three for goods sold and delivered, could not prove his debt against the joint estate of the two, but was admitted to prove against the separate estate of each. Ex parte Clegg, 2 Cox, 372.

A creditor of one partner, on bond for money which came to the use of the partnership, may prove against the joint or separate fund. Ex parte Clowes, 2 Bro. C. C. 595.

Dormant Partner.]—A creditor without notice of a dormant partner has an option to consider himself a joint or separate creditor. Ex parte Hodgkinson, 19 Ves. jun. 294.

A. and B. were in partnership, B. being a secret partner, and A. on the partnership account drew bills in his own name on B., which were accepted by him:—Held, on the bankruptcy of A. and B., that the holder of these bills who was ignorant of this partnership, was not entitled to prove them against the joint estate of A. and B., and the separate estate of B., but that he was entitled to prove them against the separate estates of A. and B.; held too, that the holder, having proved against the joint estate, might, after a declaration of dividend on the joint estate, retire from that proof, and prove against the separate estates. Ex parte Husband, 2 Glyn & J. 4; 5 Madd. 419.

Change of Firm and Dissolution.]—The creditors of an old firm, who had notice that a dormant partner had been admitted, are entitled to prove their debts pari passu with the other creditors of the old firm. Ex parte Chuck, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 457; 8 Bing. 469; 1 M. & Scott, 615.

In July, 1820, W. advanced to S. and S., then carrying on business in partnership as brewers, the sum of 24,000*l.*, and all three executed a deed, by the express terms whereof a partnership stock was created, in which they had all a joint property; W. however was not to have any definite aliquot proportion of the profits, but was to have an account of the profits as between themselves, so as to get 2000*l.* or 2400*l.* a year, as the case might be, out of the clear profits: W.'s name never appeared to the world as a partner:—Held, that W. was a partner; and the new firm having become bankrupts in 1826, held, that the creditors of the old firm, and the creditors of the new firm, were both entitled to prove against the property of the new firm. Id.

One of the three partners assigns his interest in the partnership property to the two continuing partners, who covenant to pay the debts of the three, and afterwards becomes bankrupt:—Held, that the joint creditors of the three were not entitled to prove against the estate of the two. Ex parte Fry, 1 Glyn & J. 96.

A sole trader indebted by bond, took in a nominal partner, but without fraud, and two years after the partnership failed; a separate debt was not permitted to be proved under the joint commission, unless there was something, as payment of interest by both, to make the partnership liable, for which very little would be sufficient. Ex parte Jackson, 1 Ves. jun. 131.

On a dissolution of partnership, the retiring partner sells the concern, with the partnership property, to the other, but some of the partnership property remains in the partnership names, and in the order and disposition of both. They afterwards become bankrupts, and separate commissions issue against them. There being property outstanding in the partnership names, the joint creditors cannot prove under the separate commission against the retiring partner. Ex parte Harris, 1 Madd. 583.

C. and D. were in partnership, and the same was dissolved; D. carried on afterwards a trade, and became bankrupt, and C. was insolvent:—Held, that the joint creditors of C. and D. could not prove against the separate estate of D. Ex parte Janson, 3 Madd. 229; Buck, 227.

Where separate commissions were issued against three of four partners, to which they conformed, and an order was made for allowing the joint creditors to prove their debts under the commission of one of the three; under which commission the plaintiffs proved their joint debt.

and afterwards sued all the partners for the same debt, and arrested one of the other two, under whose commission they had not proved:—Held, that he was not entitled to be discharged out of custody. Young v. Hunter, 16 East, 252; 2 Rose, 120.

Where, upon a dissolution of partnership between three partners, two of the three assigned to the other all their shares in the partnership debts and effects, and the other covenanted to pay all debts then due from the partnership, and to indemnify the two from the payment of the same, and from all actions and costs by reason of the non-payment of the same, and afterwards became bankrupt, and a commission issued against him, under which he obtained his certificate, and afterwards the holder of a bill accepted by the three partners, and due before the dissolution of the partnership, sued the two, and they were obliged to pay the bill:—Held, that by stat. 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 8, the certificate might be pleaded in discharge of an action brought by the two against the other upon his covenant. Wood v. Dodgeon, 2 M. & S. 195; 2 Rose, 47.

By deed, the stock and effects of a partnership are assigned to the continuing partner, who covenants to pay the joint debts. The partners become bankrupts:—Held, that the joint creditors not having, previous to the bankruptcy, accepted the continuing partner as their sole debtor, have not an election to prove against the separate estate of the continuing partner. Ex parte Freeman, Buck, 471.

(c) Election of Creditors.

In what Cases.—A petitioning creditor under a first commission, which was separate against one of three partners, being a joint creditor, was entitled to his election under a second commission, which was joint against two of the firm, to prove against the joint or separate estate. Ex parte Smith, 1 Glyn & J. 256.

A joint creditor sues out two separate commissions, under one he proves against the joint estate and receives a dividend, at which time he was ignorant of his right to prove against the separate estate of the other:—Held, that he had not conclusively elected to prove as a joint creditor, but that, refunding the dividend with interest, he might prove as a separate creditor. Ex parte Bolton, Buck, 7.

A. employed B. and C. as his stock-brokers, and, for the more convenient transfer, allowed certain stock belonging to him to stand in the name of B. alone; B., without the consent or knowledge of A., sold this stock, and paid the produce into the partnership funds of B. and C., B. and C. afterwards having become bankrupts:—Held, that A. was entitled to prove against the separate estate of B., or against the joint estate, as he should think proper. Ex parte Turner, 1 Mont. & Mac. 255.

When to be made.—A creditor under a joint and several bond may prove against both the joint and separate estate, but must make his election before a dividend. Ex parte Bentley, 2 Cox, 288.

A creditor who has a right to elect between a joint and separate estate, must make his election before a dividend is declared of the estate against which he has proved. His election is gone if he does any act in the character in which he has proved. Ex parte Husband, 5 Madd. 419; 2 Glyn & J. 4.

A joint and separate creditor must elect against which estate to go in the first instance; and, electing to go against the joint estate, he has no preference to the other joint creditors upon the surplus of the separate estate beyond the separate debts. Ex parte Bevan, 10 Ves. jun. 107.

Double Security.—The rule in bankruptcy, that a joint and several creditor must elect, does not apply to a contract for double security against distinct firms; viz. bills drawn by all the partners upon a distinct firm constituted of some of them: proof therefore is allowed against both estates. Ex parte Adam, 1 Ves. & B. 493; 2 Rose, 36.

Where parties are indebted jointly, and enter into a covenant by which they promise on demand, jointly and severally, to pay, no demand is necessary in order to entitle the creditor to proceed severally against the parties; but where it was expressly stipulated by three partners, that, until a demand was made, an existing debt should remain a joint debt, and no demand was made previously to the bankruptcy:—Held, that the debt was provable against the joint estate, but not against the separate estates of the three. Ex parte Fairlie, 1 Mont. 17; confirming Ex parte Horwood, 1 Mont. & Mac. 169; Ex parte Hencliffe, 1 Mont. 24.

Where a debt of 27,620*l.* 19*s.* 10*d.* was due from the bankrupts at the bankruptcy to their bankers on a balance of account, and such balance was covered by joint promissory notes of the bankrupts to the extent of 18,000*l.*, and also by a mortgage of some property belonging to one of the bankrupts, with joint and several covenants from each of them for the payment of the whole balance; and part of the debt, to the amount of 17,000*l.*, had been permitted to be proved by the bankers against the joint estate, on their petition, for the purpose of their commanding the choice of assignees:—Held, that the bankers were entitled to a proof of the 18,000*l.* against the joint estate, and to prove the residue against the separate estate of one of the bankrupts. Ex parte Ladbroke, 2 Glyn & J. 81.

In a bankruptcy, a creditor by a joint and several bond must elect whether he will go against the joint and separate estate; but is not bound by taking a joint security. Ex parte Hay, 15 Ves. jun. 4.

A joint note of A. and B. is given for goods sold to A. only, and a receipt given as for money paid. A joint commission issued against A. and B. The seller may still prove his debt for goods sold against the separate estate of A. Ex parte Seddon, 2 Cox, 49.

On a separate commission against one of a firm, a joint and separate creditor, who, in respect of his joint debt had taken a warrant of attorney, and sued out a separate execution against the bankrupt:—Held, entitled to prove his separate debt, without giving up his execution. Ex parte Stanborough, 5 Madd. 89.

B. and C., being indebted to A., give a joint and several bond; A. takes (as part of the same security) a joint warrant of attorney, and enters up a joint judgment; B. and C. become bankrupt:—Held, that the bond is merged in the judgment, and that A. can only prove against the joint estate of B. and C. Ex parte Christie, 2 Deac. & Chit. 155; 1 Mont. & Bligh, 352.

Waiver of Proof.]—Creditors having proved under a joint commission of bankrupt, upon a joint and several obligation, but not having received a dividend, are permitted to waive their proof, and to prove against the separate estate, not disturbing any dividend already made. Ex parte Bielby, 13 Ves. jun. 70.

A., carrying on business on his separate account, and also in partnership with B., gives a bill of exchange, drawn by himself, to the order of A. and B., and indorsed by them. A separate commission issues against A., B. dies, and the holder of the bill proves it under A.'s commission; having afterwards learnt that distinct accounts were to be kept of the estates of A. and B., he applied to be at liberty to prove against the joint estates of A. and B., in addition to his proof against the separate estate of A.:—Ordered, that he should be at liberty either to retain his present proof, or to withdraw it, and prove against the joint estate. Ex parte Masson, 1 Rose, 159.

A joint creditor sues out two separate commissions, under one he proves against the joint estate, and receives a dividend:—Held, that he had not concluded himself to prove as a joint creditor, but that refunding the dividend, with interest, he might prove as a separate creditor. Ex parte Bolton, 2 Rose, 389.

28. Proof on several Estates.

(a) Bills and Notes.

A creditor by bill or note may prove against all the parties to his security; but if, previously to his proof against A., dividends have been declared upon his proof against B. or C., &c., such dividends must be deducted from his proof against A. Nor does it vary this rule, that the creditor, not being then prepared to substantiate his proof against A., had been permitted to entertain a claim against his estate previously to the declaration of the dividend under the other commissions, and had also, previously to such declaration, made his own affidavit of his debt to be laid before A.'s commissioners at their next meeting. Ex parte Bank of Scotland, 2 Rose, 197; 19 Ves. jun. 310.

A holder of a bill of exchange drawn by a firm upon some of their members, constituting a distinct firm, has a right to prove it against all the parties according to their liabilities upon the bill, provided he was ignorant of their partnership. Ex parte Adam, 2 Rose, 36; 1 Ves. & B. 493.

Such proof is not, however, to be admitted where the holder was aware of the identity of the parties. Ex parte Bigg, 2 Rose, 7. And see Ex parte Walker, 1 Rose, 440.

Proof is allowed against each person liable upon a bill or bond, if nothing be received before the bankruptcy, until 20s. in the pound is received, without distinction, whether principals or sureties. Ex parte Rushforth, 10 Ves. jun. 416.

A., holding the acceptance of B., which he had taken in ignorance that B. was a member of the firm of C. & Co., the drawers, and of which firm one of the members who was an infant proves a debt against the joint estates under separate commissions against B. and C., (the infancy of the other partner excluding a joint commission) making his proof, not as against the liability of the parties arising from the contract on the bill, but upon his right to include or exclude the resort to a dormant partner:—Held, that such mode of proof was a conclusive election to resort to the joint funds alone, and discharged the separate estate of the acceptor from the liability, which would otherwise have arisen out of the ignorance of the holder that the acceptor was a member of the firm of the drawers. Ex parte Liddel, 2 Rose, 34.

W., carrying on a separate trade, is also in partnership with G., under the firm of G. & Co.; W., in his separate character, being indebted to G. & Co. gives that firm a bill of exchange, drawn by O. & Co., and accepted by him; G. & Co., being largely indebted on a drawing account to F. & Co., pay the bill to them, who indorse it to D. & Co.; O. & Co. compound with their creditors; W., G. & Co., and F. & Co. become bankrupts; D. & Co., by the composition, and by proving under the commission of W. and F. & Co., receive 20s. in the pound upon the bill:—Held, that although G. & Co. were only indebted to F. & Co. in respect of their acceptances not taken up when they became bankrupts, yet that the assignees of F. & Co. were entitled to stand in the place of D. & Co. in respect of the proof made by them under W.'s commission, to the extent of the dividends paid to D. & Co. under F. & Co.'s commission. Ex parte Greenwood, Buck, 237.

If bills amounting to 1320*l.* be delivered by the drawer to a creditor as collateral security for a debt of 4000*l.*, and the drawer and acceptor became bankrupt, but the estate of the acceptor prove solvent, the creditor is entitled to receive 20s. in the pound on the bills against the estate of the acceptor, and also prove the debt of 4000*l.*, and receive dividends in liquidation of the remaining portion of his debt under the commission against the drawer. Ex parte Sammon, 1 Deac. & Chit. 564.

The holder of a bill, without notice that the indorser and acceptors were members of the same firm, is not entitled to a double proof. Ex parte Moul, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 28.

In bankruptcy among partners concerned also in other trades, the paper of one firm being given to the creditors of another, proof was allowed upon both estates. Ex parte Bonbons, 8 Ves. jun. 546.

Where joint debts were paid by a bill drawn by one of the debtors, and accepted by another, each carrying on distinct trades, proof was allowed under their separate commissions upon the bill. Ex parte Wensley, 2 Ves. & B. 254; 1 Rose, 441.

A. being indebted to B. gives him a check upon his bankers to pay him in a bill at three months. The bankers draw a bill for the amount upon their correspondents in London who accept it, the drawers and acceptors become bankrupt, and B. proves, and receives a dividend under both commissions:—Held, that B. was entitled to prove his debt also under A.'s commission. Ex parte Rathbone, Buck, 215.

A creditor, who, knowing the partnership of the parties, takes a bill drawn by all and indorsed by one, is not entitled to double proof, upon the ground that previously to taking the bill he required and had the indorsement of the one, and thereby raised a contract for double security. Ex parte Bank of England, 2 Rose, 82.

T. was in partnership with M. & F., he also carried on a separate trade, and being indebted 100*l.* on his separate account to K., he sent him a bill of exchange that wanted two months of becoming due for 300*l.*, indorsed by T., M. & F., but not by T. in his individual character, and requested K. to give him credit for 100*l.*, and to send him a bill for the remainder of the 300*l.*; K. gave him credit for 100*l.*, and sent him a banker's check for 200*l.*, which was duly paid. The bill for 300*l.* was dishonoured; T., M. & F. became bankrupts:—Held, that K. was not entitled to prove for any part of the 300*l.* against the separate estate of T. Ex parte Kirby, Buck, 511.

(b) Joint Adventures.

Where different firms are engaged in a joint adventure, the creditors of the adventure may prove against the joint estates of the minor partnerships. Ex parte Nolte, 2 Glyn & J. 295.

Where several firms are engaged in a joint adventure, the creditors of the adventure, in the event of bankruptcy, and there being no joint property, must prove against the estates of the individuals, not of the firms. Ex parte Wylie, 2 Rose, 393.

Dividends declared upon a bill of exchange, though not received, must be deducted from the proof by the indorsee under another commission of bankruptcy. Ex parte Leers, 6 Ves. jun. 644.

Where A., a sole trader, B. & C. partners, and D. also a trader, engaged in a joint adventure for a joint purchase of goods by them, and the vendor, with a knowledge of their joint interest, received in payment a bill drawn by A. on and accepted by B. & C., the vendor was entitled to prove the bill against both their estates. Ex parte Wensley, 1 Rose, 441; 2 Ves. & B. 254.

A. and B., trading under the firm of A. & Co., agree with C. to purchase coffee on a joint account, A. & Co. to have the management of it; A. & Co. purchase the coffee, and C. pays them for his share; A. & Co., without the consent of C., deposit the coffee with D., who advances money on it, and, ignorant that C. is concerned in it, debts A. & Co. with the advances. The coffee is sold at a loss, a commission issues against A. and B., and another against C.: D. is entitled to prove his balance beyond the proceeds against the estate of C., as well as against the estate of A. & B. Ex parte Gellar, 1 Rose, 297.

(c) Adjustment between Estates.

A., B., and C. were in partnership, and A. and B. were also concerned as partners in a distinct house. Commissions issued against both firms. The estates of two cannot claim any thing against the estate of three, until the joint creditors of the three are fully satisfied. Ex parte Hargreaves, 1 Cox, 440.

Where part of an account between two mercantile houses consists, on both sides, of bills, which may be proved against both estates, the cash balance as between the houses is provable, excluding the bills outstanding on both sides; but, in the event of a surplus, the bills on both sides are to be included in the amount. Ex parte Laforest, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 363; 2 Deac. & Chit. 199.

Contribution decreed between the joint and separate estates, the former having paid beyond the proportion of a debt to the crown under an extent, and the bankrupts being bound jointly and severally. Rogers v. Mackenzie, 4 Ves. jun. 752.

Joint creditors, under an order to prove against separate estates, proving against one or more of them exclusively of the rest, the estate so burdened is entitled to reimbursement from the others. Ex parte Willock, 2 Rose, 392.

Joint creditors, under a separate commission, are not entitled to have the expenses of a solicitor, employed by them to conduct examinations, &c. before the commissioners, paid out of the funds. Ex parte Longman, 1 Rose, 303.

Under a joint commission of bankruptcy, the separate estate of one partner has a lien on the other's share of the surplus of the joint estate, in respect of a debt proved under bills drawn in the name of the firm for a separate debt; and may come in with the other separate creditors for the deficiency. Ex parte King, 1 Rose, 212; 17 Ves. jun. 115.

Under a separate commission, the separate estate is entitled to be reimbursed, out of the joint estate, expenses incurred in recovering property for the benefit of the joint creditors. Ex parte Rutherford, 1 Rose, 201.

29. Proof by Partners.

(a) Solvent Partner.

What Debt provable.—Under a separate commission, proof was allowed by solvent partners who had paid the joint debts since the bankruptcy, on account of a misapplication by the bankrupt to his own use, not by contract, but by fraud, exceeding his authority, and without the privity of his partners. Ex parte Yonge, 3 Ves. & B. 31; 2 Rose, 40.

If a managing partner draws out monies, and conceals the fact, or disguises it in the partnership books, this is fraud, and proof may be made against the separate estate. Otherwise, if the transaction is duly entered in the books. Ex parte Smith, 6 Madd. 2; 1 Glyn & J. 74.

A partnership is not entitled to prove against the separate estate of an individual member of it, in respect of funds drawn by such member out of the general stock, unless the same have been drawn out fraudulently, that is, against the articles of partnership, without the knowledge, consent, privity, or subsequent approbation of his co-partners, or to increase his private estate. Ex parte Harris, 1 Rose, 129, 437; 2 Ves. & B. 210.

Under a joint commission, proof ordered by the joint against the separate estate of one partner who had appropriated partnership stock, without the privity or sanction of the other partners, and afterwards retained it with their knowledge, but under circumstances from which their subsequent approbation could not be inferred. Ex parte Watkins, 1 Mont. & Mac. 57.

A solvent partner is entitled to prove against the estate of a bankrupt co-partner the amount of the balance due to him upon the partnership account, first satisfying the partnership debts, or indemnifying the bankrupt's estate against them. Ex parte Taylor, 2 Rose, 175.

If a solvent partner pay all the joint debts, his proof against the separate estates of his partners will be limited to the amount of their respective shares of the joint debts so paid; and if their estates are not sufficient to pay 20s. in the pound, the solvent partner will not be allowed to prove the deficiency of each estate against the estate of the other. Ex parte Watson, Buck, 449; 4 Madd. 477.

A., being a dormant partner with B., dissolves partnership, and B. is declared to be indebted to A. on a balance, who receives a cognovit for debt and costs; B. becomes bankrupt:—Held, that A. is entitled to prove his debt against the estate, although some partnership debts are unpaid. Ex parte Grasebrook, 2 Deac. & Chit. 186.

Money paid by one partner to another, before the bankruptcy of the latter, for the purpose of being paid over as his liquidated share of a debt to their joint creditor, and not in fact so applied, is provable by the solvent partner as a debt under the commission, although the solvent partner was not called upon to repay the debt until after the bankruptcy. Wright v. Hunter, 1 East, 20; 5 Ves. jun. 792.

An agreement to share the profits of a member of a firm constitutes a debt provable against the member for the share. Ex parte Dodgson, 1 Mont. & Mac. 445.

A., induced by the fraudulent representations of B. as to the profits of his business, gives him a certain sum of money for a share of it: on the discovery of the fraud, A. files a bill in equity for an account to have the partnership declared void, and for a receiver. The receiver was ordered; B. becomes bankrupt. Petition by A. to be admitted to prove under the commission refused, with liberty to make a claim: although A. as against B. might have an equity to say he never was a partner, it would be difficult to say so as against third persons. Ex parte Broome, 1 Rose, 69.

Where one of two partners, who were country bankers, became bankrupt, and the defendants, being holders of their notes, obtained payment of part of them from the London banker at whose house they were payable, out of the funds in their hands belonging to the country bank; and the solvent partner, knowing of the bankruptcy, procured a debtor to the firm to give his bill in part satisfaction of his debt, and indorsed and delivered the same to the defendants in payment of the residue of the notes in their hands, and afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, that the assignees could not recover from the defendants the money so paid to them by the London banker, nor the proceeds of the said bill. Harvey v. Crickett, 5 M. & S. 336.

A partner, who, after getting his certificate, had taken up the notes of the firm, was permitted to prove against the joint estate. Ex parte Atkins, Buck, 479.

Intertrading.—Where partners are engaged individually in other concerns, if they are distinct, proof may be made in bankruptcy of debts as between the different estates; not if they are merely branches of the joint concern. Ex parte St. Barbe, 11 Ves. jun. 413.

Where one member of a firm, who carries on business on his separate account, supplies goods to the firm, and a commission issues against the firm, the debt is provable; but not so for money advanced. Ex parte Cook, 1 Mont. 228.

Where one partner carries on a distinct trade, the other partner may, under his commission, prove a debt for goods sold to him by the firm. Ex parte Hesham, 1 Rose, 146.

When.—A partner cannot prove or claim until the joint debts are paid. Ex parte Ellis, 2 Glyn & J. 312: S. P. Ex parte Carter, 2 Glyn & J. 233.

A partner cannot prove against his co-partner upon indemnifying the joint estate. Ex parte Moore, 2 Glyn & J. 166.

(b) Retired Partner.

A retired partner, with a covenant of indemnity against the debts, in consideration of assigning his share of the property, was admitted, under a commission against the remaining partner, to prove a joint debt paid by him, indemnifying the joint estate. Ex parte Ogilby, 3 Ves. & B. 133; 2 Rose, 177.

A partner, continuing the business, took an assignment of all the stock, &c., and covenanted to indemnify the retiring partner from the debts then owing from the partnership. The continuing partner became bankrupt, and obtained his certificate; and subsequently an action was commenced against the retiring partner, upon an acceptance of the partnership. Judgment was obtained against him, and he paid the debt and costs:—Held, that an action would lie against the bankrupt upon the covenant, since, under the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 8, the retiring partner might, on his liability, have resorted to and proved his debt under the commission, and was therefore barred by the certificate. Wood v. Dodgson, 1 Rose, 47; 2 M. & S. 195.

In December, 1818, A., B., C., and D. dissolved partnership as bankers, by deed, by which it was agreed that A. and B. should retire, and the business be carried on in future by C. and D.; C. and D. covenanted to indemnify A. and B. against all outstanding demands. In October, 1825, C. died, and a commission issued against D., A. having been obliged to pay certain partnership debts which C. and D. had undertaken to indemnify him against:—Held, that he might prove under the commission for the amount so paid, although he knew the firm to have been insolvent at the time of the dissolution in 1818. Ex parte Carpenter, 1 Mont. & Mac. 1.

(c) Solvent Joint Adventurer.

Money advanced to S. by B., one of several partners, out of the partnership funds, on account of payments to be made on policies of assurance underwritten by S., on account of himself and B., in pursuance of a previous agreement between them to become sharers in profit and loss on such policies, was held not provable by the surviving partners of B. under the commission of S., who became bankrupt. Ex parte Bell, 1 M. & S. 751; 2 Rose, 136.

(d) Distinct Firms.

Where two partners of a large banking firm carried on a separate trade as ironmongers, and a debt arose from the aggregate firm to the separate trade, in respect of monies procured for the benefit of the aggregate firm, on the credit of the indorsement of the separate firm; the Lord Chancellor held, that no proof could be made on behalf of the firm of the two against the aggregate firm in respect of that debt. Ex parte Sil-litoe, 1 Glyn & J. 374.

Where one or more partners of a larger firm carry on a separate trade, proof is admissible on behalf of the separate trade against the aggregate firm only, in respect of dealings between trade and trade. Id.

Partners constituting distinct firms may prove against each other: but in a partnership of two, one carrying on business separately, as they are both liable to the same joint debts, the solvent partner is not entitled to prove, under the bankruptcy of his co-partner, a debt for goods sold by his distinct house to the firm, until the joint creditors have been satisfied. Ex parte Adams, 1 Rose, 305.

Where two or more partners, but not all, of a larger firm are partners in a distinct trade, and the aggregate firm becomes bankrupt, and one of the firms be indebted to the other, in respect of a dealing arising out of its distinct trade, such debt can be proved by the one firm against the other. Ex parte Castell, 2 Glyn & J. 124.

Under a joint commission, there is no proof for either the joint or separate estate against the other, unless the debt arose by fraud, as distinguished from contract; as, by an act against the expressed or implied contract, and without the express or implied authority of the co-partner; as by over-drawing, to increase the separate estate; or under circumstances implying fraud; as for private purposes, without the knowledge, consent, privity, or subsequent approbation of the other, inferred from his giving the whole control to his partner. Ex parte Harris, 2 Ves. & B. 210; 1 Rose, 129, 437.

XI. ASSIGNMENT.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 63, the commissioners were directed to assign to the assignees all the present and future personal estate of the bankrupt, and all property which might revert, descend, be devised or bequeathed, or come to him before he attains his certificate, and all debts due or to be due to him; and after assignment, neither the bankrupt, nor any person claiming through him, shall have power to recover, release, or discharge the same; nor shall any attachment of any debt be available; but the assignees shall recover the same in their own names, as the bankrupt might.

Now, by 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 25, all the personal estate and effects which might be assigned by the commissioners, shall be vested in the assignees by virtue of their appointment merely, without any deed, and, in case of death or removal, in a new assignee, either alone or jointly with others remaining, as the case may be. Id.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 64, the commissioners were directed by deed to convey to the assignees all lands, tenements, and hereditaments, except copyholds, or customaryholds, in England, Scotland, Ireland, or any of his majesty's dominions, plantations, or colonies, to which the bankrupt was entitled, and which should descend, be devised, revert to, or come to him before certificate, and all deeds, papers, and writings respecting the same.

So, by s. 65, the commissioners were to make sale of, and convey by deed, all estate of which the bankrupt was seised, in tail, in possession, reversion, or remainder, and whereof no reversion or remainder was in the crown.

So, by s. 68, they were to make sale, by deed, of the bankrupt's copyholds and customaryhold lands, and to authorize any person to make the necessary surrender.

Now, by 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 26, all the bankrupt's real estate, present and future, in the United Kingdom, or his majesty's dominions, plantations, or colonies, as by stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 64, directed to be conveyed to the assignees, shall vest in them by virtue of their appointment, without any deed of conveyance; with similar provisions in case of death or removal.

An assignment in bankruptcy, like any other assignment by operation of law, passes the rights of the bankrupt precisely in the same plight and condition as he possessed them, subject to all equities, &c. Mitford v. Mitford, 9 Ves. jun. 100.

The property in a bankrupt's goods is, after assignment, in the assignee from the time of the act of bankruptcy, by relation. Cooper v. Chitty, 1 Burr. 20; 1 W. Black. 65.

The relation to an act of bankruptcy is confined to an act subsequent to the petitioning creditor's debt. Ex parte Birkett, 2 Rose, 71.

Under a separate commission, the assignees and the solvent partners are tenants in common, from the date of the act of bankruptcy. Barker v. Goodwin, 11 Ves. jun. 83.

Quære, the effect of vacating a bargain and sale in bankruptcy, as to preceding purchasers under the commission? Ex parte Harris, 3 Madd. 473.

Where an assignee had absconded, the bargain and sale was ordered to be vacated from the date of the order. Ex parte Corry, Buck, 314.

A commission vests in the assignees under it all the property of the bankrupt wherever situate, precluding creditors in Scotland from attaching by sequestration their debtor's property remaining or situate in that country, and from administering it in a course of distribution under such process of sequestration; and although the commission does not in itself operate upon the heritable property of the bankrupt in Scotland, yet it imposes upon him a legal obligation to execute the proper conveyances, and do the necessary acts for transferring it to his assignees. Scotland (Bank) v. Stein, 1 Rose, 462. And see Hunter v. Potts, 4 T. R. 182.

The assignment under an English commission vests in the assignees, and without the necessity of intimation, the whole of the bankrupt's personal property in Scotland, and all subsequent diligence by any Scotch or other creditor is thereby precluded. Selkirk v. Davies, 2 Rose, 97.

The court cannot compel a bankrupt to execute to his assignees an assignment of debts due to him in America, though the American government will not take notice of the rights of the assignees under the bankrupt laws of this country. Ex parte Blakes, 1 Cox, 398.

2. Provisional Assignment.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 45, the commissioners were empowered to appoint provisional assignees, who might be removed when assignees were chosen, and were to deliver up and assign to them the bankrupt's estate.

The expense of a provisional assignment was not allowed, except where an extent was apprehended. Ex parte M<sup>r</sup> Williams, 2 Rose, 454; 1 Madd 141.

The commissioners ought to state in the proceedings their reasons for executing a provisional assignment. Ex parte Norris, 1 Glyn & J. 237.

In assumpsit by a provisional assignee, the defendant pleaded the general issue:—Held, that the fact of the bankrupt's estate having been assigned by the provisional assignee to the new assignees, between the time of issuing the writ and the delivery of the declaration, was no ground of nonsuit on the general issue; and it is doubtful whether it would have been an answer to the action, if specially pleaded. Page v. Bauer, 4 B. & A. 345.

Four persons having been constituted provisional assignees, the creditors chose three of them, together with other persons, to be general assignees. The four then assigned back the bankrupt's estate to the commissioners, to the intent that they might make a valid assignment of the same to the general assignees; and the commissioners immediately assigned the estate to these last, according to the intent specified:—Held, that this was not a good conveyance from the provisional to the general assignees within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 45, and therefore not effectual to pass choses in action. Moult v. Massey, 1 B. & Adol. 636.

The statute imposes a penalty on the provisional assignee, if he does not deliver up the bankrupt's estate to the ultimate assignee. The 67th section enacts, that a suit is not to abate by the death of an assignee, but that it may be prosecuted in the name of the new assignee; and by the 100th section, the sum recovered for a penalty under the act is to be divided among the creditors. An assignee having died, and a suggestion of his death being entered on the record:—Held, that the succeeding assignee was entitled to proceed in a suit which had been commenced by his predecessor against the provisional assignee for a penalty. Bates v. Sturgess, 5 M. & P. 568; 7 Bing. 585.

In such an action, it was held, that as the assignment to the provisional assignee was recited in the assignment to the second assignee, it was not incumbent on the plaintiff to produce it in evidence. Id.

3. Freehold Property.

What Property.—Under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, estates of which the bankrupt is seised as a bare trustee, do not pass to his assignees. Ex parte Gennys, 1 Mont. & Mac. 258.

A power of revocation, not in possession, but expectant on a contingency, is an interest assignable to the assignees. Anon. Loft, 71.

Tenant in tail mortgaged for years, became bankrupt, and died without suffering a common recovery; his assignee had the estate clear of the mortgage, by the stat. 21 Jac. 1; but if he had suffered a recovery, it would have let in the mortgage and other incumbrances. Beck d. Hawkins v. Welsh, 1 Wils. 276.

A joint commission having issued against A., tenant for life, and B., tenant in tail male, remainder in fee to J. S., and his heirs, who were partners in trade:—Held, that the assignees only took an estate in the premises for the life of A. and a base fee, determinable on the death of B. and failure of issue male of his body. Jervis v. Tayleur, 3 B. & A. 557. And see Doe d. Spencer v. Clark, 5 B. & A. 458; 1 D. & R. 44.

A trader advanced half the money for the renewal of a lease, the lessee giving a note to repay the money, unless she should by will give the estate to one of his children, and then bequeathed the estate to his daughter: the father becoming a bankrupt, a moiety of the estate vested in the assignee under 1 Jac. 1, c. 15. Fryer v. Flood, 1 Bro. C. C. 160.

At what time Estate passes.]—The bargain and sale to the assignees of the bankrupt's freehold lands did not relate to the act of bankruptcy, so as to vest the title in the assignees from that time. Doe d. Esdaile v. Mitchell, 2 M. & S. 446; 2 Rose, 265.

An estate descended after the bargain and sale of the commissioners, and before certificate, was the property of the bankrupt, and did not vest in the assignees, except by a subsequent assignment. Carleton v. Leighton, 3 Mer. 667.

A specialty creditor has the same right, under a bankruptcy of the heir of the debtor, as if he had not become bankrupt, and may therefore follow the real assets, or their specific produce, in the hands of the assignees. Ex parte Morton, 5 Ves. jun. 449.

Conveyance.]—By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 78, the chancellor, upon petition of the assignees or any purchaser from them, if such bankrupt did not dispute the validity of the commission, or if its validity had been established by a verdict at law, might order the bankrupt to join in a conveyance; and if he refused, the order operated as a conveyance as against the bankrupt and all claiming under him.

Before the statute, it was held that a bankrupt was not compellable to join his assignees in conveyances. Ex parte Crowder, 2 Rose, 327; S. P. Waugh v. Land, Coop. C. C. 134.

A petition that a bankrupt be compelled to convey under that section, refused until he could have an opportunity of trying the validity of the commission. Ex parte Thomas, 1 Mont. & Mac. 64; 2 Glyn & J. 278.

A bankrupt who is disputing the commission at law cannot, although nonsuited, be compelled to convey. Id.

A bankrupt retaining possession of a cottage and land, which had passed to the assignees by the bargain and sale under the commission, and which the assignees had contracted to sell, was ordered to deliver up possession within fourteen days after personal service of the order. Ex parte Hargraves and Shaw, 2 Glyn & J. 59.

The lease of a house, belonging to a bankrupt, having been sold by auction under the usual order, the court directed the assignees to execute an assignment, and the bankrupt to deliver up possession to the purchaser: upon refusing to comply, the bankrupt was ordered to be committed. Ex parte Hawkins, 1 Mont. & Mac. 115.

The court will not order the bargain and sale from the commissioners to the assignees to be given by them to a purchaser, upon his allegation, merely, that the bankrupt had no other freehold property than that which was conveyed to the purchaser under the commission. Ex parte Pocock, 1 Deac. & Chit. 104.

4. Copyhold Property.

The commissioners might except the copyhold estates of the bankrupt out of the bargain and sale, and convey them directly to the purchaser. Ex parte Harvey, Buck, 493.

Where a copyhold was sold under a commission, a good title was made by a bargain and sale from the commissioners to the purchaser. Ex parte Holland, 4 Madd. 483.

A. became entitled to a copyhold estate on the death of his mother, to which she had been admitted by copy of court-roll. Before he could be admitted, he became bankrupt, and shortly afterwards died without admittance. The commissioners and assignees under the commission executed a bargain and sale to B., the defendant, of the said copyhold estate, to which he was duly admitted:—Held, that he took a fee simple conditional at common law; and that the commissioners had power to execute a valid conveyance of his estate by bargain and sale, pursuant to the statutes 13 Eliz. c. 11, s. 7, 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 17, and 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 12, although the bankrupt died before the bargain and sale, and although he never had been admitted tenant of the manor. Doe d. Spencer v. Clark, 1 D. & R. 44; 5 B. & A. 458.

5. Leasehold Property.

(a) Generally.

Statute.]—By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 75, bankrupts entitled to leases or agreements for leases, if the assignees accept the same, shall not be liable to pay any rent accruing after the date of the commission, or to be sued in respect of any subsequent non-observance or non-performance of the conditions, covenants, or agreements therein contained; and if the assignees decline the same, shall not be liable in case they deliver up such leases or agreements to the lessor, or person agreeing to grant the lease, within fourteen days after they shall have had notice that the assignees have declined: and if the assignees shall not, upon being thereto required, elect whether they will accept or decline such lease or agreement, the lessor, or any person entitled under him, may apply by petition to the chancellor, who may order them so to elect, and deliver up such lease or agreement in case they decline the same, and the possession of the premises, or may make such other order therein as he shall think fit.

This enactment is similar to the previous one in 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 19, which did not extend to a parol agreement for a lease. Ex parte Sutton, 2 Rose, 86.

And is confined to cases between lessor and lessee, and does not extend to cases between a lessee and his assignee of a lease. Young v. Taylor, 3 B. & A. 521.

It does not apply to a contract, in its nature not a lease, but for a purchase of property. Hope v. Booth, 1 B. & Adol. 505.

What passes.]—If the servant of A. embezzle his property, and therewith purchase a lease, and afterwards commit an act of bankruptcy, and then assign the lease to A.; A. has not such an equitable lien as to be an answer to an action of trover by the assignees. Bloxham v. Graham, Peake's Add. Cas. 3—Kenyon.

A lease was granted to W., who afterwards committed an act of bankruptcy, and then executed a deed, stating that his name had been used in the lease in trust for R., and declaring the trust accordingly: a bill was filed on behalf of the creditors of W., under the commission, claiming the lease as part of his estate; and the court directed an issue to try whether W.'s name was used in the lease as a trustee for R.:—Held, that the issue was properly directed. The jury having found a verdict in the affirmative:—Held, that the declaration of trust was valid, though executed after the bankruptcy, and that the lease did not pass to W.'s assignees. Gardner v. Rowe, 5 Russ. 258; 2 Sim. & Stu. 346.

(b) Covenant not to assign without License.

The usual covenant, not to let, &c., will not prevent a lease from passing to the assignees. Doe d. Cheere v. Smith, 1 Marsh. 359; 5 Taunt. 795; 2 Rose, 280. And see Doe d. Mitchenson v. Carter, 8 T. R. 57, 300; and Lloyd v. Crisp, 5 Taunt. 249.

A. grants a lease to B., which contains a covenant that B., his executors or his administrators, without mentioning assigns, should not underlet without the consent of the lessor: B. becomes bankrupt, and his assignees assign the premises to C.; B. obtains his certificate, and C. re-assigns the premises to him, after which he underlets them to another person:—Held, that B. having been discharged at the time of his bankruptcy from all covenants in the lease, by statute 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 19, the under-letting by him, which was in the character of assignee, was no forfeiture of the lease. Id.

A proviso in a lease, that the lessee, his executors or administrators, shall not assign without the lessor's consent in writing, did not prevent the commissioners from assigning the lease to the assignees without such consent. Doe d. Goodbehers v. Bevan, 3 M. & S. 353; 2 Rose, 456.

In cases of bankruptcy, the assent of the lessor is presumed in law to have been given to the assignment of the premises by the commissioners. Wadham v. Marlowe, 2 Chit. 600; 4 Dougl. 54; 8 East, 314, n.; 1 H. Black. 438, n.

(c) Proviso to be void in case of Bankruptcy.

Property may be limited or leased to a man to go over to revert back in the event of his bankruptcy. Brandon v. Robinson, 1 Rose, 197; S. C. nom. Ex parte Brandon, 18 Ves. jun. 429.

If a lease to a trader contain a proviso that it shall be void if he become bankrupt, the term does not pass to his assignees, but determines altogether upon that event taking place. Roe d. Hunter v. Galliers, 2 T. R. 133.

But, to prevent its passing, there must be an express proviso to that effect. Doe d. Goodbehers v. Bevan, 3 M. & S. 353; 2 Rose, 456.

If A. let a house to B. with a covenant that the lease shall determine on B. committing an act of bankruptcy, on which a commission of bankrupt should issue; and by another deed of the same date, A. grants the use of furniture to B. in like manner, and with a similar covenant to allow A. to resume the possession of the furniture on the commission of an act of bankruptcy. If B. become bankrupt, and the jury find that B. was the reputed owner of the furniture, it will pass to the assignees, notwithstanding these covenants. Hickenbotham v. Groves, 2 C. & P. 492—Abbott.

If a lease contains a condition that it shall be forfeited if seized in execution, and upon an execution issuing the lessor re-enter, and a commission of bankruptcy issue against the lessee, the lessor is entitled to the emblements. Davis v. Eyton, 7 Bing. 154; 4 M. & P. 820.

When necessary.—The general assignment of a bankrupt's personal estate does not vest a term of years in the assignees, unless they do some act to manifest their assent to the assignment as it regards the term, and their acceptance of the estate; and, therefore, till some act of this sort is done by them, the term still remains in the bankrupt, and he is liable to the payment of rent accruing due subsequent to the bankruptcy. Copeland v. Stephens, 1 B. & A. 593. And see Doe d. Palmer v. Andrews, 4 Bing. 348; 12 Moore, 601; 2 C. & P. 598.

Where an equitable mortgagee of leasehold property applied for a sale, the court refused to order him to indemnify the assignees against any breach of covenants in the lease; but gave the assignees time to accept or reject the lease. Ex parte Fletcher, 1 Deac. & Chit. 318.

A landlord's claim for rent can only be enforced against assignees after a seizure under a fi. fa. by distress. Gethin v. Wilks, 2 Dowl. P. C. 189.

Election by using Premises.—If the assignees intermeddle with and assume the management of a farm, this is a sufficient election to take the term, and make them liable to the landlord, in consideration of their tenancy, for all mismanagement. Thomas v. Pemberton, 7 Taunt. 206.

Where the assignees enter upon and take possession of leasehold property, they become chargeable with the covenants in the lease, although the bankrupt's effects were upon those premises, and the assignees delivered up the keys immediately after the effects were sold. Hanson v. Stevenson, 1 B. & A. 303.

Where the assignees of a bankrupt, who was lessee of pasture land, being chosen on the 8th of the month, allowed his cows to remain upon the demised premises till the 10th, and ordered them to be milked there:—Held, that they thereby became tenants to the lessor; and, the cows being removed on the 10th to avoid a distress for arrears of rent, that he had a right to follow and distrain them, under 11 Geo. 2, c. 19. Welch v. Myers, 4 Camp. 368—Ellenborough.

Where the assignee of a bankrupt lessee, chosen on the 15th of November, kept the bankrupt on the premises, carrying on the business for the benefit of the creditors, until April following, and himself occasionally superintended; but on the 23d December disclaimed the lease by letter to the landlord:—Held, that notwithstanding such disclaimer, he had elected to accept the lease by using the premises for the benefit of the creditors. Clarke v. Hume, R. & M. 207—Abbott.

The assignees of a bankrupt, having allowed his effects to remain on the premises occupied by him, nearly a twelvemonth after the bankruptcy, for the purpose of preventing a distress, paid the arrears of the rent due, at the same time intimating to the landlord that they did not mean to take the lease unless it could be advantageously disposed of; the effects were soon after sold, and removed from the premises; the lease was at the same time put up to sale by order of the assignees, but there were no bidders for it; they omitted to return the key to the landlord for near four months after; however, they were not asked for it; and they no otherwise made use of the premises:—Held, that they were not, under these circumstances, liable to the landlord as assignees of the lease. Wheeler v. Bramah, 3 Camp. 340; 1 Rose, 363—Ellenborough.

Where, however, the assignee, on being applied to, replied, that if he could not let it by the next quarter day, he would give up the property, and continued in and paid rent until that time:—Held, that it was an assent. Broome v. Robinson, 7 East, 339.

Election by endeavouring to effect a Sale.]—Assignees have a right to do reasonable acts to ascertain the value of property. Hope v. Booth, 1 B. & Adol. 505—Per Lord Tenterden.

Assignees are not concluded by putting up the premises to sell; they may make an experiment to see if the lease be beneficial; but in a case where they put up the premises to auction, and found a purchaser, and received a deposit, but the contract of sale afterwards went off, without the assignees shewing any reason why they did not enforce the sale:—Held, that they were liable to the payment of rent, as assignees of all the estate and interest, &c. of the bankrupt, in the premises. Hastings v. Wilson, Holt, 290—Gibbs.

But the mere fact that the assignees advertised and put the estate up to sale, (without stating themselves to be the owners or possessed thereof), they never having in fact taken possession of the premises, and, there being no bidder, the premises were not sold, is no more than an experiment to ascertain the value of the lease, and not an assent on the part of the assignees. Turner v. Richardson, 7 East, 335; 3 Smith, 330.

If a bankrupt have a lease of premises, and also a reversionary interest in them, and his assignees sell his estate and reversionary interest in the premises, it amounts to an acceptance of the lease, by the assignees. Page v. Godden, 2 Stark. 309—Ellenborough.

If the assignee hold the lease from December to May, and put a person into possession with instruction to let the premises, and several applications are made by parties desirous to take them, but they remain unlet, and, on the landlord calling upon the assignee for payment of rent, he says he will pay it if he can make any thing by the house; and the jury find that this is only a conditional acceptance of the lease, and that he has not retained it an unreasonable time: the court will not disturb the verdict. Lindsey v. Limbert, 12 Moore, 209; 2 C. & P. 526.

If the assignees so act as to make the property of less value to the landlord, and as if the property were vested in them, it is said to be an election. Carter v. Warne, 4 C. & P. 191—Tent.

If a sale take place on the premises, of the stock in trade, and the house and shop fixtures, and the catalogue state that on the same day will be sold the valuable lease of the premises, with commanding shop, held for an unexpired term of 16 years from Lady-day preceding, at the low rent of 20l. per annum, and the catalogue describes the sale to be made without reserve, and contains a list of fixtures, some of them belonging to the landlord, and some put up by the bankrupt, and the lease is bought in, but all the fixtures are sold, and the premises much injured by their being taken down and carried away, it is a taking possession. Id.

Election by exercising Acts of Ownership.]—Where the assignees of a bankrupt, who was possessed of a term, part of which he had underlet to another, released such under-tenant, and on being afterwards asked by the lessor to elect, refused to take the original lease:—Held, that this did not amount to an acceptance by them, and that they were not liable as assignees of the term. Hill v. Dobie, 2 Moore, 342; 8 Taunt. 325.

If mortgaged property be sold with the bankrupt's goods, but without the sanction of the assignees, their returning a copy of the catalogue to the Excise Office, with a declaration subscribed by them that the goods belonged to the bankrupt, for the purpose of exempting the goods from auction duty, it is not an adoption of the sale by the assignees. Bleaden v. Hancock, M. & M. 465—Tindal.

Proceedings to compel Election.]—The court was not empowered by the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 19, to determine the question of election of a lease by the assignees. Ex parte Quantock, Buck, 190.

Assignees in possession having elected not to accept the lease, an issue of quantum damnificatus was directed. Id.

In one case the assignees were allowed ten days to make their election. Ex parte Scott, 1 Rose, 446, n.

From the 10th to the 23d of March is a reasonable time for assignees to elect whether they will accept or reject the bankrupt's lease. Ex parte Fletcher, 1 Deac. & Chit. 356.

An order was made upon assignees under 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 19, to deliver up possession, and execute an assignment or surrender of the bankrupt's benefit in a lease, where the lease itself had been deposited in the hands of a third person as a security. Ex parte Clunes, 1 Madd. 76; 2 Rose, 452.

On petition by the lessor, to compel assignees to elect whether they will accept or decline the lease, the court has no power under the statute to make the assignees pay the costs, or to give the lessor the costs out of the bankrupt's estate. Ex parte Bright, 2 Glyn & J. 79.

(c) In whom the Term is vested.

If a lessee become bankrupt, the term remains vested in him, until either the assignees elect to take it, or until he himself delivers it up, under the provisions of 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 75. Tuck v. Tyson, 6 Bing. 321; 3 M. & P. 715.

A surety for a lessee is liable in respect of the breaches of covenant which accrue after the date of a commission against the lessee, but before the delivery up of the lease by the bankrupt. Id.

If a lease is delivered up by the lessee, in pursuance of the statute, it does not operate, by relation, as a surrender of the lease from the date of the commission. Id.

Assignees of a bankrupt lessee, by accepting the lease, discharge the bankrupt from any claim upon him for rent. Onslow v. Corrie, 2 Madd. 330.

If a lease is determinable upon notice at the will of the lessor or lessee, and the lessee covenants to leave, on quitting, the hay, straw, &c. on the premises, the bankruptcy of the lessee, and the election of his assignees not to take the lease have the same effect with reference to the covenant, as though the lessee had quitted upon notice. Ex parte Whittington, Buck, 87: S. P. Ex parte Nixon, 1 Rose, 445.

If a lease, containing a covenant, that the lessee, at the expiration, or other sooner determination of the term, shall take the off-going crop, is determined by the order of the Lord Chancellor in bankruptcy, under the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 19; the assignees are entitled to the off-going crop. Ex parte Mansdrell, Buck, 83; 2 Madd. 315.

By indenture of demise, reciting that the lessee had purchased certain fixtures on the premises, on condition of their being repurchased as after-mentioned, it was agreed between the lessor and lessee, and the lessor covenanted, that, on the expiration, or other sooner determination of the term, he, the lessor, should and would take the fixtures at such price as they should be appraised at by two competent persons, one to be named on each side. The lessee became bankrupt, and his assignee declined the lease (which was delivered up), but he required the fixtures to be repurchased, and brought an action of covenant against the lessor for not appointing an appraiser:—Held, that, as by 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 75, the bankrupt, on delivering up the lease, was discharged from all the covenants on his part, performance of the covenant in question could not be enforced by the assignee against the lessor. Kearsey v. Carstairs, 2 B. & Adol. 716.

A coachmaker, who was tenant from year to year of certain premises, and had several coaches on hire, became bankrupt, and his assignees entered upon the premises to keep the coaches in repair, in pursuance of the bankrupt's contracts; in August, the bankrupt's effects were sold, and the key of the premises delivered to the bankrupt, but the assignees paid the rent up to the Michaelmas following. In an action by the landlord for a quarter's rent due the Christmas following:—Held, that the assignees were liable. Ansell v. Robson, 2 C. & J. 610.

Semble, that if a bankrupt rely on section 75 as a defence to an action of covenant by his lessor, he must plead specially the facts to bring him within the section. Hope v. Booth, 1 B. & Adol. 505—Parke. And see Bayley v. Ballard, 1 Camp. 416.

6. Powers.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 77, all powers vested in any bankrupt which he might legally execute for his own benefit (except the right of nomination to any ecclesiastical benefice,) may be executed by the assignees for the benefit of the creditors.

There is no equity to compel a bankrupt to execute a general power of appointment for the benefit of his creditors in their favour, or in the favour of a purchaser from them. Thorpe v. Goodall, 1 Rose, 40, 270; 17 Ves. jun. 388.

Therefore, a bankrupt seised for life, with a general power of appointment with remainder in default of appointment to the heirs of his body, cannot be compelled by decree in equity to execute the power for his creditors. Id.

A trader, being seised of an estate for life, with a general power of appointment, with remainder in default of appointment, to himself in fee, after having committed an act of bankruptcy upon which he was afterwards declared a bankrupt, executes his appointment in favour of an appointee:—Held, that all his interest having passed to the assignee by the assignment, such appointment was void; and, therefore, that his assignee under the commission had a sufficient legal estate to maintain an ejectment. Doe d. Coleman v. Brittain, 2 B. & A. 93.

By marriage settlement, the husband took an estate for life, with power of appointment to children, remainder to trustees to preserve, &c., remainder to children in tail in default of appointment, remainder to husband in fee in default of issue. The husband became bankrupt, conveyed in the usual way all his property by bargain and sale to his assignees, and afterwards executed an appointment to his son in fee, after his own life estate. The assignees sold the life estate to the bankrupt's mother:—Held, that the son took nothing under the appointment, but was entitled to an estate tail under the original settlement. Badham v. Mee, 7 Bing. 695; 1 M. & Scott, 14.

7. Offices and Places.

The place of under-marshal of London is saleable under a commission of bankruptcy. Butler v. Richardson, Amb. 73.

The place of a Jew broker is not saleable under a commission. Ex parte Lyons, Amb. 89.

8. Personal Property.

(a) Generally.

The words of the statute are—"All present and future personal estate of the bankrupt, wheresoever the same may be found or known, and all property which he may purchase, or which may revert, descend, be devised or bequeathed, or come to him before he shall have obtained his certificate." 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 63.

The commissioners might assign all the bankrupt's property abroad as well as at home. Hunter v. Potts, 4 T. R. 182.

So, his after-acquired personal property and debts. Kitchen v. Bartsch, 7 East, 53; 3 Smith, 58.

The assignees were not, under the 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, entitled to detain from the bankrupt any part of his wearing apparel, on the ground of its being unnecessary, he himself being the party to determine that at the risk of an indictment. Ex parte Ross, 1 Rose, 33; 17 Ves. jun. 374.

(b) Ships.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 72, nothing therein provided as to the passing of property to the assignees, in case of reputed ownership, is to invalidate or affect any transfer or assignment of ships or shares thereof, made as a security for debts, either by way of mortgage or assignment duly registered according to 4 Geo. 4, c. 41.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 55, s. 42, mortgagees, or their trustees, of ships or shares thereof, are not, by reason of the transfer, to be deemed the owners, nor the mortgagors to be deemed to have ceased to be owners, except so far as may be necessary to effect sales thereof.

By s. 43, transfers by way of mortgage duly registered are not affected by any act of bankruptcy of the mortgagor, after the registration, notwithstanding he may have the reputed ownership and possession.

Before these statutes, it was held, that the former Ship Register Acts, 26 Geo. 3, c. 60, and 34 Geo. 3, c. 68, did not tend to repeal or prevent the operation of the statute 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11, (bankrupt act,) on British registered ships: therefore, where the owner of a ship assigned his interest in her to J. S., by deed, who became the registered owner, but by his permission the former owner continued to have the ship in his possession, and exercised all acts of ownership over her, until he became bankrupt:—Held, that the property in the ship passed to the assignees of such owner, although the register was duly indorsed to J. S. before the act of bankruptcy, and the transfer was complete under the above acts. Monkhouse v. Hay, 4 Moore, 549; 2 B. & B. 114; 8 Price, 256, affirming Hay v. Fairbairn, 2 B. &

A. 193: S. P. Robinson v. Macdonnell, 5 M. & S. 228. And see Ex parte Stadgroom, 1 Ves. jun. 163.

So, though such requisites were completed after the act of bankruptcy, and before the action brought. Moss v. Charnock, 2 East, 399.

A. and B., owners of a ship, executed an absolute bill of sale to C. and D. for a nominal consideration. There was a parol agreement between them, that C. and D. should accept bills for the accommodation of A. and B.; that the ship should be a security to C. and D. for any advances they should make on such acceptances; and that, until default made by A. and B. in providing for the acceptances, the ship should remain in their possession and management. The ship was registered in the names of C. and D., but A. and B. remained in the possession and management of her, appeared to the world as owners, and obtained credit from appearing so. Before default made by A. and B., in providing for the acceptances, C. and D. became bankrupts, and their assignees immediately seized and sold the ship. A. and B. afterwards became bankrupts:—Held, that trover for the ship could not be maintained by their assignees against the assignees of C. and D.; for the parol agreement could not be set up against the bill of sale, and the case did not come within the statute of James, the ship having been seized by the defendants before the bankruptcy of A. and B.; and though the bill of sale, unaccompanied by possession, might be void as against creditors, it was binding upon A. and B. and their assignees. Robinson v. McDonell, 2 B. & A. 134.

A. contracted with B. to build a ship, and furnish her with every requisite for sea, the price to be paid by four instalments; two to be paid in the progress of the work, and the others when the vessel was finished and launched. The two first instalments were paid at the respective times stipulated: when the hull was ready for launching, the ship was measured and surveyed with the privity of the builder; and the master, who had been previously appointed, entered into the usual bond for the delivery of the register at the custom-house; the ship was then registered in the name of the purchaser, and all the requisites of the register acts were complied with. The builder then received the third instalment. Before the ship was launched the purchaser advertised for freight, chartered her for a voyage, and hired a crew, with the privity of the builder. The ship was not, in fact, launched, as stated in the register, but remained in the builder's yard; and his men were at work upon her until the 3d July. From the early part of June to the 30th of that month, an apprentice of the master was employed in the ship; and on the 1st July his bedding was put on board. On the 30th June the builder committed an act of bankruptcy, and on the 8th July a commission was issued against him. On the 2d of July, the purchaser took possession of the vessel while she remained on the builder's wharf, and took away a rudder and cordage; and on the 4th she was launched, and afterwards equipped for sea at the purchaser's expense, the fourth instalment remaining unpaid:—Held, that as between the bankrupt and the purchaser there was such a transfer to, and general ownership in, the latter, as to exclude the operation of the 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11, and bar an action of trover at the suit of the assignees; but that they were entitled to such portion of the fourth instalment as should remain due after satisfying the expenses of completing the vessel for sea, according to the contract, and for which the bankrupt would have had a lien on the vessel. Woods v. Russell, 1 D. & R. 587; 5 B. & A. 942.

The sole owner of a ship secretly mortgaged three-fourth shares in her to a creditor as a security for a debt, and was allowed by the latter to retain the sole possession, management, and control of her until he became bankrupt, and though the requisites of the registry acts had been complied with:—Held, that the whole vessel passed to the assignees under the statute 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11, and that trover would lie against the mortgagee, who had taken possession of the ship upon the bankruptcy of the mortgagor. Kirkley v. Hodgson, 2 D. & R. 848; 1 B. & C. 588.

Where a ship was mortgaged at sea, with a proviso that the mortgagor should continue in possession till failure of payment of the mortgage money on demand; the grand bill of sale was delivered, and the mortgagor became bankrupt before the arrival of the ship, and the mortgagee took possession on her arrival:—Held, that he might maintain trover against the assignees who took the ship from him, notwithstanding he made no demand either on the bankrupt or his assignees. Atkinson v. Maling, 2 T. R. 462. And see Richardson v. Campbell, 5 B. & A. 196.

A transfer of a ship and cargo at sea, conveyed by M. to S. as a security for money borrowed, by executing and delivering to S. a bill of sale of the ship, a policy upon ship and cargo, and indorsing the bills of lading, was held not to pass the property to S., where S. neglected, upon the ship's return, and notice thereof, to take possession, or to do any act to notify the transfer of the property to him; but that the property passed to the assignees of M., who became bankrupt, as being in the possession, order, and disposition of M. at the time when he became bankrupt, within the stat. 21 Jac. 1, c. 19. Also that an agreement between M. and the captain, that the captain should have one-fifth share of the profit or loss of the voyage on ship and cargo, did not prevent S. from taking possession. Mair v. Glennie, 4 M. & S. 240.

It was necessary that the bankrupt should have been the registered owner; and therefore it was held, that assignees could not maintain trover for a ship of which the bankrupt was never the registered owner, although defendant claimed under him. Taylor v. Kinloch, 1 Stark. 177—Ellenb.

Under a commission of bankruptcy against two partners, ships registered in the name of one of them, but in the order and disposition of both, form part of the joint-estate. Ex parte Barn, 1 J. & W. 378.

If the names of two partners in trade appear (among others) on the certificate of registry, as owners of a ship, the registry acts do not prevent the shewing how and in what proportions the several owners are respectively entitled; and though the partners may derive title under different conveyances, yet if their shares were purchased with the partnership funds, and treated by them as partnership property, and the partners become bankrupt, these shares will be considered as the joint property. Ex parte Jones, 4 M. & S. 450.

The owners of a ship are not interested in it as joint tenants, but as tenants in common upon a bankruptcy, therefore the bankrupt's share passes to the creditors under the bankruptcy without being liable specifically to the claims of the other part owners in respect of their disbursements and liabilities for the ship. Ex parte Harrison, 2 Rose, 76.

One of three partners in a ship and cargo, the costs and outfit of which were 4568*l.*, pays only 410*l.* in part of his third share, and gives his notes for the remainder, but, before they become due, is declared a bankrupt:—Held, that the other partners cannot, by voluntarily discharging the notes, stand in his place for any share of the profits; but that the assignees are entitled to a full third both of the profits of the adventure and of the value of the ship. Smith v. De Silva, Cowp. 469.

The owner of the major part of a vessel then lying in port mortgaged it, and transferred the bill of sale to the mortgagee. The mortgagee did not take possession, but suffered the mortgagor and the other part owners to have the management, and act as the visible owners of the vessel. The mortgagor having become bankrupt, held that his share in the vessel passed to his assignees, under the statute 21 Jac. 1, c. 19. Hall v. Gurney, 3 Dougl. 356.

There was no jurisdiction in bankruptcy to compel a bankrupt to perfect a bill of sale of a ship. Ex parte Stewart, 1 Glyn & J. 344.

By the register act, 6 Geo. 4, c. 110, s. 39, (also now repealed), the officers of customs were directed not to register bills of sale of ships, which, at the time they are mortgaged, were absent from port, till thirty days had elapsed from their arrival in port. Two ships and 16-64th parts or shares of another were mortgaged while at sea by bill of sale to W. & Co., which bill of sale was registered by the officers of custom of the port to which they belonged before their return to port; one ship afterwards returned, but no indorsement of the bill of sale was made on her certificate of register. After being insured, she sailed again within thirty days on another voyage in which she was lost. By a bill of sale, of a subsequent date (to which W. & Co. were parties), after reciting the prior mortgage to them, the same mortgagor assigned to J. & Co. the same ship and shares, with the policies effected on two of them, and the sum payable by certain charterers for the hire of the third, with all equity of redemption of the said ships, freight, monies, and premiums, subject to the prior mortgage to W. & Co., and to their power of sale. This bill of sale was also registered before the return of any of the ships to port. The mortgagor became bankrupt. Two of the ships returned, and their certificates of registry were duly indorsed within thirty days, with the two bills of sale in the order of their dates:—Held, that the second bill of sale was valid, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 110, ss. 31 & 37, against the assignees of the bankrupt, as to the interest in the ships, which it purported to assign to mortgagees; notwithstanding the mortgagor's bankruptcy occurred before the lapse of thirty days after the ship arrived in port. Ex parte Jones, 2 Tyr. 671.

So also as to the policies of insurance and monies due on the charter-party. Id.

(c) Patent Rights.

A patent right, for the exclusive exercise of an invention, obtained from the crown, by an uncertificated bankrupt, is affected by the previous assignment of the commissioners, and vests in the assignees. Hesse v. Stevenson, 3 B. & P. 565.

If the assignees of an uncertificated bankrupt in their own names execute a deed with other creditors, whereby they, and all the creditors who may sign the said deed, release the bankrupt from all actions, suits, claims, and demands against him or his estate, and such deed be not signed by all the creditors of the bankrupt, the assignees are not barred from claiming, as assignees, the benefit of a patent right afterwards obtained by the bankrupt. Id.

If, by a private act of parliament, the sole making of a newly invented machine be vested in certain persons, with a proviso that it shall be forfeited in case it shall become "vested in, or in trust for, more than five persons or their representatives otherwise than by devise or succession, (reckoning executors and administrators only as the single persons they represent):"—Held, that if one of the persons become bankrupt, the right passes to his assignees; and that though there are more than five creditors, yet the assignees do not hold it in trust for "more than five persons, otherwise than by devise or succession," within the meaning of the act. Bloxam v. Elses, 1 C. & P. 558; R. & M. 187—Abbott.

9. Choses in Action.

(a) Contracts.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 63, the assignment vests the property, right, and interest in all debts due or to be due to the bankrupt, wheresoever found or known, in the assignees, as fully as if the assurance whereby they are secured had been made to them; and afterwards, neither the bankrupt, nor any person claiming under him, shall recover, release, or discharge the same; but the assignees only are to sue.

Choses in action pass by a provisional assignment. Moult v. Massey, 1 B. & Adol. 636.

So all contracts made with the bankrupt pass to the assignees. Splidt v. Bowles, 10 East, 279.

The bankruptcy of a person who has agreed to purchase, does not discharge the contract. Brooke v. Hewitt, 3 Ves. jun. 255.

A. deposited policies of insurance belonging to him as a security for a debt of 800*l.* at his bankers, who were in advance to him; B. (a creditor) knowing the circumstance, afterwards, at the request of A., expressly undertook to take the policies and settle with the underwriters, and pay in the amount which he might receive, at A.'s bankers, to his account. On this undertaking, the policies were given up to him, and he received the sum of 949*l.* on them. A. becoming a bankrupt, and being indebted to B. in a larger sum than that received, he refused to pay over the money, and claimed to set off his own debt against the proceeds of the policies:—Held, that the assignees of A. could not (even with the assent of the bankers) maintain an action against B. for the breach of his undertaking. Chalmers v. Page, 3 B. & A. 697.

A bankrupt, after an act of bankruptcy, contracts with a factor to whom he had delivered goods for sale, and who has accepted a bill upon the strength of the goods, to return the bill if he will return the goods, and does return the bill. The assignees may adopt this contract, and recover against the factor for the non-delivery of the goods. Butler v. Carver, 2 Stark. 433—Ab.

The assignees of a bankrupt are not entitled to the specific execution of a contract for a lease, entered into with a view to the personal accommodation of the bankrupt. Flood v. Finlay, 2 Rose, 147.

A sole trader having agreed, in consideration of a sum payable by instalments, to take two persons into partnership with him for a period of 18 years, and having become bankrupt five months after the commencement of the partnership, when only one instalment was due, his assignees are entitled at the respective periods to receive the remaining instalments. Akhurst v. Jackson, 1 Swans. 85.

A tenant in tail makes a mortgage, with a covenant for further assurance, and becomes bankrupt, his assignees are bound by the covenant. Pye v. Danbux, 3 Bro. C. C. 595.

A trader makes a conveyance of all his real and personal property to trustees, to sell for the benefit of his creditors, under which the trustees, contract to sell certain lands to the defendant. The contract not being completed, they file a bill against the defendant for a specific performance; but, before answer, the trader becomes bankrupt, and his assignees file a supplemental bill to enforce the contract:—Held, that although the conveyance to the trustees was an act of bankruptcy, the assignees may compel the performance of the contract made under it. Goodwin v. Lightbody, 1 Daniel, 153.

A. was entitled to commission for introducing to a tradesman a purchaser for his business, which was to be paid on the completion of the bargain. After he had introduced the purchaser, but before the matter was settled, he became bankrupt, and his assignees brought an action for the commission, which they afterwards discontinued, and wrote to him saying that they disclaimed all right to the money. A. upon this brought an action in his own name:—Held, that he was not entitled to recover. Hillery v. Morris, 5 C. & P. 6—Tenterden.

Assignees take subject to all equities under which the bankrupt stood. Ex parte Herbert, 13 Ves. jun. 188.

(b) Bills, Notes, and Checks.

Generally.]—Assignees may maintain trover for bills sent by the bankrupt to one of his creditors after committing an act of bankruptcy, though he, being a bill broker, had merely lent money on them, and had not either discounted or given the full value for them. Hall v. Barnard, 1 C. & P. 382—Abbott.

To an action on a note given to an uncertificated bankrupt, after the commission issued, the defendant pleaded the bankruptcy of the plaintiff and the commissioners' assignment, and that the assignees demanded payment of him: the plaintiff replied, that there had been no new assignment to the assignees after the making of the note; and that the defendant treated with the plaintiff as one capable of contracting personally:—Held, on demurrer, that the demand by the assignees vested the right in them; that a new assignment of personal property was not necessary; and that the mode of contracting was immaterial. Kitchen v. Bartsch, 7 East, 53; 3 Smith, 58.

Assignees cannot recover the amount of a check, paid by the bankrupt's bankers after the bankruptcy, in trover for the check, against the creditor to whom the check was delivered, and the money paid. Mathew v. Sherwell, 2 Taunt. 439.

A bill was delivered by defendant to two partners, and after the bankruptcy of one, indorsed by the other to plaintiff:—Held, that no interest could pass to the assignees, and a verdict was taken for plaintiff with liberty to defendant to move the point whether a party without knowledge of a trust can acquire an interest beyond that of the trustee. Ramsbottom v. Cator, 1 Stark. 228—Ellenborough. The case was not moved.

Where bankers discount a bill for a customer, giving him credit for the amount of the bill, and debiting him with the discount, the bill becomes the property of the bankers, and, upon their bankruptcy, their assignees may maintain an action upon it, although there be no balance due to them from the customer. Carstairs v. Bates, 3 Camp. 301—Ellenborough.

One who had committed a secret act of bankruptcy, procured the defendant to lend him his acceptance, and as a security pledged the lease of his house; and having drawn the bill payable to his own order, indorsed it to the plaintiff for a valuable consideration, without notice of his bankruptcy:—Held, that in an action by the plaintiff, as indorsee, against the acceptor, the latter could not defend himself on the ground of the drawer's bankruptcy at the time of such indorsement, or on account of the assignees having withdrawn from him the lease deposited as a security for his acceptance. Arden v. Watkins, 3 East, 317.

A bill payable to the order of the drawer, and accepted for his accommodation, does not pass under a commission of bankruptcy against the payee, and he may indorse it after an act of bankruptcy; and his indorsee for a valuable consideration has a right of action. Wallace v. Hardacre, 1 Camp. 46, 179—Ellenborough. And see Willis v. Freeman, 12 East, 656.

The bankrupt having delivered a promissory note as a security for a debt, less than the amount of the note, without indorsement; ordered that the creditor should be at liberty to bring an action on the note in the name of the assignees, indemnifying them, and undertaking to account for the surplus recovered; the petitioner to pay costs as upon an agreement without writing. Ex parte Brown and Blundston, 1 Glyn & J. 407.

An indorsement after bankruptcy of a security delivered to a creditor previously is valid. Ex parte Greening, 13 Ves. jun. 206.

The payee of a bill, who is a trader, and has delivered it over for a valuable consideration, and forgot to indorse it, may indorse the bill after he has become a bankrupt. Smith v. Pickering, Peake, 50—Kenyon.

So, where a bill was delivered to the indorsee with the intent of transferring the property in it to him more than two months before the commission, but the indorsement was not in effect written upon it till within the two months:—Held, that the writing of the indorsement had reference to the delivery of the bill, and that the case was clearly within the statute. Anon. 1 Camp. 492, n.—Ellenborough.

So, the defendant may give in evidence that the bill of exchange on which the action is brought was indorsed after the indorser became bankrupt. Pinkerton v. Adams, 2 Esp. 611—Kenyon.

Assignees were ordered to indorse a bill which the bankrupt, before his bankruptcy, had transferred to the petitioner for a valuable consideration, but with indorsement: the indorsement to be special, so as to secure the assignees from personal liability. Ex parte Mowbray, 1 J. & W. 428.

A. obtains money from B., on the security of goods consigned to B.'s house in America, and shortly afterwards becomes bankrupt, B.'s agent in America, ignorant of the advances made and of the bankruptcy, remits bills for the proceeds of the goods to A.; A. delivers them to a person to get them accepted, who hands them over to B.; a petition praying that A., or the assignees, might be directed to indorse them, dismissed with costs on the ground of want of jurisdiction. Ex parte Hall, 1 Rose, 13.

Short Bills in Bankers' Hands.]—Short bills in the hands of a banker are specifically the property of the remitter, subject to a lien for the balance of the account. Ex parte Rowton, 17 Ves. jun. 431; 1 Rose, 15: S. P. Ex parte Waring, 19 Ves. jun. 349.

And are to be delivered up, subject to the bankrupt's lien, and indemnifying the estate against the engagements on account of the party claiming them. Id.

An order was made upon the provisional assignee to deliver up short bills in the hands of bankers at the time of their bankruptcy, the estate being indemnified against their outstanding acceptances on account of the petitioner. Ex parte Buchanan, 1 Rose, 280; 19 Ves. jun. 201.

The drawer of bills of exchange deposits short bills with the acceptor, to cover his drawing account. The drawer and acceptor become bankrupts. The holder of the acceptances can call upon the assignees of the acceptor to apply the short bills in discharge of the acceptances, to the extent of the lien which the acceptor had upon them at the time of his bankruptcy. To ascertain that lien, an inquiry directed. Ex parte Parr, Buck, 191.

A short bill in the hands of a bankrupt as agent, and not by consent or the course of dealing, is considered as cash; to be returned, or the proceeds received after the bankruptcy, though the bill was due previously, and retained so as to discharge the indorser. Ex parte Sollers, 18 Ves. jun. 229; 1 Rose, 155.

Whether bills are to be considered short or not, does not depend on the particular mode of entering them in the banker's books, but upon the habits of dealing between the parties, and all the circumstances, together with the mode of entering them, is only evidence. Ex parte Pearce, 1 Rose, 232; S. C. nom. Ex parte Pease, 19 Ves. jun. 25. And see Ex parte Wakefield Bank, 1 Rose, 243; Ex parte Leeds' Bank, 1 Rose, 254; Ex parte Armitstead, 2 Glyn & J. 371.

The onus of that proof lies on the banker. Ex parte Sargeant, 1 Rose, 153.

A customer is not entitled to recover short bills in the hands of his bankers at the time of their bankruptcy, where the habit of dealing between the parties was such as to warrant an inference that they mutually considered and treated such bills as cash. Ex parte Thompson, 1 Mont. & Mac. 102.

A. was in the habit of indorsing and paying into his country banker B.'s hands bills not due, which were entered by B. in his pass book, as bills to his credit to the full amount. By the custom of the bank, the customers were at liberty to draw for the amount of such bills immediately, and the bank was at liberty to pay away such bills as they thought fit. There was no evidence of A.'s knowledge of this custom, and A. swore that he never gave authority to B. to negotiate them, but deposited them only that B. might receive the value when at maturity; that he never drew on account of any bill till after it was due; that the balance of accounts, independent of the bills, was always in his favour; and that he never received more than one such bill (deposited by another customer) in answer to his checks. B. having negotiated them to C. as a security for a debt, and B. becoming bankrupt before the bills were due:—Held, that they did not pass to B.'s assignees; and therefore, that A. was entitled to be indemnified from the surplus security in the hands of C. Ex parte Benson, 1 Deac. & Chit. 435; 1 Mont. & Bligh, 120.

Where a customer of a country banker was in the habit of indorsing and paying into his hands bills of exchange, which were never written short, but entered to the full amount in the pass-book, on the day they were paid in, and also in the books of the bank, to the credit of the customer, as "bills" (not as "cash"), and after such entry, the customer was at liberty to draw to the full amount, by checks, and the bankers became bankrupts, having in their possession several of the customer's bills so paid in, and the assignees having converted the same to their use:—Held, that the customer (who had a cash balance in his favour at the time of the bankruptcy) might maintain trover against the latter for the amount, there being no evidence that he had, in point of fact, agreed, that when the bills were paid in, they were to become the property of the bankers. Thompson v. Giles, 3 D. & R. 733; 2 B. & C. 422.

If A. deposit bills, indorsed in blank, with B. his banker, to be received when due, and the latter raise money upon them, by pledging them with C. another banker, and afterwards become bankrupt, A. cannot maintain trover against C. for the bills. Collins v. Martin, 1 B. & P. 648; 2 Esp. 520.

A customer paying bills not due into his banker's in the country, whose custom it was to credit their customers for the amount of such bills, if approved, as cash (charging interest), is entitled to recover back such bills in specie from the bankers upon their becoming bankrupt: the balance of his cash account, independent of such bills, being in his favour at the time of the bankruptcy: and if payment be afterwards received upon such bills by the assignees, they are liable to refund it to the customer, in an action for money had and received. Giles v. Perkins, 9 East, 12.

Where bills are paid in at a bankers' as short bills (i. e. bills which the bankers are to present when due, and carry the proceeds to account), and the bankers afterwards become bankrupts; if, before the choice of assignees, some of the bills were paid, the customer cannot recover the value of such bills as were so paid, in an action of trover against the assignees. Tennant v. Strachen, 4 C. & P. 31; M. & M. 377—Tenterden.

If the assignees of certain bankers who had become bankrupts, when called upon to return bills paid in at the bankers' as short bills, claim a right to retain such bills as have not been paid, alleging that the bankrupts had discounted them for the customer before the bankruptcy, this is presumptive evidence that those bills were the bills paid in by the customer. Id.

If a customer pay into the hands of his banker certain bills as short bills, and after the bankruptcy and choice of assignees of the bankrupts, the assignees present them for payment, and receive the proceeds, and claim to hold the proceeds against the customer, they are liable in trover. Id.

Bills of exchange were deposited with bankers before their bankruptcy, and handed over by them on the day of their bankruptcy to A. & B. A demand of the bills having been made on A. & B., but the assignees having received the proceeds of some of them before any demand was made on themselves:—Held, that they were nevertheless liable in trover for those received. Id.

Under an agreement to pay bills into a country bank on discount for the notes of the bank, bills paid in after the bankruptcy of some partners, but before that of the whole firm, cannot be retained by the assignees. Ex parte McGee, 19 Ves. jun. 607; 2 Rose, 376.

(c) Policies of Insurance.

Generally.—A policy of insurance, effected by a bankrupt upon his own life at an annual premium, passes to his assignees, however small the apparent value of it may be at the time of his bankruptcy, and although there are considerable arrears of premium then due upon it; and if, instead of delivering it up as part of his effects, he secretly assign it to another person, who pays the arrears of the premium, and upon the death of the bankrupt receives the sum insured, this sum, deducting the amount of the arrears so paid, may be recovered by the assignees as money had and received to their use. Schondler v. Wace, 1 Camp. 487—Ellenborough. But see Grant v. Hill, 9 Taunt. 380; and Wills v. Wells, 2 Moore, 247; 8 Taunt. 264.

Upon a separate commission of bankruptcy, the benefit of an insurance effected by the bankrupt upon his own account upon joint property, is not liable to the joint creditors. Ex parte Browne, 6 Ves. jun. 136; S. P. Ex parte Parry, 5 Ves. jun. 575.

Utensils of trade being property of one partner, and insured in his name, are left in the ordering and disposition of the partners. A fire happens, by which they are consumed. After the fire, a joint commission issues against the partners. The insurance money is paid to the joint assignees:—Held, that the insurance money does not pass by the assignment under the joint commission. Ex parte Smith, 3 Madd. 63; Buck, 149.

Assignment of.—The assignment of a policy of insurance without notice to the office does not prevent the operation of the clause of reputed ownership. Ex parte Tennyson, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 67.

If notice of the assignment of a policy of insurance on a life is not given to the insurer, it remains, upon the bankruptcy of the assignor, in his order and disposition, although the office do not require notice, and keep no book or registry of notices which might be given; and it passes to his assignees. Williams v. Thorp, 2 Sim. 257; S. P. Ex parte Colvill, 1 Mont. 110.

A letter to the secretary of an insurance office, in which the writer says, "I am holder of the under-mentioned policies," and inquires what the office would give for them, is sufficient notice of an assignment. Ex parte Stright, 1 Mont. 502.

A legacy left to the bankrupt at any time before the allowance of the certificate passes under the assignment. Tudway v. Bowen, 2 Burr. 716; 2 Ld. Ken. 423.

So, a legacy falling to a bankrupt before allowance of his certificate by the testator's death, pending an unfounded petition to stay it, goes to his assignees, unless the petition was presented with that object. Ex parte Ansell, 19 Ves. jun. 208.

Legacy of 1000*l.* to the wife of J. A., who was largely indebted to the testatrix; J. A. becomes bankrupt, and his wife afterwards dies, without having asserted any claim in respect of this legacy. The assignees of J. A. claim the legacy:—Held, that the executors of the testatrix are entitled to retain the legacy in part discharge of the debt due to the testatrix. Ranking v. Barnard, 5 Madd. 32.

Devise of the copyhold estate to the wife of A., to be disposed of as she should appoint, and a bequest of 200 guineas to pay the fines of her admission, the surplus to herself. She is not admitted, but appoints to her husband, who is the residuary legatee, and gives her credit for the 200 guineas in account. He becomes bankrupt:—Held, that the 200 guineas not having been applied for the purpose of admission, fell into the residue, and the credit in account was a mere declaration of trust, without consideration, and not binding upon his creditors. Ex parte Smith, 1 Rose, 208.

The bankruptcy and certificate of one of several joint grantors discharges the bankrupt, but not the others. Baxter v. Nichols, 4 Taunt. 90; 2 Rose, 111.

But an annuity given by will to a trader for life, payable to him only upon his own receipt, and no other, and to cease immediately upon alienation, was held not to pass by the assignment, as by that act it ceased. Dommett v. Bedford, 6 T. R. 684; 3 Ves. jun. 149.

But in another case, where an annuity was given as an unalienable provision for personal use and support, not subject to be anticipated or alienated, or liable to debts, control, or engagements, with a proviso that if the grantee should sell, assign, transfer, or make over, demise, mortgage, charge, or otherwise attempt to alienate the said annuity, or should do or execute any act, deed, matter, or thing, to charge, alienate, or affect the same, it should thereupon be suspended:—Held, that the annuity was not forfeited by the outlawry of the grantee. Rex v. Robinson, Wightw. 386.

An annuity given to A. for his personal support, not to be liable to his debts, and to be paid from time to time into his proper hands, and not to any other person, and his receipt only to be a sufficient discharge, passes on A.'s bankruptcy to his assignees. Graves v. Dolphin, 1 Sim. 66.

A testator directs that his estate and effects shall be laid out in the public funds, in the names of trustees, who are to pay the dividends from time to time into his son's hands, or to his order and on his receipt, to the intent that the same, or any part thereof, should not be grantable or assignable by way of anticipation. On the bankruptcy of the son, his assignees under the commission are entitled to his interest under the will.

Bequest to trustees in trust to pay C. H. an annuity during his life, provided that if C. H. should, by any ways or means whatsoever, sell, dispose of, or incur the right, &c. he might have for life, then his interest to cease, and the trustees to apply the same for the benefit of his children:—Held, that, on the bankruptcy of C. H., his interest ceased, and his children became entitled. Cooper v. Wyatt, 5 Madd. 482.

Testator declared trusts of stock for A. for life, and, after his decease, for his children, and declared that the provision he had made for A. should not be subject to any alienation or disposition by him; but if he should alienate, or attempt to alienate, it should operate as a forfeiture of the provision, and the same should devolve on the person next entitled. A., who had several children, became bankrupt:—Held, that his assignees were entitled to his life interest. Lear v. Legget, 1 Russ. & Mylne, 690; 2 Sim. 479.

A testator bequeathed the dividends of certain stock to his nephew, solely for the maintenance of himself and his family, declaring that such dividends should not be capable of being charged with his debts or engagements, and that he should have no power to charge, assign, anticipate, or incur them; but that if he should attempt so to do, or if the dividends, by bankruptcy, insolvency, or otherwise, should be assigned, or become applicable to any other purpose than for the maintenance of the nephew and his family, his interest therein should cease, and the stock be held upon trusts for his children. Long subsequently to the date of the will, and a few weeks prior to a codicil confirming it, the nephew took the benefit of the lords' act (1 Geo. 4, c. 19), in the usual way; and some years afterwards the testator died:—Held, that this insolvency operated as a forfeiture of the life interest given to the nephew by the will. Yarnold v. Moorhouse, 1 Russ. & Mylne, 364.

The consideration for an annuity is money had and received from the time of the grant; therefore, where the grantor became bankrupt, after the grant, but subsequent to the setting aside of the annuity, his certificate is a bar. Walker v. Lisearray, 6 Esp. 98—Ellenborough.

(f) Stock.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 80, if a bankrupt shall have any government stock, funds, or annuities, or any stock of any public company, either in England, Scotland, or Ireland, standing in his name, in his own right, the commissioners may order all persons whose act or consent is thereto necessary, to transfer and pay the dividends of the same to the assignees.

This, as far as public stock was concerned, is similar to the previous enactments, under which it was held, that stock purchased by a father, afterwards a bankrupt, in the names of his son, a minor, and a trustee, was within the provisions of the 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 5. Brown v. Bellaris, 5 Madd. 53.

Stock in the public funds, in the names of a bankrupt and others, on trust, the bankrupt being one of the cestuis que trust, his equitable interest was not within the stat. 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11; and therefore, not being capable of actual transfer, passed by assignment. Ex parte Kensington, 2 Ves. & B. 79; 2 Rose, 138.

(g) Right of Action.

The right to bring a real action, ex. gr. a writ of entry sur abatement, passes to the assignees by the assignment. Smith v. Coffin, 2 H. Black. 451.

A right of entry vested in husband and wife in right of the wife, passes to the assignees of the husband upon his bankruptcy, and they may recover the freehold by a writ of entry. Mitchell v. Hughes, 6 Bing. 629; 4 M. & P. 577.

Assignees, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, may maintain an action for unliquidated damages, which have accrued before the bankruptcy by non-performance of a contract. Wright v. Fairfield, 2 B. & Adol. 727.

But a right of action of trespass quare clausum fregit, is maintainable by a tenant from year to year, who had become bankrupt after the committing the trespass, and before the commencement of the suit; and does not pass to the assignees by the assignment, unless they interfere; as the bankrupt may sue as a trustee for, and has a good title against all persons but them. Clerk v. Calvert, 3 Moore, 96.

The assignees of a bankrupt may recover from the winner money lost by the bankrupt, before his bankruptcy, at play, in an action of debt, on stat. 9 Ann. c. 14. Brandon v. Pate, 2 H. Black. 308: S. C. nom. Brandon v. Sands, 2 Ves. jun. 514. And see Carter v. Abbott, 2 D. & R. 575; 1 B. & C. 444.

Quære, whether a right to sue upon a covenant by a lessor to offer the lessee an option of purchasing the premises, passes to the assignees of the lessee upon his bankruptcy? Collier v. Lettsom, 2 Marsh. 1; 6 Taunt. 294.

Where there is an implied duty on the part of a lessee to indemnify his under-tenant from the consequences of the non-performance of his covenants with the superior landlord, for breach of which an action would lie, and the under-tenant's goods are seized under a distress for rent by the superior landlord:—Held, that the injury resulting to the under tenant from the distress gave a right of action to his assignees, appointed under a commission of bankrupt issued against him. Hancock v. Caffyn, 1 M. & Scott, 521; 8 Bing. 359.

H., before his bankruptcy, hired a carriage of M., and let it to defendant; defendant sent it back to H. damaged; M. repaired it with the assent of H., and (H. having become bankrupt) proved the amount due for repairs under H.'s commission:—Held, that H.'s assignee had a right of action against the defendant, although H.'s estate paid no dividend, but for nominal damages only. Porter v. Vorley, 9 Bing. 93; 2 M. & Scott, 141.

The assignor of a chose in action, who has become a bankrupt, may sue the debtor in his own name for the benefit of the assignee. Winch v. Keeley, 1 T. R. 619.

He must do so. Carpenter v. Marnell, 3 B. & P. 40.

A trustee under the 54 Geo. 3, c. 137 (Scotch Bankrupt Act), cannot sue in his own name for a chose in action. Jeffrey v. M'Taggart, 6 M. & S. 126.

10. Reputed Ownership.

(a) Statute.

If any bankrupt, at the time he becomes so, by consent of the true owner, has in his possession, order, or disposition, goods or chattels whereof he was reputed owner, and whereof he had taken on him the sale, alteration or disposition as owner, those goods or chattels passed by the assignment. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 72.

Under 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11, which was a similar enactment, it was held, that, to bring a case within the statute, the bankrupt must have been a trader when he was in possession of the property. Gordon v. E. I. Comp. 7 T. R. 228.

The enacting part of s. 11, stat. 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, is not restrained by the preamble, but extends to goods of a third person, which he permits a trader, who afterwards becomes bankrupt, to be in the possession of, and to sell as his own; as well as to the bankrupt's original property, so kept and disposed of by him as his own, after having conveyed it to a third person. Mace v. Cadell, Cowp. 232; Lofft, 782.

In trover by the assignee of a bankrupt to recover property in his order and disposition at the time of the act of bankruptcy, no demand and refusal are necessary. Soames v. Watts, 1 C. & P. 400—Best.

The court of Review has jurisdiction to order assignees to deliver a horse which they claimed, as in the reputed ownership of the bankrupts. Ex parte Wiggins, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 168.

(b) Property within the Statute.

Fixtures.—Quære, whether fixtures are within the s. 72 of the bankrupt act? Ex parte Austin, 1 Deac. & Chit. 207.

Stills and other things fixed to the freehold were held not to pass to the assignees under the words "goods and chattels," in the stat. 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11. Horn v. Baker, 9 East, 215.

A lessee of a mill and steam-engine covenanted to repair, reasonable wear and tear excepted. During the lease he added both to the height and extent of the mill, and removed all the works of the engine except the fly-wheel, fly-wheel shaft, and boiler, and attached to them a new engine of greater power. Injunction granted to restrain the assignees of the lessee, who had become bankrupt, from removing the parts of the new building, and the new parts of the engine, subject to an action to be brought by the lessors to try the right. Sunderland v. Newton, 3 Sim. 450.

Machinery affixed to the freehold of iron works is not considered to be within the order and disposition of the bankrupt trader, where, by the custom of the country, such articles are furnished by, and continue to be the property of, the lessor. Rufford v. Bishop, 5 Russ. 346. And see Hubbard v. Bagshaw, 4 Sim. 326.

Shares.—Where a company is formed by act of parliament for the purchase of lands to make a canal, and the act declares that the shares "shall be deemed personal estate, and shall be transmissible as such:"—Held, that though the profits arose out of land, the shares were personal property, passing as such to the assignees on the bankruptcy of the proprietor. Ex parte Lancaster Canal Company, 1 Deac. & Chit. 411; 1 Mont. 116; 1 Mont. & Bligh, 94.

Where an act prescribes certain forms in the transfer of canal shares:—Held, unless they are strictly complied with, the shares remain in the order and disposition of the bankrupt proprietor, the ordinary mode of transfer not constituting an equitable mortgage; and though the act only expressly relates to transfers between third parties, yet it impliedly relates to cases where the company are the transferees. Id.

Shares in the Vauxhall Bridge Company, who are seised of a real estate, were not within the stat. 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11. Ex parte Vauxhall Bridge Company, 1 Glyn & J. 101.

(c) Requisite Possession.

Assignment of Chose in Action.—Notice of an assignment of a chose in action must be given before the act of bankruptcy, to prevent the assignees' title attaching. Hunt v. Mortimer, 10 B. & C. 47—Parke.

Where a debt is assigned, unless notice be given to the debtor, the assignor must be considered as continuing, within the purview of the bankrupt acts, to have the order and disposition of the debt until notice to the debtor of the assignment. Dean v. James, 1 Nev. & M. 393.

So, where one of two co-debtors releases his interest to his companion. Id.

A bond debt was assigned by the obligee, and the bond delivered to the assignee, but notice of the assignment was not given to the obligor previous to the bankruptcy of the obligee:—Held, that the debt remained in the order and disposition of the bankrupt, within the statute 21 Jac. 1, c. 19. Ex parte Monro, Buck, 300.

A merchant pledges for value the bills of lading of an expected cargo, his property, in the profits of which his agents abroad were interested in a certain proportion. His agents, without the knowledge of the owner or the pawnee, dispose of part of the cargo abroad, after which the owner becomes a bankrupt: he induces the agents to replace the goods disposed of by others, of which the agents give him bills of lading, and he sends them to the pawnee, to make good their security:—Held, that the substituted goods passed to the assignees. Meyer v. Sharpe, 5 Taunt. 74; 2 Rose, 124.

Upon the question whether A., after executing a conveyance of property to trustees for the benefit of his wife, had the disposition of the property; evidence of his making an assignment of it, is not admissible against the trustees, unless they were privy to it, or unless the property was delivered, and the assignment acted upon. Meyer's Assignees v. Sefton, 2 Stark. 274—Holroyd.

T. R. having taken shares in a mining company, it became necessary, in order to complete his title, that he should sign a deed of association in London by a certain day. Finding this inconvenient, he desired his son to sign in his stead, and to let the shares stand in his, the son's, name. The son executed the deed and received a voucher, certifying him to be the proprietor of seventy shares, not transferable without consent of the directors. The son afterwards sold the shares, and paid the proceeds to T. R., who had become bankrupt. The assignees of T. R. having brought trover against T. R. and his son for the voucher and shares:—Held, that there was no legal title on which assignees could maintain an action. Dawson v. Rishworth, 1 B. & Adol. 574.

Dock and Companies' Warrants.]—If property is assignable by transfer tickets, the reputed owner is the possessor of the tickets. Ridout v. Lloyd, 1 Mont. 103.

The custom of the London docks is to acknowledge no title in wines, unless accompanied with possession of dock warrants indorsed by the party to whom they were originally issued. Where A. received warrants from B. not indorsed by B., and A. delivered and indorsed them to C., who afterwards procured B.'s indorsement, and A. became bankrupt:—Held, the wines passed to C., though the notice of the transfer to the dock company, and of the indorsement by B., were subsequent to the bankruptcy:—Held, also, that for want of B.'s indorsement to A., and transfer into A.'s name in the company's books, A. never had the order and disposition of them. Ex parte Davenport, 1 Deac. & Chit. 397; 1 Mont. & Bligh, 165.

A. sold a quantity of lac dye, then lying in the E. I. Company's warehouse, to B., and after being allowed to retain possession of the delivery warrant, pledged the latter to C. for an advance of money, and shortly afterwards became bankrupt, without having redeemed the warrant:—Held, that A. had not the possession, order, and disposition of the goods at the time of his bankruptcy within the words of 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11, and consequently the property in the warrant did not vest in his assignees. Greening v. Clarke, 6 D. & R. 375; 4 B. & C. 316.

Where A. having occasion to borrow money of B., left with him, as a collateral security, warrants of the West India Dock Company, for sugars deposited in their warehouses, and entered in his name in their books, and afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, that A. had not such a possession of the sugars as would enable his assignees to maintain trover for them, as the transfer of the warrants was a complete transfer of the possession, before the bankruptcy, so as to take the case out of the statute 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11. Lucas v. Derrien, 1 Moore, 29; 7 Taunt. 278.

A., having two pipes of wine lying in a bonded warehouse, in the name of B., who had given bond for the duties, sold them to C., and gave him a delivery order; and it was at the same time agreed that C. should pay the duties. B. was called upon, and paid the duties, and took the wines to his own cellar. A. refused the amount of duties to B. C. never required B. to transfer the wines to his own name; but he took away one pipe and paid warehouse rent to B. C. afterwards became a bankrupt. B. at A.'s request, may hold the pipe until the duties are paid. Winks v. Hassall, 9 B. & C. 372.

Bankrupt's Possession at Time of Bankruptcy.]—The statute 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11, only transfers to the assignees of a bankrupt such goods as, by the consent of the true owner, the bankrupt has in his possession at the time of his bankruptcy: therefore, where the purchaser of goods, lying at a wharf in the name of the seller, received from him at the time of the sale an order on the wharfinger for the delivery of the goods, but suffered them to remain in the name of the seller for several months after, during which time the seller disposed of a part thereof; but, upon notice of the seller's insolvency, the purchaser carried the order to the wharfinger, and had the goods transferred into his own name; and nine days after that the seller became bankrupt:—Held, that the assignees of the bankrupt were not entitled to these goods; for there was a complete transfer of the possession before the bankruptcy. Jones v. Dwyer, 15 East, 21; 1 Ross, 339.

And where a trader, having goods lying at two wharfs, deposited blank delivery notes with a creditor, to cover advances made by him, and afterwards became insolvent: and the creditor, upon notice of the insolvency, filled up the blanks in his own name, and took possession of the goods the day before the trader committed an act of bankruptcy; in an action of trover by the assignees against the creditor:—Held, that the goods so taken possession of were not within the 11th section of the statute: but, that goods lying at the wharf, in the bankrupt's name, on any part of the day of bankruptcy, were within it; and that goods of the bankrupt, lying at such wharf in the names of his agents, and for which he had given delivery orders in his own name, were not within the statute, there being no reputed ownership. Arbouin v. Williams, R. & M. 72—Gifford.

So, where the bankrupt, prior to his bankruptcy, had given a delivery order to a warehouseman, who had accepted a bill for him. Tucker v. Ruston, 2 C. & P. 86—Abbott.

If three persons, of whom one is ship's husband, are interested as part owners of a ship, and in the proceeds of a whale fishery in which it is employed, and when each part owner's share is weighed it is placed separately in a warehouse, and the particular casks containing his oil are marked with his initials, and, after the division, it is the practice for the foreman to deliver to the separate order of each part owner the oil belonging to him, unless, previous to the delivery he receives a notification from the ship's husband that the part owner's share of the disbursements has not been paid to him. If, after the arrival of a cargo, and after the weighing and marking, in the usual course, one of the part owners has delivered to his order twenty tuns of oil, part of his share of twenty-nine tuns which was allotted to him, when the foreman receives orders not to deliver the residue, as the part owner's share of the disbursements is not paid, and the part owner becomes bankrupt, and is indebted to his co-partners, the part owners have a lien on the nine tuns. Holderness v. Shackells, 8 B. & C. 615.

Stock, standing in the Accountant-General's name, is mortgaged to secure a debt; the Accountant-General transfers the stock to the mortgagor, without the privity of the mortgagee. The mortgagor then becomes bankrupt:—Held, that the stock could not be claimed by the assignees under the 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, ss. 10 & 11. Ex parte Richardson, Buck, 480.

Necessary Consent.—If a carrier, after notice from the vendor of goods to stop them in transitu, by mistake delivers them to the vendee, the sale is nevertheless rescinded, and the vendor may bring trover for them against the vendee; and though, the vendee having become a bankrupt, the goods have passed into the hands of his assignees, yet, inasmuch as they did not come to the possession of the bankrupt with the consent of the true owner, they are not in the order and disposition of the bankrupt within the statute 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11. Litt v. Cowley, 7 Taunt. 169; 2 Marsh. 457; Holt, 338.

If a person sends his servant to sell his timber at another man's wharf, such timber does not pass to the assignees of the owner of the wharf, who became bankrupt, as goods in his order and disposition, under the above statute. Body v. Esdaile, 1 C. & P. 62—Burrough. S. C. not S. P. 3 Bing. 174; 10 Moore, 569.

If the printer and publisher of a newspaper assign his interest therein to a creditor, as a security, but continue to print and publish as before, and no affidavit of the change of interest be delivered to the commissioners of stamps, and the printer become bankrupt, the right to the paper will pass to his assignees. Longman v. Tripp, 2 N. R. 67.

If a person buying wine of a merchant permit it to remain in his cellar, though for the purpose of ripening, and the merchant becomes a bankrupt, the assignees may take the wine as being in the possession of the bankrupt, under the 7 Jac. 1. Tanner v. Barnett, Peake's Add. Cas. 98—Kenyon.

In an action of trover brought by the assignees of a bankrupt for a rick of bark, of which the bankrupt was the reputed owner, a witness may be asked what was the reputation of the neighbourhood, as to whom the rick belonged at the time of the bankruptcy, and if it appear that the bankrupt had exercised repeated acts of ownership over it previous to that time, the action will lie. Oliver v. Bartlett, 3 Moore, 592; 1 B. & B. 269.

In an action by the assignees of a bankrupt, claiming property which the bankrupt is alleged to have had in his possession, order, and disposition, as the reputed owner at the time of his bankruptcy, it is competent for the defendant who has paid a valid consideration for the property to give in evidence a contrary reputation, and to resist the claim of the plaintiffs, under the statute 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11, upon those grounds. Gurr v. Rutton, Holt, 327—Gibbs.

(d) Partnership Property.

Dormant Partner.—A dormant partner is within the meaning of the statute 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 72. Ex parte Church, 1 Mont. 457.

It was doubted whether a dormant partner was within the statute of James. Ex parte Dyster, 2 Rose, 256; Ex parte Barrow, 2 Rose, 252.

Where A., the dormant partner of B., in a trading firm, (the whole of the business being carried on by B. and in his name,) allowed, on the dissolution of the partnership by effluxion of time, the partnership stock, effects, and debts to remain in the order and disposition of B.; and B., after continuing in trade for about two years afterwards on his sole account, became bankrupt:—Held, that A.'s share of the partnership property and effects, and of the debts due on the partnership account at the time of the dissolution, passed to B.'s assignees, as being in the order and disposition of B., within the meaning of the statute 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11. In re Gilpin, 3 D. & R. 636: S. C. nom. Ex parte Enderby in re Gilpin, 2 B. & C. 389: S. P. Ex parte Wilson, Buck, 48.

The share of a secret partner in the joint stock in trade, being in the possession of an apparent partner and the sole ostensible trader, is not liable on the bankruptcy of the latter, as being within the meaning or mischief of the 21 Jac. 1, c. 19; the bankrupt having such an interest and qualified property in the secret partner's share as to destroy the essential requisites of a true and independent ownership on the one hand, and of a fraudulent and reputed ownership on the other. Coldwell v. Gregory, 1 Price, 119; 2 Rose, 149.

Quære, whether the statute would, at any rate, have extended to goods, the joint property of two traders, but deposited at the wharf in the name of only one, who, after such sale in his own name, became bankrupt? Jones v. Dwyer, 15 East, 21; 1 Rose, 339.

J. C. S. and W. S., carrying on business as brewers, in co-partnership, admitted W. W. as a dormant partner. It was stipulated by deed that the stock and effects of the old firm, including the plant, &c. and book debts, should form part of the capital stock of the new co-partnership; that W. W. should be paid 10 per cent. on the capital advanced by him, and should not otherwise interfere. The business was carried on, as before, in the names of J. C. S. and W. S. only, until the new firm became bankrupt. Upon the petition of several creditors of the old firm, some of whom had notice of the dormant partner, it was held, that all the personal chattels of the new firm were within the order and disposition of J. C. S. and W. S., and ought to be administered in the bankruptcy as the separate estate of the two. Ex parte Jennings, 1 Mont. 45.

Other Cases.]—Although the property of a partnership be in one or more members of it, with an interest in the profits merely in the others, yet, in bankruptcy, the property is administered as to the joint creditors, as belonging to them all. Ex parte Hunter, 2 Rose, 382.

If one of four partners die, and the surviving partners compromise, and obtain securities for a debt due to the original firm, and become bankrupts, the securities are, by reputed ownership, distributable amongst the creditors of the three. Ex parte Taylor, 1 Mont. 240.

If goods are purchased and paid for by a firm of four, on the joint account of themselves and two other firms, and one member of the firm of four die, and the goods are in the possession of one of the two firms, upon the bankruptcy of the survivors the goods do not pass by reputed ownership to the assignees of the survivor. Id.

If a firm consign goods to Hayti, which, after the death of one member, are returned, and a bill of lading from Hayti is sent to the holder of a bill of exchange dishonoured by the partnership, and the goods remain in the West India Docks, they, upon the bankruptcy of the survivors, are not in their reputed ownership. Id.

If a firm is possessed, as mortgagees, of a real estate, which, after the death of one member, remains in the possession of the survivors, it is not in their reputed ownership. Id.

A trader in London, on his separate account, and at Brazil in partnership with B. and C., under the firm of B. & Co., becomes insolvent, when four of his creditors are appointed inspectors of his estate, who it was agreed should receive the several consignments and remittances expected from the Brazil house, as trustees for the persons to whom the same might be ultimately found to belong. The Brazil house, ignorant of his insolvency, make various consignments to A., directing him to sell them at certain places abroad, and the proceeds to be placed to the account of the Brazilian house. The goods are accordingly sold under the direction of the inspectors, and the proceeds received by them. At the time of A.'s insolvency, he was under acceptances to the Brazilian house to a larger amount than the value of the consignments, but such acceptances were on a general account, and not on the account of any particular consignment from the foreign house. A. afterwards becomes bankrupt, and a cession of the effects of the Brazilian house is also made to the assignees, according to the laws of Brazil:—Held, that the assignees of the Brazilian house, and not the assignees of A. in England, were entitled to the proceeds of these goods. Ex parte Wucherer, 2 Deac. & Chit. 27.

Dissolution.]—By the bankruptcy of one partner, his interest is divested and vests in his assignees by relation to the act of bankruptcy. Dutton v. Morrison, 17 Ves. jun. 193; 1 Rose, 213.

The assignees can obtain no share of the partnership effects until they first satisfy all that is due from the bankrupt partner to the partnership. Holderness v. Shackells, 8 Barn. & Cres. 615.

A partnership being dissolved by the bankruptcy of one partner, the assignees are entitled, beyond an account and distribution of the stock, &c., to a participation of subsequent profits made by the other partners carrying on the trade with the capital, as constituted at the time of the bankruptcy, as far as the profits may have been produced by a joint application of that and other funds. Crawshaw v. Collins, 15 Ves. jun. 218.

Assignees under a separate commission against a partner generally cannot engage in new adventures but with the consent of the creditors and bankrupt. Id.

Debts due to a partnership were assigned upon dissolution by the retiring partners to the continuing partner without notice to the debtors:—Held, upon the bankruptcy of the partner, to remain in the order and disposition of the partnership, within the statute of James. Ex parte Burton, 1 Glyn & J. 207; S. P. Ex parte Osborne, 1 Glyn & J. 358.

Upon a dissolution of the partnership between A. and B., it is agreed, that, until A. be provided for, B. shall allow him a third of the profits. B. afterwards forms a partnership with C., and carries into it the stock of A. and B. A commission issues against A. and B.:—Held, that, after satisfaction of the creditors of B. and C., the joint effects of B. and C. were the separate property of B., and the joint property of A. and B. Ex parte Barrow, 2 Rose, 252.

Under that agreement A. is a partner with B. as to a third of his interest, but is not a partner with B. and C. Id.

A., being entitled, under a parol partnership agreement with B. and C., to three-eighths of the capital and profits of the business, became bankrupt, being at the time indebted to the partnership, in respect of bills in which the partnership name had been used for his personal accommodation; the assignees claimed a share of the profits made subsequently to the bankruptcy, while the continuing partners insisted, that the bankrupt's interest in the profits ceased at that time. In consequence of this difference, no settlement of accounts between the bankrupt's estate and the partnership took place, and the assignees filed their bill; but B. and C., and afterwards C. alone, pending the litigation with the assignees, carried on the business for many years with the stock and capital which existed at the time of the bankruptcy, and the stock and capital substituted in the usual course of trade for such former stock and capital, aided by the expenditure of considerable sums by C.:—Held, that the assignees of A. were entitled to three-eighths of the profits which had been made, or should be made, until the concern was finally wound up, and to three-eighths of the money to be produced by the sale of what remained in specie of the capital and stock; and that A.'s proportion of the profits was not to be lessened, nor the proportion of C. to be increased in respect of the debt which A. owed to the partnership, or of the money which C. brought into the business beyond his share of the original capital. Crawshaw v. Collins, 2 Russ. 325.

Where a judgment creditor purchased by a bill of sale from the sheriff certain machinery, seized in execution, belonging to his debtor, and, after marking the same with the initials of his name, allowed the debtor to retain possession, upon his agreeing to pay a rent for the use of it, and the latter remained in possession until he committed an act of bankruptcy:—Held, that as the change of ownership was not notorious, the assignees were entitled to recover the property in trover, under the 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11, as there was no evidence to go to the jury that the bankrupt had ever ceased to be the reputed owner. Lingard v. Messiter, 2 D. & R. 495; 1 B. & C. 308.

A warrant under a fi. fa. against the goods of a trader is directed to his servant and another person, as special bailiffs: they in consequence take possession of the goods in his shop; but the business of the shop, though without the trader's interference, is carried on apparently as usual. While things are so situated, the trader commits an act of bankruptcy:—Held, that the goods pass under the commission to the assignees, as the possession of the servant was the possession of the master, and the goods were thus in the possession, order, and disposition of the bankrupt at the time of the bankruptcy. Jackson v. Irvin, 2 Camp. 48—Ellenborough.

A. levies an execution on the goods of B., a trader. He directs the sheriff's officer not to sell, but to leave a man in possession, with the warrant. B. carries on his trade as usual, and three months afterwards becomes a bankrupt:—Held, that notwithstanding the execution and the possession of the officer, the goods seized passed to the assignees by virtue of the statute. Toussaint v. Hartop, Holt, 335—Gibbs: 8 C. not S. P. 1 Moore, 287; 7 Taunt. 571.

A. having contracted with a canal company to build locks and bridges on the canal, as their engineer, purchased timber and other materials for the purpose, which were laid on the company's premises, on the banks of the canal; and on the company's advancing money to him, they took a bill of sale of these goods, and a symbolical delivery of them by a halfpenny; afterwards the company took out execution, upon a judgment confessed by A., and the sheriff seized these goods, and A. became a bankrupt:—Held, that A. had not such a possession of the goods, as would enable his assignees to take them within the stat. 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11, for the best delivery was given that the nature of the goods would admit of, they being before on the company's premises. Manton v. Moore, 7 T. R. 67.

Where the plaintiff had taken the goods of the defendant in execution, which he withdrew on the latter's consenting that there should be a fresh levy if the debt were not paid on a given day, and that the warrant should remain in the hands of the officer for that purpose: and the defendant's goods having been seized under a subsequent execution, by another creditor, the plaintiff's officer placed his warrant in the hands of the officer under that execution; and the defendant afterwards became bankrupt, and the residue of his effects were delivered over to the assignees after satisfying the second execution, to the exclusion of the plaintiff, who called on the sheriff to return the writ:—the court ordered the return to be enlarged until he was indemnified by the proper parties, to the satisfaction of the prothonotary. Burr v. Creethy, 7 Moore, 368: S. C. nom. Burr v. Freethy, 1 Bing. 71.

The plaintiff's attorney, upon issuing execution, wrote to the sheriff's officer, directing him to leave the defendant's mother or any one else in possession of the defendant's goods, and to allow his business to be carried on as usual. The officer delivered the warrant to defendant's shopman, ordering him to carry on the business, and account for monies received. No money was ever paid to the plaintiff, and the warrant lay in the shopman's hands from April to June; the defendant having then become bankrupt, and his assignees claiming his goods, the sheriff returned nulla bona to the plaintiff's writ. The jury having found a verdict for the sheriff in an action against him for a false return, the court refused to grant a new trial. Doker v. Hasler, 2 Bing. 479; R. & M. 198.

A., B., and C., partners and distillers, occupied certain premises, leased to A. and another, and used in common, in the trade, the stills, vats, and utensils necessary for carrying it on; the property of which stills, &c. afterwards appeared to be in A. On the dissolution of the partnership, which was a losing concern, it was agreed that C. and one J. should carry on the business on the premises; and by deed between the two last and A. it was covenanted and agreed that A. should withdraw from the business, and permit C. and J. to use, occupy, and enjoy the distil-house and premises, paying the reserved rent, &c. and the several stills, vats, and utensils of trade, specified and numbered in a schedule annexed, in consideration of an annuity to be paid by C. and J. to A. and his wife, and the survivor, with liberty for C. and J., on the decease of A. and his wife, to purchase the distil-house and premises for the remainder of A.'s term, and the stills, vats, &c. mentioned in the schedule; and C. and J. covenanted to keep the stills, vats, and utensils in repair, and deliver them up at the time, if not purchased; and there was a proviso for re-entry if the annuity were two months in arrear. Under this, C. and J. took possession of the premises, with the stills, vats, and utensils, and carried on the business as before; and made payments of the annuity, which afterwards fell in arrear more than two months; but A.'s widow and executrix, who survived him, did not enter, but brought an action for the arrears, which was stopped by the bankruptcy of C. and J., who continued in possession of the stills, vats, and utensils on the premises:—Held, that the vats, &c. which were not fixed to the freehold, did pass to the assignees, as being left by the true owner in the possession, order, and disposition (as it appeared to the eye of the world) of the bankrupts, as reputed owners. Horn v. Baker, 9 East, 215. [In this case all the decisions on reputed ownership are collected and fully discussed.]

Where a colliery, with all the machinery and implements necessary for working it, was leased for years, with a proviso for re-entry for the landlord on non-payment of rent, and a covenant on the part of the lessee, at the expiration or other sooner determination of the demise, to deliver up the machinery and implements, conformably to an inventory annexed to the lease, of which a re-valuation was to be made three months before the expiration of the demise, and the landlord recovered judgment in ejectment in Trinity term, for a forfeiture for non-payment of the rent, but did not execute the writ of possession, until the 8th November, and the tenant committed an act of bankruptcy next day:—Held, first, that the landlord was entitled to take possession of all the machinery and implements (some of which had been brought on the premises by the tenant during the term), though no previous valuation had been made; second, that the possession of the machinery and implements by the tenant was only qualified, and did not come within the meaning of 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, so as to bar the landlord's right of re-entry on the 8th of November; and third, that the tenant's use of the machinery and implements in the interval between the judgment in ejectment and the execution of the writ of possession, did not give him the "possession, order, or disposition" thereof, with the consent of the true owner, within the meaning of the statute, so as to pass the property to his assignees. Storer v. Hunter, 5 D. & R. 240; 3 B. & C. 368.

L. took a lease of a mill and iron-forge, and bought the fixed and movable implements, &c.; but it was agreed that they should be delivered up at the end or other determination of the term, at a valuation, if the lessors should give fifteen months' notice of their desire to have them. L. afterwards conveyed all his interest in the premises, implements, &c. to a creditor, in trust, if default should be made by L. in paying certain instalments, to enter upon and sell the same, and satisfy himself out of the proceeds, re-assigning the residue: and if the lessor should require a re-sale of the implements, &c., the proceeds of such re-sale were to go in discharge of the debt, if unsatisfied. L. made default, and subsequently became bankrupt, after which, and during the term, the creditor who had not before interfered, entered upon the property:—Held, on trespass brought by the assignees, that L. had, at the time of the bankruptcy, the reputed ownership of the movable goods, but not of the fixtures. Clark v. Crownshaw, 3 B. & Adol. 84.

The bankrupt was in the possession of property, as apparent owner, under an instrument which, though in appearance a lease, was in effect a contrivance to secure the seller of the property the price to be paid, together with 10l. per cent. interest on the amount until it should be paid:—Held, that the bankrupt's having obtained the apparent ownership by means of this fraud, would not prevent the assignees from recovering it under the statute of 21 Jac. 1. Sinclair v. Stevenson, 2 Bing. 514; 10 Moore, 46; 1 C. & P. 582.

If A. let a house to B., with a covenant that the lease shall determine on B.'s committing an act of bankruptcy on which a commission of bankruptcy should issue; and by another deed of the same date A. grants the use of the furniture to B. in like manner, and with a similar covenant, to allow A. to resume the possession of the furniture on the commission of an act of bankruptcy: if B. become bankrupt, and the jury find that B. was the reputed owner of the furniture, it will pass to the assignees, notwithstanding these covenants; and if it be proved on the one side that several of the servants of B., and many of his customers, knew that the goods belonged to A.; and on the other side, several of B.'s creditors prove that they considered the goods to belong to B., and gave him credit upon the face of them, and that he acted as master of the house, &c., it will be for the jury to say whether B. was held out to the world as the owner of the goods, and obtained credit by the possession of them. Hickenbotham v. Groves, 2 C. & P. 492—Abbott.

Where, by agreement between B. and the defendant, B. agreed, on payment to him of a sum certain, to convey to the defendant a dwelling-house, and to deliver possession of all the household furniture and stock; and that, after formal possession delivered to the defendant, B. should be allowed to remain in possession for three months, without paying rent; which agreement was notorious in the neighbourhood, and the money was paid by the defendant, and a formal delivery made to him, and B. afterwards left in possession according to the agreement, and became bankrupt whilst he so remained in possession, and before the expiration of the three months:—Held, that this was not a possession by the bankrupt within the statute 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11. Muller v. Moss, 1 M. & S. 335; 2 Rose, 99.

The purchaser of a dyer's plant, being unable to pay the purchase money, re-sold it to the vendor, who never took actual possession, but demised it to the purchaser for three years, who, during that time, became bankrupt, and the assignees seized the plant in his possession, under 21 Jac. 1:—Held, that the property passed. Bryson v. Wylie, 1 B. & P. 83, n.

If the furniture of a coffee-house be taken in execution by a creditor, and without ever being removed, be let by him to the keeper of the coffee-house, who becomes bankrupt while in possession of it, the assignees may seize it under 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11. Lingham v. Biggs, 1 B. & P. 82.

Secus, as to furniture in a ready-furnished private-house; and also as to horses. Id. 88.

(g) On Sale or Return.

Semble, that goods in the hands of a person on a contract of sale or return, are not in his possession, order, and disposition, within 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11. Delauney v. Barker, 2 Stark. 539—Abbott.

Goods in the hands of a retail dealer upon sale or return, pass under a commission of bankruptcy against him under the statute. Livesey v. Hood, 2 Camp. 83—Lawrence.

Goods were sent from London to Sunderland, upon sale or return, and a letter, inclosing an invoice, requested the buyer to return such of them as were not approved by him in as short a time as possible. The goods arrived at the shop of the buyer on the evening of the 13th of November, and on the following day he committed an act of bankruptcy. In an action of trover brought by the seller against the assignees to recover these goods:—Held, that they did not pass to such assignees under the statute 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11, as the bankrupt should have been allowed a reasonable time to have selected such goods as he was disposed to retain. Gibson v. Bray, 1 Moore, 519; 8 Taunt. 76; Holt, 556.

Assignees may maintain trover against one who has purchased goods from the bankrupt in the usual course of his trade, after a secret act of bankruptcy, although the goods were purchased on sale or return, and although the assignees afterwards demanded payment from the defendant as upon the sale of the goods. Hurst v. Gwenes, 2 Stark. 306—Ellenborough. Rule for a new trial refused.

(h) Goods sold but not delivered.

The usage of a trade must be certain and uniform, to make it binding on transactions in such trade, so as to vest goods in a bankrupt, as reputed owner, under the stat. 21 Jac. 1, c. 19. Wood v. Wood, 1 C. & P. 59—Burrough.

A custom that purchasers of hops from hop merchants shall leave them in the merchant's warehouse for the purpose of re-sale, upon rent, undistinguished from the merchant's stock, is not such a custom of trade as will prevent the hops from becoming the property of the merchant's assignees, in case of bankruptcy, as being in his possession, order, and disposition. Thacktwate v. Cock, 3 Taunt. 487; 2 Rose, 105. And see White v. Wilks, 5 Taunt. 176; 1 Marsh. 2.

The custom not being clear, distinct, and precise enough to enable others to know that the hops so left were not the property of the possessor. Id.

A., a spirit merchant, sold to B., a wine merchant, several casks of brandy, some of which, at the time of the sale, were in A.'s own vaults, and others in the vaults of a warehouse-keeper. It was agreed between the parties, that the brandies should remain where they were until the vendee could conveniently remove them. Immediately after the sale, the vendee marked the several casks with his initials. It was notorious to the persons carrying on the wine trade at the place where the parties resided, that this sale had taken place, but no notice of it had been given to the warehouse-keeper, with whom some of the casks were deposited: A. having become bankrupt while the brandies remained where they were originally deposited:—Held, that the whole of them passed to his assignees, as goods in his possession, order, and disposition, by the consent and permission of the true owner, within the 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11. Knowles v. Horsfall, 5 B. & A. 134.

Wine sold by the bankrupt, remaining in the bankrupt's cellars, set apart in a particular bin, and marked with the purchaser's seal, and entered in the bankrupt's books as belonging to the purchaser, is not in the order and disposition of the bankrupt. Ex parte Marrable, 1 Glyn & J. 402.

A., who resided at Liverpool, was in the habit of making consignments of goods to B., his agent in South America, for sale; on the faith of, and against which consignments, A. drew bills proportioned to their amount, to be paid by the agent out of the proceeds; and the bills were negotiated by the indorsement of C., A.'s correspondent in London. Some of the bills so indorsed were refused acceptance by the agent. C., on receiving information that they had been so dishonoured, requested that A. would order his agent, in case he did not pay his, A.'s drafts, immediately to hand over to C.'s agent such property as he had of A.'s, of an equivalent value to the bills that should not be paid by him. A. agreed to do so, but became bankrupt before his order to transfer the goods reached South America:—Held, that the bargain between A. and C. did not operate as a legal or equitable assignment of the property in A.'s goods held by B., his agent, but that they remained the property of A. at the time of his bankruptcy, and passed to his assignees. Carvalho v. Burn, 4 B. & Adol. 382.

A carriage finished and paid for before the bankruptcy of the maker, but suffered to remain on his premises at the request of the person for whom it was made, on account of his being about to go abroad, cannot be taken by the assignees as in the order or disposition of the bankrupt, although such bankrupt put it in his front shop, and actually sell it to another. Bartram v. Payne, 3 C. & P. 175—Gaselee.

In such case an actual delivery of the carriage at the house of the person for whom it is made is not necessary to constitute him the owner. Id.

It is usual for coachmakers, when they have built a good carriage, to put it into their shew-room previous to sending it home. Id.

A chariot was built to plaintiff's order, and paid for by him: when finished in other respects, plaintiff ordered a front seat to be added; but the builder being slow in making the addition, plaintiff sent for the chariot repeatedly, and the builder promised to deliver it. Plaintiff being afterwards dissatisfied, ordered the chariot to be sold, and while it was, according to the custom of the trade, standing in the builder's warehouse for that purpose, the front seat not having been added, the builder became a bankrupt, and his assignees seized the chariot:—Held, that the chariot did not pass to the assignees. Carruthers v. Payne, 5 Bing. 270; 2 M. & P. 429.

(i) For a specific Purpose.

Where a bankrupt is in possession of the goods of another bona fide, with the consent of the owner at the time of the bankruptcy, for a specific purpose, beyond which he has not the right of disposition or alteration, that is not such a possession as entitles the assignees to recover the value of them under the 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11. Collins v. Forbes, 3 T. R. 316.

Bills remitted to a banker on the general account, cannot, on his bankruptcy, be laid hold of by the remitter; if remitted for a particular purpose, they must be so applied. Ex parte Pease, 19 Ves. jun. 49; S. C. nom. Ex parte Pearce, 1 Rose, 232.

The statute 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11, does not apply to bills of exchange, which are considered, being in a banker's hands, as a trust. Id.

Bills lodged in a banker's hands, to be applied for a particular purpose, but not so applied, are claimable on the banker's becoming bankrupt, as they do not pass to his assignees. Ex parte Aiken, 2 Madd. 192.

Whether bills in the possession of a bankrupt, not due at the time of the bankruptcy, pass to the assignees, or remain the property of the remitter, always depends upon the question of agency. So, where a foreign mercantile house remitted to a London house, bills, some of which were not due when the London house became bankrupt, it was held, under the circumstances, of the case, that the London house acted as agents to procure payment for the foreign house, and being fixed with the trust, that the bills did not pass to the assignees. Ex parte Smith, Buck, 355; 2 Rose, 457.

Where a draft for money was intrusted to a broker to buy Exchequer bills for his principal, and the broker received the money and misapplied it by purchasing American stock and bullion, intending to abscond with it and go to America, and did accordingly abscond, but was taken before he quitted England, and thereupon surrendered to the principal the securities for the American stock and the bullion, who sold the whole and received the proceeds:—Held, that the principal was entitled to withhold the proceeds from the assignees of the broker, who became bankrupt on the day on which he so received and misapplied the money. Taylor v. Plumer, 3 M. & S. 562; 2 Rose, 457.

If a bill be sent by a correspondent to a merchant to be applied to a particular use; and the merchant become bankrupt before the money is received, the correspondent has a special lien, and shall be preferred to the general creditors. Aliter, where the bills are sent on a general account. Ex parte Omsell, Amb. 297.

By the terms of an agreement between F. & Co., and their bankers, S. & Co., the permission to discount indorsed bills of exchange was limited to the amount necessary to meet such acceptances of F. & Co. as were in the course of immediate payment at the house of S. & Co. To cover certain acceptances coming due, F. & Co. remitted to S. & Co. an indorsed bill of exchange: these acceptances were however dishonoured by S. & Co., who soon afterwards stopped payment; S. & Co. then procured the bill to be accepted, and made an entry in their books of their having discounted it, a commission of bankruptcy having issued against S. & Co.:—Held, that S. & Co.

had no right to discount the bill without executing the trust reposed in them, and their assignees were bound to deliver up the bill to F. & Co. Ex parte Frere, 1 Mont. & Mac. 263.

Two partners in trade borrowed a check for 200*l.* from the defendant, for the express purpose of enabling them to liquidate the balance of an account with their bankers; but before the check was presented, they committed an act of bankruptcy, and afterwards returned the check to the defendant, declining to use it:—Held, that the check did not pass to their assignee, so as to enable him to recover the amount of it in trover. Moore v. Bartrup, 2 D. & R. 25; 1 B. & C. 5.

So, where a trader, upon being arrested, borrowed money of his brother-in-law for the purpose of settling with his creditors, but not being able to do so, returned a part of it, and then became a bankrupt:—Held, that as the money was advanced for a special purpose, it did not pass by the assignment. Teevey v. Milne, 2 B. & A. 683.

If A. and B. have a general running account, consisting of bills drawn by B. on C. in favour of A., and of bills and other securities deposited by A. with B.; and, upon the failure of B. and C., A. be obliged to take up the bills received by him from B., whereby the balance of the accounts is in favour of A., still he cannot maintain trover for the bills deposited by him with B., unless they were specifically appropriated to answer B.'s drafts on C. in favour of A., and deposited for that purpose expressly. Bent v. Fuller, 5 T. R. 494.

A. and B. came to an agreement, that B. should purchase of A. all the light gold coin which he could send at a stated price, and that A. should, from time to time, draw upon B. for the money due upon such sale; and that B. should also, from time to time, accept other bills drawn by A. for his own convenience, for which A. was to remit value: after they had acted under this contract for some time, B. became a bankrupt, being under acceptances to a large amount; and A. (not knowing of the bankruptcy) sent a parcel of light gold and bills, to enable B. to discharge the acceptances, which parcel was taken by B.'s assignees: it was held, that A. who had since paid B.'s acceptances, might recover back the gold and bills sent after the bankruptcy, on the ground that they were sent for the particular purpose of paying the acceptances, and that, as that purpose was not answered, the property in the gold, &c. remained in A. Tobbs v. Hollingworth, 5 T. R. 215; 2 H. Black. 501. And see Zinck v. Walker, 2 W. Black. 1154.

Furniture left by a testator to trustees to be enjoyed with the mansion-house by whomsoever should be entitled for the time being to the freehold estates, but not to be removed without leave of the trustees, will not pass. Shaftesbury (Earl) v. Russell, 3 D. & R. 84; 1 B. & C. 666.

If a person has goods in his possession as the servant of his father, for the purpose of carrying on a trade for the sole benefit of the latter, they will not pass to his son's assignees under that statute. Stafford v. Clark, 1 C. & P. 24—Burr.

If a bankrupt after his certificate, and who trades again for himself, is left for several years in possession of his house, household goods, and furniture, in order to assist in settling the affairs of the bankrupt's estate, the assignees repeatedly stating the goods, &c., in their accounts with the creditors, as part of the estate, such possession does not fall within the 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11, so as to vest the goods in assignees under a second commission. Walker v. Burnell, 1 Dougl. 317.

A. assigned a leasehold messuage and household furniture to B., upon trust for the use of A. for life, and, after his decease, for the use of C., his wife, for life; and, after the decease of the survivor, for the use of their daughter D. A. occupied the messuage, with the furniture, until Oct. 1816, when he died. In Oct. 1817, C., the widow, married E., who immediately took possession of the messuage and furniture, and continued in possession until Oct. 1828, when a commission of bankruptcy issued against him. In Oct. 1818, E. had procured B. to assign the messuage and furniture to him by a deed which contained false recitals, and was in breach of trust:—Held, under these circumstances, on the petition of C. and D., that the furniture was not in the order and disposition of the bankrupt E., and that his assignees should be restrained from selling the same. Ex parte Horwood, 1 Mont. & Mac. 169.

(j) Other Cases.

Goods in the hands of an agent are not in the reputed ownership of his principal. Ex parte Taylor, 1 Mont. 240.

If an inn-keeper borrow a chaise from a coach-maker while he has a new chaise making, and use it in the course of his trade, but does not have his name painted upon it under the stat. 4 Geo. 4, c. 62, s. 11, this is not such a reputed ownership of the borrowed chaise as will entitle the assignees of the inn-keeper to detain it from the coachmaker. Newport v. Hollings, 3 C. & P. 223—Vaughan.

A trustee for the sale of a brewhouse and plant, the cestui que trusts being infants, contracts to sell them, and lets the purchaser into possession:—Held, that the purchaser was in possession within the statute of 21 Jac. 1, c. 19; and therefore the plant, upon his becoming bankrupt, passed to his assignees without being subject to the lien for the purchase-money. Ex parte Dale, Buck, 365.

A. by deed assigns the cargoes of two ships to B. and C., but has no charter-party or bill of lading to deliver to them. On the arrival of one of the ships, he assigns to another person, and afterwards commits an act of bankruptcy:—Held, that B. and C. not having been ready to take possession of the ship on her arrival, had thereby permitted A. to continue reputed owner under the statute of 21 Jac. 1, c. 19. Philpot v. Williams, 2 Eden, 231.

11. Bankrupt's Possession is Autre Droit.

(a) Trustees.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 79, if any bankrupt shall, as trustee, be seized, possessed of, or entitled to, either alone or jointly, any real or personal estate, or any interest secured upon or arising out of the same, or shall have standing in his name, as trustee, government stock, funds, or annuities, or any stock of public companies, the chancellor, on petition of the party interested, on due notice given, may order the assignees to convey to new trustees.

Furniture, &c., in possession of a bankrupt according to the title under a trust, does not pass to the assignees under stat. 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11. Ex parte Martin, 19 Ves. jun. 491; 2 Rose, 331.

Where a testator directed, that, in case his son should carry on the testator's trade for the benefit of himself and his mother, his lease and furniture should not be sold, but that the trustees should permit the widow and children to reside therein and have the use of it, and the widow and son carried on the trade and became bankrupts:—Held, that the furniture, &c. was not in the order and disposition of the bankrupts. Id.

A debt due to a bankrupt as trustee for another, does not pass under the assignment of his effects to his assignees. Winch v. Keeley, 1 T. R. 619; S. P. Carpenter v. Marnell, 3 B. & P. 40.

Where a trustee becomes bankrupt, the court of Review will substitute a new trustee in his place. Ex parte Page, 1 Deac. & Chit. 321.

A new trustee may be appointed without a reference. Ex parte Inkersole, 2 Glyn & J. 230.

Where, upon the bankruptcy of a trustee, one person is solely entitled to all the trust estate, the court will, upon petition, order the bankrupt to transfer and deliver it to such person without a new trustee. Ex parte Hancox, 1 Mont. 247.

An order was made for a reference to the master to approve of a new trustee in the room of the bankrupt trustee, and for the transfer of the trust funds by the assignees of the bankrupt trustee. Ex parte Saunders, 2 Glyn & J. 132.

(b) Friendly Societies.

The preference given to friendly societies by the statute 33 Geo. 3, c. 54, s. 10, over other creditors, is confined to debts in respect of money in the hands of their officers by virtue of their offices, and independent of contract. Ex parte Lancaster Amicable Society, 6 Ves. jun. 98.

Therefore does not extend to money held by the treasurer upon the security of promissory notes, payable, with interest, upon demand. Ex parte Stamford Friendly Society, 15 Ves. jun. 280.

Money paid by order of a friendly society from time to time upon notes carrying interest, there being no treasurer appointed, is not money in the hands of the party by virtue of any office within the act of parliament 33 Geo. 3, c. 54, s. 10, entitling the society to a preference in case of bankruptcy. Ex parte Ross, 6 Ves. jun. 802.

A person in the habit of receiving money of a friendly society, having no treasurer appointed, upon notes carrying interest, payable a month after demand, is not an officer of the society so as to entitle them to a preference under the statute, 33 Geo. 3, c. 54, s. 10. Ex parte Ashly, 6 Ves. jun. 441.

(c) Bankers of Public Bodies.

Where by statute it was enacted, "that in case any treasurer, collector, officer, or other person appointed by the commissioners having the control of the pavements of any places mentioned in the act, for the collection and receipt of monies to be collected and received by virtue of any rates and assessments, &c., shall happen to become bankrupt before he shall have fully paid and satisfied all monies received by him or them, for or in respect of any such rates or assessments, or for or on account of the commissioners, &c., the assignee shall pay in full all the money due to such commissioners (if the bankrupt's estate be sufficient), in preference to all debts, except those due to the king:"—Held, that the bankers employed by the commissioners without any actual appointment were within the words "other persons" used in this section, as being in the nature of treasurers; and that inasmuch as the statute did not require the appointment of treasurers, collectors, &c. to be in writing, the employment was equivalent to an appointment. Frost v. Bolland, 5 B. & C. 611; 8 D. & R. 384.

The same statute enacted, that the commissioners might sue in the name of their clerk for the recovery of any penalty or rate, or any other sum or sums of money at any time due and payable from or by any water company or commissioners of sewers, or any other person or persons, due or payable by virtue of any local act or that act:—Held, that the commissioners might sue in the name of their clerk, to recover from the assignees of their banker the balance in his hands at the time when he became bankrupt. Id.

Under the Metropolitan Paving Act, 57 Geo. 3, c. 29, s. 51, if bankers receive money on account of the commissioners, and become bankrupts with such money in their hands, their assignees are liable to refund the full amount. Dougan v. Bolland, 8 D. & R. 435; 5 B. & C. 622.

Where bankers employed by commissioners of pavements had received on account of commissioners certain Exchequer bills, which they afterwards sold, and received the proceeds; and, before this money had been paid to the commissioners, became bankrupts:—Held, that the commissioners were entitled to recover in full from the assignees the balance due to them; for that the section referred to was not confined to monies received by virtue of rates or assessments, but included all monies received "for and on account of the commissioners:" and when the bankers sold the Exchequer bills, they must be considered as having received the proceeds to the use of the owners of the bills. Id.

Where a son, entitled on the death of his mother to take out letters of administration, neglected to do so for twelve years, and remained in possession of her goods during that period, and became a bankrupt; and a creditor of the intestate afterwards took out letters of administration, and claimed the goods from the assignees of the son in an action of trover:—Held, that such goods were within the statute 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, as being in the possession and disposition of the bankrupt with the consent of the true owner; and that the assignees were therefore entitled to them, as the bankrupt might have obtained a legal right by taking out letters of administration. Fox v. Fisher, 3 B. & A. 135.

Where the wife of a bankrupt has administered to her father, and become possessed as administratrix of his estate, to which she and her infant brothers and sisters are entitled, and the husband has continued the business of the father for their benefit, this is not such a possession of the goods as shall be deemed an ordering and disposition within the statute. Viner v. Cadell, 3 Esp. 88—Eldon.

A bankrupt, who had obtained his certificate, being possessed of leasehold premises as executor and residuary legatee, mortgaged them to secure a debt of his own, and afterwards assigned the equity of redemption for a valuable consideration, the deed reciting that the assignment was made for the purpose of paying the debts of the testatrix. The assignee took an assignment of the mortgage. The certificate being in an action held to have been fraudulently obtained, the lease was claimed by the assignees under the bankruptcy, but it was determined they had no right against the assignee for valuable consideration. Dickenson v. Lockyer, 4 Ves. jun. 40.

An executor and trustee becoming a bankrupt, a receiver was appointed, though the testator knew, after he had made his will, that a commission had been issued. Langley v. Hawk, 5 Madd. 46.

J. S. became possessed (in trust, as executor of his deceased father,) of certain shares in the joint stock of the Lead Smelting Company. The only evidence of a party's interest in the stock of this company is, a book in which are entered all transfers of shares. In this book there was an entry signed by J. S., purporting to be a transfer of the shares in question from himself as executor to himself in his individual character. Where the transfer is made in pursuance of a bona fide sale for a money consideration, the words "sell and assign" are used; but in this instance those words were erased. On the faith of his apparent ownership of these shares, J. S. acted as a director of the company, and received the dividends to his own use up to the time of his bankruptcy; and, on passing his accounts under the commission, he treated the shares as his own property. Upon an issue directed to try the right to these shares, between J. S. and another, as executors of the original proprietor and the assignees of J. S., it was left to the jury to say whether or not the shares were, at the time of the bankruptcy, in the possession, order, or disposition of the bankrupt, with the consent and permission of the true owner. The jury having found for the plaintiffs, the court refused to disturb the verdict. Cooper v. De Tastet, 2 M. & Scott, 714.

(e) Other Cases.

An order was made for payment out of a bank-rupt's estate, with interest to the time of payment, in preference to all other creditors, with costs, under stat. 5 Geo. 3, c. 15, s. 48, for an issue of Exchequer bills to relieve commercial credit. Ex parte Holden, 18 Ves. jun. 436; 1 Rose, 173.

If money be received by an overseer of the poor and kept apart by itself, and he become a bankrupt, it does not pass to his assignees. Re v. Eggington, 1 T. R. 369.

12. Bankrupt's Property in Possession of Others. (a) Specific Appropriation.

Money placed by a bankrupt under the control of an arbitrator for a specific purpose, and applied to that purpose, and from which he derived no benefit, cannot be afterwards recovered back from him on account of a previous act of bankruptcy, of which the arbitrator was ignorant. Type v. Hockin, 7 B. & C. 101; 9 D. & R. 881. And see Coles v. Wright, 4 Taunt. 198.

A. becomes bound as surety with B. in a respondentia bond upon a ship bound to the East Indies, conditioned to be void, upon payment within thirty days after arrival in the river Thames, or at the end of thirty-six calendar months, or upon utter loss. B. assigns all his goods on board the ship to A., upon trust, in the first place, to pay a debt owing from himself to A., and in the next place to pay off all those debts for which he had become surety on the respondentia bond. Before the time specified in the bond, A. becomes bankrupt, the assignees receive a sum of money on account of the proceeds of the goods, it was ordered, that, after deducting the amount of A.'s private debts, the residue of the proceeds and all future receipts should be divided among the respondentia creditors only. Ex parte Carstairs, 1 Rose, 130.

(b) Goods purchased by Bankrupt but not delivered.

If the consignee of goods, upon discovering his insolvency, give notice to the wharfinger not to deliver the consignment, the goods remain in the consignor. Bartram v. Fairbrother, 4 Bing. 579; 1 M. & P. 515.

Where goods are furnished to the agent of a bankrupt, on the agent's credit, he may, to protect himself, stop them in transitu, and give them a new direction adverse to his principal; but if he give them a fresh direction in furtherance of the usual course of business of the principal, they pass to the assignees as in the order and disposition of the bankrupt. Hawkes v. Dunn, 1 Tyr. 413; 1 Price's P. C. 24.

L. came to the plaintiff's house, and bought a parcel of tobacco, to be paid for in ready money, and the same day absconded, leaving orders at his house to receive the tobacco; the plaintiff's servant afterwards brought the tobacco to L.'s house without demanding the money:—Held, that the sale was complete, and vested the property in L., which passed by an assignment under a commission against him on the act of bankruptcy by absconding. Hatwell v. Hunt, 5 T. R. 231.

(c) Goods returned by Bankrupt to Seller.

A trader orders bags of wool of defendants,

(merchants), in December, which are delivered 19th February following; and by the course of dealing, the trader has the option of returning the wool, for which he has no call, though previously ordered. The trader being from home when the bags were delivered; on his return, the same day, he gives directions not to have them opened or entered in his books, but only weighed off to see that they agreed with the invoice, he being then in embarrassed circumstances, and intending not to take them into the account of his stock, if he found himself unable to pursue his business. On the 4th and 5th March, being then insolvent, he returns the bags, with a letter declaring his situation, and hoping they will not object to take back the wool, and requesting a line of approbation thereof; which approbation is given, after an act of bankruptcy committed the same day the letter was sent:—Held, that by the trader keeping possession of the goods so long, his option (which ought to have been exercised on the receipt of them) was gone; and that, being in a state of insolvency and on the eve of bankruptcy, he had not the power of restoring the goods to the vendors, and that the assignees were entitled to the property. Neate v. Ball, 2 East, 117.

A trader ordered goods from the country, to be sent to another place for the purpose of being afterwards sent to his correspondent abroad, which was the usual course of his dealing; it was competent for him, upon his becoming insolvent, but before an act of bankruptcy, to agree bona fide to give up the goods to the defendants from whom they were ordered, upon a claim of right of stoppage in transitu; and the circumstance of the trader having called a meeting of his creditors, and taken legal advice, and being encouraged by the result of such meeting and advice to give up the goods, was evidence for the jury to find that they were given up bona fide, and not from any motive of voluntary and undue preference to the defendants, though done by him in a situation of impending bankruptcy at the time. Dixon v. Baldwin, 5 East, 175.

A. purchases goods of B. on October 8th, for the purpose of exportation; but finding that he must stop payment, and that he cannot apply the goods to the purpose for which they were bought, he returns them to B. on October 16. On the 17th he stops payment; but expecting remittances from abroad more than sufficient to pay his debts, has no doubt but his creditors will give him time: they however refusing, he is made bankrupt on November 2d. In an action by the assignees against B. for the value of the goods:—Held, that the jury were warranted in finding, that the delivery of the goods to B. was not made in contemplation of bankruptcy. Fidgeon v. Sharp, 1 Marsh. 196; 2 Rose, 153; 5 Taunt. 539.

Where a sale of goods has been completed by actual delivery to the buyer, who afterwards becomes insolvent before they are paid for, he cannot rescind the contract, and return the goods, with the consent of the seller, so as to give the seller a preference to his other creditors. Barnes v. Freeland, 6 T. R. 80.

13. Property of Bankrupt's Wife.

Assignees of a bankrupt are entitled to an equitable interest for life of his wife, as well as a capital sum, subject to the equity requiring a provision for her out of it. Wright v. Morley, 11 Ves. jun. 21.

The general assignment in bankruptcy had not the effect of reducing into possession a legacy of stock, in trust for the bankrupt's wife, whose right by survivorship was established against the assignees. Mitford v. Mitford, 9 Ves. jun. 87.

If personal estate is left to a woman, subject to a life interest, and she marry a trader who becomes bankrupt, and the tenant for life and the wife die after the bankruptcy, the assignees are entitled to the legacy. Ripley v. Wood, 2 Sim. 165.

If the wife of a bankrupt has an interest in a legacy, and the assignees file a bill to compel payment, and the husband dies before any decree is made, the widow, and not the assignees, is entitled to the legacy. Pearce v. Thornby, 2 Sim. 167.

If a testator leave two annuities of 20*l.* a year each to two females, and upon one of the devisees marrying during the life of the testator, he, by a codicil, leaves her an annuity for her sole and separate use; and the other annuitant marry after his death, without any condition attached in the will to her annuity, it passes to the assignees under a commission against her husband. Count v. Ward, 7 Bing. 608.

A purchase by a trader, afterwards a bankrupt, in the joint names of himself and his wife, is void as against the creditors, within the stat. 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 5. Glaister v. Hewer, 11 Ves. jun. 377; 9 Ves. jun. 12; 8 Ves. jun. 195.

So, if the purchase was made with the wife's money, if previously received, and disposable by him as his own, and not bound by any agreement with a trustee; and the receipt is not connected with the purchase. Id.

14. Proof of Assignment.

Assignments in bankruptcy ought to be admitted. Read v. Cooper, 2 Rose, 127; 5 Taunt. 89.

The production of the assignment to the plaintiffs (assignees), duly enrolled, is sufficient, without proof of its execution, unless notice has been given that it is to be disputed. Tucker v. Barrow, M. & M. 137; 3 C. & P. 85, 89; 7 B. & C. 622; 1 M. & R. 518.

The 96th section of the bankrupt act, 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, which enacts that the proceedings in bankruptcy shall not be received in evidence, unless the same shall have been first entered of record, does not dispense with proof of the execution of the assignment. Gomersall v. Serle, 2 Y. & J. 5. But see Hunt v. Cannor, 2 Y. & J. 10, n.

Where the bankruptcy of a party is stated in an allegation in an indictment for a conspiracy, the assignment cannot be received as evidence in support of such allegation, unless it be proved by the subscribing witness. Rex v. Pope, 5 C. & P. 208—Tenterden.

XII. ASSIGNERS.

1. Official Assignees.(a) Appointment and Office.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 22, a number of persons not exceeding thirty, being merchants, traders, or accountants, or persons who are, or have been engaged in trade in London, are to be appointed to act as official assignees in all bankruptcies, one to each fiat, together with the creditors' assignees; they are to give such security, and to be subject to such rules, to be selected for such estates, and to act in such manner as the court shall direct.

All the estate and effects are to be possessed and received by the official assignee alone, and to be paid into the Bank of England, subject to the direction of the court. Id.

They are to be subject to the same liabilities as the creditors' assignees. Id.

They are to be divided equally among the six commissioners. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxvi.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 40, the commissioners have a discretion to appoint or not to appoint an official assignee, where the commission issued before that act began to operate.

Where the commissioner appointed one, thinking he had no discretion, the court would not on this ground alone remove the official assignee. Ex parte Ellis, 1 Deac. & Chit. 209; 1 Mont. & Bligh, 116.

Each commissioner shall appoint his class of assignees, to act in rotation under the several bankruptcies prosecuted before him, such rotation to be settled by ballot, except in special cases to be referred by the commissioner adjudicating therein to other commissioners of his subdivision court, or the court of Review. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4; 1 Deac. & Chit. xxvi.

The same rule for the appointment of the official assignees shall be followed as to existing commissions; but it is recommended, that no official assignee be appointed under commissions already opened, unless there appear good cause for so doing. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxvi.

No official assignee shall, either directly or indirectly, carry on any trade or business, or hold or be engaged in any office or employment, other than his said office and employment as official assignee. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxvi.

Each official assignee shall find sureties to the extent of 6000*l.*, and shall, together with such sureties, (except when otherwise especially directed by the court of Review), execute a joint and several bond to the two registrars for the time being, and the survivor of them, in the penal sum of 6000*l.* Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxvii.

The official assignees are to be made liable to the whole amount, and the sureties to be liable together to the like amount, in such proportions as shall be approved of by the court of Review, provided that no one surety shall be made liable for more than 3000*l.*, nor for less than 1000*l.* Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxvii.

Where an official assignee had been appointed under an old commission, on a suggestion that a majority of the creditors objected to such appointment, the court, on motion, suspended an order for delivery up of the proceedings, &c. to the official assignee till the hearing of the petition. Ex parte Parker, 1 Deac. & Chit. 530.

The commissioners have a discretion to appoint official assignees, and, if necessary, the court of Review has jurisdiction to remove them. Ex parte Ellis, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 116; 1 Deac. & Chit. 209.

(b) Duty and Authority.

Generally.—By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 23, the official assignees are not to interfere with the creditors' assignees in the appointment or removal of a solicitor or attorney, or in the directing the time and manner of effecting any sale of the bankrupt's estate or effects.

Each official assignee shall follow the instructions of the commissioner under whom he acts, according to the exigencies of each particular case, subject to such directions as shall from time to time be prescribed by the court of review. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxvii.

The official assignee is only a ministerial officer, and cannot resist payment of a dividend. Ex parte Alexander, 1 Mont. 503; 1 Deac. & Chit. 513.

An official assignee having sent to the petitioner (who was employed under the commission to sell part of the bankrupt's property,) the usual circular, that a dividend was due on his debt, cannot afterwards refuse to pay the same upon the plea that his accounts for such business done by him are erroneous. Id.

Official assignees cannot, under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 22, take bankrupt's money out of the hands of a solicitor, without discharging his lien. Ex parte Bowden, 2 Deac. & Chit. 182.

An action lies against the official assignee to recover money received by him under a void commission of bankruptcy. Munk v. Clarke, 10 Bing. 102.

Although all creditors, save one, and the bankrupt and assignees consent, the court cannot direct that the official assignee be at liberty to award a party remuneration for trouble incurred touching the bankrupt's estate between the time of stopping payment and issuing the fiat. Ex parte Barles, 1 Deac. & Chit. 543.

Money coming to his hands.—Each official assignee shall pay into the Bank of England to the credit of the accountant-general of the high court of Chancery, all such sums of money as shall come to his hands, as soon as they shall amount to 100*l.*; and, at the time of paying in such monies, shall state in writing, delivered therewith to the cashier of the Bank of England, the date, and the amount of the payment, the name of the official assignee making it, the name and description of the bankrupt or bankrupts, and the particular estate to which the money belongs, and that it is to be placed to the credit of the accountant-general, and of such particular estate, and shall take a receipt for the same from the cashier of the Bank, and carry it to the office of the accountant-general, who will give a proper voucher for the receipt, to be produced when called for by the commissioners. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxvii.

Where, in case of the death, removal, sickness, or unavoidable absence of any official assignee named in the certificate of the accountant-general, any other shall be appointed to act in his stead, the official assignee so appointed shall leave at the Bank a certificate of his appointment under the seal of the court, and shall at the same time sign his name in the firm book; and thereupon all drafts for that dividend drawn and signed by such official assignee, shall be payable and paid as if they had been signed by the official assignee named in the certificate of the said accountant-general. Reg. Gen. March 28, 1832, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxxii. f.

Any one of the judges of the court of Bankruptcy may, as often as it shall appear to him expedient, by order under his hand, direct any money, which may have been paid into the Bank of England by any official assignee to the credit of the bankrupt's estate, to be invested in the purchase of Exchequer bills; and may in like manner direct the sale or exchange of such Exchequer bills, and also the exchange, sale, and transfer of any stock in the public funds, or in any public company, or of any Exchequer bills, India bonds, or other public securities, which shall have been transferred, delivered, or paid by any official assignee into the Bank of England to the credit of such estate; and may direct the proceeds thereof to be laid out in the purchase of Exchequer bills, or to be carried to the credit of the accountant-general of the high court of Chancery, and of such bankrupt's estate; and the accountant-general of the high court of Chancery shall and may, pursuant to such order, make such purchase, sale, and transfer, without any further order or direction from the court: and the expenses thereof may be charged to the account of the estate, for the benefit of which the same shall have been respectively made. Reg. Gen. March 19, 1832, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxxii. a.

Any one of the judges of the court of Review may from time to time, upon application to him in that behalf, make such order relative to the payment and delivery in, investment, and payment and delivery out, of the monies, bills, securities, and effects of any bankrupt, in the hands of any official assignee, or by him paid and delivered into the Bank of England, as to such judge shall seem expedient and just, such order to be executed in duplicate, and one part thereof to be filed with the proceedings, and the other to be delivered to the official assignee. Reg. Gen. March 28, 1832, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxxii. f.

Where, in consequence of the death, sickness, or unavoidable absence of the chief registrar, or for any other sufficient cause, it may be expedient to appoint some other person to sign drafts, or to do any other act by the rule required from the chief registrar, any one of the judges of the court may, by order under his hand, to be executed in duplicate, name and appoint one of the deputy registrars to act for the chief registrar in that behalf, one part of which order shall be left by the deputy registrar named in such order at the Bank of England, who shall at the same time sign his name in the firm book kept at the Bank for such purpose, and the other part of such order shall be filed with the proceedings in that bankruptcy; and thereupon all drafts for that dividend, signed by such deputy registrar, shall be payable and paid, as if the same had been signed by the chief registrar named in the certificate of the said accountant-general. Reg. Gen. March 28, 1832, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxxii. f.

All sums of money which are by law payable out of any bankrupt's estate for allowance to the bankrupt, or for remuneration to the official assignees, or for the discharge of the solicitor's bill, or of any other lawful expenses incurred or payable by the assignees, shall and may, when duly settled and allowed, be paid out of the monies and securities so delivered and paid into the Bank of England as aforesaid, at such times and in such manner as any one of the judges of the court shall by order under his hand direct; provided that such order specify the amount of such payment, the purpose to which it is to be applied, and the person to whom, or to whose order the same is to be made. And the accountant-general of the high court of Chancery shall and may, pursuant to such orders, pay the sum of money specified therein out of such bankrupt's estate, without any further evidence of the same being due and payable, and without any further order or direction of the court. Reg. Gen. 19 March, 1832, Flather's New Bankrupt Court Act, 59.

Bills and Notes.]—Each official assignee shall present for acceptance all unaccepted bills of exchange as soon as he shall receive the same, and before he deposits them in the Bank of England, as is hereinafter directed. Reg. Gen. Feb. 2, 1832, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxxi.

Each official assignee shall deposit in the Bank of England, to the credit of the accountant-general of the High Court of Chancery, all bills, notes, and other negotiable instruments, except unaccepted bills of exchange, as soon as he shall receive the same; and shall deposit, in like manner, all unaccepted bills of exchange, as soon as the same shall have been accepted, or refused acceptance; and shall, at the time of such deposit, leave a statement in writing with the cashier of the Bank of England, specifying the date and contents of the instruments so deposited, the name of the official assignee making the deposit, the name and description of the bankrupt or bankrupts, and the particular estate to which the same respectively belongs; and that such instruments respectively are to be deposited to the credit of the said accountant-general, and of such particular estate; and shall also take a receipt for the same from the cashier of the Bank, and carry it to the office of the said accountant-general, who will give a proper voucher, to be produced when called for by the commissioners. Id.

When, and as soon as any bill, note, or other negotiable instrument, deposited as aforesaid in the Bank of England, in the name of the accountant-general, in pursuance of the stat. 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, or of any order of the Lord Chancellor or the said court, shall become due, the governor and company of the Bank of England shall, without any direction from the accountant-general, deliver all such bills, notes, or other negotiable instruments, to one of the cashiers of the Bank, who is to present the same for payment, and receive the sums of money due thereon respectively, and forthwith to pay the sums so received (if any) into the Bank of England, to the credit of the respective estates to which the said bills, notes, or other negotiable instruments were placed at the time of delivering the same to the cashier. Id.

And in case the said bills, notes, or other negotiable instruments, or any of them, shall not be paid, the said governor and company of the Bank of England shall cause such bills, notes, and other negotiable instruments, as are by law required to be noted and protested, to be delivered to a notary for that purpose, and to be noted and protested accordingly; and shall, after the same shall have been so noted and protested, as the case may be, again deposit the same in the Bank of England, to the credit of the said accountant-general, and to the credit of the respective estates to which the same were placed at the time of delivering the same to the cashier. Id.

And the said governor and company shall debit the account of each estate with such sums of money as shall be paid by them for the expenses of noting and protesting such bills, notes, or other negotiable instruments respectively as shall have been placed to the credit of such estate. Id.

And the said governor and company of the Bank of England are forthwith, after every such receipt of money or deposit of any note, bill, or other negotiable security, to certify to the accountant-general the sum of money received (if any) on each such bill, note, or any such negotiable security, and placed to the credit of each such estate as aforesaid, or that such bill, note, or other negotiable instrument has been dishonoured, and been again deposited to the credit of such estate, as the case may be, and the sum with which each such estate has been debited as aforesaid. Id.

Where any exchequer bill or bills deposited in the Bank of England, to the credit of the accountant-general of the high court of Chancery, and of the estate of any bankrupt, pursuant to the statute 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, or to any order of the court, shall be in the course of payment, the governor and company of the Bank of England shall and may, without any direction from the accountant-general, cause all such bills, so in course of payment, to be delivered to one of the cashiers of the Bank, who is to receive the interest due thereon, and exchange the same for new bills, in case such new bills are issued, or otherwise to receive the principal money and interest due on such of the said bills so in course of payment as cannot be exchanged, and pay the said interest, or principal and interest, (as the case may be), into the Bank of England, and deposit all such new bills in the Bank, to be there placed to the credit of the accountant-general, and of the same bankrupt's estate to which the former bills were, at the several times of delivering the same to the cashiers, for the purpose aforesaid placed; and the said governor and company of the Bank of England are forthwith, after every such exchange and receipt of interest, or of principal and interest, to certify to the said accountant-general, without any direction from him for that purpose, the number, dates, and sums of the new bills taken in exchange, and the amount of the interest, or principal and interest, (as the case may be), received on each bill, or set of bills, placed to the same account. Reg. Gen. March 28, 1832, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxxii. g.

As often as any bill, note, or other negotiable instrument, that shall have come to the hands of any official assignee, shall be dishonoured, such official assignee shall forthwith give such notice thereof as is by law required from the holder of such bill, note, or other negotiable security respectively. Reg. Gen. Feb. 15, 1832, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxxii. a.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 57, the remuneration to the official assignee is in the discretion of the commissioners.

It is recommended to the commissioners to allow the official assignees 1 per cent. on the monies they respectively receive, and 1½ per cent. more on the monies actually to be divided, subject nevertheless to be increased or diminished, in any case, under special circumstances, to be referred to the court of Review. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxviii.

Official assignees are not, as a matter of course, entitled to poundage upon all monies passing through their hands. Ex parte Ellis, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 116; 1 Deac. & Chit. 209.

2. Choice of Creditors' Assignees.

(a) Who may be.

If a trader commit an act of bankruptcy, by assigning all his stock in trade to one who is a party to the deed of assignment, the latter may nevertheless act as an assignee under a commission sued out by a third person upon such act. Jackson v. Irvin, 2 Camp. 49—Ellenborough. And see Tappenden v. Burgess, 4 East, 330; 1 Smith, 33.

A bankrupt, whether certificated or not, cannot be an assignee under his own commission. Ex parte Jackson, 2 Rose, 221; Coop. C. C. 286.

The court will not permit the solicitor to the commission, nor his partner, to be assignee. Ex parte Rice, 1 Mont. 259; S. P. Ex parte Badcock, 1 Mont. & Mac. 231.

A banker receiving the money under a bankruptcy ought not to be an assignee. Ex parte Lacey, 6 Ves. jun. 625.

An assignee permanently resident in Scotland was removed. Ex parte Grey, 13 Ves. jun. 274.

One of two assignees having quitted the country, a petition was presented by the remaining assignee, that the bargain and sale to the two assignees might be vacated, and that a choice should be made of a new assignee in the stead of the one abroad, and that a new bargain and sale might be executed to the petitioner and the new assignee; and that service of the petition at the last place of residence of the assignee abroad might be deemed good service. On production of an affidavit of service of the petition, an order was made according to the prayer of the same. Ex parte Bonbonous, 3 Madd. 23.

(b) When and how Choice made.

Requisite Proof.—By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 61, all creditors who have proved debts under the commission to the amount of 10*l.* and upwards, are entitled to vote.

The election of assignees must be made by those creditors, however few, who are in a condition to vote, although those not in condition might have made a different choice. Ex parte Butterfell, 1 Rose, 192.

Semble, that a creditor who has proved is entitled to vote in the choice of assignees, if he apply before the commissioner has signed the declaration of appointment, although the commissioner had previously declared the choice complete. Ex parte Nash, 1 Deac. & Chit. 445; 1 Mont. 501.

Semble, also, that the appointment is not complete till the declaration of appointment is signed by the commissioner. Id.

The deposition of the petitioning creditor, at the opening of the commission, is not a proof to entitle him to vote. Ex parte Rawson, 2 Glyn & J. 353.

Where an order of court is necessary to enable a party to prove, he cannot vote or sign certificate; for instance, trustees, executors, &c. Ex parte Wyatt, 2 Deac. & Chit. 211.

Quære, whether a creditor, on a voluntary bond, is entitled to vote in the choice of assignees? Ex parte Venables, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 494.

If assignees are elected by the vote of the petitioning creditor before he has proved, the choice may be vacated, although the petition be presented six months after the election. Ex parte Danby, 1 Mont. 67.

Where the commissioners had improperly rejected the petitioner's proof to a very large amount, whereby two creditors, for comparatively trifling sums, were enabled to choose the assignees, a new choice was directed, the petitioner indemnifying the estate against all the costs. Ex parte Edwards, Buck, 411.

Though a case appear in which the court would, upon an immediate application, vacate the choice on account of an improper rejection, yet it will not interfere where there is delay in making the application. Ex parte Scholey, 1 Glyn & J. 2.

It is not a ground for the removal of assignees, that the commissioners have improperly rejected the proof of a debt that would have turned the choice, unless the rejection was fraudulent. Ex parte Durent, Buck, 201.

Other Matters.]—By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 58, s. 20, the choice is to be made on the first of the two meetings.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 61, the assignees were to be chosen at the second meeting, or any adjournment thereof.

Persons authorized by letter of attorney from creditors entitled to vote, upon proof of the execution thereof, either by affidavit or by oath, may vote. Id.

The choice is to be made by the major part in value of the creditors entitled to vote. Id.

Where the assignee was chosen before one commissioner only, and the assignment was executed to him by three commissioners, a new choice was directed. Ex parte Moore, 1 Glyn & J. 190.

Commissioners have power to adjourn a meeting for the choice of assignees. Ex parte Garland, 1 Madd. 318; 2 Rose, 361.

Although all the creditors present concur in an election. Id.

Where the major part in value of the creditors had been accidentally, and without default on their parts, excluded from voting, a new choice was directed to be made. Ex parte Dechapeaurouge, 1 Mont. & Mac. 174. But see S. P. contra, Ex parte Surtees, 12 Ves. jun. 10.

Commissioners were ordered forthwith to execute the assignment to the petitioners, who had been elected assignees by the major part in value of the creditors who had proved and voted, where the meeting had been adjourned by the commissioners, for the purpose of investigating a claim not sufficient to turn the choice. Ex parte Woolley, 1 Glyn & J. 366.

Where, through the error of the commissioners, the great body of the creditors were prevented from proving their debts, and voting in the choice of assignees, a new choice was directed. Ex parte Hawkins, Buck, 520.

Creditors having, subsequent to the appointment, signed resolutions authorizing the assignees to do certain acts, as assignees, which they could not have performed without such authority, and to act generally as assignees, are debarred from questioning the validity of the appointment at a subsequent period, upon grounds of which they were aware at the time of signature. Ex parte Nash, 1 Deac. & Chit. 445; 1 Mont. 501.

A person appointed by the court to prove and receive dividends cannot vote in the choice of assignees. Ex parte Shaw, 1 Glyn & J. 127.

One partner is allowed to act for another in executing powers of attorney for voting in the choice of assignees, &c. Ex parte Mitchell, 14 Ves. jun. 597.

On an application tending to enforce a party to take the office of assignee upon him against his wish, he must be served with notice of it. Ex parte Green, 1 Deac. & Chit. 487.

(c) Certificate of Choice.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 29, a certificate of the appointment of assignees, purporting to be under the seal of the court, shall be received as evidence of the appointment in all courts and places whatsoever, without further proof.

The appointment of any assignee or assignees shall be under the hand of the commissioner, and shall remain of record in the court of Bankruptcy; and certificates of such appointment, under the seal of the court, shall be delivered to such assignee by the registrar, upon application for the same. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxvi.

Where any certificate of the appointment of an assignee or assignees, hereafter to be made in any bankruptcy prosecuted elsewhere, shall be brought to the registrar of the court to be sealed pursuant to the act 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, there shall be produced to him duplicate original certificates, written in the form thereafter mentioned, with an affidavit of an attesting witness to the signatures to both; and that one of such duplicates, together with the affidavit, shall be left with the registrar, to be filed of record; and the other, when so sealed, shall be returned to the party producing the same. Reg. Gen. 27 March, 1832, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxxii. c.

Every such certificate shall (mutatis mutandis) be drawn according to the form there set out. Reg. Gen. 27 March, 1832, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxxii. c.

All such duplicates shall be signed as often as circumstances will permit, at the meeting where such assignees are appointed; and no charge shall be allowed to any commissioner for or in respect of any such certificate; nor shall the registrar make any charge for or in respect of the sealing thereof, except the charge allowed by the said act, and for filing affidavits and other documents. Reg. Gen. 27 March, 1832, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxxii. c.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 27, the certificate of appointment must be registered, where the conveyance of the property would require registration.

This section does not require the certificate of the appointment to be registered, in order to protect them against subsequent purchasers of the bankrupt's freehold property without notice, unless the property is situate in a register county. Ex parte ———, 1 Deac. & Chit. 349.

(d) Jurisdiction to control.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 61, the commissioners have power to reject any person chosen an assignee who shall appear to them unfit; and, upon such rejection, a new choice is to be made.

The rejection by commissioners of an assignee as unfit under that section is not final; an appeal lies against the decision. Ex parte Candy, 1 Mont. & Mac. 197.

There is jurisdiction to control the choice of assignees having an interest adverse to the general creditors, if the question can be fairly tried without removal, by appointing a person to act as an assignee under the name of agent or inspector. Ex parte Mills, 3 Ves. & B. 139; 2 Rose, 68.

An application that a trustee or inspector may be appointed to protect the interests of a class of creditors, is premature until the choice of assignees. Ex parte Simpson, 2 Rose, 337; 1 Mer. 38.

An inspector was appointed for the separate estate, where the joint creditors had no interest in it. Ex parte Batson, 1 Glyn & J. 269.

A solvent partner was appointed receiver, without salary, of the partnership property, &c. Ex parte Stoveld, 1 Glyn & J. 303.

Adverse interest by an elector is not a reason for a rejection of the elected; adverse interest in the elected may amount to unfitness. Ex parte Candy, 1 Mont. & Mac. 198.

Where, upon a joint choice of three persons as assignees, the court rejects the nomination of one of them, it will set aside the choice altogether, as it cannot collect from the nomination of three persons jointly, an intention to intrust the administration to two of the three if one be rejected. Ex parte Shaw, 1 Glyn & J. 127.

There is no jurisdiction in bankruptcy to reject a debt, on the ground that it must command the choice of assignees, and the creditor has an adverse interest to the general creditors by property and security obtained immediately before the bankruptcy; but an unjust use of his legal right by choosing himself will be controlled by the Lord Chancellor, either by removing him, if the election is recent, and nothing done under it, or otherwise by some arrangement, as in this instance, from the great amount of the debt, appointing another assignee to act solely in the investigation and decision of the disputed claim. Ex parte De Tastet, 1 Ves. & B. 281; 1 Rose, 324.

(c) Where joint and separate Fiats.

The choice of assignees is with the creditors entitled to prove under the act of parliament, excluding persons who could not be admitted without an order,—as separate creditors under a joint commission, now admitted under the general order, (8 March, 1794). Ex parte Parr, 18 Ves. jun. 70; 1 Rose, 76.

Without such order, separate creditors are not entitled to vote under a joint commission. Ex parte Haynes, 1 Rose, 321; Ex parte Jopeon, 19 Ves. jun. 225.

A new choice on that ground directed, though the Lord Chancellor would not interfere if a creditor had been excluded by mistake, and not for the purpose of preventing his voting. Id.

Section 62 of 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, by which joint creditors may prove under separate commissions to vote, applies only to partnerships subsisting at the time of the bankruptcy. Ex parte Morris, 1 Mont. 218.

Joint creditors cannot vote or interfere in the choice of assignees under a separate commission. Ex parte Alcock, 11 Ves. jun. 603; S. P. Ex parte Longman, 18 Ves. jun. 71.

If there is only one separate creditor, an arrangement will be made for the joint creditors by order. Ex parte Parr, 18 Ves. jun. 70; 1 Rose, 76.

Unless they pay the separate creditors 20s. in the pound. Ex parte Hubbard, 13 Ves. jun. 424.

The right of joint creditors under a separate commission to an account, and application of joint effects, is limited as to the separate estate to the surplus, and does not extend to voting in the choice of assignees. Ex parte Wilson, 18 Ves. jun. 442.

Though joint creditors have no right to vote under a separate commission, yet the court will in some cases appoint persons in the nature of assignees to take care of the interest of the joint creditors, and to use the name of the assignees upon indemnifying them. Ex parte Basarow, 1 Rose, 266; S. P. Ex parte Mills, 3 Ves. & B. 139; 2 Rose, 68.

The choice under a separate commission was not disturbed upon the ground that the assignees had been elected by joint creditors, who had been admitted upon the proceedings as separate creditors. Secus, if they had been admitted and voted as joint creditors. Ex parte Jeffery, 1 Rose, 315.

Joint creditors were not allowed to vote in the choice of assignees under a separate commission, although the petitioning creditor, whose debt would have carried the choice, consented. Ex parte Simpson, 2 Rose, 337; 1 Mer. 38.

But, in another case, an order was made for joint creditors to vote under a separate commission, where the petitioning creditor, who was a joint creditor, and whose debt overbalanced the separate debts, consented. Ex parte Taylor, 18 Ves. jun. 284; 2 Rose, 442.

So, where the petitioning creditor, who was a joint creditor, consented, and the only separate debt was under 10l. Ex parte Jones, 18 Ves. 283.

A joint creditor, being the petitioning creditor under a separate commission, is entitled to prove and vote with the separate creditors, not being within the rule excluding the other joint creditors. Ex parte Hall, 9 Ves. jun. 349.

3. Removal of Assignees.

(a) For what Cause.

It is a general rule, that an assignee having adverse interests will be removed, or an arrangement made by the appointment of some other creditor for the investigation of his claims. Ex parte De Tastet, 1 Rose, 324; 1 Ves. & B. 281. And see Ex parte Surtees, 12 Ves. jun. 10.

The court has jurisdiction to remove the persons nominated by the creditors as assignees before the execution of the assignment. Ex parte Shaw, 1 Glyn & J. 127.

Assignees were removed on the ground that one of them had purchased the bankrupt's estate, under the commission, for himself. A re-sale was directed, and the purchaser to account for a profit gained by him upon a re-sale of part; but he was discharged from the purchase only conditionally, in case the re-sale should produce more. Ex parte Reynolds, 5 Ves. jun. 707.

Till the debt is set aside, the court will not remove a creditor from his office as assignee upon suspicion of its unfairness. Ex parte Mills, 2 Rose, 68; 3 Ves. & B. 139.

An assignee was discharged from being such on his own petition, but on terms. Ex parte Thorley, 3 Madd. 273; Buck, 231, 465.

Semble, that where one assignee had obtained an order to discharge himself from the office (which was not drawn up), but the commissioners had, by their memorandums, virtually recognised such discharge by excluding his name from them, he cannot be made liable by any subsequent memorandums. Ex parte Learmouth, 1 Deac. & Chit. 491.

(b) Proceedings.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 36, the court of Review has power to remove any assignee; and the order of that court thereupon is final and conclusive, and not subject to review by the Chancellor or otherwise.

The court of Review has power to remove an official assignee as well as any other assignee. Ex parte Ellis, 1 Deac. & Chit. 209; 1 Mont. & Bligh, 106.

By 6 Geo. 4. c. 16, s. 64, the Chancellor might, on petition, vacate, except as against purchasers, the bargain and sale or assignment, and direct the commissioners to execute new ones to new assignees.

Assignees removed, and the assignment and bargain and sale vacated, except as to purchasers. Ex parte Leman, 13 Ves. jun. 271. And see Ex parte Bainbridge, 6 Ves. jun. 451.

On an application to remove one of several assignees, the proper course is to petition for a new choice. Ex parte Steel, 1 Deac. & Chit. 489.

An assignee removed for the benefit of the estate, is entitled to his costs out of any fund in hand, before it is transferred to the new assignees. Ex parte James, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 262; 1 Deac. & Chit. 272.

Where an assignee, on being chosen, accepts the office, he can only retire on payment of the costs occasioned by his removal. Ex parte Watts, 1 Deac. & Chit. 322.

Where there is only one assignee surviving, and he, from his advanced age (72), is desirous of being removed from the office, the proper course is to procure a new choice in the room of those who are dead, and then to apply that he may be removed. Ex parte Rapp, 1 Deac. & Chit. 461; S. C. nom. Ex parte Rupp, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 261.

4. Appointment of new Assignees.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 25, in case of the death or removal of assignees, and of new assignees being duly appointed, the estate shall vest in them by virtue of the appointment, either alone, or jointly with the existing assignees.

Upon the removal of an assignee, and the appointment of a new assignee, the estate, by section 25 of the statute 1 & 2 Will. 4, vests in the new assignee by operation of law; and there is no need of an assignment. Ex parte Falar, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 262; 1 Deac. & Chit. 32.

The court has not jurisdiction in bankruptcy to declare the infant heir of an assignee a trustee of the bankrupt's estate. Ex parte Kirk, Buck, 78.

The infant heir of a messenger, to whom, in bankruptcy, a provisional assignment had been made, and who died before the choice of assignees:—Held, to be within the statute of Anne. Ex parte Carter, 5 Madd. 81.

The retiring assignee must permit his name to be used in any legal proceedings already commenced, he being indemnified by the new assignee. The indemnity to be settled by the Master. In re Roberts, Buck, 465.

A new assignee of a bankrupt may sue in debt upon a judgment recovered by a former assignee, displaced by the Lord Chancellor; which judgment was "for damages sustained, for injuries committed as well by the defendant against the bankrupt before his bankruptcy, as also against the assignee, as such, after the bankruptcy;" for such recovery will be presumed to have been for injuries done to the bankrupt's estate and effects; and the plaintiff may declare in a general form, as having been duly constituted and appointed assignee, &c. De Cosson v. Vaughan, (in error), 10 East, 61.

If an assignee be removed, and assign his interest to the other assignees, they may maintain an action for money had and received against him, to recover money received by him as such assignee. Smith v. Jameson, 5 T. R. 601; Peake, 213. And see Wray v. Barwis, Peake, 69.

Where, on a petition to the Vice-Chancellor for a change of assignees, an order was obtained under the statute 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 31, directing that a new assignment should be executed to the plaintiff, in which the two former assignees should join, and one of such assignees absconded, and the assignment was executed to the plaintiff by the other alone:—Held, that the plaintiff could not maintain an action of assumpsit for goods sold and delivered in his character of assignee, as an application should have been previously made to the Vice-Chancellor, stating the reason of the nonjoinder of the assignee who had absconded. Aldritt v. Kittridge, 6 Moore, 569; 1 Bing. 355.

Where the declaration so stated that the defendant was indebted; and it was proved that the goods had in fact been sold by the bankrupt with the concurrence of a former assignee, whose appointment had been vacated by the Lord Chancellor, and the plaintiff was appointed in his stead:—Held, that this was no variance. Aldritt v. Kittridge, 8 Moore, 372.

Where the assignee of a bankrupt is removed, and a new one appointed, quære, whether a party having money in his hands which he received on account of the bankrupt's estate, in the character of agent to the late assignee, be liable in assumpsit for money had and received to the use of the newly appointed one? Stead v. Thornton, 3 B. & Adol. 357 (n).

But the former assignee having been insane when the money was received :—Held, that such receiver was liable at all events; for he could not be the agent of an insane person, and, therefore, held the property as a mere stranger. Id.

In one case, the assignment and bargain and sale were vacated under the circumstances, without directing a new choice of assignees. Ex parte Kersley, Buck, 477.

Upon a new choice of assignees, there is no necessity to vacate the assignment. Ex parte Forster, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 87.

Where one of three assignees declines to act, the two acting assignees should join in the petition for a new choice. Ex parte Harris, 2 Deac. & Chit. 4.

A retiring assignee must pay the costs of the meeting for a new choice, and the costs of his application to retire. If the new assignee do not continue any legal proceedings already commenced, the retiring assignee must pay the costs incurred by them, unless the master report that such costs were properly incurred. In re Roberts, Buck, 465.

An assignee who retires must give security, to be approved of by the master, to protect the estate against any costs that may arise in any action at law or suit in equity, occasioned by his retiring. Ex parte Thorley, Buck, 231; 3 Madd. 273.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 67, whenever an assignee shall die, or a new assignee be appointed, no action or suit shall be thereby abated; but the court, upon a suggestion of such death or removal, may allow the name of the surviving or new assignee to be substituted.

The plaintiff assignee of a bankrupt having died, and another assignee having been appointed in his stead, the rule to enter a suggestion of such fact on the record, in pursuance of the statute, is absolute in the first instance. Westall v. Sturges, 4 M. & P. 217.

A second assignee, who continues, by suggestion on the record, a suit commenced by his predecessor, may recover a penalty as well as his predecessor. Bates v. Sturges, 7 Bing. 585; 5 M. & P. 568.

5. Rights and Authority of Assignees.

(a) To repay their Expenses.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 106, the commissioners were to audit the accounts within six months, and not earlier than four months, after the last examination, allowing the assignees to retain all money expended in suing out and prosecuting the commission, and all other just allowances.

An assignee sustaining a litigated commission is entitled to his costs out of the estate, as between attorney and client. Ex parte Bryant, 2 Rose, 1: S. C. not S. P. 1 Ves. & B. 211, 506.

Assignees are not entitled to travelling expenses. Ex parte Elsee, 1 Mont. 1.

Assignees, being accountants, cannot charge the estate for business done as accountants. Ex parte Read, 1 Glyn & J. 77.

The provisional assignee was entitled to his costs from the mortgagee, in a suit for foreclosure by the mortgagee, who was allowed to add them to the principal and interest due to him on the mortgage. Peake v. Gibbon, 1 Tam. 505.

Assignees were made to pay the costs of a trial of an issue directed to try the validity of the commission, they being the plaintiffs, and the bankrupt the defendant; but they were not made to pay the costs of the petition to supersede the commission. Ex parte Edwards, Buck, 232.

A messenger sues the assignees for his costs and expenses, and obtains a judgment against them; and one of them pays the debt and costs under the judgment: he has a right of action for contribution against his co-assignee, and is not bound to shew that any funds came into his hands from the bankrupt's estate. Hurt v. Biggs, Holt, 245—Gibbs.

Contribution is enforced among assignees, to reimburse a payment of one under an order, for a loss occasioned by their joint act; and the objection, that the defendants acted only for conformity upon the representation and advice of the plaintiff, will not prevail. Lingard v. Bromley, 1 Ves. & B. 114; 2 Rose, 118.

Extra costs incurred by assignees in conducting prosecutions for perjury and conspiracy, directed to be allowed under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 106. Ex parte Strange, 1 Mont. & Mac. 31.

(b) To act for each other.

Where there are more assignees than one, one of them may receive money belonging to the estate, and give a good discharge for it. Smith v. Jamesons, 1 Esp. 114—Kenyon.

But otherwise where the express dissent of the other assignee appears. Bristow v. Eastman, 1 Esp. 174—Kenyon.

Semble, that evidence that a release executed by one assignee only was done in the presence and with the concurrence of the others, is admissible. Williams v. Walsby, 4 Esp. 220—Ellenb.

But a general authority from one of several assignees to the others to act for him, and use his name, is not sufficient to enable the others to execute such a release by deed; there must be a special authority for that purpose. Id.

Assignees cannot delegate their general authority. Douglas v. Brown, 1 Mont. 93.

Money deposited in the bank in the name of three assignees, ordered to be paid to the checks of two, the third having absconded. Ex parte Hunter, 2 Rose, 363; 1 Mer. 408.

Where part of the bankrupt's estate was paid into the bank in the names of five assignees; and one of them having died, and another gone abroad, the remaining assignees applied to the bank for the money, for the purpose of making a dividend, but the bank refused to pay it without proof of the two other assignees being dead: the court made an order on the bank to pay the money to the three remaining assignees. Ex parte Collings, 2 Cox, 427.

If four persons are chosen assignees, and, at the choice, it is verbally agreed that one shall act, and notice is given to the banker to pay the drafts of the one, and a dividend is declared, and notice is given to the creditors "that they may receive the dividend upon application to the assignees," and the acting assignee pay the dividends by checks, which are dishonoured, he having overdrawn the account and absconded, the other three assignees are liable. Ex parte Booth, 1 Mont. 248.

B., one of two assignees, signs the checks for the dividends, and delivers them to S., his co-assignee, who undertakes to distribute them to the creditors. The checks are signed by S., and the money is fraudulently received on some of them by a clerk of S., who became bankrupt before the actual demand of the dividends:—Held, that B. was not liable for the checks, the credit of S. not being impeached at the time of the delivery of the checks. Ex parte Griffin, 2 Glyn & J. 114.

Where a former memorandum of commissioners finds that a sum of money is in the hands of one assignee, and directs it to be invested in the name of all three assignees, which, however, could not be done, as the money was not forthcoming; the commissioner is not warranted in finding that the money is in the hands of all three assignees, and thereupon ordering them to divide; and the court of Review has no jurisdiction to entertain the question of the liability of the co-assignees to answer the consequences of trusting the assignee in default. Ex parte Learmouth, 1 Deac. & Chit. 491.

Whenever two of three assignees direct the solicitor to be changed, the third, not concurring, has a right to know whether such change would be beneficial, and he not appearing on a petition for that purpose, the order was made. Ex parte ———, 1 Rose, 207.

If the creditors meet for the purpose of considering whether unfinished work of the bankrupt shall be finished and sold, and they refuse to finish it until one of the assignees agrees to find funds, on which they all agree, the other assignee is not liable for materials provided to finish the work. Bothomley v. Usborne, Peake's Add. Cas. 99—Kenyon.

6. Duties of Assignees.

(a) Generally.

It is the first duty of assignees to satisfy themselves that the commission is well founded. Ex parte Graves, 1 Glyn & J. 86.

An assignee must consider the commission under which he derives his authority to be valid, and act under it at his own risk and responsibility; the Lord Chancellor not having jurisdiction to indemnify him against the consequences of its invalidity. In re Bryant, 2 Rose, 17.

The court of Review will not order resolutions passed at a meeting of creditors to be carried into effect, without referring it to the commissioners, to certify whether it would be for the benefit of the estate. Ex parte Farmer, 1 Deac. & Chit. 110.

On a summary application against the assignees for delivery up of goods, seized by them as the property of the bankrupt under the fiat, out of the hands of the petitioner (a stranger to the bankruptcy), who claimed the goods as his, but who, together with the bankrupt, had been indicted for a conspiracy, in secretly and fraudulently removing the goods, which indictment was still pending: the court refused to decide on petition till after the trial, on the ground that it would tend to disclose the assignees' evidence in support of the indictment. Cross, J., dissent. Ex parte Heath, 2 Deac. & Chit. 140.

In general, the assignees of a bankrupt cannot lend; but as they might lend under particular circumstances by the 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 32, counts may be joined for debts due to the bankrupt, and for money lent by the assignees as such. Richardson v. Griffin, 2 Chit. 325; 5 M. & S. 294.

(b) To sell Estate.

Generally.—In bankruptcy, the mode of selling an estate is left to the commissioners, and not directed by the court, as in a sale by a master. Ex parte Comings, 1 Ves. jun. 112.

The court will not sanction a sale of the bankrupt's property by private contract, without a previous reference to the commissioners. Ex parte Goding, 1 Deac. & Chit. 323.

An assignee, instead of selling the estate, taking a lease himself, is answerable for profit and loss. Ex parte Hughes, 6 Ves. jun. 617.

A landlord being assignee cannot resume possession and re-let, but for the benefit of the estate. Ex parte Wright, 2 Rose, 244.

Assignees are bound as other persons to make a good title, unless guarded by express stipulation. McDonald v. Hanson, 12 Ves. jun. 277.

But if it appear before the contract executed, that they cannot make such title, the parties would be left to law. White v. Foljambe, 11 Ves. jun. 343.

A purchaser, under a bankruptcy, must take such title as the bankrupt had, and cannot insist upon a title strictly free from objection, as in other cases. In such a case, the purchaser objecting to the title, but insisting upon his purchase, his bill for a specific performance was, under the circumstances, dismissed with costs, except as to some parts of the answer and the depositions which contained irrelevant matter. Pope v. Simpson, 5 Ves. jun. 145.

A bankrupt's assignees had contracted for the sale of his copyhold lands, and received a deposit. The commission was afterwards superseded, because, when it issued, the petitioning creditor's debt was not due. Another commission issued upon the petition of another creditor, and the same assignees were chosen:—Held, that the plaintiff, having abandoned his contract pending the old commission, might recover back his deposit. Bartlett v. Tuckin, 6 Taunt. 259; 1 Marsh. 583; 2 Rose, 436.

An application by creditors to restrain the assignees from a sale of the bankrupt's stock in trade and lease was granted. Ex parte Montgomery, 1 Glyn & J. 338.

An injunction was granted, ex parte, to restrain the assignees from selling the bankrupt's effects. Ex parte Figea, 1 Glyn & J. 122.

Purchase by Assignees.]—An assignee desirous of becoming a purchaser of the estate of the bankrupt, must first obtain the consent of the creditors, and then petition, and serve the other assignees, and also the bankrupt, with the petition. Ex parte Bage, 4 Madd. 459.

Where real property of the bankrupt was put up to sale by auction in two lots, and bought in by the assignee without the authority of the creditors; and upon a re-sale there was a loss on one lot and a gain on the other, though the balance was in favour of the bankrupt's estate, the assignee was charged with the loss on the lot under-sold. Ex parte Lewis, 1 Glyn & J. 69.

Leave was given to assignees to bid for part of the bankrupt's estate, a meeting of the creditors having previously given their sanction to the application. Anon. 2 Russ. 350.

Though the creditors, at a meeting convened by advertisement, sanction a sale of the bankrupt's effects at a valuation to one assignee, the court will not order that the assignee should be allowed to become the purchaser, without a reference to ascertain whether the effects can be more advantageously disposed of. Ex parte Serle, 1 Glyn & J. 187.

The assignees may be justified in declining to continue works in a mine which do not appear likely to prove immediately beneficial to the estate, and even in relinquishing the bankrupt's interest as damnosa hæreditas; but however pure their motives, neither assignees nor commissioners can be permitted to possess themselves by purchase or otherwise of any part of the bankrupt's interest in such property. Ex parte Badcock, 1 Mont. & Mac. 231.

Against all transfers of the bankrupt's estate, either to the assignees or commissioners, the rule of the court is uniform and inflexible. Id.

A purchase by an assignee of dividends cannot be for his own benefit. Ex parte James, 8 Ves. jun. 337.

An assignee, under particular circumstances, was permitted to bid at the sale of the bankrupt's estate, his solicitor not having the management of the sale. Ex parte Morland, 1 Mont. & Mac. 76.

(c) To keep Accounts.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 101, assignees were directed to keep accounts.

By ss. 102, 103, & 104, provisions were made as to the manner in which the accounts were to be kept, and the estate invested and disposed of.

By s. 106, the commissioners are to audit the accounts of the assignees, and to allow their expenses.

The court of Chancery, sitting in bankruptcy, had no jurisdiction to direct that the personal representative of a deceased assignee should account for the personal estate of the bankrupt in his hands. Ex parte Crowe, 1 Mont. & Mac. 281.

Creditors who wish to have the accounts of the assignees taken, must first apply to the commissioners for that purpose; and if they miscarry in their judgment, or refuse to act, the creditors may then petition the court to have the accounts taken. Ex parte Brocksopp, Buck, 304.

The court will not review the allowance by the commissioners of the assignees' accounts, except in matter of principle. Ex parte Anthony, 2 Glyn & J. 55.

The court has jurisdiction to review the quantum allowed by the commissioners to the assignees in passing their accounts; and the jurisdiction is not confined to the principle upon which the allowance is made. Ex parte Anthony, 2 Glyn & J. 177.

A petition for leave to except must set out the objectionable items. Id.

Where a partnership between bankrupts commenced at different times, separate accounts of each partnership's fund was directed. Ex parte Marlin, 2 Bro. C. C. 15.

A petition for keeping separate accounts, which might be done under the general order, was dismissed with costs. Ex parte Green, 1 Deac. & Chit. 382.

Creditors are not entitled to apply to the court for any order to have copies of the assignees' accounts delivered to them. They are entitled under the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 101, to inspect such accounts, and for that purpose an application must be made in the first instance to the commissioners. Ex parte Granger, 1 Mont. & Mac. 289.

The assignees are bound to furnish a creditor, who has proved, with a copy of their accounts, if he offers to pay the expense of making such copy. Ex parte Aberdeen, 2 Deac. & Chit. 34.

(d) To distribute Estate.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 76, if the bankrupt shall have entered into a contract for the purchase of an estate, or interest in land, the vendor may compel the assignees to elect whether they will abide by or decline the agreement.

The authority of assignees in bankruptcy is limited to the purposes of their trust—the distribution of the estate under the bankrupt laws; and does not therefore extend to an agreement disposing of the surplus after 10s. in the pound to the creditors. Ex parte Barfit, 12 Ves. jun. 15.

The joint estate is to be first applied to the joint debts, and, after they are paid, the surplus, if any, to the separate debts, and vice versa, as to the separate estates. Ex parte Abell, 4 Ves. jun. 840.

An account and application of the joint estate is directed on the application of any joint creditor, the residue to be distributed according to the respective interests of the partners. Dutton v. Morrison, 17 Ves. jun. 209; 1 Rose, 213.

A surplus of separate estate must be carried to a deficient joint estate before payment is made on a voluntary bond. Ex parte Spurrier, 1 Mont. 246.

The representatives of a surviving assignee of an estate that had paid 20s. in the pound, all the commissioners being dead, were ordered to execute a power of attorney to a receiver appointed under a decree of the court in a cause in which the surviving assignee was a defendant, to collect and get in the said estate, they being indemnified. Twoood v. Hankey, Buck, 65.

Assignees must not keep money in their hands. Ex parte Goring, 1 Ves. jun. 169.

Where there is a joint commission against partners, and a separate commission against one, the assignees, having taken possession of the whole fund, must divide it among the joint creditors, and the separate bond creditors of the other partner cannot claim against him. Hankey v. Garratt, 3 Bro. C. C. 457.

Joint creditors cannot touch the separate estate till the separate creditors are fully satisfied. Gray v. Chiswell, 9 Ves. jun. 124.

Under a joint commission, the affairs of the separate creditors may be arranged, and also of separate firms of two or more of the partners. Ex parte Bonbonus, 8 Ves. jun. 545.

In bankruptcy, the usual directions are, to apply the funds respectively, the joint to the joint debts, the surplus of each to the creditors remaining on the other. Ex parte Eldon, 3 Ves. jun. 241.

The court will not, at the petition of the bankrupt, direct inquiries as to the management of the estate, if he have not a pecuniary interest therein. Ex parte Harrison, Buck, 246.

Under a separate commission, there being a solvent partner, the separate estate is applied to the separate creditors exclusively. Ex parte Yonge, 3 Ves. & B. 39; 2 Rose, 40.

7. Liability of Assignees.

(a) For Losses.

Assignees are not responsible for a loss sustained in the bankrupt's effects, where, under the circumstances, it could be inferred that there had been no blamable negligence in their conduct. Ex parte Turner, 1 Mont. & Mac. 52.

Where an assignee employed a broker to sell a quantity of tobacco, and the broker received the money, and at the end of ten days failed before he paid it over; the assignee was held not bound to make it good. Ex parte Belhier, Amb. 218.

Where the bankrupt's reversionary estate was offered for sale by auction, and 950*l.* bid, and the same was bought in for 1000*l.* upon a reserved bidding to that amount, and afterwards, when reduced into possession, sold for 510*l.*:—Held, under the circumstances, not to make the assignee liable for the difference. Ex parte Bauxton and Jenkinson, 1 Glyn & J. 355.

A provisional assignee was not responsible for the fraud of an agent appointed with due care. Raw v. Catten, 9 Bing. 96; 2 M. & Scott, 123.

(b) Retaining Money.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 104, an assignee disobeying directions to invest money, or retaining it in his hands, or employing it for his own benefit, or permitting his co-assignee to do so, is to be charged with 20*l.* per cent.

The act is imperative that an assignee shall be charged 20*l.* per cent. for money wilfully retained in his hands. Ex parte Bray, 1 Rose, 144.

The bankrupt himself has no equitable claim to it either in respect of his allowance, or his right to the surplus. Ex parte Lowe, 1 Deac. & Chit. 137—Pell, J. dissent.

Quære, whether this charge is to be 20*l.* per cent. per annum, during the whole period of retention, or only one single charge of 20*l.* per cent. upon the gross sum retained? Id.

Quære, whether the charge can be sustained on monies retained by assignees previous to the 1st of September, 1825, when the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, first came into operation. Id.

The 20*l.* per cent. given by the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 4, applied to a solvent assignee only. Ex parte Goldsmith, 1 Glyn & J. 405.

Where assignees gave checks upon the banker of the estate, to an agent to enable him to purchase Exchequer bills for the benefit of the estate, and the agent received the money at the bank, and converted it to his own use; but the money was subsequently replaced in the bank:—Held, that the assignees were not, under the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 4, chargeable with 20*l.* per cent. upon the monies so misapplied by their agent. Ex parte Wilkinson, Buck, 197.

Where the creditors of a bankrupt appointed the Bank of England as the place where the estate should be deposited, and a dividend was declared; and two of three assignees signed drafts for the dividends, which they forwarded to the other assignee for his signature, and he also signed them and received the money, which he applied to his own purposes; and upon his death, a creditor's suit was instituted by the assignees for the administration of his assets:—Held, that the estate of the assignee was liable under the statute to pay 20*l.* per cent. upon the funds misapplied. Wackerbath v. Powell, Buck, 495; S. C. contra, Ex parte Wackerbath, 2 Glyn & J. 151.

The interest at 20*l.* per cent., given by the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 4, cannot be recovered in assumpsit, on the common money counts. Bersford v. Birch, 1 C. & P. 373—Abbott.

Quære, whether the assignee ought not to be charged by the commissioners with such interest before any action is brought? Id.

Before these statutes, an assignee keeping money unnecessarily in his hands, and using it in his trade, was charged with interest for it. Treves v. Townshend, 1 Bro. C. C. 384; & C. nom. Traves v. Townson, 1 Cox, 50.

An assignee was removed, and charged with interest at 5*l.* per cent. before stat. 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 4, for money paid in at his banker's to his account, and used as his own property. Ex parte Townshend, 15 Ves. jun. 470.

An assignee was charged with interest, where he was a partner in the bank into which the money was paid by direction of the creditors, for keeping it there too long. Ex parte Baker, 18 Ves. jun. 246; 2 Rose, 441.

An assignee used never to be charged with interest for money retained in his hands at a higher rate than 4l. per cent. unless a special case was made out for it. Ex parte Strutt, 1 Cox, 439.

Interest at 4l. per cent. against assignees of a bankrupt, for not making a dividend when they ought, would be increased upon circumstances. In re Hilliard, 1 Ves. jun. 89.

An assignee becoming bankrupt, with monies in his hands, his estate is not entitled to any dividend on the proof made by him under the estate of which he was assignee, until full reimbursement of the money which such assignee had in his hands. Ex parte Bignold, 2 Madd. 470.

A sum paid by mistake by an assignee of one bankruptcy to assignees under another bankruptcy, and divided amongst the creditors by the latter, directed to be paid out of future effects. Id.

(c) When Bankrupt carries on Business.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 35, the assignees may, with the approbation of the proper subdivision court, appoint the bankrupt himself to superintend the management of the estate, or to carry on the trade for behoof of the creditors, and in all or any other respects they may think fit, to aid them in administering the bankrupt's estate and effects, as they may think best for the benefit of the persons interested.

A commissioner having certified that the business of the bankrupt might be carried on by a provisional assignee beneficially for the creditors, the official assignee was ordered to advance funds for the purpose. Ex parte Wyatt, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 261; 1 Deac. & Chit. 229.

If a bankrupt carry on the business for the benefit of the creditors, as their agent, under the authority of the assignee, and order goods in his own name, which are used in the business, the assignee is liable for the goods. Kinder v. Howarth, 2 Stark. 354—Holroyd.

Assignees may maintain an action on a note given as a collateral security for goods sold by them to one of the bankrupts. Rawson v. Walker, 1 Stark. 361—Ellenborough.

8. Actions by and against Assignees.

(a) Limitation.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 44, every action brought against any person for any thing done in pursuance of the act must be commenced within three calendar months next after the fact committed.

The right construction of this section appears to be, that if the assignee does an act directed by the statute, but does it erroneously, he is protected; but if he does the act as the result of his ownership of that which was the bankrupt's property, and not by the direction of the statute, it is not done in pursuance of the statute, and he is responsible for it. Edge v. Parker, 8 B. & C. 697.

Where assignees entered the premises of a third person to seize goods, which were the property of the bankrupt, it is not necessary that an action against them should be brought within three months after the fact committed; the act of the assignees not being done "in pursuance of the statute." Id.

The section does not apply to actions against assignees, who only act in the disposition and distribution of the property of the bankrupt, and not under any power conferred on them by law, or for any special purpose under the act; for the act done applies to acts done for the purpose of taking possession of the bankrupt's property by the commissioners, or messenger acting under their warrant. Therefore, trover for a chariot seized by assignees on the premises of the bankrupt was held to be maintainable, although the action was not commenced by the owner against the assignees within three months after the seizure. Carruthers v. Payne, 2 M. & P. 420; 5 Bing. 270.

(b) What form of Action.

Assignees cannot at first affirm the act of a creditor interfering with the bankrupt's effects as a contract, and afterwards disaffirm it as a tort; although such act, if disaffirmed in the first instance, would have amounted to a conversion of the bankrupt's goods, and would have rendered the creditor liable to the assignees in trover. Brewer v. Sparrow, 1 M. & R. 2; 7 B. & C. 310.

Trover will not lie by assignees against a person who had wrongfully continued the bankrupt's business, though bona fide for the benefit of the creditors, where, by accepting the proceeds, they had either affirmed his acts as their agent, or had received them as a satisfaction for the wrongful act. Id.

Assignees (when goods were pledged to secure accommodation acceptors) having elected to bring trover, cannot afterwards sue the defendant, to recover back the original sum for which the goods had been in the first instance pledged, although paid to them after the depositor had become bankrupt. Birdwood v. Raphael, 5 Price, 593.

If they accept the balance of the amount it is an affirmation, and they cannot maintain trover. Bennett v. Spackman, 1 C. & P. 274—Abbott.

If short bills are delivered by a banker, on the eve of his bankruptcy, to a third person, who receives payment, and pays the money to the assignees, trover does not lie, but assumpsit. Tenant v. Strachan, M. & M. 377; 4 C. & P. 31.

Quære, whether the assignees of a bankrupt can sue in case for a tort committed against the estate of the provisional assignees? Freen v. Cooper, 6 Taunt. 358; 2 Marsh. 59.

Assignees may sue both in the debet and detinet, because the whole property of the bankrupt is vested in them by law. Winter v. Kretchman, 2 T. R. 45.

Assignees are not restrained from bringing a second action (having been non-suited in the first,) for the recovery of certain sums from a creditor, who had given credit for them in his account, and had proved for the balance. The general rule, however, is, that they must proceed by petition if the creditor has proved. Ex parte Hilton, 1 J. & W. 467.

If a person, after notice of an act of bankruptcy, sets up a claim of lien upon certain deeds, and the bankrupt pays the sum he demands to get possession of the deeds, the assignees cannot question the amount of this lien, unless there be a count for money had and received to the use of the assignees; but if the person had really no just claim at all, the assignees may recover the same in an action for money had and received to the use of the bankrupt; however, if it appear that the defendant never received any money, but that A., who was to have conveyed a house to the bankrupt, at his desire mortgaged it to the defendant, an action for money had and received will not lie. Noble v. Kersey, 4 C. & P. 90—Tenterden.

(c) What cause of Action.

Assignees under a joint commission against two partners may recover, in the same action, debts due to the partners jointly, and debts due to them separately. Graham v. Mulcaster, 4 Bing. 115; 12 Moore, 327.

But otherwise, if it be proved that one alone had committed an act of bankruptcy; neither are they entitled to recover the separate property of that one under such commission. Hogg v. Bridges, 2 Moore, 122; 8 Taunt. 200.

The court will restrain a bankrupt controverting his bankruptcy from vexatiously bringing actions against his assignees; but will not so interfere, upon the ground that the bankrupt has failed upon the trial of one action and on an application for a new trial, and was about to bring a second action. Ex parte Bryant, 2 Rose, 1; 1 Ves. & B. 211, 506.

Assignees cannot recover in trover goods delivered upon a transaction which the bankrupt himself could not impeach, unless the delivery is subsequent to an act of bankruptcy taking place after the petitioning creditor's debt has accrued. Ward v. Clarke, M. & M. 497—Tenterden.

Where the plaintiff and a bankrupt, before the bankruptcy, being partnership brokers, effected an insurance for the defendants, and the receipt of the premium was acknowledged in the policy at the time of effecting such insurance, but which was not in fact paid until after the plaintiff's partner's bankruptcy, when the plaintiff paid it out of his own separate property; the principal insured was held liable to the solvent partner only. Thacker v. Shepherd, 2 Chit. 652.

A. having become bankrupt, his goods were sold by order of his assignees. Some goods of his in B.'s hands at the time of the bankruptcy, and on which B. claimed a lien, were also included in the sale; but this was done by B.'s order, and the assignees refused to authorize it. The assignees afterwards signed a memorandum that all the goods included in the sale were the property of A., the bankrupt, to exempt them from auction duty, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 98:

—Held, that this was no adoption of the sale, so as to prevent the assignees from maintaining trover against B. for the goods. Bleaden v. Hancock, M. & M. 465—Tindal.

A., the partner of B., is also in partnership with C. A., being indebted to the firm of A. & B., indorses to A. & B. a bill belonging to the firm of A. & C., and immediately afterwards indorses it in the names of A. & B. to D., a creditor of A. & B., who receives the amount at maturity. A. & C. afterwards became bankrupts; their assignees cannot maintain trover against B. Jones v. Yates, 4 M. & R. 613.

Nor can such assignees maintain an action against B. for money taken by A. from the funds of A. & C. and applied to the use of A. & B. M.

If a declaration on a bill (indorsee against acceptor) state that it was indorsed to the plaintiff, as surviving assignees of a bankrupt, after his bankruptcy, the plaintiff must prove that the bill was indorsed to them after the bankruptcy, and in their capacity of surviving assignees. Bernasconi v. Argyle, (Duke), 3 C. & P. 29—Tenterden.

Assignees may maintain trover for a bill which the bankrupt transferred after his bankruptcy, upon which the bankrupt had a lien for a part of the amount. Hall v. Bernard, 1 C. & P. 382—Abbott.

By statutes 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, ss. 11 & 12, and 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 29, after any person has been convicted on an indictment for falsely swearing to a debt under a commission of bankruptcy (on which indictment he is to suffer the punishment inflicted by the several statutes against perjury), the assignees of the bankrupt may recover from him double the sum so sworn to in an action; and in a declaration in such action it is sufficient to state the conviction of the defendant on the indictment, without also alleging that the defendant did take such false oath. Holmes v. Walsh, 7 T. R. 458. And see 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 99, 100.

In order to make the assignees of a bankrupt liable for money had and received by the bankrupt for a specific purpose, it is necessary to prove that the money came into their hands with a knowledge of the purposes for which it was destined. Kieran v. Johnson, 1 Stark. 109; 2 Rose, 463—Bayley.

If A. fraudulently procure a bill from B., and afterwards become bankrupt, and his assignees receive the money for the bill, B. may recover it from them in an action for money had and received. Harrison v. Walker, Peake, 111—Kenyon. And see Willis v. Freeman, 12 East, 656; Gladstone v. Hadwen, 1 M. & S. 517; Milner v. Forbes, 4 Esp. 171; and Haswell v. Hunt, 5 T. R. 231.

(d) Parties.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 89, the assignees of one or more members of a firm may sue the names of the solvent partners in suits with themselves.

A bankrupt ought not to be joined as a party in an action by a creditor against his assignees.

because he may be a witness. Griffin v. Archer, 2 Anst. 478.

A trustee under the 54 Geo. 3, c. 137 (Scotch bankrupt act) cannot sue in his own name for a chose in action. Jeffery v. M<sup>r</sup> Taggart, 6 M. & S. 126.

In assumpsit, by assignees, they must all be joined as plaintiffs, and the omission of any one of them is a ground of nonsuit. Snellgrove v. Hunt, 1 Chit. 71.

Secus in trover, when the omission of one of the assignees as plaintiff can only be pleaded in abatement. Id.

Three persons having been appointed and acted as assignees, two of them paid each half of his bill to the solicitor:—Held, that the two could not maintain a joint action against the third for his proportion of the money paid, but must each bring a separate action. Brand v. Boulcott, 3 B. & P. 235.

An order of the Lord Chancellor, under the stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, for removing one of several assignees, not followed up by any re-assignment or release of such assignee to the remaining assignees, nor by any new assignment of the commissioners under the Lord Chancellor's further order, does not operate to divest the legal estate out of such removed assignee: and consequently he ought to join in an action of trover brought by the assignees for a ship belonging to the bankrupt's estate. Bloxam v. Hubbard, 5 East, 407; 1 Smith, 487.

But advantage can only be taken of the non-joinder by plea in abatement to the whole action; though the other assignees who sue can only recover their proportional parts. Id.

The payment of money to the defendant's use by a solvent partner, out of his separate property after the bankruptcy of his partner, in pursuance of a contract made before the bankruptcy, may be sued for in the name of the solvent partner only, without joining the assignees of the bankrupt partner. Thacker v. Shepherd, 2 Chit. 652.

The assignees of A., a bankrupt, and also of B., a bankrupt, under separate commissions, cannot recover in the same action a joint debt due from the defendant to both the bankrupts, and also separate debts due to each; and if in such an action, the jury have assessed the damages severally on the separate counts, the court will arrest the judgment on those counts which demand the debts due to each bankrupt separately. Hancock v. Haywood, 3 T. R. 433. And see Stone v. Macnair, 1 Moore, 126; 7 Taunt. 432; 4 Price, 48.

But where the plaintiffs sued as assignees of A. & B., and also as assignees of C., for a joint demand due to all the bankrupts, such declaration was held good, on motion in arrest of judgment after verdict. Streatfield v. Halliday, 3 T. R. 779.

Where A. and B. are partners, and A. committed an act of bankruptcy, and afterwards, but before the bankruptcy of B., the sheriff seized goods which had belonged to A. & B., under an execution against them:—Held, that the assignees of A. &

B., under a joint commission, could not, in an action brought by them as such, recover A.'s share of the property. Hogg v. Bridges, 8 Taunt. 200; 2 Moore, 122.

A., B., and C., having been appointed assignees under three separate commissions of bankrupt, cannot sue as joint assignees, but must state their several and respective interests in the declaration. Ray v. Davies, 2 Moore, 3.

Quære, whether the assignees appointed under two former separate commissions against two, and who were also assignees under a subsequent joint commission against the two together with a third, issued pending the other two commissions, can maintain an action of trover to recover property of such third person jointly with him? Butts v. Bilke, 4 Price, 240; 2 Rose, 171, n.

Proceedings in an action at the suit of assignees of a bankrupt, were allowed to be amended by making the official assignee a joint plaintiff with the other assignees. Baker v. Neaver, 1 Dowl. P. C. 616; 1 C. & M. 112.

Assignees cannot make themselves parties to a suit commenced by the bankrupt before interlocutory judgment. Barnes v. Maton, 3 Dougl. 186; 1 Tidd's Prac. 175; 15 East, 613, n.

(c) Pleadings.

Counts for money lent and money paid by plaintiff, as assignee of a bankrupt, were joined with counts for money had and received to plaintiff's use, and upon an account stated with him as assignee:—Held, upon error after verdict, that these counts were well joined. Richardson v. Griffin (in error), 5 M. & S. 294; 2 Chit. 325. And see Harris v. Davis, 1 Chit. 625.

In proceedings by sci. fa. against bail, the declaration stated that "S. (the plaintiff in the original action) became bankrupt," whereupon a commission of bankrupt was duly awarded against him; and A., B., and C. (plaintiffs in the sci. fa.) were duly chosen assignees of the estate and effects of the said S. under the commission; and now on behalf of the said A., B., and C., as assignees as aforesaid, we have been informed, &c.:—Held, that this was a sufficient averment of the plaintiff's title to sue as assignees, without alleging that an assignment of the bankrupt's effects had been actually made; but, upon special demurrer, it seems that would have been bad for uncertainty. Fletcher v. Pagon, 5 D. & R. 1; 3 B. & C. 192.

The assignees under a joint commission against A. & B., in suing on a separate contract entered into with A., may describe themselves generally as the assignees of A., without noticing the name of B. Stonehouse v. De Silva, 3 Camp. 399; 2 Rose, 142—Ellenborough.

The assignees under a joint commission against A. & B. may, in an action to recover a debt due to A. alone, describe themselves in the declaration as the assignees of A. alone. Harvey v. Morgan, 2 Stark. 17—Ellenborough.

The defendants received money to the use of A. and B. as assignees. B. was afterwards removed, and A. became the sole assignee, the money still remaining in the hands of the defendants; he may well declare as for money had and received to his own use as assignee, without mentioning B. at all. Stewart v. Lee, M. & M. 158—Tenterden.

Under a joint commission against two partners, the assignees may declare in the same action for separate as well as joint debts due to the bankrupts. Graham v. Mulcaster, 4 Bing. 115; 12 Moore, 327.

In an action by the assignees to recover back money paid by the bankrupt after he had committed an act of bankruptcy, and before the commission was opened, it is not necessary for them to declare as assignees. Thomas v. Rideing, Wightw. 65; 1 Rose, 121.

Assignees, in assumpsit against the vendee of goods sold by the bankrupt after the commission, need not name themselves assignees in the declaration; secus, if on a contract made by the bankrupt before the commission. Evans v. Mann, Cowp. 569.

Goods taken under an execution against A., which had been in his possession more than two months before the issuing of a commission against him, may be considered as his property, under 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 2, and may be described as such in a declaration of assumpsit by his assignees, on a guarantee given by the defendants to the bankrupt. Sampson v. Burton, 4 Moore, 515; 2 B. & B. 89.

Defendant, in an action by assignees, cannot plead the pendency of a former action brought against him by the bankrupt for the same cause of action; for the assignees have no power to proceed with the former action. Biggs v. Cox, 7 D. & R. 409; 4 B. & C. 920.

Plaintiffs declared as assignees of a bankrupt, concluding as follows: "Wherefore the said plaintiffs, assignees as aforesaid,—instead of 'as assignees as aforesaid,—say they are injured, &c.'"—Held good, on special demurrer, as the words "assignees as aforesaid," might be rejected as surplusage. Cobbett v. Cochrane, 1 M. & Scott, 55; 8 Bing. 17.

A declaration in scire facias by the assignees of a bankrupt, stating, "that he became a bankrupt within the meaning of the statutes, &c. and that his goods and effects were afterwards in due manner assigned to the plaintiffs," is sufficiently certain, without alleging that the party was declared a bankrupt, or that his effects were assigned by deed. Winter v. Kretchman, 2 T. R. 45.

(f) Practice.

Assignees are bound to sue in courts of requests, like other persons, when the matter is within the jurisdiction of such courts. Keay v. Rigg, 1 B. & P. 11.

It is not sufficient ground for the postponement of a trial, that the bankrupt is an important witness, and will shortly be competent, by the Chancellor's allowance of his certificate which has been signed by the commissioners. Tennant v. Strachan, M. & M. 377; 4 C. & P. 31—Tenterden.

Where the plaintiff becomes bankrupt before interlocutory judgment, the defendant may be arrested and held to bail by the assignees, in a second action, for the same cause. Barnes v. Maton, 1 Tidd's Prac. 175; 15 East, 131, n.; 3 Dougl. 186.

But where the defendant has been arrested in an action brought in the name of a bankrupt by the authority of his assignees, he cannot afterwards be arrested at the suit of the assignees for the same cause of action, when the first action has not been discontinued, nor the costs paid. Carter v. Hart, 1 Chit. 276.

A defendant may be arrested by assignees of a bankrupt, although he was arrested by the bankrupt for the same cause, if it was necessary to discontinue the first action on the ground of the bankruptcy. Anon. 1 Chit. 274, n.

So, where the first action is brought in the name of the bankrupt, without the authority of the assignees, it seems that the defendant may be arrested a second time, without the first being discontinued, or the costs paid. Anon. 1 Chit. 276, n.

Where an uncertificated bankrupt, in order to try the validity of his commission, held his assignee to bail in an action for money had and received, the court discharged the assignee upon filing common bail. Chambers v. Bernasconi, 6 Bing. 498; 4 M. & P. 218.

(g) Costs.

The 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 44, grants double costs to successful defendants, who have acted under the authority of that statute.

It does not apply to assignees, or those acting under their authority. Worth v. Budd, 1 Dowl. P. C. 328; 2 B. & Adol. 172.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 90, if notice to dispute have been given, and the matter disputed be proved or admitted, the judge may, if he thinks fit, grant a certificate of such proof or admission, and the assignee, commissioner, or other person, shall be entitled to the costs occasioned by such notice, to be added or deducted, as the case may be.

Where, in an action by assignees, the bankruptcy is disputed, but the cause referred to arbitration, the judge before whom the cause is opened cannot certify under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 90, for the costs of proving the bankruptcy, although, upon referring, the defendant agrees to admit the validity of the commission. Barthrop v. Anderton, 8 Bing. 268; 1 M. & Scott, 361.

If assignees, suing for a debt due before the bankruptcy, receive notice of disputing the trading, &c., the judge will grant them a certificate only for the costs of producing the depositions, and not for the costs of the attorney's attendance, or of witnesses to prove the bankruptcy. Ralph v. Dawes, 3 C. & P. 362—Tenterden.

If the plaintiffs, as assignees, proved the petitioning creditor's debt, trading, and act of bankruptcy at the trial, pursuant to notice by the defendant so to do, and were afterwards nonsuited, they were not entitled to costs under 49 Geo. 3, c.

121, s. 10, as that clause related only to cases where they obtained a verdict. Atkins v. Seward, 3 Moore, 601; 1 B. & B. 275.

9. Suits in Equity by and against Assignees.

(a) Practice.

Plaintiff becoming bankrupt, a special motion must be made, and notice served on the assignees, that the assignees may file a supplemental bill, in the nature of a bill of revivor, within a given time, or that the bill may stand dismissed. Porter v. Cox, 5 Madd. 80; Buck, 469.

Where there are two plaintiffs, and one of them only becomes bankrupt the bill may be dismissed upon the usual motion. Caddick v. Masson, 1 Sim. 501.

If a sole plaintiff become bankrupt, the bill will be dismissed without costs, unless the assignees file a supplemental bill within three weeks. Sharp v. Hullet, 2 Sim. & Stu. 496.

Plaintiff becomes bankrupt. Upon motion to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution, assignees allowed a month's time to adopt the suit. At the expiration of that time, defendant to apply again. Mumford v. Randall, 1 Rose, 196.

Assignees who are brought before the court by a supplemental bill, may be made liable to the costs of the whole suit. Whitcombe v. Minchin, 5 Madd. 91.

If a bankrupt is made a party in an equity suit after his bankruptcy, and he sets up a claim in his answer, when it is manifest he has no interest, the bill as against the bankrupt will be dismissed with costs. Bennett v. Lane, 1 Tam. 238.

A bill by assignees to restrain a bankrupt from further proceedings at law to impeach the commission will not be entertained: the remedy is by petition. Kirkpatrick v. Dennett, 1 Glyn & J. 300.

(b) Consent of Creditors.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 88, the consent of the major part in value of the creditors who have proved, and who shall attend a meeting called on twenty-one days' notice, and, if one-third of the creditors do not attend such meeting, the consent of the commissioners, is necessary before assignees can commence suits in equity.

To a suit by assignees, the consent of the creditors was unnecessary, under 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 38, where their interests were not affected: nor need all the assignees be plaintiffs; such as refused to join might be made defendants. Wilkins v. Fry, 2 Rose, 371; 1 Mer. 244.

A demurrer does not lie to a bill by assignees, on the ground that it does not state the suit to be instituted with consent of the creditors or of the commissioners. Jones v. Yates, 3 Y. & J. 373.

Upon a bill filed before the bankruptcy of the plaintiff, a supplemental bill may be filed by the assignees, without the consent of creditors. Beeson v. Lewis, 2 Glyn & J. 245.

10. Reference to Arbitration by Assignees.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 88, assignees, with the consent of the major part in value of the creditors who have proved, who attend at a meeting called on twenty-one days' notice, or, if one-third do not attend, with the consent of the commissioners, may submit matters in dispute to arbitration.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 43, if the assignees shall agree to refer any matter in dispute with any party to arbitration, in such manner as by law they are empowered to do, such agreement of reference may be made a rule of the court of Bankruptcy.

A reference to arbitration of all matters in dispute by assignees of a bankrupt, and a consequent award to pay a sum of money, is conclusive upon the assets. Robson v. —, Rose, 50.

If the assignees attend meetings under a reference to which the bankrupt was a party, and make no objection to the proceedings, they will be considered as adopting them, and be bound by the award. Dod v. Herring, 1 Russ. & Mylne, 153; 3 Sim. 143.

XIII. PROTECTED TRANSACTIONS.

1. Statute.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 81, all conveyances, and all contracts and other dealings and transactions, by and with any bankrupt, bona fide made and entered into more than two calendar months before the date and issuing the commission against him, and all executions and attachments against his lands or chattels, bona fide executed or levied more than two calendar months before the issuing of the commission, shall be valid, notwithstanding any prior act of bankruptcy; provided the parties had no notice of it; except that where the commission has been superseded, and another issued within two months, the two months must be calculated from the issuing of the first commission.

By s. 82, payments made by the bankrupt, or any person on his behalf, to any creditor (not being a fraudulent preference), and payments made to the bankrupt before the date and issuing of the commission, shall be valid, notwithstanding a prior act of bankruptcy, provided the parties had no notice of it.

By s. 83, the issuing of a commission is notice of a prior act of bankruptcy, if the adjudication has been notified in the Gazette, and the party to be affected may reasonably be presumed to have seen it.

By s. 84, parties having in their possession effects of the bankrupt, are not to be endangered by reason of the payment or delivery thereof to him or his order, if they have no notice of any act of bankruptcy.

By s. 85, notice to the accredited agent of a corporation or public company is notice to them.

By s. 86, purchases from the bankrupt for valuable consideration, where the purchaser had notice of an act of bankruptcy, are not to be impeached, unless a commission issued within twelve months.

Two Months.]—Under the 81st section, where the computation of time is to be from an act done, the day when such act is done is to be included. For some purposes, the court notices the fraction of a day. Ex parte Farguhar, 1 Mont. & Mac. 7. And see Thomas v. Desanges, 2 B. & A. 586.

On a commission issuing on the 14th of May, a dealing on the 14th of March is valid, as "more than two calendar months" before the issuing of the commission. Cowie v. Harris, M. & M. 141—Tenterden.

A trader sends goods to an auctioneer to be sold, and goes to prison, where he lies above two months; within this time the auctioneer, not knowing of the trader being in prison, sells the goods, and accounts with him for the proceeds: at the end of the two months a commission of bankruptcy issued out against the trader:—Held, that his assignees could not maintain trover for the goods against the auctioneer, and that the payment of the money to the trader under these circumstances was protected by 1 Jac. 1. c. 15. Coles v. Robins, 3 Camp. 183; 1 Rose, 225—Ellenborough.

If a trader become a bankrupt by lying in prison two months after an arrest, his assignees may maintain an action for money had and received against a person, who, having notice that a commission would be issued against him, sells his goods, and pays him the produce before the two months have expired. King v. Leith, 2 T. R. 141.

Where there was an act of bankruptcy by lying two months in prison, and, during the imprisonment, A. advanced to the bankrupt money for the purpose of settling with his creditors; and the purpose failing, a part of the money was repaid to A. by the bankrupt:—Held, that the repayment was protected, and that the assignees could not recover the money so repaid. Tbovey v. Milne, 2 B. & A. 683.

A fi. fa. was sued out on a judgment entered up under a warrant of attorney, and the sheriff seized the goods before ten in the forenoon of the 13th of August, and sold the same ten days afterwards. On the 13th of October following, about noon, a commission issued against the defendant, under which he was declared a bankrupt:—Held, first, that the seizure of the goods by the sheriff was a sufficient executing or levying, within the meaning of those words in the stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 81; secondly, that more than two calendar months had elapsed between the execution and the issuing of the commission; thirdly, that although the execution issued on a judgment entered up in pursuance of a warrant of attorney, yet, having been executed more than two calendar months before the issuing of the commission, it was protected by s. 81, and not taken out of that section by the proviso in s. 108. Semble, that that proviso only applies to executions executed within two calendar months before the issuing of a commission. Godeon v. Sanctuary, 4 B. & Adol. 255; 1 Nev. & M. 52.

Notice of Act of Bankruptcy.]—Under stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 82, a bona fide payment made by a bankrupt more than two months before the issuing of the commission, the receiver having no notice of an act of bankruptcy, is protected; and the fact of his knowing the bankrupt to be in difficulties makes no difference. Tucker v. Barrow, 3 C. & P. 85; M. & M. 137; 7 B. & C. 622; 1 M. & R. 518.

The issuing of a commission was not of itself sufficient notice to all the world of a prior act of bankruptcy having been committed; therefore, a payment made of a debt to a bankrupt after the issuing of such commission, but before the party paying had any actual knowledge of the bankruptcy, was protected by the stat. 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 14. Sowerby v. Brooks (in error), 4 B. & A. 523; reversing S. C. nom. Brooks v. Sowerby, 3 Moore, 157; 2 Moore, 55; 8 Taunt. 283.

A commission issued out, and not acted on, nor gazetted, is sufficient to defeat a transaction within two months of it, under the proviso of the 81st section. Peckham v. Lashmore, M. & M. 251—Tenterden.

If a commission has passed the great seal, although it has never been opened or acted upon, it has issued within the meaning of the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 2, so as to be notice of a prior act of bankruptcy, and to deprive any party, who has received payments from the bankrupt after an act of bankruptcy, and more than two months before the suing forth of the effective commission, of the benefit of the 46 Geo. 3, c. 135, s. 1. Watkins v. Mound, 3 Camp. 308; 1 Rose, 361—Ellenborough.

L., who held the lease of a public house, was indebted to defendants in 1275*l.*, and had deposited his lease in their hands as security. T., who had 650*l.* in defendant's hands, purchased L.'s lease for 1690*l.*, the defendants agreeing to advance him enough to make up the purchase-money on retaining the lease as a security. L., T., and the defendants' clerk met to complete the transfer, when T. drew a draft on the defendants in favour of L. for 1690*l.* The defendants' clerk received this draft; and, on L.'s executing the transfer of the lease, gave him a draft on the defendants for 415*l.* On the evening of that day, L. having previously committed acts of bankruptcy, a creditor of his gave the defendants' clerk notice not to pay the draft, as a docket would be struck against L. Another of the defendants' clerks, in consequence, refused payment when the draft was presented the next day, having also received a similar notice from the plaintiff, another creditor of L.'s. The defendants some days afterwards paid the draft to a banker, who presented it, but not till he had executed an indemnity:—Held, that the plaintiff, as assignee of L., under a commission of bankruptcy subsequently issued, might sue the defendants in an action for money had and received for the amount of this draft:—Held also, that the defendants had, before the payment of the draft, sufficient notice of the bankruptcy. Spratt v. Hobhouse, 4 Bing. 173; 12 Moore, 395.

Insolvency, within the meaning of the bankrupt laws, does not mean an inability to pay 90s. in the pound, when the affairs of a bankrupt shall be ultimately wound up; but a trader is in insolvent circumstances, when he is not in a condition to pay his debts in the ordinary course, as persons carrying on trade and business usually do. Shone v. Lucas, 3 D. & R. 218.

A fraudulent deed, concerted between the petitioning creditor and the bankrupt, cannot be used to invalidate a payment made after notice of the execution of the deed. Burbridge v. Watson, 4 C. & P. 170—Tindal.

A bankrupt assigned all his property to two trustees, one of whom was the petitioning creditor, who was present at the execution of the assignment by the bankrupt, and executed it himself, but not in the presence of any attorney or solicitor:—Held, that this was not such an assignment as, being communicated to a creditor of the bankrupt, before the receipt by him of money from the bankrupt, would enable the assignees to recover such money, as money received after, and with notice of, an act of bankruptcy. Id.

If a London banker, having a branch bank at Edinburgh, stop payment in London, and after the stoppage, but before notice, a customer pay to the agent at Edinburgh bank notes and cash, to be remitted to London, and at that time the banker is indebted to the agent, and the agent, after the notice, in pursuance of a special direction from the banker, receive money from other agents, for the purpose of forwarding to London, and a fiat issue against the banker, at which period the monies in the hands of the agent are more than sufficient to cover the amount due to him from the banker, but the amount which he had at the time of notice of the stoppage, including the bank notes, was insufficient, and the customer require the agent to return the bank notes, which he does not comply with, and the agent refuse to pay any part of the money to the assignees, and the Court of Session in Scotland order the agent to pay, without prejudice, the balance of monies, after deducting in the mean time the amount due to him, to the assignees, which he does; and afterwards, it appearing clear that he was not entitled to retain any part of the sum which he received from the other agents after notice, he pay to the assignees the difference between the sum paid to the assignees under the order of the Court of Session and the amount so received from the other agents:—Ordered, that the assignees must refund to the customer the amount paid in by him.—Affirmed by the Lord Chancellor. Ex parte Cunningham, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 269, 286. And see Ex parte Solomons, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 308.

2. What a Preference.

To constitute a fraudulent preference, two things must concur: first, insolvency in the trader; secondly, a voluntary payment or transfer by him. Hunt v. Mortimer, 10 B. & C. 44; 5 M. & R. 12—Littledale.

Legal preference is where property is duly and regularly transferred, and the transfer itself complete before an act of bankruptcy. As where a payment is made by a trader in the ordinary course of dealing, or enforced by legal process, though but the evening before he becomes bankrupt. Harman v. Fisher, Cowp. 117; Lofft, 472.

Therefore, where A., a trader, in contemplation of absconding, encloses bills to T., a particular creditor, in discharge of his debt, saying he had the honour to shew him that preference, which he conceives was due; and it was done without the privity of T., and followed by an act of bankruptcy before the notes could possibly be delivered:—Held, that the essential motive being to give a preference, and the act itself incomplete, it was clearly void, though in favour of a very meritorious creditor. Id.

An insolvent debtor cannot go out of the common course of trade to prefer a particular creditor. Alderson v. Temple, 4 Burr. 2235; 1 W. Black. 660.

If a person in trade pay a sum of money to one of his creditors, and his affairs are in such a state that he may reasonably anticipate bankruptcy at the time he makes such payment, it is fraudulent; and if bankruptcy afterwards ensue, the assignees may maintain assumpsit for money had and received to their use, against the person to whom such voluntary payment has been made, though the cause of action arises before the actual bankruptcy. Poland v. Glyn, 2 D. & R. 310; 4 Bing. 22, n.

Sept. 24, 1824, D. the obligor, who, on the 14th August preceding, had quitted premises he held of the obligee, paid the obligee the balance on a bond due Oct. 19 following, the fixtures left on the premises, which were valued on the 24th September, being taken in discharge of the other portion of the sum payable under the bond. In July preceding, D., upon looking into his affairs, found he could only pay 17s. in the pound, and he sold his watch and part of his stock to satisfy some claims upon him, and became bankrupt October 28, 1824, but said he had no intention of becoming bankrupt at the time he paid the obligee, though he made the payment because he expected other creditors would get possession of his property. In an action by D.'s assignees against the obligee:—Held, that the jury were properly directed to consider whether the payment were made by D. with a view to the probability of his becoming bankrupt, and in fraudulent preference of the obligee. Flook v. Jones, 4 Bing. 20; 12 Moore, 96.

Whether a particular payment has been made by a trader in contemplation of bankruptcy, is purely a question for a jury. Id.

A payment made in June, 1825, by a debtor, bona fide, without intention of fraudulent preference, ten days before a commission issued against him:—Held, to be protected under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 82. Churchill v. Crease, 5 Bing. 177; 2 M. & P. 415.

A trader in the Fleet prison, under an arrest for debt, eight days before the suing out of a commission against him, obtained a day rule, and went to an insurance office to receive a sum of money that was due to him; the defendant, to whom the bankrupt was indebted, knowing that he was about to receive the money, without any communication from him, met him at the office, and procured payment of his debt out of the money received by the bankrupt. The payment was made on the 8th June, the debtor having been committed to prison the 19th of April preceding, and on the 18th June a commission issued against him on an act of bankruptcy committed by his lying in prison. In assumpsit by the assignees for money had and received by the defendant to their use, the jury having found that there was no fraudulent preference, and that the defendant did not know of his debtor's insolvency and imprisonment at the time of the payment:—Held, that the payment was protected under the 82d section of the statute, and was not a fraudulent preference within the exception in that clause. Churchill v. Crease, 5 Bing. 177; 2 M. & P. 415.

In order to make void a deed as fraudulent against creditors, it is not necessary to prove that the party was insolvent at the time, if it appear that the intention was to delay creditors. Richardson v. Smallwood, Jacob, 553.

Delivery of effects, in contemplation of bankruptcy to a creditor, though standing perfectly bona fide, is bad if voluntary and without pressure. Ex parte Scudamore, 3 Ves. jun. 88.

A trader stopped payment generally on the 5th January, and, on the evening of the 6th, sent a 100l. note to a particular creditor, saying it was to help him over his payments:—Held, that such trader afterwards becoming a bankrupt, his assignees might recover the money, although, at the time of payment, a bill for a larger amount was becoming due which had been accepted by the creditor for the bankrupt's accommodation, and for which he had promised to provide; and that the creditor could not be considered as the agent of the bankrupt to pay the money for the bill, because he being a party to it, the payment operated pro tanto in his discharge. Guthrie v. Crossley, 2 C. & P. 301—Abbott: S. P. Herbert v. Wilcocks, M. & M. 355, n.

A creditor obtains a preference in contemplation of an intended deed of composition, which would be fraudulent against the creditors under that deed; the composition going off, the creditor may hold his securities against a commission subsequently issued, and not contemplated at the time of the preference. Wheelwright v. Jackson, 5 Taunt. 109, 633; 2 Rose, 127.

Where a trader, having accepted a bill for the use of a third person, is induced by that person to pay the bill, after having informed him that he was insolvent on the promise of such person to guarantee the payment of a composition to the trader's creditors, and he afterwards becomes bankrupt, that payment is a fraudulent preference. Singleton v. Butler, 2 B. & P. 283; 3 Esp. 215.

Assignees may maintain an action on a promissory note, reserving interest half yearly, given for the balance of an account, consisting, amongst other articles, of money lent by the defendant to the bankrupt, such note not being given in the usual and ordinary course of trade and dealing, so as to be protected by the stat. 19 Geo. 2, c. 32. Harwood v. Lomas, 11 East, 127.

So, if the payee of a bill received from a third person as the price of an estate, give time to the drawee, on condition that he shall allow interest, and afterwards the drawee discharge the bill, having in the mean time committed an act of bankruptcy; this is not such a payment in the ordinary course of trade as is protected by 19 Geo. 2, c. 32, and the assignees may recover the money from the payee. Vernon v. Hall, 2 T. R. 648.

3. Attachments.

B. by charter-party hired a ship of defendants, the owners, to carry a cargo to Hayti, and engaged to find a homeward cargo. On the ship's arrival at Hayti, B. assigned the cargo to C. as a security for advances. The hire not having been paid, defendants, under a judgment of a court at Hayti, attached the cargo in the hands of C. to discharge the claim for hire; and B. having declined to find a homeward cargo, the captain procured one for defendants, who received the freight on its arrival in London:—Held, on B.'s having become bankrupt subsequent to the assignment, that his assignees could not recover from the defendants the proceeds of the cargo attached at Hayti, or of the homeward freight. Kymer v. Larkin, 5 Bing. 71; 1 M. & P. 183.

A., a foreign merchant, purchased in his own name, but on account and with the money of B., a British merchant, certain bank shares in the French funds. The latter drew bills on A., which he accepted, on the security of such shares standing in his name; and these bills were assigned by B. for a valuable consideration to C., a British subject. Before they became due, B. authorized A. by letter to sell the bank shares, in order to reimburse himself against the bills. Before the letter arrived, A. had stopped payment, and afterwards became bankrupt, and the bills were dishonoured: B. also afterwards became bankrupt. C., by process in the foreign country, attached the bank shares still standing in the name of A. for the debts due to him on the bills; and the court there decreed that the bank shares should be sold, and the proceeds should be applied first to pay a debt due from B. to A., and afterwards to retire the bills. Under this decree C. received a certain sum of money on account of the bills:—Held, that the assignees of A. could not recover such sum back, as money belonging to B. Cazenove v. Prevost, 5 B. & A. 70.

A creditor for goods sold and delivered to a trader, who had committed a secret act of bankruptcy, not being cognizant thereof, attached money of the trader's in the hands of a third person, and recovered judgment, and received the amount from such third person; a commission afterwards issued:—Held, that this was not a protected payment, as it could not be said to be in any way a payment made by the bankrupt. Hovil v. Browning, 7 East, 154; 3 Smith, 156.

So, if, after the assignment of a bankrupt's estate, a creditor knowing it and residing in England attach the money of the bankrupt abroad, the assignees may recover it in an action for money received to their use. Hunter v. Potts, 4 T. R. 182.

4. Mortgages.

If a trader, before his bankruptcy, deposit a lease as a security for money, but no mortgage or assignment of it then takes place, the assignees may recover it, as no legal title passes to the party it is delivered to. Doe d. Maslin v. Roe, 5 Esp. 105—Ellenborough.

So, if the trader before his bankruptcy has given a power of attorney to another, to receive sums of money due to him, in consideration of engagements entered into by such person on account of the bankrupt; money received under such power, after bankruptcy, may be recovered by the assignees. Hovill v. Lethwaite, 5 Esp. 158—Ellenborough.

If a mortgagor in possession become bankrupt, and the mortgagee give notice to the tenants to pay him the by-gone rents, a payment to the mortgagee is good against the assignees of the mortgagor. Pope v. Biggs, 9 B. & C. 245.

5. Delivery of Bills as Security.

A., being indebted to B. & Co. who became bankrupts, deposited a promissory note with the defendants as their assignees, and afterwards paid them the amount of the debt due from him to B. & Co., on which the note was given up: the commission against them was superseded, and another commission issued, under which the defendants were re-appointed assignees. Four months after A. had made the payment to them, he became bankrupt on a secret act of bankruptcy previously committed by him:—Held, in an action for money had and received, brought by his assignees against the defendants in their own right, between the superseding the first commission and issuing the second, that they are not entitled to recover the payment made to the latter by A., it being protected by the 46 Geo. 3, c. 135, s. 1, as the subsequent commission re-vested those rights in the defendants, which they believed to exist when the payment was made: and as such payment, if made to B. & Co., could not have been disturbed, if they had remained solvent. Davenport v. Carter, 5 Moore, 16; 2 B. & B. 317.

An action of trover cannot be maintained by the assignees of a bankrupt, to recover bills of exchange from the holder, who drew them with a knowledge of the bankrupt's insolvency, and, after compelling such bankrupt to sign, induced his creditors, who were not aware of the circumstances, to accept them. Walker v. Laing, 1 Moore, 281; 7 Taunt. 568.

Where a person, previous to his bankruptcy, deposited a bill with defendant for the purpose of raising money thereon, and an advance was accordingly made:—Held, that the assignees of such bankrupt were entitled to recover the bill in an action of trover, on having tendered the money advanced, although a balance remained due from the bankrupt to the defendant, on a general account; and that this, therefore, was not a case of mutual trust or credit, within the statute 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 28. Key v. Flint, 1 Moore, 451; 8 Taunt. 21.

Where A., shortly before his bankruptcy, was applied to by B., to whom he owed 47*l.*, for payment, and A. gave him a bill for the purpose of getting it discounted, and, after paying his own debt, to pay over the surplus to A., who, before the bill was discounted, became bankrupt:—Held, that B. could not retain the bill in an action of trover against the assignees of A. Humphries v. Wilson, 2 Stark. 566—Dallas.

Where assignees have recovered a sum of money from the bankrupt's banker, received by him, and paid over to a creditor of the bankrupt, with knowledge of the bankruptcy, they cannot recover the same sum from the creditor, though he received it after notice of the bankruptcy. Vernon v. Hanson, 2 T. R. 287.

A., an agent, held funds belonging to B. his principal, but had accepted bills drawn by B., to the full amount of them. B. paid away the bills to his creditors, who, to relieve A. from liability, and without the knowledge of B., accepted from A. a composition of 10*s.* in the pound, and gave him up the bills; A. then holding funds belonging to B. to the full amount of the bills. B. afterwards became bankrupt, and his assignees brought assumpsit for money had and received against A. for the difference between the amount of the bills and the composition:—Held, that as B. had been benefited to the full amount of the bills, the payment of the composition was, as between him and A., a full payment of the bills, and therefore, that the action was not maintainable. Stonehouse v. Read, 5 D. & R. 603; 3 B. & C. 669.

The defendant, having, for securing a debt, taken an indorsement of the bills of lading of certain cargoes, which was void, because made after an act of bankruptcy committed by the indorser, effected for his own account an insurance on the cargoes; and a loss happening, he recovered against the underwriters on a count averring interest in the assignees of the indorser, then a bankrupt:—Held, that the assignees could not recover over this money, as had and received by the defendant for their use. Grant v. Hill, 4 Taunt. 380.

A. desires leave to place certain long bills in B.'s hands, and to be allowed permission to draw, without renewal, bills of shorter dates, and desires B. to calculate the sum to be drawn for, allowing commission; and the long bills indorsed by A. are inclosed to B. in the same letter. B. answers, that, agreeable to A.'s wishes, he had discounted the bills, and then specifies the amount to be drawn for. This transaction is not an exchange or sale of bills upon discount, but a deposit of the long bills; on condition of being allowed to draw shorter bills, and B. having accepted A.'s bills, and such acceptances being dishonoured in consequence of B.'s bankruptcy, and the long bills having remained in specie in B.'s hands at the time of his bankruptcy, and B.'s assignees having afterwards received the value of them, A. may recover the amount of them as money had and received to his use. Parke v. Eliason, 1 East, 544.

A person having three bills of exchange, applied to a country banker, with whom he had no previous dealings, to give for them a bill on London of the same amount, and the bill given by the banker was afterwards dishonoured:—Held, that this was a complete exchange of securities, and that trover would not lie for the three bills of exchange:—Held also, that if the exchange had not been complete, still that the banker having become a bankrupt, and the three bills having come to the possession of his assignees, must be considered as goods and chattels in the order and disposition of the bankrupt at the time of his bankruptcy, within the statute of James. Hornblower v. Proud, 2 B. & A. 327.

If a trader, on receiving bills from one of his creditors abroad, to whom he is indebted beyond the amount of them, after becoming insolvent, but before committing an act of bankruptcy, delivers these bills with the consent of his other creditors, to an agent of the person who had remitted them, for the use of the latter if he should be ultimately entitled to them; this is a legal and valid transaction: and if a commission afterwards issues against the trader, his assignees cannot maintain an action against the trustee to recover the produce of the bills. Graffe v. Greffulhe, 1 Camp. 89—Ellenborough.

Where a trader, indebted to the defendants, after a secret act of bankruptcy, gives them a new bill in lieu of their former claim, and deposits with them certain policies of insurance made on his account as collateral security; and after notice of a loss upon these policies the policy-broker, at the bankrupt's request, gives his own acceptance to the defendants, which was afterwards paid in order to induce them to give up their lien on the policies; after which a commission having issued against the trader on the prior act of bankruptcy:—Held, that the assignees could not recover from the defendants the amount of the broker's acceptance paid to them, which was the money of the broker, and not of the bankrupt; though the broker in settling his account with the assignees, retained the amount of the money so paid by him to the defendants, in order to get the policies out of their hands. Hovil v. Pack, 7 East, 164; 3 Smith, 164.

A. sold goods to B., for which the latter was to pay by a bill at three months; B. gave A. a check on his bankers, (who were also the bankers of A.), requiring them to pay A. on demand, in a bill at three months; A. paid the check into the bankers, and took no bill from them; but the amount was transferred in the banker's books from B.'s account to A.'s, with the knowledge of both; the bankers failed before the check became due; and it was held, that A. could not recover the value of the goods against B. Belton v. Richard, 6 T. R. 139; 1 Esp. 106.

A trader in contemplation of bankruptcy, and without solicitation, put three checks in the hands of his clerk, to be delivered to a creditor at the counting-house of the latter; but, before they were delivered, the creditor called upon the trader, and demanded payment of his debt:—Held, that the intention to give a voluntary preference not having been consummated, this was a valid payment. Bayley v. Ballard, 1 Camp. 416—Ellenb.

A factor gave his acceptance to his principal, for the amount of goods sold on account, after a secret act of bankruptcy of the principal, but without notice to the factor; and, after having received notice, paid the acceptance to the holder:—Held, that it was a protected payment by stat. 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 14. Wilkins v. Casey, 7 T. R. 711.

A banker is not justified in paying the drafts of a person, who has placed money in his hands, after he has notice of an act of bankruptcy committed by him. Vernon v. Hankey, 2 T. R. 113.

A trader having securities in his banker's hands, to a certain amount, after a secret act of bankruptcy, drew on them a bill for a larger amount, on the score of his accommodation, payable to his own order, which, after acceptance, he indorsed to the plaintiff, who knew of his partial insolvency, but not of his bankruptcy:—Held, that the plaintiff could only recover against the acceptors the amount of the sum accepted for the accommodation of the bankrupt, over and above the amount of the securities in their hands. Willis v. Freeman, 12 East, 656.

6. Delivery of Goods as Security.

A creditor, knowing his debtor to be in distressed circumstances, and not able to pay his debt, applied to him, in the first instance, about two months before his bankruptcy for a security, and took part of his stock in trade for that purpose: this is not an undue preference, though the creditor did not threaten to sue him in case of a refusal. Smith v. Payne, 6 T. R. 152.

So, if the debtor give goods out of his shop in part payment of a bond, not then due, and shortly afterwards become bankrupt, the mere circumstance of the bond not being due will not alone vitiate the part payment. Hartshorn v. Slodden, 2 B. & P. 582; 4 Esp. 60.

Where the act of delivering goods by a trader, to secure the defendant, who was under acceptances for him, payable at a future day, was clearly not voluntary on the trader's part, but made in consequence of the urgency of the defendant, (evidenced by the proposal for giving such security originating with him), it is immaterial to consider whether the trader had his bankruptcy in contemplation at the time: nor will the transaction, being bona fide, and not colourable, be impeached by the secrecy with which the delivery was made by the trader, in order to save his own credit in the view of the world. Cresby v. Crouch, 11 East, 256; 2 Camp. 166.

Where a trader, being pressed by a creditor for payment or security, one or other of which he said he would have, gave a bill of sale of certain wools and cloths in a mill, apparently the whole of his stock, and immediately left his business and home, and became a bankrupt; this, inasmuch as the act done did not redeem the trader, even from any present difficulty, which is the ordinary motive for such an act, when really done under the pressure of a threat, is evidence that it was not done under such pressure, but voluntarily, and with a view to prefer the particular creditor, in contemplation of bankruptcy; and is therefore void against the other creditors of the bankrupt. Thornton v. Hargreaves, 7 East, 544.

A bond assigned as security for money paid to the use of a person who had committed a secret act of bankruptcy, cannot be retained against the assignees. Hammersley v. Purling, 3 Ves. jun. 757.

In trover for a bill delivered as a fraudulent preference, non-delivery of the bill upon demand, after it is due and payment has been made, is not a conversion. Jones v. Fort, 9 B. & C. 764.

The delivery of goods upon a threat of arrest is not a payment within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 82. Smith v. Moon, M. & M. 458—Tindal.

A trader may make a transfer of his goods, on the eve of bankruptcy, to a creditor who compels him so to do by any threat; but a voluntary and fraudulent preference is an act moving from the trader, whereby he elects to favour a particular creditor. Reed v. Ayton, Holt, 503—Wood.

If a bankrupt, on the eve of his bankruptcy, fraudulently deliver goods to one of his creditors, the assignees may disaffirm the contract, and recover the value of the goods in trover; but if they bring assumpsit they affirm the contract, and then the creditor may set off his debt. Smith v. Hodson, 4 T. R. 211.

Whether a trader in embarrassed circumstances, who delivers goods to a creditor in discharge of his debt, does it in contemplation of bankruptcy, is a question of fact for the jury. Fidgeon v. Sharpe, 5 Taunt. 359; 1 Rose, 153.

A transfer of goods in a warehouse by a bankrupt to A. & Co., by mistake for A. & Son, more than two months before the issuing of the commission, but corrected within two months, vests the property of the goods in A. & Son from the time of the first transfer, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 81. Peckham v. Lashmoor, M. & M. 251—Tenterden.

If A. have a lien on goods of a bankrupt in his hands, and B. without knowledge of any act of bankruptcy pay A. the sum for which he has a lien, and advance a further sum to the bankrupt upon those goods which are delivered to him, trover will not lie by the assignees: he has the same lien as A. But if the value of the goods be more than the whole sum advanced, the assignees may maintain an action for money had and received for the residue. Dixon v. Purse, Peake's Add. Cas. 187—Kenyon.

A merchant pledges for value the bills of lading of an expected cargo, his property, in the profits of which his agents abroad were interested in a certain proportion. His agents, without the knowledge of the owner or the pawnees, dispose of part of the cargo abroad, after which the owner becomes a bankrupt: he induces the agents to replace the goods disposed of by others, of which the agents give him bills of lading, and he sends them to the pawnees, to make good their security:

—Held, that his assignees might recover the substituted goods from the pawnees. Meyer v. Sharpe, 5 Taunt. 74.

An assignment of goods at sea as a collateral security for a debt, and a subsequent indorsement of a bill of lading, are good as against the assignees of the assignor, who committed an act of bankruptcy between the assignment of the goods and the indorsement of the bill of lading. Lempriere v. Pasley, 2 T. R. 485.

Where R., a tradesman, being arrested at the suit of the defendant upon a ca. sa., placed goods in the hands of the sheriff's officer to raise money upon them, who accordingly pledged them, and five weeks afterwards paid over the amount to the defendant:—Held, that the assignees of R., who had committed an act of bankruptcy, before the arrest, might recover the money paid to the defendant in an action for money had and received, although the defendant was not privy to the taking of the goods by the sheriff's officer, and although the money paid to the defendant was not the identical money raised by the pledge. Allanson v. Atkinson, 1 M. & S. 583; 2 Rose, 134.

7. Sale of Goods.

Where a trader on the eve of bankruptcy makes a collusive sale of his goods to A., the assignees cannot maintain trover for them, without proving a demand and refusal. Nixon v. Jenkins, 2 H. Black. 135.

If one buy goods of a bankrupt under such circumstances as will entitle his assignees to maintain trover for them, such buying is in itself a conversion, and the assignees need not adduce evidence of a demand and refusal. Yates v. Carnesew, 3 C. & P. 99—Tenterden.

A fraudulent sale of goods by a bankrupt to a creditor, in order to keep up his sinking credit, to prefer this one and cheat the others, is void. Martin v. Peutress, 4 Burr. 2477.

A sale two months before the date of the commission, though after an act of bankruptcy, is to be considered as if there had been no prior act of bankruptcy. Southwood v. Taylor, 1 B. & A. 471.

An assignment of all, except a trifle, of a man's stock in trade, in favour of particular creditors just before an act of bankruptcy committed, is fraudulent and void. Compton v. Bedford, 1 W. Black. 362.

But a trader may lawfully assign part of his stock in favour of a particular creditor, the same day on which he afterwards commits an act of bankruptcy. Hooper v. Smith, 1 W. Black. 441.

A bill of sale made by a trader two days before he absconded, is a fraud on all the bankrupt laws, and void. Linton v. Bartlet, 1 Wils. 47.

Goods of a trader bona fide sold to and paid for by a customer, in the interval between a secret act of bankruptcy by the seller and the suing out of a commission, without the purchaser's knowledge of the bankruptcy, are not recoverable in trover by the assignees; as, under a commission issued against the seller, such payment was protected by the statute. 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, ss.

13 & 14. Cash v. Young, 3 D. & R. 652; 2 B. & C. 413. And see Coles v. Robins, 3 Camp. 183; 1 Rose, 225.

After a secret act of bankruptcy by P., defendant accepted a bill of exchange for him for 98*l*. at three months, which P. paid to a creditor standing by: later in the course of the same day, P. agreed to sell defendant four horses as security for 70*l*. of the 98*l*. The horses were subsequently delivered to the defendant, who paid the 98*l*. bill when it became due:—Held, that the transaction was not protected by the 82d sect. of 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, as it only amounted to a set off of the price of the horses against a by-gone debt, and was not a payment by the bankrupt within the meaning of the act; and the court directed a new trial. Carter v. Breton, 4 M. & P. 424; 6 Bing. 617.

A trader, after a secret act of bankruptcy, consigned goods to a factor, who agreed to advance money thereon, and accordingly accepted and paid bills drawn on him by the trader; a commission afterwards issued against the trader on such prior act of bankruptcy, after which the factor sold the goods and received the money:—Held, that he was answerable to the assignees for the value of the goods. Copland v. Stein, 8 T. R. 199.

A bona fide purchaser, for ready money, of goods sold, after an act of bankruptcy, without notice, is entitled to retain them under a commission which issues within two months, if the assignees do not repay the money. Hill v. Farnell, 9 B. & C. 45.

A. purchased of B., a hop merchant, a library, and paid him the value, B. at that time had committed an act of bankruptcy, of which A. had no knowledge:—Held, that the assignees could not recover the value of the books, without at least tendering the price, inasmuch as the payment made by A. was declared valid by 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 82; and, in order to give full effect to that enactment, A. must at least have a lien on the books in respect to which he had made the payment, until the assignees tendered him the sum paid. Id.

Where a bankrupt, after a secret act of bankruptcy, bought on credit, and sold for ready money at unusually low prices, the purchasers were held not protected by 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 82, unless the purchase was in the usual course of business. And if the purchaser knew the price to be greatly under the value of the commodity, it is not within the protection of the statute. Ward v. Clarke, M. & M. 497—Tenterden.

Where a bankrupt, before his bankruptcy having purchased goods on credit, has fraudulently resold them for ready money under their value, an action for goods sold and delivered cannot be maintained by his assignees against the purchaser, to recover the difference between the sum paid to the bankrupt and the value of the goods. Burra v. Clarke, 4 Camp. 355—Gibbs.

A., at the instigation of B., procures credit for goods to a large amount, which he sells to B. at very inadequate prices, in fraud of his creditors; the assignees of A., after his bankruptcy, cannot recover the difference from B. Hogg v. Mitchell, 1 Stark. 241—Ellenborough.

Upon the question under stat. 46 Geo. 3, c. 135, (repealed by stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16), whether a party dealing with a trader knew him to be insolvent, the jury may infer such knowledge from the fact of the party buying goods of the trader to a great extent, for a period of near two years, at prices more than 30 per cent. under prime cost. Yates v. Carnesew, 3 C. & P. 99—Tenterden.

A. became bound as a surety for B., who, in order to indemnify him, agreed that he should retain out of any money which should be due from him to B., in respect of any dealings between them in trade, so much as he should pay on the bond; B. afterwards sold goods to A. of a less value than the money secured by the bond, and then became a bankrupt, and A. was obliged to satisfy the bond:—Held, that the assignees of A. could not recover in an action for goods sold and delivered, there being nothing due to the bankrupt's estate on the original contract. Dobson v. Lockhart, 5 T. R. 133.

Assignees may maintain trover against one who has purchased goods from the bankrupt in the usual course of his trade, after a secret act of bankruptcy, although the goods were purchased on sale and return, and although the assignees afterwards demanded payment from the defendant as upon the sale of the goods. Hart v. Gwynnap, 2 Stark. 306—Ellenborough. Rule for a new trial refused.

A. sold goods to B., to be paid for by a bill at two months, and not being able to obtain it from B., and doubting his solvency, A. employed his broker to re-purchase them in his own name, which was done, although at a great loss. B. afterwards became a bankrupt, without knowing that the goods had been re-purchased by the broker on the account of A. In an action of trover brought by the assignees of B. against A. for the goods:—Held, that they were not entitled to recover, as the transaction was not fraudulent on the part of A. Harris v. Lanell, 4 Moore, 10.

A trader in prison employed an auctioneer to sell goods, who sent him the proceeds by the hands of the defendant; the trader became bankrupt by lying two months in prison:—Held, that his assignees could not recover from the defendant, who was a mere bearer, the money he had so received and paid over. Coles v. Wright, 4 Taunt. 198; 2 Rose, 110. And see Tape v. Hickin, 7 B. & C. 101; 9 D. & R. 881.

8. Gifts of Money.

(a) To Children.

Money given by a father, who is a trader, to his son, to advance him in a partnership trading concern, was not within 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 5, and could not be recovered from the son by the assignees of the father, who afterwards became bankrupt. Kensington v. Chantler, 2 M. & S. 36.

A father, at the request of his son, executed a mortgage to secure a debt due from the son to the mortgagee:—Held, that the mortgage was not a voluntary conveyance, without consideration, within 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 5. Ex parte Hovey, Buck, 165.

A bond given by a father by way of settlement, previous to a resolemnization here of a valid marriage in Scotland, cannot be sustained against creditors under his commission. Ex parte Hall, 1 Rose, 30.

A mere gift of money by the bankrupt to his son was not within the statute 1 Jac. 1, c. 15. Ex parte Shorland, 7 Ves. jun. 88.

(b) Other Gifts.

A fraudulent gift of money, in contemplation of insolvency, may be avoided by the assignees. Abell v. Daniell, M. & M. 370—Tenterden.

Where a bankrupt, in the habit of supplying his son with money to pay his bills, gave him 200*l.* just before he stopped payment, being at the time insolvent, but not expecting to become a bankrupt:—Held, that the question for the jury, in an action by his assignees against the son to recover that money, is, whether it was given in the ordinary course of maintaining the son, or as a fraudulent preference of the son over the creditors, made in contemplation of insolvency. Such gift of money is not within the meaning of the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 83. Id.

A voluntary settlement in favour of strangers, by one not indebted at the time, nor meaning a fraud, is good against the subsequent creditors. Holloway v. Millard, 1 Madd. 414.

9. Payments by or on account of Bankrupts.

(a) Under Legal Compulsion.

Arrest.—A payment under an arrest was held to be protected by the stat. 19 Geo. 2, c. 32, as a payment in the ordinary course of trade. Teale v. Younge, M'Clel. & Y. 497; S. P. Cox v. Morgan, 2 B. & P. 398.

Even where the payment was made a few days after the arrest, if in consequence thereof. Holmes v. Wennington, 2 B. & P. 399, n. And see 7 East, 138; Harwood v. Lomas, 11 East, 127; and Allanson v. Atkinson, 1 M. & S. 583; 2 Rose, 134.

A., after committing an act of bankruptcy, in order to procure his discharge from arrest at the suit of B., draws and indorses to B. a bill of exchange, which C. accepts, in expectation of receiving goods of A.'s into his hands; C. receives the goods, sells them, and pays the amount of the bill to B.; the assignees of A. cannot maintain an action against B. for this money as money had and received to their use. Waller v. Drakeford, 1 Stark. 481—Ellenborough. Rule for a new trial refused.

A creditor of the bankrupt who had sued out a writ against him, and without proceeding upon it, afterwards received from him a bill in part payment of his debt, after being apprized that there had been a meeting of his creditors, and that the bankrupt's affairs, at that time, were only capable of paying the demands of his creditors by instalments, although he was assured by the bankrupt's agent that they would come round, was held liable to refund the proceeds of such bill to the assignees, as a payment not in the usual course of trade, and after notice of his insolvency. Bayly v. Schofield, 1 M. & S. 338; 2 Rose, 100.

A trader, subsequently to an act of bankruptcy, being arrested and detained in prison, at the suit of several creditors, sent for all his creditors but one, and paid their debts in full; but no other circumstance occurred from which it could be presumed that they knew of his bankruptcy or insolvency:—Held, that such payments were not protected by the 19 Geo. 2, c. 32. Southey v. Butler, 3 B. & P. 237.

A., being a bankrupt, continues in possession of his estate, and grants an annuity out of certain premises to B. The tenant in possession pays the rent to B., in order to prevent a distress. The assignees cannot maintain an action for money had and received against B. Darnton v. Pigman, Peake's Add. Cas. 111—Kenyon.

Threat of Arrest.—Although voluntary payments are not protected, yet payments enforced by coercion of law are valid against the assignees, in case any commission be afterwards taken out. Foster v. Allanson, 2 T. R. 479.

If a bankrupt gives a preference to a creditor under the apprehension of legal process, however groundless, such preference is binding. Thompson v. Freeman, 1 T. R. 155.

Where a party made a payment to defendant on the eve of bankruptcy, and after a threat by defendant to arrest him:—Held, that, notwithstanding such a threat, the motives and state of mind of the bankrupt at the time of payment may properly be left to the jury, upon a question whether the payment was voluntary or compulsory. Cook v. Rogers, 7 Bing. 438; 5 M. & P. 353.

Where a bankrupt made a payment to defendant on the eve of bankruptcy, as he said, and as circumstances indicated, to benefit defendant:—Held, that the assignee might recover the amount from the defendant, notwithstanding the defendant, adduced evidence to shew that he had pressed for payment, and had threatened to arrest the bankrupt. Id.

A payment in the course of trade, if without notice of the act of bankruptcy, is good, though under process. Ex parte Farr, 9 Ves. jun. 515.

Money paid to a landlord by a bankrupt tenant to avoid a threatened distress, is a protected payment. Stevenson v. Wood, 5 Esp. 200—Ellenb.

A bankrupt proposed, after an act of bankruptcy, to dispose of a beneficial lease; but the purchaser refused to take it unless five quarters' rent in arrear to the landlord were first paid. After a negotiation between the bankrupt and the landlord, who knew the situation of the former, the rent was paid out of the money which the purchaser had agreed to give for the lease, there being at the time of the transaction no distress on the premises, but the landlord having a right of re-entry:—Held, that the assignee of the bankrupt could not recover from the landlord the rent so paid him. Messer v. Cresme, 8 Moore, 171; 2 Bing. 261.

Criminal Process.]—A transfer on the eve of bankruptcy, for fear of criminal process, is valid. Ex parte De Tastet, 1 Mont. 154.

A transfer of property made on the eve of bankruptcy, but under the apprehension that a degree of force, civil or criminal, is about to be applied, is valid. Id.

A transfer by one of two partners on the eve of bankruptcy, under circumstances which overcome the free will of the party, such as the apprehension of a prosecution for forgery, is valid. De Tastet v. Carroll, 2 Rose, 462; 1 Stark. 88. Rule for a new trial refused.

Where a draft for money was intrusted to a broker to buy exchequer bills for his principal, and the broker received the money, and misapplied it by purchasing American stock and bullion, intending to abscond with it and go to America, and did accordingly abscond, but was taken before he quitted England, and thereupon surrendered to the principal the securities for the American stock and the bullion, who sold the whole and received the proceeds:—Held, that the principal was entitled to withhold the proceeds from the assignees of the broker, who became bankrupt on the day on which he so received and misapplied the money. Taylor v. Plumer, 2 Rose, 415; 3 M. & S. 562.

(b) Claim of Lien.

Where a master and part owner of a vessel consigned her to the defendants, who were shipbrokers, on the usual terms of commission, on which the ship's papers were handed over to them, and they made disbursements on his account; and he was afterwards arrested, and lay in prison more than two months, on which a commission was issued against him, and the plaintiffs were appointed his assignees; and whilst he was in prison, the defendants adjusted their account with him, and received the balance due to them, on account of their disbursements, and at the same time delivered to him the ship's papers:—Held, in an action brought by the assignees for the recovery of such balance, that they were not entitled to recover, as the defendants had a lien on the papers until their account was adjusted and paid; and that neither the bankrupt nor his assignees could have disposed of the vessel before the papers were given up. Thompson v. Beatson, 7 Moore, 548; 1 Bing. 145.

Money paid by a trader, after a secret act of bankruptcy, to a carrier, for the carriage of goods, is not protected, and may be recovered back in assumpsit by his assignees. Bradley v. Clark, 5 T. R. 197.

(c) Payments by Bills.

The stat. 19 Geo. 2, c. 32, only protected payments of bills of exchange after secret acts of bankruptcy, where the bankrupt was liable on the bills to the party receiving the money. Holroyd v. Whitehead, 2 Rose, 145; 3 Camp. 530; 1 Marsh. 128; 5 Taunt. 440.

Therefore, where A. accepted a bill payable at his banker's, to a larger amount than his effects in their hands, which was there paid: afterwards, having committed an act of bankruptcy, he repaid them the balance:—Held, that this was a payment in fraud of the bankrupt laws, and not protected. Id.

Assignees cannot recover the amount of a check paid by the bankrupt's bankers after the bankruptcy, in trover for the check, against the creditor to whom the check was delivered, and the money paid. Mathew v. Sherwell, 1 Rose, 118.

A., shortly before his bankruptcy, draws a bill, and having procured it to be discounted, gave B., a creditor, an order to receive the amount, which he directs C., who discounts the bill, to transmit to B.; whilst the money was in the hands of the carrier, A. commits an act of bankruptcy; B., who afterwards receives the money, is liable to A.'s assignees. Henry v. Liddeard, 2 Rose, 463.

A. having recovered a verdict against B., B. committed an act of bankruptcy; afterwards A., having had no notice of the bankruptcy, gave time to B., and instead of entering up judgment, and suing out execution, took a bill drawn by B. on C., at a distant period, for the amount of the sum recovered:—Held, that this was not a protected payment; and that A. was liable to refund the money received for the bill to the assignees of B. Pinkerton v. Marshall, 2 H. Black. 334.

A. in London agrees to consign goods to B. & Co. at Hamburg, on a commission del credere, to receive the proceeds through the hands of C., their partner in London, who is to make advances to A., and repay himself out of the proceeds. B. & Co. purchase bills at Hamburg, drawn on D. in London, indorsed to themselves, and which they indorse and remit to C. as part of the proceeds, advising A. thereof, and desiring him to give them credit for them when duly honoured; the bills are accepted by D., but never indorsed over to A., and before they become due, D. stops payment:—Held, that the jury were justified in considering that the bills were sent on the account and at the risk not of A. but of C.; and therefore, A. having become bankrupt, that his assignees were entitled to recover the balance of the proceeds from C. Lucas v. Groning, 2 Marsh. 460; 7 Taunt. 164; 1 Stark. 391.

A. agreed to consign goods to B. & Co. abroad, to be there sold on commission on his account; on which the defendant guaranteed that B. & Co. should sell them to the best advantage, and render a just account of sales. Before any consignments were made, C. had ceased to be a partner with B., and the defendant became one in his stead, under the firm of B. & Co. A. afterwards consigned goods to B. & Co., who remitted the proceeds thereof to the defendant, for the purpose of being handed over to A., who in consequence drew bills on the defendant, which he by letter agreed to accept, depending on A.'s promise to provide for them, if remittances should not arrive from B. & Co. to meet them. A. became bankrupt, previous to which B. & Co. had remitted to the defendant, directing him to pay A. on account of the goods consigned by him, which remittances were not received by the defendant till after the bankruptcy. B. & Co. afterwards sent other remittances, with similar directions, with which the defendant credited the bankrupt in his account, and debited him for the acceptances given by him before the bankruptcy, but which were paid afterwards. In an action by the assignee, to recover those subsequent payments:—Held, that he was not entitled to recover, as there was a specific appropriation of the proceeds to provide for the defendant's acceptances before the bankruptcy. Thomas v. De Cesta, 2 Moore, 386.

Where S. obtained bills from the defendant, upon a fraudulent representation, that a security given by him to the defendant (which was void) was an ample security; and on the next day, having resolved to stop payment, informed the defendant that he had repented of what he had done, and had sent express to stop the bills, and would return them, and three days afterwards committed an act of bankruptcy, after which he returned to the defendant all the bills (except one, which had been discounted), and also two bank-notes, part of the proceeds of such discount, and the defendant delivered back the security, and afterwards a commission of bankruptcy issued against S.; the assignees under which commission brought trover against the defendant for the bills and bank-notes:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to retain them. Gladstone v. Hudson, 1 M. & S. 517; 2 Rose, 131.

A general agreement between a bankrupt and the defendants, before the bankruptcy, that the latter should accept bills, to enable the former, by his agent abroad, to purchase cargoes and transmit them to the defendants, who were to pay their acceptances out of the proceeds, and place the surplus to the account of the bankrupt, constitutes no defence to an action of trover brought by the assignees for the recovery of certain proceeds received by the defendants after the bankruptcy, in payment of their claim on the bankrupt. Carter v. Barclay, 3 Stark. 43—Abbott.

And where in such action an account stated between him and the defendants was produced, from which it appeared that certain proceeds, constituting part of the account, had got into the possession of the defendants subsequently to the bankruptcy:—Held, that such account was sufficient to throw upon them the onus of proving their right to retain such proceeds, although a large debt upon the balance was due to them. Id.

If the payment of a bill be made after an act of bankruptcy, the burden of shewing that it is a bona fide payment is cast upon the receiver. Bagwell v. Andrews, 7 Bing. 217; 4 M. & P. 839.

A trader, in a state of insolvency, and concealing himself from his general creditors, after a secret act of bankruptcy, in part payment of a debt delivered a bill to a creditor who was acquainted with his place of retreat, and with whom he was in friendly communication:—Held, that this was not a payment protected by the 82d section. Id.

(d) Other Payments.

If country bankers in embarrassment, and after they have stopped payment, deliver to their London banker, upon the faith that assistance will be given by him, bills and notes of such an amount that if assistance is not given, the bank must fail, and such assistance is not given, it is a preference, although, at the time, there is not any contemplation of an act of bankruptcy. Simpson v. Sykes, 6 M. & S. 295.

A payment by a trader after he has committed an act of bankruptcy, and when he contemplated the probability of bankruptcy, is not a preference, if made to enable him to stand his ground. Vacher v. Cocks, 1 B. & Adol. 145; M. & M. 353.

An army agent was in the habit of advancing money to his customers on their pay and pensions, by checks on his bankers. Having overdrawn his banking account, he received a new credit from the bankers, and engaged in return to pay over to them, on receipt, the sums which usually came to his hands half-yearly from Government for the discharge of pensions. The agreement was not known to the persons who issued these funds. He committed an act of bankruptcy unknown to the bankers; and having subsequently received some Government remittances, paid them over according to the above arrangement, being indebted to the bankers in more than the amount. Quære, whether such payments were justifiable, or a fraudulent preference?—Admitted, that if the sums were put into the bank merely to enable the bankrupt to go on in business for a time, these were not payments in fraud of creditors. Id.

In an action to recover money paid by a bankrupt in contemplation of bankruptcy, on the ground of fraudulent preference, the declarations of the bankrupt as to the state of his affairs, made about the time of the transaction, but unconnected with it, are receivable in evidence. So, also, are letters received by him, refusing to advance him money, for the purpose of shewing the fact of such refusal, but not as evidence of other facts stated in them. Id.

If A. advance money to B., an insolvent trader, for the purpose of enabling him to execute an order for goods, upon the terms of being repaid out of the price of the goods, a payment made by B. to A. out of the price when received, is not a fraudulent preference. Hunt v. Mortimer, 5 M. & R. 12; 10 B. & C. 44.

In contemplation of a dissolution of partnership between A. & B., a warrant of attorney is given by C. to A., to secure a debt owing from C. to A. & B. Before the partnership is actually dissolved, C. commits an act of bankruptcy. A sum paid by C. to A., after the dissolution of partnership, on account of the debt, and a further sum levied under an execution against C.'s goods, is money received by both A. and B. to the use of the assignees of C. Biggs v. Fellows, 2 M. & R. 450; 8 B. & C. 402.

A., whilst he is solvent, and resident at Calcutta, directs B., at Bombay, to remit certain proceeds to C., in England, who is in the habit of accepting certain bills for A. This order is executed by B., without fraud; but after an act of bankruptcy committed by A., C. has a lien on the sum received for his balance. Jamieson v. Hodson, 2 Rose, 467.

Money paid into court, under the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, s. 2, is not a payment to a creditor within the protection of the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 82. Ferrall v. Alexander, 1 Dowl. P.C. 132.

If paid in after an act of bankruptcy, and less than two months before a commission issued, it is not within the protection of 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 81. Id.

Payment by weekly instalments, in discharge of a debt for goods sold to the bankrupt, was not a payment "in the usual and ordinary course of trade and dealing," so as to be protected by the 19 Geo. 2, c. 32, s. 1. Bolton v. Jager, R. & M. 265—Abbott.

A., being a trader, before any act of bankruptcy, directed his broker who had authority to distrain for rents due to him, to pay a certain sum to B. in satisfaction of a debt, and the broker bona fide agreed with B. to pay him as soon as he received the rents, and after this A. became bankrupt:—Held, that the assignees of A. could not recover this sum from the broker, though he did not in fact pay it over to B. till after the commission issued. Bedford v. Perkins, 3 C. & P. 90—Tenterden.

10. Payments to Bankrupts.

Payment of bills to support the credit of a declining trader, without notice of any act of bankruptcy, is not fraudulent. Foxcroft v. Devonshire, 2 Burr. 931; 1 W. Black. 193.

If a person intrusted with value trusts his creditor with that which may become productive of value, the first becoming bankrupt, the second may retain his debt out of the proceeds of the thing intrusted to him, and only pay the balance. Olive v. Smith, 5 Taunt. 56.

A bill given in payment to a person who becomes bankrupt, is a good payment, although the bill does not become payable till after the bankruptcy, if the party giving it did not know of the insolvency of the bankrupt at the time. Bennett v. Spackman, 1 C. & P. 274—Best.

A factor gave his acceptance to his principal for the amount of goods sold on account, after a secret act of bankruptcy of the principal, but without notice to the factor; and after notice of the bankruptcy, the factor paid his acceptance to the holder of the bill:—Held, that the payment was protected by 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 14. Wilkins v. Casey, 7 T. R. 711.

Bankers having accepted bills for the accommodation of a trader, he, after committing an act of bankruptcy, but before a commission was sued out, lodged money with them to take up the bills, which did not become due till after a commission was sued out, and were then regularly paid by the acceptors:—Held, that they were bound to refund this money to the assignees, and that they neither had a right of set-off under 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, nor could protect themselves under 19 Geo. 2, c. 32, as having received the money in payment of bills of exchange in the ordinary course of trade. Tamplin v. Diggins, 2 Camp. 312—Ellenborough.

B., a manufacturer in Staffordshire, makes goods to the order of A., a merchant in London, and forwards them thither, having previously committed an act of bankruptcy. Before the shipment, but after the act of bankruptcy, B. draws upon A. a bill exceeding in amount the price of the goods, which A., being ignorant of the act of bankruptcy, accepts. The goods having got into the possession of A., and B. being declared a bankrupt:—Held, that the property in the goods never passed to A.; that his acceptance of the bill was not a payment "by a debtor of the bankrupt," within the meaning of the 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 14; and consequently that the assignees of B. might maintain trover against him for the goods. Bishop v. Crawshaw, 5 D. & R. 279; 3 B. & C. 415.

If A. fraudulently procure a bill from B., and afterwards become a bankrupt, and his assignees receive the money for the bill, B. may recover it from them in an action for money had and received. Harrison v. Walker, Peake, 111—Kea.

Two several banking firms, carrying on business respectively in the same country town, were in the habit of exchanging notes and securities with each other, and settling their balances by a prescribed mode. One of the firms became bankrupt, and, at the time of the act of bankruptcy, each firm had in their possession notes and securities of the other to nearly the same amount. The provisional assignee of the bankrupt firm being apprized of this fact, presented and obtained payment of the notes of the solvent firm, partly at their bank, and partly at the house of their agents in London, who did not know the situation in which the parties stood:—Held, that the solvent firm might recover the amount of the notes from the provisional assignee, in an action for money had and received. Edmonds v. Newman, 2 D. & R. 568; 1 B. & C. 418.

11. Partnership Transactions.

A payment by a partner, who has committed an act of bankruptcy, of a partnership debt due before the bankruptcy, to a creditor who has notice of the act of bankruptcy, is not protected by 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 82. Craven v. Edmondson, 6 Bing. 734; 4 M. & P. 623.

Where two partners have stopped payment, and a commission of bankruptcy is taken out against one of them, a debtor to the firm, who knows of the stoppage, cannot refuse to pay money due to them, on the ground that the other may have committed an act of bankruptcy; in which case his assignees might call upon the debtor to pay a moiety of the money a second time. Prickett v. Deon, 3 Camp. 131; 1 Ross 294—Ellenborough.

A., B., C. and D. were partners in a banking-house at Liverpool, and C. and D. also carried on a separate mercantile concern in London; J. & having accepted bills payable at the house of C. and D., employed A., B., C. and D. to get them paid accordingly, and agreed to deposit with them good bills, indorsed by him, for the purpose of enabling them so to do. A., B., C. & D. debited J. S. in account for his acceptances, and credited him for all the bills which he deposited; some of the bills so deposited by J. S. were remitted by A., B., C. & D., upon the general account between the two houses; and before any of the acceptances of J. S. became due, both houses failed, and J. S. was obliged to pay his own acceptances:—Held, that the assignees of C. & D. were entitled to retain against J. S. the bills remitted to them by A., B., C. & D.:—Held also, that it made no difference that one of the bills remitted did not arrive in London till after the bankruptcy of C. & D., though sent by A., B., C. & D. before that event. Bolton v. Fuller, 1 B. & P. 539.

What transaction of an absconding partner in favour of a partnership creditor will be fraudulent and void, and prevent such creditor's being entitled to any part of the partnership effects, see Hague v. Rolleston, 4 Burr. 2174.

After a secret act of bankruptcy committed by one of two co-partners, the other cannot, by an indorsement in the name of the firm, transfer negotiable securities which existed before the act of bankruptcy. Ramsbottom v. Lewis, 1 Camp. 279—Ellenborough.

Where two partners join in an assignment of any property as a security for a debt, one of whom only has at the time committed an act of bankruptcy, it is void as to a moiety only. Whitwell v. Thompson, 1 Esp. 72—Kenyon.

Where one of two partners, who were country bankers, became bankrupt, and the defendants, being holders of their notes, obtained payment of part of them from the London banker, at whose house they were payable, out of the funds in their hands belonging to the country bank, and the solvent partner, knowing of the bankruptcy, procured a debtor to the firm to give his bill in part satisfaction of his debt, and indorsed and delivered the same to the defendants, in payment of the residue of the notes in their hands, and afterwards became bankrupt, and no fraud was stated:—Held, that the assignees could not recover the money so paid to them by the London banker, nor the proceeds of the bill. Harvey v. Crickett, 5 M. & S. 336.

If one of two partners become bankrupt, the solvent partner may, for a valuable consideration and without fraud, dispose of the partnership effects; and if he afterwards fail, the assignees, under a joint commission against both, cannot maintain trover against the bona fide vendee of such partnership effects. Fox v. Hanbury, Cowp. 445.

Where one of two partners in trade had, after an act of bankruptcy, accepted a bill in the name of the firm, without the privity of his co-partner:—Held, that in the hands of an innocent indorsee it was an available security. Lacy v. Woolcott, 2 D. & R. 458.

Two of three partners affecting, but without authority, to bind the firm by deed, assigned a debt due to them from a correspondent abroad, without his privity, to a creditor at home, and afterwards, by direction of such correspondent, drew a bill in the name of the firm upon his agent here, which was accepted, payable to their own order for the amount of the debt; and then the two partners, having in the mean time committed acts of bankruptcy, indorsed such bill to the creditor of the firm in part satisfaction of his debt; and afterwards separate commissions were sued out against the two partners, who were declared bankrupts, and their effects assigned; the other partner being all the time abroad:—Held, that by such indorsement of the bill by the two, after acts of bankruptcy, nothing passed to the creditor; for the bankrupt partners had ceased to have any control over the joint stock, and therefore could not bind the property either of their assignees or of their solvent partner. Thomason v. Frere, 10 East, 418.

After an act of bankruptcy committed by one of two partners, joint effects are sent away, which come to the defendant's hands; then the solvent partner dies, leaving the defendant his executor; and afterwards a commission of bankruptcy is taken out against the surviving partner, and his estate assigned to the plaintiffs:—Held, that they are tenants in common with the solvent partner, and after his decease with his representatives, by relation of law from the act of bankruptcy, and cannot therefore maintain trover against the defendant claiming under such solvent partner. Smith v. Stokes, 1 East, 363.

A. & B. being partners in trade, A. committed an act of bankruptcy, a few days after which, B. also committed an act of bankruptcy; between these acts of bankruptcy, a clerk of the house paid to C., a creditor of the house, at his request, 558*l.*, and, after both acts of bankruptcy, 5*l.* more. The assignees, under a joint commission against A. & B., brought an action against C. to recover these sums of money, and declared, first, for money had and received for the use of A. & B. before they became bankrupts; second, for money had and received to their own use as assignees of A. & B.; and third, upon an account stated with them as such assignees:—Held, that under this declaration the assignees were only entitled to recover the 5*l.* paid after the bankruptcy of both partners. Smith v. Goddard, 3 B. & P. 465.

Semble, that if they had declared for money had and received to their use, as assignees of A., they might have recovered one moiety of the 558*l.* paid between the two acts of bankruptcy. Id.

After an act of bankruptcy committed by one partner, the other delivers goods of their joint property to a creditor for a joint debt, and dies; and afterwards a commission issued against the surviving partner:—Held, that the creditor, by virtue of such delivery by the solvent partner, became tenant in common of the goods with the assignees of the bankrupt, by relation from the act of bankruptcy, which was in the lifetime of the solvent partner, and consequently that the assignees could not maintain trover against such creditor. Smith v. Oriell, 1 East, 368.

Money paid by one partner to another, before the bankruptcy of the latter, for the purpose of being paid over as his liquidated share of a debt to their joint creditor, if it be not so applied, is provable as a debt under the commission of the bankrupt partner, although the solvent partner were not called upon to repay the debt to the joint creditor till after the bankruptcy of the other. But the solvent partner may recover from the bankrupt his share of such debt, so paid after the bankruptcy to the joint creditor, notwithstanding the bankrupt has obtained his certificate. Wright v. Hunter, 1 East, 20; 5 Ves. jun. 792.

A. engages as a partner in a particular transaction with B., C. & D., who were before partners; B., C. & D. become bankrupts; after which A. pays a debt due from himself and them to a joint creditor:—Held, that these three partners constituted but one debtor to A., and that he might recover from B. the proportion of B., C. & D. towards the joint debt, B. not having pleaded in abatement. Id.

12. Other Things.

A debtor being pressed to discharge a debt, gave to her creditor a draft on the executor of a debtor of hers, which draft the executor promised to discharge on receiving assets; this is a good equitable assignment of the debt, and available against the assignees of the debtor. Ex parte Alderson, 1 Madd. 53; 2 Rose, 447.

A trader having given an order on the executor of her debtor to pay the debt to a creditor, and the executor having received the order, and retained it until the assets of the testator should enable him to pay simple contract debts, and the trader having become bankrupt before payment, the creditor was declared entitled to receive the amount of the order from the executor, notwithstanding a subsequent arrest of the trader. Ex parte South, 3 Swanst. 392.

A release executed by the bankrupt after an act of bankruptcy, to a releasee who knows of the bankrupt's insolvency, is not valid, although executed more than two months before the suing out of the commission. Mabor v. Pyne, 3 Bing. 285; 11 Moore, 2; 2 C. & P. 91.

XIV. OPERATION OF EXECUTIONS.

1. Verdict and Judgment before Bankruptcy.

Where a verdict in trover was obtained in vacation against a person, who, after the first day of next term, but before final judgment was signed, became a bankrupt:—Held, that final judgment signed afterwards, but during the same term, related to the first day of term, and that therefore the damages were provable under the commission. Greenway v. Fisher, 7 B. & C. 436; 1 M. & R. 330.

And also that the certificate was a bar to a scire facias. Id.

A verdict is only prima facie evidence of a debt, which the creditors or the bankrupt are at liberty to impeach, and into the circumstances of which, if impeached, the commissioners are bound to inquire. Ex parte Butterfell, 1 Rose, 198.

2. Verdict before and Judgment after Bankruptcy.

A judgment for damages and costs in assumpsit, was a debt contracted within the meaning of the 46 Geo. 3, c. 135, s. 2, and provable, though final judgment was not entered up until after the commission issued. Ex parte Birch, 7 D. & R. 436; 4 B. & C. 880.

But if a defendant commit an act of bankruptcy between the time of a verdict in case for unliquidated damages, and final judgment, the damages are not a provable debt. Ex parte Charles, 14 East, 197; 16 Ves. jun. 256; S. P. Buss v. Gilbert, 2 M. & S. 70; 2 Rose, 157; Ex parte Todd, 3 Wils. 270.

Where the verdict is obtained before the act of bankruptcy, and final judgment signed afterwards, but before the issuing of a commission, the debt is provable. Robinson v. Vale, 4 D. & R. 430; 2 B. & C. 762.

A plaintiff recovered damages and costs against a defendant in an action of trespass, and signed final judgment on the 29th of January; on the 23d of that month defendant committed an act of bankruptcy, and a commission issued against him on the 31st of the same month, and on the 3d of May he obtained his certificate:—Held, that the damages and costs were a bona fide debt within the meaning of 46 Geo. 3, c. 135, s. 2, and provable under defendant's commission; and he having been arrested on a ca. sa. for the damages and costs, the court discharged him out of custody. Id.

Where, in an action for damages on a tort, a verdict has been taken, subject to the award of an arbitrator, and the defendant had become bankrupt between the verdict and the making of the award:—Held, that execution could not be sued out on the judgment, either for the damages or costs, because the plaintiff might have proved the damages recovered under the commission by the production of the record. Beeton v. White, 7 Price, 209.

The fi. fa. was set aside on the terms of the defendant's undertaking to bring no action against the sheriff. Id.

A creditor of the bankrupt, previous to the commission, obtained a verdict against him for a nominal sum, in an action for money had and received, subject to a reference. After the issuing of the commission, the award was made, and judgment entered up for the debt and costs awarded; the creditor having proved his debt, took the bankrupt in execution for the costs:—Ordered to discharge him. Ex parte Haynes, 1 Glyn & J. 107.

Where, upon an action on a contract, there was a verdict for the plaintiff, subject to a reference before the bankruptcy, by which it was directed that the costs of the action should abide the event of the award, and the award was made in favour of the plaintiff:—after the bankruptcy, the costs were held to be provable. Ex parte Helm, 1 Mont. & Mac. 70.

Where a cause and all matters in difference were referred at Nisi Prius to an arbitrator, and he found that a sum of money was due from the plaintiff to the defendant, and ordered that sum to be paid to the latter; and between the time of making the order of reference and taxing costs, and signing judgment, the plaintiff became bankrupt:—Held, that the amount of the taxed costs did not constitute a debt provable under the commission, and that the bankrupt was not discharged as to that debt by his certificate. Haswell v. Thorogood, 7 B. & C. 705.

Where, in an action upon a contract, the verdict is before, and the judgment after the bankruptcy, the costs are provable. Ex parte Poucher, 1 Glyn & J. 385.

But not where, in an action of case for words of the plaintiff in his trade, defendant became bankrupt between verdict and judgment. Longford v. Ellis, 1 H. Black. 29, n.

If a plaintiff become bankrupt after verdict found for the defendant, but before judgment signed, the costs are not a debt provable under the commission. Walker v. Barnes, 1 Marsh. 346; 5 Taunt. 778; 2 Rose, 279.

And execution for them may issue against him, notwithstanding his certificate. Id.

If an action be commenced against a bankrupt after the commission, for work done before the bankruptcy, and he afterwards obtain his certificate, he is discharged from the costs as well as the debt. Willett v. Pringle, 2 N. R. 190.

A bankrupt in custody in execution, who has not obtained his certificate until after a judgment, shall be discharged on motion. Graham v. Benton, 1 Wils. 41.

A creditor who obtains a verdict before commission against a bankrupt, is entitled to prove his costs, as well as his debt, under the commission, though judgment was not signed till after the commission issued. Aylett v. Harford, 2 W. Black. 1317.

So, though judgment be not obtained till after the certificate is allowed. Boutefleur v. Coates, Cowp. 25.

Where a debt exists before the bankruptcy, the interests and costs, even of a writ of error, accruing afterwards, are discharged, as well as the debt. Anon. 1 Chit. 16, (a): S. P. Blanford v. Foote, Cowp. 138.

A creditor was admitted to prove costs taxed after commission, on verdict obtained before. Ex parte Simpson, 3 Bro. C. C. 46.

3. Both Verdict and Judgment after Bankruptcy.

If the verdict, as well as the judgment, be after the bankruptcy, the costs are not provable, though it seems they are barred by the certificate. Ex parte Poucher, 1 Glyn & J. 385.

Where a debt arises before bankruptcy, but a verdict is obtained and costs taxed after, the costs are considered as part of the original debt, and the certificate extends to both, because provable. Lewis v. Piercy, 1 H. Black. 29.

Upon a verdict and judgment after bankruptcy, in an action previously brought, whether for an antecedent debt by contract, or mere damages in tort, the costs could not be proved as a debt under the commission. Ex parte Hill, 11 Ves. jun. 646; 2 N. R. 191. But see 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 58.

Money due upon a judgment for mesne profits was not within the 9th section, 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, where the verdict was after the bankruptcy. Moggeridge v. Davis, 1 Rose, 120; Wightw. 16.

If the damages be contingent and uncertain, they cannot be proved under a commission: therefore a right of action on a breach of covenant, not secured by a penalty, and where the damages to be recovered are uncertain, is not barred by the certificate of the defendant, who became a bankrupt after the covenant was broken. Banister v. Scott, 6 T. R. 489. And see Parker v. Norton, 6 T. R. 695.

Where a defendant became bankrupt between plea and verdict, in an action on a bail bond, and obtained his certificate after final judgment:—Held, that the debt should have been proved, and that the certificate was a discharge from both debt and costs. Dimsdale v. Eames, 4 Moore, 350; 2 B. & B. 8.

A., in 1808, accepted bills for B.'s accommodation; B. became bankrupt, having paid away the bills, and A. took them up without having received value. A. (the debt not being provable under the commission), brought an action against B., and recovered his principal, interest, and costs: he then sold his debt, and assigned the judgment. The assignee of the judgment was, under stat. 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 8, entitled to prove the original debt under the bankrupt's commission, and to receive a proportionate dividend; and the judgment debt, though greater than the original, was barred by the certificate. Ex parte Lloyd, 1 Rose, 4.

Upon the bankrupt's petition to supersede, an action was directed to be brought by the bankrupt against the assignee, to try the validity of the commission, the petitioning creditors to defend the action; and it was ordered that the proceedings under the commission should be stayed until further order, and all further directions in the matter of the petition were reserved until after the trial, with liberty to apply. The bankrupt-having failed in the action, was taken in execution for the costs; and, upon his petition, he was ordered to be discharged from that arrest. Ex parte Gregory, 1 Glyn & J. 177.

Under the stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, an execution against the goods of a bankrupt, taken out after his certificate is signed by the creditors, and before it is allowed by the Chancellor, is valid. Callen v. Meyrick, 1 T. R. 361.

And where a defendant was taken in execution under similar circumstances, and paid the debt and costs to the sheriff, the court of K. B. refused to order the sheriff to return the amount to him. Neatly v. Eagleton, 2 Tidd's Prac. 1049; 3 Dougl. 409.

If a fi. fa., issued against a bankrupt before certificate obtained, be not executed till after, the court of C. P. will order the goods to be restored; even though he has not pleaded the certificate according to the stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 7; but if any thing be alleged to invalidate the effect of the certificate, that court will direct a trial on a plea of bankruptcy. Lister v. Mundell, 1 B. & P. 427.

A bankrupt obtained his certificate on the same day a fi. fa. was executed on his goods: the court refused the bankrupt relief on motion. Hanson v. Blakey, 4 Bing. 493; 1 M. & P. 261.

4. Judgment by Default or Confession.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 108, no creditor though, for a valuable consideration, who shall sue out execution upon any judgment obtained by default, confession, or nil dicit, shall avail himself of such execution to the prejudice of other fair creditors, but shall be paid rateably with such creditors.

The 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 81, is no repeal of stat. 3 Geo. 4, c. 39, s. 2, by which executions on warrants of attorney, which are not filed within a certain time after execution, are declared void as against assignees of a bankrupt, under a commission afterwards issued. Wilson v. Whitaker, M. & M. 8—Abbott.

Sect. 108 comprises every species of judgment, except judgment after verdict, trial by the record, and on demurrer. Cumming v. Welsford, 6 Bing. 501: S. C. nom. Cuming v. Heale, 4 M. & P. 238.

It extends to an execution on a final judgment by default. Id.

An execution sued out upon a final judgment, after a judgment by nil dicit, falls within the proviso of the 108th section, which comprises all judgments by default, and cannot be restrained to judgments by default by the consent or collusion of the parties. Id.

The words "obtained by default, confession, or nil dicit," apply to a judgment obtained before, as well as after, the passing of the act. Id.

The stat. 1 Will. 4, c. 7, s. 7, exempts judgments on cognovit, and by default, confession, or nil dicit, in any action commenced adversely and without collusion, from the operation of s. 108 of the bankrupt act, 6 Geo. 4, c. 16.

This statute does not extend to judgments on warrant of attorney, though given without collusion or fraudulent preference; and a sheriff having seized and sold the goods on an execution issued upon such judgment, and paying over the proceeds after notice of an act of bankruptcy committed by the defendant, is answerable to the assignees for money had and received. Crossfield v. Stanley, 4 B. & Adol. 87.

Judgment was entered up on a warrant of attorney given by two joint traders; and a fi. fa. issued, returnable on the 2d of May. On the 1st of that month, the sheriff's officer received from the defendants the money directed to be levied. On the 2d of May one of them committed an act of bankruptcy, and the other on the 5th. On the 11th, a commission of bankruptcy issued; and on the 19th the sheriff paid over the money to the execution creditor. In an action by the assignees:—Held, that the creditor was entitled to retain it, not being a creditor having a security at the time of the bankruptcy. Morland v. Pellatt, 8 B. & C. 722; 2 M. & R. 411.

A plaintiff in execution, upon a judgment by confession, ceases to be a creditor having security for his debt, within the meaning of the stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 108, when the goods seized under that execution are sold, even though an act of bankruptcy be committed before the return of the writ. Higgins v. M'Adam, 3 Y. & J. 1.

The acts of a special bailiff appointed by a plaintiff in execution, who indemnifies the sheriff, are equivalent to the acts of the plaintiff himself; and therefore, where a plaintiff in execution upon a judgment by confession appointed a special bailiff, who seized and sold the goods during two days, for part of which he received the money, and for the rest gave credit, before an act of bankruptcy was committed by the defendant, it was held, that the plaintiff was entitled to retain the proceeds of those sales against the assignees, although the fi. fa. was not returnable before the act of bankruptcy. Id.

A warrant of attorney was given to secure a debt in 1819, judgment was entered up, a fi. fa. issued, and goods seized, which were assigned over to plaintiff in 1825, about a fortnight previous to bankruptcy:—Held, that the assignees were not authorized by the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 108, in taking possession of the goods taken in execution. Wymer v. Kemble, 6 B. & C. 479; 9 D. & R. 511.

A judgment and execution on a cognovit, not filed according to the provisions of the 3 Geo. 4, c. 39, are not absolutely void, but only inoperative against the assignees of a bankrupt. Green v. Gray, 1 Dowl. P. C. 350.

The court has not, by 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 108, jurisdiction against the execution creditor who does not prove. Ex parte Batcherley, 2 Glyn & J. 367.

The court will not set aside an execution issued upon a judgment obtained by default, confession, or nil dicit, and served and levied by seizure upon the property of a bankrupt before his bankruptcy, the stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 108, not rendering the execution in such case void, but merely enacting that the plaintiff in such execution shall share rateably with the other creditors. Taylor v. Taylor, 5 B. & C. 392; 8 D. & R. 159.

Where a creditor obtains judgment by nil dicit against his debtor, whose goods are seized by the sheriff before his bankruptcy, but not sold till after it, the court will not compel the sheriff to pay over the proceeds of the sale to the assignees, although the validity of the commission be not impeached. Re Washbourn, 2 M. & R. 374; 8 B. & C. 444.

Under a fi. fa. upon a judgment founded on a warrant of attorney, the sheriff seized at eleven o'clock on the 13th of August; a commission of bankruptcy issued against the debtor at a later hour on the 13th of October in the same year; the sale took place subsequently to the issuing of the commission:—It was held, that as more than two months had elapsed between the seizure and the issuing of the commission, the execution was not within the 106th section. Godson v. Sanctuary, 1 Nev. & M. 52; 4 B. & Adol. 255.

5. Proceedings by Assignees.

If a sheriff take goods of a bankrupt in execution, after the act of bankruptcy and before the commission issued, and sells them after the commission, trover will lie against him. Cooper v. Chitty, 1 W. Black. 65; 1 Burr. 20.

If a sheriff legally take goods in execution, the proprietor whereof afterwards becomes a bankrupt, and the sheriff sells at one time, after the bankruptcy, enough to satisfy that, as well as another execution delivered to him after the bankruptcy, such sale is void, and the bankrupt's assignees may recover in trover for such of the goods as were sold after the sheriff had raised money enough to satisfy the first execution. Stead v. Gascoigne, 8 Taunt. 527.

Where, after a secret act of bankruptcy, the sheriff took in execution the goods of a trader under a fi. fa., and removed them to a broker's, and the assignees of the bankrupt afterwards served a notice upon him not to sell them; for which reason they were allowed to remain unsold at the broker's:—Held, that the sheriff was liable to an action of trover at the suit of the assignees, without any demand of the goods. Wyatt v. Blades, 3 Camp. 396—Ellenborough.

The assignees of a bankrupt should bring trover, and not trespass, against a sheriff for taking the goods of the bankrupt in execution after an act of bankruptcy and before the issuing of the commission, notwithstanding he sells them after the issuing of the commission, and after a provisional assignment, and notice from the provisional assignee not to sell. Smith v. Miles, 1 T. R. 475.

If a creditor accompany the sheriff's officer in levying an execution, which is afterwards avoided by a commission of bankruptcy, trover may be maintained against him by the assignees, though he has never received the goods, or their value from the sheriff. Menham v. Edmonson, 1 B. & P. 369.

The sheriff seized the goods of a defendant under a fi. fa., and sold and delivered them to the judgment creditor, in satisfaction of the debt, after a secret act of bankruptcy committed by the defendant, but before the issuing of a commission against him:—Held, that the seizure and sale of the goods was a wrongful conversion, for which the sheriff was liable in an action of trover at the suit of the assignees subsequently chosen. Balme v. Hutton, 3 M. & Scott, 1; 9 Bing. 471; 1 C. & M. 262; 2 Tyr. 620; reversing S. C. 2 Tyr. 17; 2 C. & J. 19; 2 Y. & J. 101—Held by seven judges of K. B. and C. P. (Gaselee, J., dissentient.)

Trover lies against the sheriff for goods seized by him after an act of bankruptcy, without notice; and his assenting to some of the goods being packed up and sent to him, to secure the payment of his poundage, is evidence of conversion. Carlisle v. Esland, 5 Moore, 102; 7 Bing. 296.

Trover will lie against a sheriff who takes in execution the goods of a bankrupt, although he has no notice of the bankruptcy, and a commission has not been sued out at the time of execution. Price v. Helyar, 4 Bing. 597; 1 M. & P. 541; S. P. Potter v. Starkie, 4 M. & S. 260.

Where a trader committed an act of bankruptcy on the 9th November, and the sheriff took his goods in execution on the 15th, and sold them on the 21st December, and a commission was issued on the 23d, and an assignment made on the 6th January following:—Held, that the assignees might maintain trover against the sheriff, although he had sold before the assignment was made, as the bankrupt's property vested in them by such assignment, from the act of bankruptcy by relation. Lazarus v. Waithman, 5 Moore, 313.

If a sheriff levy goods under an execution after an act of bankruptcy committed by the party against whom the execution is sued out, the sheriff is liable to the assignees in an action of trover, although the sheriff had no notice of the act of bankruptcy. Jacobs v. Latour, 2 M. & P. 20; 5 Bing. 130.

The sheriff sold goods under a fi. fa. after a secret act of bankruptcy committed by the debtor, and, after notice of the act of bankruptcy, paid over the proceeds to the execution creditor, under an indemnity:—Held, that the assignee might recover the amount from the sheriff in an action for money had and received. Young v. Marshall, 1 M. & Scott, 110; 8 Bing. 43.

A sheriff seizing under a fi. fa., and afterwards selling the goods of a person who has committed an act of bankruptcy, is liable in trover to the assignees (under a commission issued within two months), though it do not appear that at the time of seizure, or when the sale began, the sheriff knew of the act of bankruptcy. Dillon v. Langley, 2 B. & Adol. 131.

If a sheriff sell goods which he has seized, after notice of an act of bankruptcy, and sell by bill of sale to the execution creditor, who sells to a stranger, and such stranger afterwards becomes one of the assignees under the commission, the assignees may maintain trover against the sheriff. Vaughan v. Wilkins, 1 B. & Adol. 370.

Assumpsit for money had and received will lie for the assignees of a bankrupt, against a creditor who has levied his debt by fi. fa. subsequently to the act of bankruptcy. Hitchin v. Campbell, 2 W. Black. 827; 3 Wils. 304; Loft, 208.

A. having money due to him from B., who was also indebted to other persons, took a warrant of attorney for the whole amount of the several debts in the usual terms. A. afterwards assigned his interest in the warrant of attorney to C. for a valuable consideration, who entered up judgment, and took out execution against B.'s effects; and the money was levied by the sheriff, who paid it over to B.'s assignees (he becoming bankrupt): it seems that assumpsit for money had and received to his use would lie at the suit of C. against the assignees. Cooper v. Wrench, 1 D. & R. 482.

The assignees of a bankrupt may recover as for money had and received against the defendant who took the goods of the bankrupt in execution, after an act of bankruptcy, and then took the goods under a bill of sale from the sheriff, although no money was actually paid. Reed v. James, 2 Rose, 465.

Where the goods of a bankrupt taken in execution are discharged by payment of the sum to be levied by a creditor after a docket struck, the assignees subsequently chosen cannot, by repaying that sum, maintain an action for money had and received against the sheriff. Bucker v. Booth, M. & M. 518—Parke.

But quære, if a sheriff, whilst he has goods unsold in his hands, taken under a fi. fa., receives notice of a commission of bankruptcy having issued against the defendant, but notwithstanding sells the same, and pays the proceeds to the plaintiff, whether such sale is wrongful, and will support an action of trover? Notley v. Buck, 2 M. & R. 68; 6 B. & C. 160.

Quære, whether a sheriff is justified in selling the goods of a bankrupt after notice of the bankruptcy? Id.

Where a creditor obtained judgment by nil dicit against a trader, and thereupon issued a fi. fa., under which the sheriff seized the goods of the trader, who afterwards, and before the goods were sold, committed an act of bankruptcy, upon which a commission issued, and he was duly declared a bankrupt, of which the sheriff had notice, but nevertheless sold the goods, and paid over the proceeds to the execution creditor:—Held, that he was not justified in paying over the money, and was liable to be sued for it by the assignees, in an action for money had and received. Id.

The court refused to stay proceedings in an action of trespass by the assignees of a bankrupt, against a sheriff, for an execution, where the assignees brought the action in their own names, and the goods seized had been some time in the possession of the assignees, and were part of additional goods bought by the assignees, though the bankruptcy was disputed. Bernasconi v. Fairbrother, 7 B. & C. 379.

A bill in equity does not lie by the assignees of a bankrupt against a judgment creditor and the sheriff for monies levied under an execution upon a judgment by nil dict. Mitchell v. Knott, 1 Sim. 497; 2 Glyn & J. 293.

6. Costs.

Statute.—By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 58, if any plaintiff, in any action at law or suit in equity, or petitioner in bankruptcy or lunacy, shall have obtained any judgment, decree, or order, against any person who shall thereafter have become bankrupt, for any debt or demand in respect of which such plaintiff or petitioner shall prove under the commission, he shall also be entitled to prove for the costs which he shall have incurred in obtaining the same, although such costs shall not have been taxed at the time of the bankruptcy.

Verdict for defendant in July; commission of bankruptcy against plaintiff in August; judgment against him, and certificate under the commission for him in Michaelmas term ensuing:—Held, that he was liable to an execution for costs notwithstanding sect. 58. Bire v. Moreau, 4 Bing. 57; 12 Moore, 226.

Proof of.—Where plaintiffs sued defendant for a debt before the bankruptcy of defendant, and went on with the suit after his bankruptcy, and had judgment, and defendant obtained his certificate, and afterwards brought a writ of error, which was nonprossed, and costs of nonpros in error awarded against him:—Held, that the defendant was discharged by his certificate from these costs. Scott v. Ambrose, 3 M. & S. 326; 2 Rose, 435.

So, in case of sci. fa. Phillips v. Brown, 6 T. R. 282.

If A. recover a judgment against B. before the bankruptcy of B., and revive it by scire facias after the bankruptcy, the costs of the scire facias relate back to the judgment, and may be proved under the commission. Id.

Costs of a nonsuit are not a provable debt under a commission of bankruptcy issued before signing judgment, although the judgment relates back to a time previous to the commission issuing. Brough v. Adcock, 1 Dowl. P. C. 231; S. C. nom. Brough v. Hancock, 5 M. & P. 678; 7 Bing. 650.

If a plaintiff become a bankrupt after he is nonsuited, and before the taxation of costs, the costs of the nonsuit are a debt provable under the commission. Hurst v. Mead, 5 T. R. 365.

So, if he become bankrupt before judgment of nonsuit signed. Watts v. Hart, 1 B. & P. 134.

So, costs of a nonsuit, in an action against commissioners under a commission which had been superseded, are provable under a second commission sued out on the same act of bankruptcy, but after the nonsuit. Holding v. Impey, 1 Bing. 189; 7 Moore, 614.

Where, after a recovery in ejectment, and before an action of trespass for mesne profits, the defendant became bankrupt, and the jury did not include the costs of the ejectment in their verdict on executing a writ of inquiry in the action for mesne profits, the court refused to set aside the inquisition, because the plaintiff might have proved the costs as a debt under the defendant's commission of bankruptcy. Gulliver v. Drinkwater, 2 T. R. 261.

The costs of a suit in Chancery, directed to be paid by an award made before the bankruptcy of the defendant, but which costs were not taxed till after he became bankrupt, cannot be proved under the commission; but the bankrupt remains liable to be attached for the amount under the award made a rule of court. Rex v. Davis, 9 East, 318.

7. Other Things.

The sheriff seized goods under a writ of fi. fa. on the 16th June, and remained in possession, taking no steps to effect a sale, though urged so to do by the plaintiff's attorney. On the 5th of October a commission of bankruptcy was sued out against the debtor, and the goods were delivered up by the sheriff to the assignees under an indemnity, and nulla bona returned to the fi. fa. Quære, whether, under these circumstances, the sheriff is not liable to an action on the case at the suit of the execution creditor, for the loss of the fruits of his judgment? Aireton v. Davis, 3 M. & Scott, 138.

Joint creditors who have taken joint effects in execution subsequently to an act of bankruptcy by one of the partners, cannot retain them against the assignees under a separate commission afterwards issued by another joint creditor against that partner. In re Wait, 1 J. & W. 605.

If the goods of a trader are taken in execution after an act of bankruptcy, and the money arising from the sale paid over by the sheriff two months before a commission is sued out, the bankruptcy will reach the execution, notwithstanding 46 Geo. 3, c. 135, which protects all bona fide payments and transactions by or with the bankrupt more than two calendar months before the date of the commission. Blogg v. Phillips, 2 Camp. 129—Ellenborough.

Nulla bona is a good return to a fi. fa. sued out against a trader's goods, returnable within two months, but not actually returned till after he had lain in prison two months, and thereby become bankrupt. Coppendale v. Bridges, 2 Burr. 814; 2 Ld. Ken. 542.

The court enlarged a rule for time for the sheriff to return the writ, though there was only an affidavit that a commission of bankruptcy had issued, and that the sheriff was fearful the act of bankruptcy was before the levy. Anon. 2 Chit. 204.

A bond and warrant of attorney to confess judgment given by a bankrupt after his bankruptcy, in order to obtain his liberty, is not barred by his certificate, although the original debt was contracted before. Birch v. Sharland, 1 T. R. 715.

A cognovit is not discharged by bankruptcy and certificate. Wyberne v. Ross, 2 Taunt. 68; 1 Rose, 112.

But a cognovit given for a debt, interest, and costs, incurred after a secret act of bankruptcy, is discharged by bankruptcy and certificate. Van Sandau v. Corbie, 1 Chit. 16.

8. Partial Satisfaction.

A creditor having shortly before the commission seized the effects of the bankrupt in execution, and having after the commission satisfied part of his debt by sale of the effects, was admitted to prove for the residue. Ex parte Hopley, 1 Glyn & J. 63; 2 J. & W. 220.

A petition to stay the certificate, on the ground of the rejection of a debt, having been served on the bankrupt only one day before the petition day, was dismissed with costs. Id.

An application by a creditor whose debt exceeded the whole amount of the other debts, and who held in his hands goods of the bankrupt taken in execution shortly before the commission issued, to be allowed to prove the difference between the debt and the value of the goods, was refused. Ex parte Hopley, 1 J. & W. 423.

XV. OPERATION ON CROWN PROCESS.

A penalty for not paying the excise duties, incurred before a bankruptcy, but not substantially by conviction till after, continues a lien upon the estate in the hands of the assignees, and may be distrained for. Stacey v. Hulse, 2 Dougl. 411; S. P. Att. Gen. v. Semer, and Rex v. Fowler, 2 Dougl. 416, n.

If a soap-maker, having incurred a forfeiture for concealing soap, contrary to 1 Geo. 1, c. 2, s. 36, become bankrupt, and a provisional assignment of his estate be made, after which the soap is condemned, and the bankrupt convicted, and thereupon a warrant issues to levy the penalty on his goods generally, such a warrant is bad, and cannot justify a seizure of the soap in the hands of the assignees. Austin v. Whitehead, 6 T. R. 436.

Personal estate was seized under the crown's extent, which was afterwards set aside for irregularity, and the effects ordered to be delivered up to the assignees of the debtor, duly appointed under a commission of bankruptcy sued out after the teste of the extent; a second extent, tested the day the first was set aside, and subsequently to the assignment, was issued, and delivered to the sheriff, before the execution of the order for delivery of the goods to the assignees, the sheriff still holding them in his custody: Held, that the property in the effects had been changed and transferred by the assignment; that the crown had no lien thereon, and consequently that the assignees were entitled to reduce them into possession; and the regularity of the commission and assignment having been found by the inquiry on the second extent, on the evidence produced, the court refused to put the assignees to claim property, on a suggestion of infirmity in the commission, without an affidavit. Rex v. Marsh, M'Clel. & Y. 250.

Where defendant's effects have been sold under a venditioni exponas on an extent, in default of claim, it does not conclude his assignees under a commission of bankruptcy; and they will be allowed, on application, to enter their claim, and plead in a proper case, where the proceedings have gone so far, on payment of costs of the sale and the application, and putting the prosecutors of the extent in the same situation as if they had claimed and pleaded in due time. A short delay (as a month) is not laches in the case of assignees. Rex v. Adam, 5 Price, 39.

Although a warrant of the commissioners of the land-tax is not equal to an extent, so as to bind the goods of a bankrupt from the date, yet if a collector become bankrupt, and his goods be afterwards seized under a warrant from the commissioners before the actual execution of the assignment, the king's debt must be satisfied. Rex v. Jones, 8 Price, 108.

A. and B., bankers in London, had, at the time of their bankruptcy, cash and short bills belonging to C. and D., bankers in the country. The cash was the excise duties received and remitted by the country to the London bankers, and against which they had given to the commissioners the latter's acceptances. In respect of these, an extent had issued:—Held, that the crown had a right to elect against what securities they would go, and, on the consent of the attorney-general, the short bills were ordered to be delivered up. Ex parte Rowton, 1 Rose, 15.

A debt to the crown was preferred to the creditors under a bankruptcy where the sheriff was in possession under several extents, one of which, for part of the debt, was tested the day the provisional bargain and sale and assignment were executed, the others having issued subsequently. Rogers v. Mackenzie, 4 Ves. jun. 752.

XVI. SET-OFF AND MUTUAL DEBTS.

1. Generally.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 50, where there has been mutual credit given by the bankrupt and any other person, or where there are mutual debts between the bankrupt and any other person, the commissioners are to state the account between them, and one debt or demand may be set against another, notwithstanding any prior act of bankruptcy before the credit given to, or the debt contracted by, the bankrupt; and what shall appear due on either side on the balance of such account, and no more, shall be claimed or paid on either side respectively; and every debt or demand which is proveable against the estate may also be set off against the estate, provided the person claiming the benefit of such set-off had not, when such credit was given, notice of any act of bankruptcy.

The statutes of set-off extend to assignees under a commission of bankruptcy. Ridout v. Brough, Cowp. 133; S. P. Anon. Lofft, 608. But see Ryall v. Larkin, 1 Wils. 155.

A mutual credit may be constituted, though the parties do not mean particularly to trust each other. Hankey v. Smith, 3 T. R. 507, n.

In order to constitute a mutual credit within the 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 28, it must be confined to pecuniary demands on such credits as in their nature will terminate in a debt. Rose v. Hart, 2 Moore, 547; 8 Taunt. 499.

Therefore a guarantie, being merely a contract to indemnify against contingent damages, cannot form the subject of a mutual credit. Sampson v. Burton, 4 Moore, 515; 2 B. & B. 89.

A. having given defendant his acceptance for 20*l.*, defendant, in consideration thereof, undertook that he would indorse to A. a bill drawn by him (defendant) on E. E., payable to defendant's order. He gave the bill, but would not indorse it. On assumpsit brought by the assignees of A., who had become bankrupt, and whose acceptance was dishonoured:—Held, that the contract to indorse was not a subject of "mutual credit" within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 50, and could not have been set off by the assignees against the 20*l.* due from A. to the defendant. Rose v. Sims, 1 B. & Adol. 521.

A creditor of a partnership having made further advances on the security of a bill deposited with him for that purpose by the partners, and having undertaken to receive the amount when due and return the surplus, the bill having been dishonoured and remaining in his hands unpaid, is not entitled, on the bankruptcy of the partners, to set off his prior advances against a demand by the assignees for the bill. Ex parte Flint, 1 Swans. 30.

The doctrine of set-off and mutual credit, under the statute, is the same at law and in equity. Id.

A debt from a bankrupt to a married woman dum sola cannot be set off against a debt from her husband to the bankrupt. Ex parte Blagden, 19 Ves. jun. 465.

Where a loss attaches upon a policy of insurance after the bankruptcy of the insured, it constitutes a cause of action in the assignees, not an interest in the bankrupt admitting a set-off. Ex parte Herbert, 2 Rose, 249.

If bankers receive any pay-money on account of a bankrupt, after notice of an act of bankruptcy, all the sums received are to the use of the estate; and they cannot set off the payments made, or be allowed to come in as creditors, and claim dividends on debts paid, which were owing before the act of bankruptcy. Hankey v. Vernon, 3 Bro. C. C. 313.

The bankrupt, at the time of his bankruptcy, was indebted to P. W. in respect of monies received by him as agent, and misapplied, and P. W. had purchased of the bankrupt an annuity for her life, in consideration of a sum payable at her death, and died after the bankruptcy:—Held, that the representatives of P. W. were not entitled to set off the consideration of the annuity against the debt due from the bankrupt. Whittaker v. Hall, 1 Glyn & J. 213; S. C. nom. Ex parte Whittaker, 1 Rose, 301.

A. purchases an annuity of 200*l.* for 2000*l.*, to be paid after her death. The grantor becomes bankrupt, and is indebted to her in 2275*l.* 5*s.* 9*d.* The annuitant is not entitled to set off the 2000*l.* against the 2275*l.* 5*s.* 9*d.*; for, as she could not be compelled to pay in advance, the bankrupt ought not to be compelled to take in advance. Id.

There could not be a case of mutual debt or credit within the 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 28, unless the balance could be ascertained by computation. Id.

If a demand be payable at all events, though at a future day, it may be proved under a commission against the debtor, or set off in an action brought by his assignees; but if it rest in contingency whether it will be paid or not, it cannot be so proved or set off, unless it be secured by a penalty, which is forfeited at law. Hancock v. Entwistle, 3 T. R. 435.

To enable the holder of a bankrupt's acceptances to avail himself of them in an action by the assignees against himself on his own acceptance, by way either of set-off or of mutual credit, he must most distinctly prove, either that the obligation on himself to pay the bill so set off subsisted before the bankruptcy, or that there was a mutual credit created in the origin of the bill. Ouchterlony v. Easterby, 4 Taunt. 888; 2 Rose, 272.

2. Agents.

Before 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 50, assignees might recover from the factor of a bankrupt all monies received by him from the bankrupt within two months before the issuing of the commission; and the factor could not set off debts incurred by the bankrupt to him within the same time, although the factor had acted bonâ fide and in ignorance of the act of bankruptcy. Kinder v. Butterworth, 9 D. & R. 47; 6 B. & C. 42.

A. was the agent of the grantor and grantee of certain annuities; all payments on account of the annuities passed through his hands, and he charged the grantee a commission upon all such payments. A. delivered to the grantee an account, and gave him credit for half a year's annuity, describing it "as money not yet received," and debited him with commission upon the same: in fact, it had not been received by A., and he having afterwards become bankrupt, it was held, that his assignees were entitled to be allowed that sum in account by the grantee. Shaw v. Dartnall, 6 B. & C. 56; 9 D. & R. 54. And see Shaw v. Woodcock, 7 B. & C. 73, and Shaw v. Pictou, 7 D. & R. 201; 4 B. & C. 715.

So, where, in one account, credit was given to the grantee for certain sums, as money actually received by A., and they had never been received; and in another account subsequently delivered, the same sums were placed to the debit of the grantee with his assent; it was held that the assignees of A. were entitled to be allowed those sums in account. Id.

If goods specifically pledged remain in the possession of the bailees, and in the mean time the owner becomes insolvent (having committed acts of bankruptcy before the original pledge was entirely redeemed by the repayment of the money secured by it,) should other advances be then made to him by them, it was not a case of mutual credit within the 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 28, and the assignees of the bankrupt might recover the goods in trover. Birdwood, v. Hart, 5 Price, 593.

Where a regimental agent had received monies from the paymaster-general of the forces, under the authority of a warrant of attorney from the colonel, and then became bankrupt:—Held, in an action by the assignees for goods sold and delivered by the agent for the use of the regiment, that the colonel might set off the money which the agent had received from the paymaster-general remaining unaccounted for, in reduction of the demand. Knowles v. Maitland, 6 D. & R. 312; 4 B. & C. 173.

Where D. and another purchased goods of two London houses, and shipped them upon speculation to a foreign port in the name of C., and not wishing to appear as principals in the transaction, represented to the London houses, and to the consignees abroad, that C. was the principal, and that they acted merely as his agents; and after the shipment, the London houses made advances to D. and his partner, as the agents of C., on account of the goods, the proceeds of which remained in the hands of the consignees abroad; and C. also advanced money to D. and his partner, who afterwards became bankrupts, and at the date of the commission were indebted to C. for such advances:—Held, in an action by the assignees for money had and received, that C. had a right to retain the proceeds of the goods as a set-off for money advanced to the bankrupts, it being a case of mutual credit within the statute 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 28. Easum v. Cato, 1 D. & R. 530; 5 B. & A. 861.

3. Bills and Notes.

To an action by assignees for a debt due to the bankrupt's estate, the defendant may set off notes in his possession issued by the bankrupt before the bankruptcy. Moore v. Wright, 2 Rose, 470; 2 Marsh. 209; 6 Taunt. 517.

Banker's notes bought by a debtor after the banker has stopped payment, and before an act of bankruptcy is committed, may be set off in an action by the assignees. Hawkins v. Whitten, 10 B. & C. 217.

A party has a right to set off notes of a firm of bankers, taken by him after he knew that they had stopped payment, but before he knew that either of the partners had committed an act of bankruptcy; but he is not entitled to set off notes of such bankers taken by him after he knew that either of the partners of the bank had committed an act of bankruptcy. Dixon v. Cass, 1 B. & Adol. 343.

The defendant cannot set off cash notes issued by the bankrupt payable to bearer, bearing date before his bankruptcy, unless he shows further that such notes came to his hands before the bankruptcy. Dickson v. Evans, 6 T. R. 57.

A petitioner being a creditor of the bankrupt on a cash balance, and being under acceptances for the bankrupt's accommodation, which were not paid at the bankruptcy, and having received from the bankrupt bills and notes to a larger amount than the cash balance, which were negotiated by the petitioner, was not allowed to prove the cash balance on the principle of excluding the dishonoured paper on both sides, or otherwise. Ex parte Read, 1 Glyn & J. 224.

Defendant kept cash with M. and W. bankers, and accepted a bill drawn by one of the partners in the house, and indorsed by that partner to the house, who discounted and afterwards indorsed it for value to S. Before the bill became due, M. and W. were bankrupts, having funds in the hands of S. more than sufficient to pay the bill, and having in their hands money belonging to defendant. When the bill became due, S. presented it for payment to defendant, who having refused payment, S. paid himself out of the funds of M. and W. remaining in his hands, and delivered the bill to their assignees:—Held, in an action brought by the assignees against defendant as acceptor of the bill, that there had been before the bankruptcy a mutual credit between the bankrupts and defendant, and that the latter was entitled to set off against the sum due to the bankrupts on the bill, the debt due to him from M. and W. at the time of their bankruptcy. Bolland v. Nash, 8 B. & C. 105; 2 M. & R. 189.

At the time of the bankruptcy, Harrison was a creditor of the bankrupts for the sum of 1500*l.* on a cash balance, and the bankrupts had in their hands two bills drawn by Harrison on Hoppins for the sum of 1338*l.* 7*s.* 9*d.*, which Hoppins had accepted for the accommodation of Harrison, and which Harrison had discounted with the bankrupts, and which were not due at the bankruptcy. On the petition of Hoppins and Harrison, the court ordered the bill to be delivered up to Harrison in part discharge of the cash balance, with liberty to prove for the difference. Ex parte Hoppins & Harrison, 2 Glyn & J. 93.

Acceptances not due till after the bankruptcy of the acceptor may be set off. Ex parte Wagstaff, 13 Ves. jun. 65.

If a debtor to a bankrupt's estate acquire a bill with the bankrupt's name upon it, which he knows forms no demand upon the bankrupt's estate, after notice of the bankrupt's insolvency, and with a view to set off, he is not a bona fide holder. Ex parte Stone, 1 Glyn & J. 191.

4. Joint or separate Debts.

Set-off is allowed of a separate debt due from the estate against a joint debt due to it, and liberty given to prove the balance. Ex parte Hanson, 12 Ves. jun. 346.

Set-off is allowed of a debt of the bankrupts to one partner separately, against a joint debt of him and his partner, on their bond to secure the separate debt of the former. Ex parte Hanson, 18 Ves. jun. 233; 1 Rose, 156.

A., entering into partnership with B., applies to his bankers for a loan to constitute his capital; they consent, upon condition that B. shall join in a security for the repayment of the loan, which is complied with. The partnership open an account with the bankers, who also continue the private bankers of A. On the bankruptcy of the bankers, the balance on the joint account, arising from this loan, is against A. and B., but A.'s private account is in his favour. A. and B. were allowed to set off this private balance against the joint debt, it being but a security for the separate debt. A. and B., soon after the partnership commenced, took in another partner, but it was understood that the account with the bankers was to continue as before. This partner drew checks in the partnership name, and paid them into his private account. The assignees were held not entitled to charge the checks so transferred against the partnership account. Id.

A debtor by bond to the separate estate of a deceased partner is not allowed in equity to set off his bond-debt in respect of acceptances for which he had become liable to the partnership estate, and which were proved by him under a joint commission of bankruptcy. Addis v. Knight, 2 Mer. 117.

Three partners, A., B., and C., deliver bills to D. for a special purpose. A. and B. become bankrupts. In an action by their assignees against D. for the proceeds of the bill:—Held, that C. not having been made bankrupt, this was not a case of mutual credit within 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 18, so as to entitle the defendant to set off the bills against a debt due to him from A., B., and C. Staniforth v. Fellowes, 1 Marsh. 184; 2 Rose, 151.

Part-owners of a ship cannot set off their proportions of a debt due to the bankrupt on that account against the debts due by the bankrupt to them severally. Ex parte Christie, 10 Ves. jun. 105.

Under a separate commission, relief in the nature of set-off was refused against a separate creditor of the bankrupt indebted to the partnership to a greater amount. Ex parte Two-good, 11 Ves. jun. 517.

A. proved a debt of 424*l.* against the separate estate of B., and died before B. had obtained his certificate, having bequeathed to B. a legacy of 200*l.*:—Ordered, on the petition of the assignee, that the sum of 200*l.* should be deducted from the proof of 424*l.* made by A. Ex parte Mac, 1 Mont. & Mac. 210.

5. Insurance Cases.

The benefit of a policy of insurance made previous to the bankruptcy of the insured, upon a loss after it, passes to the assignees, and gives a right of action to them, which is not capable of being set-off against a debt from the bankrupt. Ex parte Blagden, 19 Ves. jun. 465.

In an action by the assignees of a bankrupt underwriter against a broker, for premiums due to the bankrupt; semble, that the broker cannot set off a loss on a policy effected by him as agent, without a commission del credere, where there has been no adjustment, though the loss took place before the bankruptcy. Baker v. Langhorn, 2 Marsh. 215; 6 Taunt. 519; 4 Camp. 396; 2 Rose, 471.

Where a bankrupt has underwritten a policy to a broker acting under a del credere commission, and a loss upon the policy happens before, but is not adjusted till after the bankruptcy, the broker may deduct the amount of the loss from the debt which he owes to the bankrupt's estate. Bize v. Dickson, 1 T. R. 285.

Where brokers effected policies on goods on account of their principals, in their own names, and accepted bills on account of the goods which were consigned to them and lost before arrival:—Held, that they might set off such losses in an action brought by the assignees of the underwriter for premiums, although they had not any del credere commission, and the losses were not adjusted. Parker v. Beasley, 2 M. & S. 423.

A broker with a commission del credere may set off under the general issue, a loss upon a policy happening before a bankruptcy, to an action by the assignees of the bankrupt for premiums upon various policies underwritten by him, and for which he had debited the broker; but such a loss cannot be proved under a notice of set-off. Grove v. Dubois, 1 T. R. 112.

Where a broker effected a policy of insurance in the name of his principal, under a del credere commission, and guaranteed the solvency of the underwriters in the body of the policy, which was left in the custody of the assured until the broker had paid the loss, according to the terms of the guarantee:—Held, that a loss having happened before the bankruptcy of one of the underwriters, and been adjusted afterwards, could not be set off by the broker in an action brought against him by the assignees, to recover premiums due to the bankrupt, either as constituting a mutual debt or mutual credit, although the broker had accounted for such loss with the assured before the bankruptcy. Peele v. Northcote, 1 Moore, 178; 7 Taunt. 478.

Where defendants, insurance brokers, effected several policies of insurance, some in the name and on account of their own firm, others in the name of their own firm, but on account of their principals, and others in the name and on account of their principals, for which principals they acted under a del credere commission, without the knowledge of the underwriters:—Held, that in an action brought against them for premiums, by the assignees of one of the underwriters upon those policies, who had become bankrupt, the defendants might set off losses and returns due on all such of those policies as were effected in the name of their own firm, but not on such as were effected in the names of their principals, such losses and returns having become due on those policies before the time when the bankrupt stopped payment, though they had not been adjusted by the bankrupt, but only by the other underwriters between the time of his stopping payment and committing the act of bankruptcy, on which adjustments the defendants had given their principals credit for the amount. Kester v. Eason, 2 M. & S. 112.

A broker, who is indebted to assignees for premiums due to them upon policies subscribed by the bankrupt before his bankruptcy, is not entitled to set off returns of premium due upon the arrival of ships which have arrived since the bankruptcy. Goldschmidt v. Lyon, 4 Taunt. 534.

An insurance-broker who is indebted to the assignees of a bankrupt underwriter for premiums, cannot, without an especial authority, set off against that debt sums due from the underwriter for returns of premium, whether the returns became due before the bankruptcy or after the bankruptcy. Minett v. Forrester, 4 Taunt. 541.

If a person intrusted with value, trust his creditor with that which may become productive of value, the first becoming bankrupt, the second may retain his debt out of the proceeds of the things intrusted to him, and only pay the balance. A., a merchant, employed B., a broker, to effect policies and sell goods, and trusted him with the possession of the policies; A., being indebted to B. for premiums of insurance, and having obtained an advance of money upon a pledge of goods placed in B.'s hands for sale, but not on those goods, to the exclusion of A.'s general creditors, became bankrupt: afterwards a loss happened, and B. received it from the underwriters:—Held, that this was a mutual credit within the stat. 30 Geo. 2, c. 5, and that B. might retain the sum received for the loss, in liquidation of his advances, as well as of the balance due for premiums. Olive v. Smith, 5 Taunt. 56; 2 Rose, 122.

Where a broker adjusted a loss with an underwriter, and the name of the latter was afterwards struck out of the policy and adjustment, and the broker became bankrupt within a month after the making of such adjustment:—Held, that the underwriter could not set off as against the assured, the balance due to him from the broker, at the time of adjusting the policy, although such balance might exceed the amount of the loss. Todd v. Reed, 3 Stark. 16—Abbott.

An underwriter cannot set off, as a mutual credit, against a loss accruing after the bankruptcy of the assured, premiums of the same and other policies due before the bankruptcy from the assured, who was himself his own insurance-broker in effecting those policies. Glennie v. Edmunds, 4 Taunt. 775.

Neither can he set off returns of premium upon voyages not complete before the bankruptcy, although the underwriter must, upon the conclusion of the adventure, necessarily become debtor to the assured, either for a loss, or a return of premium. Id.

An underwriter is entitled (where the assured has become bankrupt after the policy of insurance was effected) to deduct what was due to him before the bankruptcy, on a balance of account between the assured and himself, from out of the amount of his subscription to the policy, in the event of a loss subsequent to the bankruptcy, under the 5 Geo. 2, c. 30; the statute 19 Geo. 2, c. 32, s. 2, suspending the effect of a bankruptcy in the case of an assured and the underwriter on both sides, so as to let in the former statute, till the result of the voyage shall have been ascertained, and the accounts stated; because the 19 Geo. 2, c. 32, (admitting persons assured to claim losses against bankrupt underwriters, although happening after the bankruptcy,) is in pari materia, and the two statutes are to be construed with reference to each other, so as to make them mutually beneficial; and therefore it was held, that a set-off must be allowed to a solvent underwriter against the assignees of a bankrupt assured, under the 5 Geo. 2, c. 30. Graham v. Russell, 3 Price, 227; 5 M. & S. 498; 2 Marsh. 561.

6. Created by Contract.

If, after a secret act of bankruptcy, a trader sell goods to a person who is surety for him, upon an agreement that the price of the goods shall be set off against the liability, and the trader become a bankrupt, such set-off is not valid. Carter v. Breton, 6 Bing. 621; 4 M. & P. 424.

A. & Co., merchants at Liverpool, remitted a bill to B. & Co. in London, with directions to get it discounted, and apply the proceeds in a particular way; B. & Co. did not get the bill discounted, but received the money when it became due. Before that time, A. & Co. had stopped payment and desired to have the bill returned to them. A commission of bankruptcy having been issued against them before the money was received on the bill by B. & Co.:—Held, that the latter were liable to be sued for the amount by the assignees of A. & Co. for money received to their use; and that B. & Co. could not set off a debt due to them from A. & Co. Buchanan v. Findley, 9 B. & C. 738; 4 M. & R. 593.

A tradesman undertook to do work upon an article delivered to him, for a person to whom he was indebted, and it was agreed that the work should be paid for in ready money. He afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, that the act 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 50, (which provides for the setting off of cross demands where there has been mutual credit between the bankrupt and a party claiming on his estate,) did not, in this case, render the assignees liable in trover for refusing to deliver such article to the creditor on his offering to set off the price of the work against his own demand. Clarke v. Fell, 4 B. & Adol. 404; 1 Nev. & M. 244.

An equitable set-off was allowed under circumstances, as there could be none at law, where bankers, directed to lay out money in navy annuities, instead of doing so represented that they had, and made entries and accounted for the dividends accordingly, and took a joint promissory note from the party and her brother, under the supposition to secure a debt from him to them, upon which the assignees under their bankruptcy sued him alone. Ex parte Stephens, 11 Ves. jun. 24.

An order was made for proof of the balance setting off the debt upon the note. Id.

7. Proceedings by Assignees.

A sale of the property of a bankrupt, after an act of bankruptcy, but more than two months before the commission issued, is, since the 46 Geo. 3, c. 101, s. 1, a sale by the bankrupt, and not by the assignee; and a creditor of the bankrupt having become a purchaser, was holden (in an action brought by the assignee for the value of the goods,) to be entitled to set off against such claim the debt due to him from the bankrupt; this constituting a mutual credit between the bankrupt and such creditor within that statute, s. 3. Southwood v. Taylor, 1 B. & A. 471.

If a bankrupt, on the eve of his bankruptcy, fraudulently deliver goods to one of his creditors, the assignees may disaffirm the contract, and recover the value of the goods in trover; but if they bring assumpsit, they affirm the contract, and then the creditor may set off his debt. Smith v. Hodson, 4 T. R. 211.

Where the defendant lent his acceptance to the bankrupts on a bill which did not become due till after the act of bankruptcy, and was then outstanding in the hands of third persons, yet the defendant having paid the amount after the commission issued, and before the action brought by the assignees, is entitled to set off the same under the words "mutual credit," in the 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 28. Smith v. Hodson, 4 T. R. 211.

Where a person, previous to his bankruptcy, deposited a bill of exchange with the defendant for the purpose of raising money thereon, and an advance was accordingly made:—Held, that the assignees of such bankrupt were entitled to recover the bill in an action of trover, on having tendered the money advanced, although a balance remained due from the bankrupt to the defendant on a general account; and that this, therefore, was not a case of mutual trust or credit, within the statute 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 28. Key v. Flint, 1 Moore, 451; 8 Taunt. 21.

A. first purchased one and afterwards another parcel of goods of B., each at six months' credit: when the first sum became due, A. lodged in B.'s hands a bill of exchange for a larger amount than the value of the goods in order to pay for them, B. engaging to return to A. the overplus when the bill should be paid; B. received the amount of the bill, and then A. became a bankrupt, not having paid for the second parcel of goods:—Held, in an action brought by A.'s assignees for the surplus of the bill, that B. might retain it to satisfy his demand on A. for the second parcel of goods. Atkinson v. Elliott, 7 T. R. 378.

Third persons, holding the acceptance of a trader who was known to be in bad circumstances, agreed with the defendants, as a mode of covering the amount of the bill, that it should be indorsed to them, and that they should purchase goods of the trader, which were to be paid for by a bill at three months' date, or made equal to cash in three months (before which time the trader's acceptance would be due,) but without communicating to the trader that they were the holders of his acceptance:—Held, that the trader having become bankrupt, and his assignees having brought assumpsit to recover the value of the goods sold and delivered to the defendants, the latter could not set off the bankrupt's acceptance, which they did not hold in their own right, but in effect for such other persons. Fair v. M'Iver, 16 East, 130.

A., at Hamburg, had dealings with B. & Co. in London, and previous to their bankruptcy drew a bill on them for 400*l.*, which they accepted. No debt was then due from them to A., but they were afterwards indebted to him in 236*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.*, when they drew on him for 163*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.*, being the balance due from A. in case the bill for 400*l.* had been paid. This bill was drawn on the 16th of February, and on the same day sold by them to the defendant for its full value, to be paid for on the 20th of the same month, on which day B. & Co. committed an act of bankruptcy, and requested the defendant to keep the bill at the disposal of A., by whom the bill for 400*l.* was drawn. On the 23d of February, A. accepted the bill without knowledge of the bankruptcy, and paid the amount of it, when it became due, to the defendant, on an agreement that he should resist the claims of the assignees. At that time the bill for 400*l.* was over due and unpaid in the hands of A., and B. & Co. were indebted to him upon it in more than the amount of the bill in question:—Held, that the plaintiffs, as assignees, could not recover against the defendant, as he stood in the place of A. who was a creditor of the estate of B. & Co., and that this, therefore, was a case of mutual credit between him and the bankrupts before the bankruptcy. Sheldon v. Rothschild, 2 Moore, 43.

8. Other Debts.

Executors were allowed to set off a moiety of a legacy given by their testator to the wife of the bankrupt against a debt due from the bankrupt to their testator. Ex parte O'Ferrall, 1 Glyn & J. 348.

Assumpsit by the assignees of R., a bankrupt, on a note drawn by defendant, payable to G. or order, and by him indorsed to the bankrupt before the bankruptcy. It appeared that, in October, 1825, G. applied to the bankrupt to discount the note, and took as part payment the proceeds of a bill accepted by the bankrupt, payable to G.'s order. G. indorsed this bill for value to the defendant, and he got it discounted by H., who was the holder when it became due. A commission of bankruptcy issued against R. on the 23d of December, and the bill became due on the 24th, when it was presented and dishonoured. On the 26th, H. received the amount from the defendant, and returned the bill to him:—Held, that he had a right to set off the bill against the demand of the assignees on the promissory note. Collins v. Jones, 10 B. & C. 777.

A. and B. entered into partnership as brewers, A. bringing in as his share of the capital, a brewhouse and other premises, which were subject to mortgages for debts due by him. A. retired from the business, which was continued by B. alone, who agreed to take the brewhouse, &c. at a valuation; but the amount was not to be paid till the mortgages were satisfied. B. became bankrupt, and the mortgage debts remaining unpaid, his assignees, before any proof made in respect of A.'s debt, paid off the mortgages:—Held, that the assignees were entitled to deduct the sums paid by them from the dividends on the sum which was due to A. from B. at the time of his bankruptcy. Rowe v. Anderson, 4 Sim. 267.

The defendant and one C. purchased a string of pearls with money advanced by the defendant, and agreed that the profit and loss thereon should be equally divided, C. paying his share of interest till the pearls were sold. C. became bankrupt being indebted at that time to defendant. The pearls were afterwards sold, and the money received by the defendant. In an action by the assignees of C. for his share of the money received, it was held that the defendant was entitled to set off the debt due from C. to himself, this being a case of mutual credit within the statute 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 28. French v. Fenn, 3 Dougl. 257.

9. Proof of Set-off.

In an action by assignees, it is not sufficient proof of a set-off, that the commissioners permitted the defendant to prove the debt proposed to be set off. Pirie v. Menett, 3 Camp. 279; 1 Rose, 359—Ellenborough.

Where, to an action by assignees for a debt due to the bankrupt's estate, the defendant set off notes in his possession, issued by the bankrupt before the bankruptcy; proof that notes to the amount of the set-off came into his hands three or four weeks before the bankruptcy, was held sufficient evidence from which the jury might infer that he was in possession of them at the time of the bankruptcy, without identifying them with the notes produced. Moore v. Wright, 2 Marsh. 209; 6 Taunt. 517; 2 Rose, 470.

In such an action the defendant may plead a tender as to part, and give evidence of a set-off as to the remainder, without having pleaded the set-off. Wells v. Crofts, 4 C. & P. 332—Tent.

Or such set-off may be so given in evidence as to the whole. Id.

10. Petition.

Where a creditor has proved a debt, and the assignees have a demand against him, which, if determined in their favour, would give them a lien upon the dividends, they may proceed by a petition in the bankruptcy to enforce that demand. Ex parte Timbrell, Buck, 305.

A. and B., partners, gave a joint and several bond to C., who afterwards became indebted to A. B. became bankrupt. C. proved the bond under the commission, and then brought a joint action against A. and B., to which B. pleaded his certificate; A. being by this form of action precluded from setting off his separate debt, applied for and obtained an injunction against C.'s proceedings in the joint action. Bradley v. Millar, 1 Rose, 273.

XVII. DIVIDEND.

1. Audit of Accounts.

Statute.—By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 106, the commissioners at the meeting appointed for the last examination are to appoint a meeting, not sooner than four calendar months from the issuing of the commission, nor later than six from such last examination, with twenty-one days' notice; and the assignees are to deliver, upon oath, a statement in writing of their accounts, which the commissioners are to examine, audit, and allow.

Although an audit meeting has closed, and the assignee's accounts are then settled, the commissioner, at any future meeting, has power to examine the assignees as to monies received before and not included in such accounts, and to re-investigate those accounts generally if need be. In re Applegath, 2 Deac. & Chit. 101.

2. Declaring.

Statute.—By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 107, the commissioners are to appoint a public meeting, with twenty-one days' notice, not sooner than four, nor later than six months from the issuing of the commission, to make a dividend, at which meeting creditors may prove: the commissioners are to make an order of dividend; in pursuance of which the assignees are to make the dividend.

If three commissioners were not present when an order of dividend was made, it was invalid. Ex parte Day and Cooper, 1 Mont. 213.

It was discretionary in the Lord Chancellor to postpone the dividend beyond the time limited by stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 33; but a petition by creditors of surviving partners, that the dividend might be postponed until those who were also creditors of a deceased partner, and had filed a bill against his representatives for an account of his assets, and payment of their debts, should have gone in under the decree, was dismissed for want of equity. Ex parte Kendal, 1 Rose, 71.

Final.—By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 109, the final dividend is to be made in the same manner within eighteen months after the issuing of the commission; unless there is an action or suit depending, or some part of the estate be outstanding, in which case the final dividend is to be made within two months after the estate is converted into money.

3. Who entitled.

After a dividend, fresh creditors coming in shall only be paid subsequent dividends, pari passu with those who have proved before; but if the assignees have paid other creditors differently, they must let these creditors in for the first dividend. Ex parte Long, 2 Bro. C. C. 50.

A surety is entitled to dividends on the debt proved by his satisfied principal. Ex parte Brook, 2 Rose, 334.

A surety for indemnity to a limited amount, having paid to the extent of his engagement, is entitled to dividends upon proof by the creditor under the bankruptcy of the principal debtor, subject to a deduction of the proportion of dividend upon the residue of the debt proved beyond that for which the surety was engaged supposing that expunged. Payley v. Field, 12 Ves. jun. 435. And see Ex parte Turner, 3 Ves. jun. 243.

In 1806, P. proved a debt against the estate of B. and C., bankrupts, on a bill of exchange, and died in 1807, appointing G. his executor; G. became bankrupt in 1816, and obtained his certificate in 1817: but before that time, viz. in the years 1811, 1814, and 1815, G. had, as executor, received three dividends on P.'s debt, and in 1817, 1822, and 1828, he received three other dividends. It afterwards turned out that the bill of exchange was paid by another party in 1807, so that no dividend was ever due. On petition by B. & Co.'s assignees to expunge the proof, and that G. should refund the six dividends:—Held, first, that it being in the nature of a trust, the statute of limitations did not run in favour of G.; but, secondly, that as the first three dividends were paid in error, and were a legal debt against G., and might have been proved under his bankruptcy, the claim as to them was barred by his certificate; the other three received since his bankruptcy, were ordered to be refunded. Ex parte Bolton, 1 Deac. & Chit. 556.

The banker appointed under a commission becoming bankrupt, his estate is not entitled to any dividend on a debt proved by him against the other, until full reimbursement of all property of that estate beyond the amount of his dividend. Ex parte Graham, 3 Ves. & B. 130; 2 Rose, 74; S. P. Ex parte Bebb, 19 Ves. jun. 222.

Separate creditors cannot take a dividend upon the joint estate rateably with the joint creditors, as each estate is applicable to its own debts. Ex parte Eldon, 3 Ves. jun. 240.

Upon the proof of a joint debt under a separate commission, no dividend can be taken till the separate creditors have received 20s. in the pound. Ex parte Abell, 4 Ves. jun. 837.

A joint creditor being the petitioning creditor in a separate commission, is entitled to receive dividends with the separate creditors, not being within the rule excluding the other joint creditors. Ex parte Ackerman, 14 Ves. jun. 604.

A. was a creditor of a bankrupt on a bill of exchange, and also on a simple contract debt, and proved both debts under the commission. He afterwards received 20s. in the pound on the bill from the other parties liable thereon:—Held, that he could not take a dividend on his whole debt proved, (although it should not amount to 20s. in the pound on the remaining debt,) but only on the remaining debt. Ex parte Woodman, 1 Cox, 201.

A creditor who held a bill with the bankrupt's name upon it, and proved a debt upon a deposition stating that he held the bill as security, and subsequently received 15s. in the pound upon the bill from other parties, and 5s. in the pound upon his proof, was restrained from receiving further dividends on the amount of the bill. Ex parte Rufford, 1 Glyn & J. 41.

B., a creditor of the bankrupt, assigns his estate and the debts due to him to trustees, in payment of his creditors, and afterwards proves his debt under the commission:—Held, that the assignees under the commission were not entitled to deduct from the dividend on that proof, a sum due from B. to them for costs, upon the dismissal of a bill filed by B. against them, and dismissed subsequent to the assignment and prior to the proof. Ex parte Whitehead, 1 Glyn & J. 39.

Accommodation bills upon the bankruptcy of the drawer were fully paid by the acceptor to the holder, who having a further demand under the commission, proved for the whole including the bills:—Held, that he might take out of the dividend upon the bills, the proportion he would have received upon the residue of his debt beyond the bills, if the debt for the bills had been expunged; and that the rest of the dividend on the bills belonged to the acceptor. Ex parte Turner, 3 Ves. jun. 243.

B. and G. carry on business at M., as commission agents under the firm of B. & Co., G. being also a trader on his own separate account at S., under the firm of G. & Co., and being likewise a partner with J. in London, trading under the firm of J. & Co., and with S. R. at L., trading under the firm of S. R. B. & Co. draw two bills on J. & Co., payable to the order of B. & Co., which J. & Co. accept, and which are afterwards indorsed by B. & Co., G. & Co. and S. R.; and of which W. & Co. become the holders for a valuable consideration, without any knowledge that G. is a partner in the house of B. & Co., or in that of J. & Co. B. and G. and J. severally become bankrupt;—the judges were equally divided on the question whether W. & Co. could prove the amount of the bills, both against the joint estate of B. & G., and the separate estate of G., or whether they must elect:—But held, per tot. cur., that the amount of dividends which had been previously declared, though not received by W. & Co. under the commission against J., must be deducted from such proof. Ex parte Moulton, 1 Deac. & Chit. 44.

Assignees are not justified in delaying payment of dividends, on the ground that notice has been given them by a third person of a claim upon the dividends, no petition having been presented by such claimant within a reasonable period after such notice of a claim. Ex parte Aleopp, 1 Madd. 603.

4. Remedies for.

Action and Petition.—By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 111, no action is to be brought against assignees for a dividend; but if they refuse to pay it, an order for payment with interest and costs may be made on petition.

Before the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, which contains the same enactment, assumpsit would lie for a dividend. Brown v. Bullen, 1 Dougl. 407.

In such action, the proceedings before the commissioners were conclusive evidence of the debt; and the assignees could not set off a debt due from the plaintiff. Id.

Upon a petition by a creditor for his dividend, the assignees can only resist the payment upon such ground as they could have defended an action previous to the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121. Ex parte Hodges, Buck, 524.

Upon a petition to be paid a dividend, the debt cannot be disputed. Ex parte Loxley, Buck, 450.

Under a commission against A., a dividend was declared and repeatedly advertised to be paid to the creditors who had proved. Subsequently to the appointed days for payment, B. and C., the bankers to the commission, in whose hands a sum more than sufficient for the payment of the dividend had been left by the assignees, stopped payment and afterwards became bankrupt:—Held that an order of dividend is to be considered as a separation from the bulk of the estate of the sum to be divided, and that the unpaid dividends were lying in the hands of the bankers at the risk of the creditors, who had neglected to apply for payment. Ex parte Powell, 1 Mont. & Mac. 283.

An order for payment of dividends declared upon a creditor's petition for that purpose, raises, like the execution in the action for which the petition is substituted, a personal responsibility against the assignee. Ex parte Graham, 1 Rose, 456.

An official assignee cannot resist payment of a dividend. Ex parte Alexander, 1 Mont. 503.

An order was made for payment of a dividend in bankruptcy, with interest and costs, on petition under the stat. 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 12, the assignees not being prepared to state their objection. Ex parte Atkinson, 3 Ves. & B. 13.

Where assignees had made no dividend, but, thirteen years after the bankruptcy, had from the produce of the property accumulated enough to give 15s. in the pound, a sale and distribution were ordered on petition of one creditor. Ex parte Goring, 1 Ves. jun. 168.

If an application for payment of a dividend is not made until after the statute of limitations has run; quære, if it is not lapsed? Ex parte Burgess, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 415.

Half of the dividends upon proof of 500L., in respect of a legacy to the wife of the bankrupt, was ordered to be paid to her without a reference. Ex parte Newham, 1 Glyn & J. 40.

Where a bankrupt trustee had suffered the trust fund to be misappropriated the court directed that the son of the cestui que trust might prove for the amount, retaining the dividends till further order. Ex parte Vine, 1 Deac. & Chit. 357.

A surviving assignee is liable for the payment of dividends, if his co-assignee ever admitted the proof of the debt, although the creditor has failed to apply for the dividends for many years; and unless it can be proved that the creditor has received them, the onus of the proof of payment lies on the assignee; and this notwithstanding there is no sufficient fund left of the bankrupt's estate to pay the creditors. Ex parte Healey, 1 Deac. & Chit. 361.

Where a creditor addresses a written request to assignees, in general terms, to pay "the dividends made on the bankrupt's estate" to A. B., the assignees are justified in paying subsequent dividends to A. B., until they have notice from the creditor that he has revoked A. B.'s authority. Ex parte Bright, 2 Deac. & Chit. 8.

Interest is payable on a dividend at 5 per cent. Ex parte Loxley, 1 Glyn & J. 345.

On a petition for payment of dividend, which is unsuccessfully opposed by the assignees, interest at 5 per cent., and costs, are of course against the assignees, who, if they act bonâ fide, may reimburse themselves out of the estate. Ex parte Harrison, 1 Mont. 250.

Course in Court of Bankruptcy.—When a dividend has been, or may be declared, and when any part of the bankrupt's estate shall have been paid into the Bank of England by any official assignee, to the credit of the accountant-general of the high court of Chancery and of such bankrupt's estate, any one of the judges of the court may, by order under his hand, direct the sum ordered to be divided, on such part thereof as may be required, to be carried over from such account, to an account to be opened in the books of the Bank of England, in the name of the same estate, to be intituled "the dividend account," in which order shall be specified the names of the chief registrar of the court of bankruptcy for the time being, and of the official assignee appointed to such estate; and the judge shall execute two parts of his said order, one part of which shall be filed and remain of record with the proceedings in such bankruptcy, and the other part shall be delivered by the official assignee to the accountant general, who shall thereupon by his certificate direct the sum specified in the judge's order to be carried over as aforesaid, and shall in such certificate state the names of the chief registrar and official assignee mentioned in the judge's order, and shall direct the cashiers of the Bank to pay the money so carried over to the drafts of the official assignee, countersigned by the chief or other registrar duly authorized to countersign the same, and such transfer shall be made accordingly, and the cashiers of the Bank shall, out of the monies so carried over, pay all drafts so drawn and countersigned as aforesaid. Reg. Gen. March 28, 1832, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxxii. c.

When any such order of dividend shall have been made, the solicitor to the commission shall forthwith make out a list of the creditors, and shall place in separate columns, after the name of each creditor, the amount of his debt, and the sum which he is entitled to receive in respect thereof, by virtue of such order of dividend, leaving another column in blank for the purpose hereinafter mentioned, and shall to each name prefix a number in regular series, and shall sign such list, and lay it before the assignees chosen by the creditors, who shall examine and sign the same, and the solicitor shall then deliver the list to the official assignee, who shall examine and sign the same if correct, and shall take a copy thereof, and shall deliver the original to the chief registrar. Reg. Gen. March 28, 1832, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxxii. d.

And the chief registrar shall immediately upon the receipt of the said list, deliver to the official assignee books containing as many blank drafts and receipts as may be necessary, and in such form as shall from time to time be prescribed by the court, and the official assignee shall number and fill up a draft for each dividend, by inserting in each draft the name of the creditor, to which the number of such draft is prefixed in the list, and the dividend payable to him; and the official assignee shall take the draft book so filled up to the chief registrar, who shall compare the same with the list in his possession, and shall sign all such drafts as he shall find correctly drawn, and in case of any error shall cancel such drafts as are incorrectly drawn, and fill up and sign others in lieu thereof, and shall return the draft book so signed to the official assignee for the purposes hereinafter mentioned, who shall thereupon number and fill up the receipts to correspond with the drafts so signed.

When any creditor, or any person duly authorized under his hand to receive his dividend, shall apply for payment, the official assignee shall require the production of such securities (if any) as the creditor may hold for his debt; and if satisfied that the amount of the said dividend still remains due, shall fill up the date in the draft and receipt; and upon the creditor, or such other person authorized as aforesaid, signing the receipt for such dividend, the official assignee shall mark the securities (if any) with the amount of that dividend, and shall sign and deliver the draft for the same; provided that no dividend shall be paid to any creditor holding any security for his debt until such security shall be produced, without the special directions of the commissioner in that behalf. Reg. Gen. March 28, 1832, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxxii. e.

If, after such list shall have been so made and signed, it shall from any cause seem expedient and just to the commissioner that such list shall be altered, the said commissioner may make such alterations as to him shall seem just, or may direct a new list to be made, and may thereupon cancel all such drafts (if any) as shall be thereby rendered useless, and direct other drafts to be drawn corresponding with the amended or new list, (as the case may be,) and the registrar and official assignee shall thereupon fill up and sign such new drafts, and pay the same to the several creditors as hereinbefore directed; provided that every such alteration in the amount of a dividend shall be inserted in the blank column of such list, and shall be signed by such commissioner and official assignee before any draft shall be drawn in pursuance thereof. Reg. Gen. March 28, 1832, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxxii. e.

Where any part of the money so transferred by the accountant-general shall become and remain unappropriated to the payment of any such dividend, the commissioner may, by order under his hand, direct such residue to be carried back to the account from which it was originally transferred, and the same shall be thereupon carried back accordingly, and a certificate of such transfer shall be sent to the office of the said accountant-general. Reg. Gen. March 28, 1832, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxx. f.

5. Unclaimed Dividends.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 110, assignees are to file an account of unclaimed dividends amounting in the whole to 50*l.*; and a power is given of investing such dividends, and after three years dividing the same among the other creditors.

An order was made to divide unclaimed dividends among the other creditors. Es parte Donaldson, 1 Deac. & Chit. 110.

An order is nisi only in the first instance, when made for the distribution of unclaimed dividends. Es parte Robinson, 1 Deac. & Chit. 542.

XVIII. INTEREST ON DEBTS.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 132, the surplus is not to be paid to the bankrupt, until all the creditors who have proved shall have received interest upon their debts in the following manner, viz. creditors, whose debts by law carry interest in the first instance, according to the rate by law payable, to be calculated from the date of the commission; and then all other creditors who have proved at the rate of 4 per cent. from the date of the commission.

This section allowing interest to simple contract creditors is not retrospective. Ex parte Shepard, 1 Mont. & Mac. 67.

In bankruptcy, interest stops at the date of the commission, unless there is a surplus; and in that case, before the statute, only creditors having debts bearing interest received subsequent interest. Butcher v. Churchill, 14 Ves. jun. 573.

Interest subsequent to the commission could not be charged upon the estate, directly or indirectly, except in case of surplus. Ex parte Paton, 1 Glyn & J. 332.

Where there was a surplus, creditors were entitled to interest upon their debts. Ex parte Gering, 1 Ves. jun. 170.

But not unless it had been provided for by contract, either express or implied; and upon bonds not beyond the penalty. Ex parte Williams, 1 Rose, 399; S. P. Ex parte Hankey, 3 Bro. C. C. 584; Ex parte Boyd, 1 Glyn & J. 285.

The rule, that, on a written undertaking to pay money on a day certain or on demand, interest shall run from the day or demand, without a contract for it, did not extend to the case of a surplus in bankruptcy: interest, therefore, subsequent to the commission, was confined to debts carrying interest by contract. Ex parte Koch, 1 Ves. & B. 342.

But interest was allowed, whether the contract appeared either on the face of the security, or by extrinsic evidence. Ex parte Mills, 2 Ves. jun. 295.

As where, by course of trading and settling accounts, interest was allowed after a certain credit. Ex parte Champion, 3 Bro. C. C. 436.

The estate, if sufficient, was to pay interest for debts which carried it, but not if it broke in upon the allowance. Ex parte Morris, 3 Bro. C. C. 79.

Interest out of the surplus was refused upon the bankrupt's notes payable upon demand, as not being debts carrying interest, either by contract or on the face of them. Ex parte Cocks, 1 Rose, 317.

A separate creditor is not entitled to interest from the surplus, until joint creditors shall have been paid in full. Ex parte Minchin, 2 Glyn & J. 287; S. P. Ex parte Clarke, 4 Ves. jun. 677.

A surety paying after the bankruptcy to a creditor who has proved, can only stand in his place upon the bankrupt's estate; and, in case of a surplus, can claim no interest which the creditor could not have claimed. Ex parte Houston & Boyd, 2 Glyn & J. 36.

There being a surplus, after dividing to the amount of the whole principal, with interest to the suing out the commission, subsequent interest was ordered on petition of bond creditors, saving just allowances; and the commissioners might give it without order, and need stop at nothing but want of assets; but no compound interest was allowed. Ex parte Morris, 1 Ves. jun. 132.

Under a joint commission, the right of the creditors to interest subsequent to the date of the commission in the case of a surplus, was preferred to a debt due from the separate to the joint estate, upon the principle that neither the partnership nor the individual debtor could claim in competition with the creditors. Ex parte Reeve, 9 Ves. jun. 589.

When there is a surplus upon an estate of three, which is indebted to two, the creditors of the three are entitled to interest before the surplus is carried to the estate of the two. Ex parte Ogle, 1 Mont. 350.

Interest out of a surplus is given to a judgment creditor, from the date of the commission to the time when the principal sums were paid, notwithstanding the securities were at the time delivered up to the assignees, with receipts in full indorsed on them, the creditors apprehending the estates would not produce a surplus, which proved to be a mistake. Ex parte Day, 2 Rose, 148.

Interest in case of a surplus, under the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 132, is to be calculated on the whole debt up to the first dividend, then upon the principal money unpaid, after deducting the amount of the dividend, up to the second dividend, and so on. Ex parte Haynes, 2 Glyn & J. 123.

XIX. BANKRUPT.

1. Surrender, Examination, and Commitment.
(a) Statutes.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 36, the commissioners, by writing under their hands, may summon the bankrupt before them, whether he shall have obtained his certificate or not; and if he shall not come at the time appointed, (having no lawful impediment made known to and allowed by them,) they may, by warrant under their hands and seals, authorize and direct any person they shall think fit to apprehend and arrest the bankrupt, and bring him before them; and upon his appearance, either voluntarily or compulsorily, they may examine him upon oath, either by word of mouth or by interrogatories, touching all matters relating to his trade, dealings, or estate, or which may tend to disclose any secret grant, conveyance, or concealment of his lands, tenements, goods, money, or debts, and may reduce his answers into writing, which examination the bankrupt is to sign and subscribe; and if the bankrupt shall refuse to be sworn, or to answer any questions put to him by the commissioners touching any of the matters aforesaid, or shall not fully answer to the satisfaction of the commissioners any such questions, (not having any lawful objection, allowed by them,) the commissioners may, by warrant under their hands and seals, commit him to such prison as they shall think fit, without bail, until he shall submit.

By s. 37, the commissioners may, in like manner, summon and examine the bankrupt's wife.

By s. 38, there is a penalty of 500*l.* for permitting the escape of a committed bankrupt.

By s. 112, the bankrupt must surrender before three o'clock on the forty-second day after notice in writing of the commission left at his usual place of abode, or personally served if in prison, and notice in the Gazette; and sign his surrender, and submit to be examined by the commissioners on oath.

By s. 115, bankrupts apprehended by warrant of the commissioners shall, if within the time allowed for surrender they submit to be examined, and in all things conform, have the same benefit as if they had voluntarily surrendered.

Under the former statute, 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 14, when the bankrupt was apprehended under a judge's warrant, the commissioners had the power of examining him, although the time for his surrender had expired; and if his answers were satisfactory, he was discharged, unless indicted: if not, the commissioners had the same power of committing as on other examinations. Ex parte Hunt, 2 J. & W. 560.

(b) When in Custody.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 119, when the bankrupt is in prison or in custody, the commissioners may, by warrant directed to the jailer, cause him to be brought before them at any meeting, either public or private; and if he is desirous to surrender, he may be so brought up at the expense of his estate.

Before the statute, a bankrupt in prison for debt was entitled to be carried before the commissioners, that he might surrender himself at the expense of the estate, notwithstanding he might, upon a summary application, have obtained his discharge. Ex parte Emery, Buck, 527.

The 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 13, empowered the commissioners to bring before them "every bankrupt being in custody charged in execution at the time of his last examination," to be examined by them in the same manner as was theretofore in practice with respect to bankrupts in custody on mesne process:—Held, that this being a remedial clause, the words "last examination" did not mean the last day of examination, but that the power of the commissioners to compel the bankrupt to appear before them, extended to every day on which he was to be examined touching the disclosure of his estate and effects. Spence v. Jones, 1 D. & R. 377; 5 B. & A. 705.

(c) Enlargement of Time.

In what cases allowed.—By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 113, the chancellor may, as often as he thinks fit, from time to time enlarge the time for the bankrupt's surrender, so as every order for the purpose be made six days at least before the day on which the bankrupt was to surrender.

Where a bankrupt omits to surrender within the time given, the court of Review will, under some circumstances, appoint a fresh meeting to take his surrender. Ex parte Jeffreys, 2 Deac. & Chit. 86.

Where the bankrupt, after attending the last meeting before the commissioners, inadvertently absented himself without passing his last examination, the court, on his petition, ordered a fresh meeting for that purpose, on payment of costs. Ex parte Dixon, 1 Deac. & Chit. 351.

A bankrupt was permitted to surrender under circumstances of innocent omission, although the assignees opposed. Ex parte Shiles, 2 Rose, 381; 1 Madd. 248. And see Ex parte Higginson, 12 Ves. jun. 496.

So, where his omission to surrender arose from apprehension of a prosecution. Ex parte Berryman, 1 Glyn & J. 223.

A bankrupt's petition for a meeting to take his surrender, where he had been prevented from surrendering by illness, was allowed. Ex parte Bould, 2 Bro. C. C. 49.

So, where the bankrupt had been committed. Ex parte Graham, 2 Bro. C. C. 48.

But where he had gone abroad, where he swore he was detained by illness, his petition was dismissed, it being sworn on the other side that he was apparently well. Ex parte White, 2 Bro. C. C. 47.

When the bankrupt is abroad, the time for his surrender will be enlarged. Ex parte Dodds, 1 Deac. & Chit. 76.

If the assignees desire the bankrupt to stay abroad to get in his effects, it is no ground to induce the court to appoint a new time for his surrender, which is only done in cases of surprise or accident. Ex parte Dawson, 2 Cox, 48.

Manner and Terms of granting.—The commissioners cannot apply for an enlargement of the time to surrender. Ex parte Hall, 1 Mont. 3.

An order to enlarge the time can be obtained only on the application of the bankrupt himself, or the assignees, by affidavit. Fuller's case, 10 Ves. jun. 183.

It is irregular in the assignees to obtain an ex parte order to enlarge the time for the last examination of a bankrupt who is ready to attend. Ex parte Dayrie, 1 Glyn & J. 281.

Upon application six days before the day appointed for surrender, an order to enlarge the time is of course, as well since as before the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 113. Ex parte Rose, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 268; 1 Deac. & Chit. 37.

Under the old law, the order must have been made before the expiration of the forty-second day. Ex parte Du Fresne, 1 Rose, 311.

A bankrupt obtaining leave to surrender, after the time for surrendering is expired, pays the costs. Ex parte Carter, 4 Madd. 394.

A bankrupt being prevented from surrendering because the commissioners did not attend at the day, on petition of the commissioners another day was appointed. The court blamed their conduct, and said the petition ought to have been by the bankrupt. Ex parte Grey, 1 Ves. jun. 195.

An order for enlarging the time for a bankrupt who had omitted to finish his examination would not discharge a prosecution for the felony. Ex parte Ricketts, 6 Ves. jun. 445.

Under stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 5, if the bankrupt surrender within the forty-two days after notice, &c. the commissioners may, by their own authority, afterwards enlarge the time for taking his examination. Davis v. Trotter, 8 T. R. 475; 3 Esp. 40.

But they were not authorized to enlarge the time for the disclosure of a bankrupt's estate and effects beyond the time mentioned in the third section of that statute, still less for an indefinite or unlimited period. Claughton v. Leigh, 2 D. & R. 831; 1 B. & C. 652. And see Arding v. Flower, 8 T. R. 534.

(d) Proceedings to examine.

It seems more expedient to refer the examination of a bankrupt to the Subdivision Court rather than to the court of Review. Ex parte Feaks, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 217; 2 Deac. & Chit. 226.

Quære, whether the court of Review can commit for an insufficient examination? Id.

Semble, the court of Review has no power to Commit on an adjourned examination from before one commissioner. In re Heath, 2 Deac. & Chit. 214; 1 Mont. & Bligh. 187.

The Lord Chancellor would not make an order upon the commissioners how to conduct the examination of the bankrupt. Ex parte Cridland, 3 Ves. & B. 95; 2 Rose, 164.

There was jurisdiction in bankruptcy to enforce the commissioners' order for the attendance of the bankrupt, who had passed his examination and obtained his certificate. Anon. 14 Ves. jun. 449.

The commissioners had no power to delegate their authority to examine the bankrupt. Cassidy's case, 19 Ves. jun. 324; 2 Rose, 218.

It appearing on the bankrupt's examination, that he had lost more than 5*l.* at play at one time, this cannot be expunged from the examination, though consented to by the creditor at whose instance it was inserted. Ex parte Bartoft, 2 Cox, 49.

(e) Cause of Commitment.

Unsatisfactory Answers.]—A bankrupt's not answering a question respecting the disposition of his estate and effects to the satisfaction of the commissioners, was held good cause of commitment by them. Rex v. Perrot, 2 Burr. 1122.

A bankrupt committed for not answering to the satisfaction of the commissioners, was remanded by the court of Chancery, and again remanded by the court of K. B. Rex v. Perrot, 2 Burr. 1215.

If commissioners think that the bankrupt has not answered satisfactorily upon his examination, they are bound to commit him; but he may be discharged, either upon his answering satisfactorily to them at a subsequent time, or upon his answer already given being deemed satisfactory by such other jurisdiction as he shall be brought before by habeas corpus. Ex parte Oliver, 1 Rose, 407; 2 Ves. & B. 244.

Where a bankrupt, after repeated examinations, was finally committed for unsatisfactory answers, the court granted a mandamus conditionally to the commissioners, to issue their warrant for a further examination, on a suggestion that the bankrupt was desirous of making a full disclosure. In re Bromley, 3 D. & R. 310.

A bankrupt may be committed by the commissioners, though swearing positively, if his answers are not reasonably satisfactory. Taylor's case, 8 Ves. jun. 328; S. P. Ex parte Oliver, 2 Ves. & B. 244; 1 Rose, 407; Crowley's case, Buck, 264; 2 Swans. 75.

If, upon the examination of a bankrupt touching the disposition of his property, he swear to an account of the same, which appears to be incredible, the commissioners may commit him to prison. Ex parte Nowlan, 6 T. R. 118.

The commissioners cannot commit a bankrupt for misbehaviour only, or any act or omission not comprised in the statute giving them authority. Miller v. Seare, 2 W. Black. 1141.

A general answer by a bankrupt under examination, that he has lost 1886*l.* by selling goods under prime cost, is not satisfactory, especially if falsified by subsequent confessions of the disposal of different sums for other purposes. Langhorn's case, 2 W. Black. 919. And see Miller's case, 3 Wils. 427; 2 W. Black. 881.

A bankrupt, to a question whether he had not within six months previous to the commission executed two conveyances of his estate and effects, or part thereof, to his son, answered, "Not to my knowledge." This answer held to be satisfactory, no further questions having been put. Norris's case, 2 J. & W. 437.

A bankrupt, on his examination, answering a question which embodies a statement of the acts or sayings of himself, or of a third person, without denying or qualifying, is understood to admit the statement. Crowley's case, 2 Swans. 75; Buck, 264.

Quære, whether, for the purpose of determining that the answers of a bankrupt on his examination are unsatisfactory, the commissioners can resort to the evidence of third persons? Crowley's case, 2 Swans. 1; Buck. 264.

The examination of a third person by commissioners is not evidence for the formation of their judgment, but merely a brief to enable them to interrogate the witness. In re Goodwin, 1 Mont. 304.

What lawful Questions.]—Quære, whether a bankrupt can be compelled to criminate himself?

In re Heath, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 184; 2 Deac. & Chit. 214. See Ex parte Feaks, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 219; 2 Deac. & Chit. 226.

Semle, a bankrupt is bound to disclose his property, although an indictment is pending against him for concealing it, &c., and although his answers may tend to criminate himself. Cross, J. dubit. Id.

A bankrupt is bound to answer touching his estate, although his answer may tend to convict him of perjury on a former occasion, and of concealing his effects. In re Smith, 2 Deac. & Chit. 230; 1 Mont. & Bligh, 203.

Quære, whether, after a bankrupt has passed his last examination, he can be examined as to concealment? Id.

The bankrupt must answer every lawful question; and although he is not bound to criminate himself, yet, if he refuses to account for any part of his effects, his refusal subjects him to commitment. Ex parte Oliver, 1 Rose, 407; 2 Ves. & B. 244.

That his answer tends to criminate another is no objection. Id.

A bankrupt cannot refuse to discover the particulars relating to his estate and effects, although such information may tend to show that he has committed a criminal act; but if the question put to him be whether or not he has done an act clearly of a criminal nature, he may refuse to answer it. So, where a petition prayed that the creditors might be at liberty to examine the bankrupt, whether he, or any person in trust for him or for his benefit, have received, or are to receive, any sum of money or other valuable consideration for his having resigned, or as an inducement to resign, the office of town-clerk of the city of Bristol, it was dismissed. Ex parte Cossens, Buck, 531.

A commitment upon the following question and answer held to be invalid:—Question: "You have stated to the commissioners, that if you were out of prison, you could find the persons named by you as debtors to your estate: and being directed to communicate to your assignee how or where such persons could be found, and your assignee having called upon you, and seen you in the Fleet prison for that purpose, have you given him any such information; and if not, why not?" Answer: "I have not, and can give no reason why." Ex parte Cassidy, 2 Rose, 218; 19 Ves. jun. 324.

A bankrupt under examination being asked whether the statements contained in a written paper, and shown to him, were true statements, demurred to the question, on the ground that his answer might expose him to a criminal prosecution, and was committed for not answering:—Held, under the circumstances of the case, that the bankrupt was entitled to demur to a question in so general a form. Commissioners of bankrupt are not empowered to dispense with the rule of law by which a party is protected from criminating himself. Ex parte Kirby, 1 Mont. & Mac. 212.

Statement in writing.—It seems that under 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 13, the bankrupt was bound to render to the commissioners an account in writing of his estate and effects, if required to do so. Davie v. Milford, 4 B. & A. 356.

Where a bankrupt, on the day appointed by the commissioners for his last examination before them, promised to produce a balance sheet, if further time were allowed him, and several adjournments took place during a period of ten months, at which adjournments he represented an account in writing to be necessary, in order to make the discovery required of his estate and effects, and promised from time to time to produce the balance sheet; on his not doing so at the last adjournment, and assigning no sufficient reason for not doing so, the commissioners were justified in committing him. Id.

Where the last examination of a bankrupt was repeatedly adjourned, in order that he might produce a written account, as the only mode of explaining his trade and dealings, and the last adjournment was made upon his assurance that he would produce such account if further time was given:—Held, that such account not being produced, nor any satisfactory reason given for not producing it on the day to which the adjournment was made, the commissioners were justified in committing. Stanley Goddard's case, 1 Glyn & J. 45.

Production of Books.—The great seal had jurisdiction, after the bankrupt had passed his examination, to compel him to deliver up papers in his possession belonging to the estate, and to attend before the commissioners. Ex parte Bradley, 1 Rose, 202.

Where the commissioners refused to proceed in the bankrupt's examination, unless he produced his books, &c., which were in the office of a master of the court of Chancery in Ireland, or copies of them, an order was made, declaring that such books, or copies of them, must, if required, be produced at the expense of the estate. Ex parte Cridland, 2 Rose, 164; 3 Ves. & B. 103.

Where a bankrupt was required by the assignees, on his last examination, to deliver to them his books of account, which he did:—Held, that he must be deemed to have delivered them on compulsion; and it being afterwards found that he was not a trader, and that a commission had improperly issued, that he might support an action of trover against such assignees without any previous demand of such books. Summersett v. Jarvis, 6 Moore, 56; 3 B. & B. 2.

(f) Warrant of Commitment.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 39, if any person be committed for refusing to answer, or for not fully answering any question, the commissioners are to specify every such question in their warrant.

In determining whether they would issue their warrant, the commissioners must have been acting together; but it was not necessary that all of them should be present when each of them signed it. Battye v. Greasley, 8 East, 319.

Where a warrant of commitment by commissioners, after setting out the issuing of the commission, and the adjudication, &c. stated, as the ground of commitment, that the bankrupt being brought before them, and they having proposed to administer an oath to him, he refused to be sworn, or to give an account of his property:—Held, that such warrant was legal, and that it was not necessary in it to set out any specific question in such case; for this was a refusal to answer all possible questions which could be suggested:—Held also, that after the issuing of the writ of habeas corpus, and before the return of it, the commissioners may, if necessary, make a fresh warrant, stating more fully the cause for detaining the bankrupt in custody, and that such warrant may by words of reference, incorporate the formal parts of the first warrant:—Held also, that if both warrants are defective in form, the court will, if a substantial cause of commitment appear, recommit the bankrupt ex officio:—Held also that a commitment by a justice of the peace, under 6 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 14, of the bankrupt, “until he should be discharged by due course of law,” was bad. Ex parte Page, 1 B. & A. 568.

Where a bankrupt refused to be sworn before the commissioners until his attorney arrived:—Held, that a warrant, issued for his commitment by them, stating generally the refusal of the bankrupt to be sworn, was sufficient, without assigning the reason for such refusal:—Held also, that the warrant committing him until such time as he should submit himself to the commissioners, and full answer make to the questions which might be put to him by virtue of the said commission, sufficiently pursued the terms of the oath to be taken by the bankrupt, by virtue of the 16th section of the stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, as it must be intended that the questions which might be put by the commissioners would be legal questions. And where the bankrupt was committed to Newgate under a judge's warrant, granted on the certificate of the commissioners for not appearing to their summons, and was afterwards brought before them by warrant, to make a disclosure of his estate, and he refused to be sworn and examined as to such estate:—Held, that the commissioners might commit him under the 14th section of that statute: as, when he was brought before them, the warrant and authority of the judge were at an end and determined. Nobes v. Mountain, 7 Moore, 39; 3 B. & B. 233.

A bankrupt being committed by the commissioners for not answering, it appeared that in the questions put to him the commissioners had stated facts of which they were informed by the deposition of the messenger, but the deposition was not set forth in the warrant, nor did it appear thereby to have been read to the bankrupt at the time of his examination:—Held, that the commitment was substantially insufficient, and that the court could not commit the bankrupt under 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 17. Crowley's case, Buck, 264; 2 Swans. 1.

If, in committing a bankrupt for not answering satisfactorily, the commissioners are influenced by intrinsic evidence, quære the validity of the commitment? Id.

It is no objection to a warrant of commitment, which recites several examinations, that it omits to mention that the bankrupt who had been committed was discharged at the conclusion of one of the examinations. Bromley's case, 2 J. & W. 453.

It is no objection to a commitment of a bankrupt by the commissioners, that the order of commitment was made in the absence of the bankrupt, and that it bore date the day the examination took place, though made some days afterwards. Salt's case, 13 Ves. jun. 361.

The warrant of commitment of a bankrupt, being by mistake dated the 2d of March, instead of the 2d of February:—Held, that this is not such an error as can be amended under the 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 18. Ex parte M'Gee, 6 Madd. 206.

The concluding words of a warrant of commitment must be so limited as to have direct reference to the offence imputed in the preceding part; and therefore, where a commitment, after reciting that the bankrupt had surrendered, and that the commissioners examined him touching his trade, &c., and caused such examination to be reduced into writing and read over to him, to which examination the bankrupt did refuse to sign his name, (not having a reasonable objection to the wording thereof or otherwise,) required the jailor to detain the bankrupt in custody until such time as he should submit himself, and full answer make to the satisfaction of the commissioners, to all such questions as should be put to him, and sign and subscribe to such examination as aforesaid, was holden to be void. Ex parte Leake, 9 B. & C. 234; 3 Y. & J. 46.

The warrant of commitment of a bankrupt, for not signing his examination, need not set out the examination—Vaughan, B. diss. Id.

A commitment for an unsatisfactory answer of the bankrupt is illegal, if the recital of the previous examination do not correctly state the admissions upon which the question was founded. Ex parte Hiams, 18 Ves. jun. 237.

Commissioners make a warrant for the commitment of a bankrupt, for refusing to be examined, the bankrupt being already confined in the King's Bench under previous process. Semble, that the issuing of the warrant by the commissioners does not amount to an imprisonment by them till the warrant is in some way operative to the detention of the party, independently of the other process. But if the warrant operate to the confinement of the party within narrower bounds, it is an imprisonment by the commissioners. Crowley v. Impey, 2 Stark. 261—Ellenborough. And see Wall v. M'Namara, 1 T. R. 536, and cases cited.

(g) Re-examination.

A bankrupt may be brought up for re-examination, although he is also in custody under a surrender by his bail. Ex parte Hiams, 18 Ves. jun. 237.

Where a party committed by commissioners of bankrupt for not answering to their satisfaction, wishes to be again brought before them, he must bear the expense of that proceeding, and cannot throw it on the estate. Ex parte Baxter, 8 B. & C. 344: S. C. nom. Ex parte Bagster, 2 M. & R. 467; 1 Mont. & Mac. 16.

Where an order is made on the application of a bankrupt committed, to bring him again before the commissioners, if there are no effects, the fees are to be paid out of future effects, if any; and, if recommitted, he would find it difficult to obtain another order. Ex parte Cohen, 2 Rose, 443.

Where a bankrupt committed by commissioners is again brought before them, and is remanded, there ought to be a warrant of recommitment or detainer stating the cause of recommitment. Coombes' case, 2 Rose, 396: S. P. Brown's case, 2 Rose, 400.

(h) Habeas Corpus.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 39, if persons committed shall bring a habeas corpus, and any insufficiency in the form of the warrant shall appear on the return, which would authorize a discharge, the court or judge are to commit to the same prison until the party shall conform, unless it shall appear that he has fully answered all lawful questions, or had a sufficient reason for not being sworn, or for refusing to sign the examination; provided that the court may look at the whole of the examination, if it shall not have been set out in the warrant.

The mode of reviewing the judgment of the commissioners in committing the bankrupt for not answering satisfactorily, is by habeas corpus. Ex parte King, 11 Ves. jun. 425.

And not by petition. Ex parte Tomkinson, 10 Ves. jun. 106. But see Ex parte Hiams, 18 Ves. jun. 237.

The Vice-Chancellor seems in one case to have discharged on habeas corpus. Ex parte M'Gee, 6 Madd. 206.

The Lord Chancellor can issue the common law writ of habeas corpus in the vacation time. Crowley's case, Buck, 264; 2 Swans. 1.

In deciding the validity of a commitment by commissioners, the court cannot travel out of the return. Crowley's case, 2 Swans. 75; Buck, 264.

The court before which the writ is brought must, on the return, have the same means of judgment as the commissioners had. Id.

Where a return is defective in not fully stating the warrant, the judge may ask the jailor in court whether the warrant is or is not fully set forth; or the whole of the warrant may be set forth by the affidavit of those who oppose the prisoner's discharge. In re Power, 2 Russ. 584.

Where a bankrupt, committed by the commissioners, is brought up by habeas corpus, notice must be given to the assignees; and notice on Saturday afternoon, for Monday, unless his right to be discharged is perfectly clear, is not sufficient. Bromley's case, 2 J. & W. 453.

A party committed for not answering satisfactorily before commissioners of bankrupt, may have a habeas corpus to bring him before the commissioners for further examination. Ex parte

Bagster, 2 M. & R. 467; 1 Mont. & Mac. 16: S. C. nom. Ex parte Baxter, 8 B. & C. 344.

Obedience to the writ of habeas corpus may be enforced by process of contempt. Crowley's case, 2 Swans. 73; Buck, 264.

2. Privilege from Arrest.

(a) During Examination.

Statute 6 Geo. 4.]—By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 117, the bankrupt shall be free from arrest or imprisonment by any creditor in coming to surrender, and after surrender, during the time allowed for examination, provided he was not in custody at the time of the surrender; and, if arrested, shall, on production of the summons to the officer, be discharged, under a penalty of 5*l.* per day for detention.

By s. 118, the commissioners may adjourn the last examination sine die; and the bankrupt shall be free from arrest for such time, not exceeding three months, as they shall appoint.

The bankrupt, during the forty days allowed for his examination, is, for the benefit of his creditors, privileged from arrest, even upon a capias utlagatum. Ex parte Helsby, 1 Deac. & Chit. 16; 1 Mont. 355.

But semble, that bankruptcy and certificate are not grounds for discharging a prisoner in custody on an utlagatum capias. Beaucamp v. Tompkins, 3 Taunt. 141.

A bankrupt who has been waived (or outlawed,) and her person arrested and goods taken by the sheriff under a writ of capias utlagatum, is not entitled to be relieved on summary motion from such arrest and levy, except upon the terms of appearing to the action, and putting in and perfecting special bail, although the plaintiff had also proved her debt under the commission, and received a dividend, after which the action was commenced for the balance. Summervil v. Watkins, 14 East, 536.

A bankrupt having surrendered, has his protection from arrest by the statute, independently of the commissioner's certificate. Ex parte Leigh, 1 Glyn & J. 264.

A bankrupt's privilege from arrest, on attending the commissioners, is independent of the statute 5 Geo. 2. Ex parte King, 7 Ves. jun. 314.

Time enlarged.]—Under the 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 5, the bankrupt was privileged from arrest during the enlarged time for his examination. Davis v. Trotter, 8 T. R. 475; 3 Esp. 40.

Though the commissioners had omitted to indorse the adjournment on his summons. Price's case, 3 Ves. & B. 23; 2 Rose, 266.

Where one who was a bankrupt came from Holland with the intent to surrender himself on the forty-second day; but hearing that his time was enlarged, resolved not to surrender till the enlarged day, and in the mean time was arrested; the court held, that he should not be discharged, for, till actual surrender, the statute 5 Geo. 2, meant to protect a bankrupt only during such time as it might be reasonable and convenient for him to come in and submit himself to the commission. Kenyon v. Solomon, Cowp. 156.

Where a bankrupt surrendered to his commission on the 4th of February, and the commissioners, on his prayer, enlarged the time generally in writing for him to make a full discovery of his estate and effects, and verbally fixed the adjournment day for the first of April following, and, in the interval, the bankrupt having surrendered in discharge of his bail, was detained at the suit of a creditor; the court refused to discharge him out of custody, he not being protected from arrest by the commissioners' order, as they could not give him a protection for an unlimited period of time. Cloughton v. Leigh, 2 D. & R. 831; 1 B. & C. 652.

Where the last examination is adjourned sine die, the bankrupt is not protected from arrest. Ex parte Wood, 1 Glyn & J. 75.

The Lord Chancellor's order, giving a bankrupt liberty to surrender after the time prescribed by the act of parliament is not mandatory upon him, and gives no protection. Ex parte Johnson, 14 Ves. jun. 40. And see Anon. 5 Ves. jun. 1.

A bankrupt's privilege from arrest extends to the end of the forty-second day:—Ordered, that the plaintiff in the action should discharge him, and the officer having acted without instructions was ordered to pay the costs. Ex parte Donlevy, 7 Ves. jun. 317.

If a bankrupt pass his last examination on the forty-second day, the stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, protected him from arrest during the whole of that day; but if the time had been enlarged beyond the forty-second day, quære, whether he would have been protected? Ex parte Davies, Buck, 80.

If the time for the bankrupt's last examination be enlarged, that statute protected him from arrest during the whole of the last day of examination. Simpson's case, Buck, 424.

What Attendance.—A bankrupt, whose last examination had been adjourned sine die at a meeting under his commission for a distinct purpose, gave his voluntary attendance before commissioners in order to be examined, and was there arrested:—Held, that he was entitled to his discharge on general law principles, and ordered so to be, with his reasonable and necessary charges to be paid by the solicitor and the officer. Ex parte Rose, 1 Rose, 260.

Whether a deviation by a bankrupt returning from examination for the purpose of leaving his books at the house of the assignee will deprive him of his privilege—quære? Ex parte Donlevy, 7 Ves. jun. 317.

The privilege of a party attending his own cause from arrest, extends to a bankrupt on his return from attending his petition for leave to surrender after the expiration of the time, having deviated no farther than to call on the solicitor to arrange the proper steps for giving effect to the order. Ex parte Jackson, 15 Ves. jun. 116.

A bankrupt, on motion in the bankruptcy was discharged from an arrest and detainers where he had been arrested on his way, though with a deviation bona fide for the purpose of examination before the commissioners. Ogle's case, 11 Ves. jun. 556.

The acceptor of a bill, which becomes due and is paid by him after the bankruptcy of the drawer, could not arrest the drawer during the time allowed him by 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 5, for attending the commissioners to be examined. Darby v. Baughan 5 T. R. 209.

A bankrupt attending, upon notice for that purpose, a meeting of the commissioners to declare a dividend of his estate, is protected from arrest at the suit of a creditor during such attendance, although several years after his last examination. Arding v. Flower, 8 T. R. 534; 3 Esp. 117.

Though only summoned verbally by the messenger. Id.

A protection of commissioners granted at a private meeting on the application of the bankrupt, the day after he was served with notice, and before the first public meeting, is good. Ex parte Wood, 18 Ves. jun. 1.

Detainer.—A bankrupt, imprisoned at the date of his protection, is not privileged from subsequent detainers. Ex parte Goldie, 2 Rose, 343; 1 Mer. 176.

If a bankrupt be committed without a protection, a detainer may be lodged against him by the assignee between the time of applying to be re-examined and his examination. Ex parte Weight, 2 Glyn & J. 202.

What Arrest.—A bankrupt may be taken by his bail for the purpose of rendering him, notwithstanding his privilege from arrest; and if they neglect to take him they may be fixed. Payne v. Spencer, 6 M. & S. 237.

The privilege of a bankrupt from arrests during his examination extends to an attachment for not paying money under an award made a rule of court. Ex parte Parker, 3 Ves. jun. 554.

A bankrupt having escaped out of the custody of the marshal, and being at large, surrendered to a commission subsequently issued, and received the protection conferred by 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 5:—Held, that he might notwithstanding be retaken, and detained in custody by the marshal. Anderson v. Hampton, 1 B. & A. 308.

Crown Process.—The crown not being bound by the statutes of bankruptcy, the protection of a bankrupt from an extent is limited to actual attendance, upon the common law privilege of a witness or party, and does not extend through the intervals of adjournment by the statute. Ex parte Temple, 2 Ves. & B. 391; 2 Rose, 22.

And the exception seems to include a fair allowance of time for going and returning. Id.

A bankrupt attending commissioners, in obedience to their summons, is arrested under an extent at the suit of the crown:—Held, that although the crown is not within the bankrupt statutes, the bankrupt is entitled to his discharge; on the principle of the common law pro-bear the expense of that proceeding, and cannot throw it on the estate. Ex parte Baxter, 8 B. & C. 344; S. C. nom. Ex parte Bagster, 2 M. & R. 467; 1 Mont. & Mac. 16.

Where an order is made on the application of a bankrupt committed, to bring him again before the commissioners, if there are no effects, the fees are to be paid out of future effects, if any; and, if recommitted, he would find it difficult to obtain another order. Ex parte Cohen, 2 Rose, 443.

What Arrest.—A bankrupt may be taken by his bail for the purpose of rendering him, notwithstanding his privilege from arrest; and if they neglect to take him they may be fixed. Payne v. Spencer, 6 M. & S. 237.

The privilege of a bankrupt from arrests during his examination extends to an attachment for not paying money under an award made a rule of court. Ex parte Parker, 3 Ves. jun. 554.

A bankrupt having escaped out of the custody of the marshal, and being at large, surrendered to a commission subsequently issued, and received the protection conferred by 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 5:—Held, that he might notwithstanding be retaken, and detained in custody by the marshal. Anderson v. Hampton, 1 B. & A. 308.

Crown Process.—The crown not being bound by the statutes of bankruptcy, the protection of a bankrupt from an extent is limited to actual attendance, upon the common law privilege of a witness or party, and does not extend through the intervals of adjournment by the statute. Ex parte Temple, 2 Ves. & B. 391; 2 Rose, 22.

And the exception seems to include a fair allowance of time for going and returning. Id.

A bankrupt attending commissioners, in obedience to their summons, is arrested under an extent at the suit of the crown:—Held, that although the crown is not within the bankrupt statutes, the bankrupt is entitled to his discharge; on the principle of the common law pro-protecting witnesses attending for examination under regular process for that purpose: and the crown being creditor, the order was made on the jailor. Ex parte Russell, 1 Rose, 278; 19 Ves. jun. 163.

(b) After Certificate.

Generally.—By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 126, if a bankrupt, after his certificate shall have been allowed, shall be arrested, or have any action brought against him for any debt, claim, or demand which was proveable, he shall be discharged on common bail.

Where a debt is due before the bankruptcy, and consequently proveable under the commission, the court will in general discharge the bankrupt out of custody. Holding v. Impey, 7 Moore, 614; 1 Bing. 189: S. P. Robinson v. Vale, 4 D. & R. 340; 2 B. & C. 769.

Unless it appear that the was certificate obtained by fraud. Vincent v. Brady, 2 H. Black. 1.

Or that it is seriously meant to be disputed. Stacey v. Frederici, 2 B. & P. 390.

Or the commission appears to be grossly fraudulent. Sowley v. Jones, 2 W. Black. 725.

The court will not discharge a certificated bankrupt, out of custody, without giving the party at whose instance the attachment is issued time to show that the certificate was fraudulently obtained. Nowers v. Colman, Buck, 5.

Where an attorney was made a bankrupt, and described in the Gazette as a "dealer and chapman," and obtained his certificate; and the plaintiff afterwards arrested him as the acceptor of a bill of exchange, payable before the commission issued; the court of C. P. discharged him on filing common bail, although the plaintiff swore that he did not know that the defendant was the person mentioned in the Gazette, and that he intended to dispute the validity of the commission on the ground of fraud: he should have stated the nature of such fraud: and when he discovered its existence. Kemp v. Neville, 5 Moore, 21.

Debt revived by new Promise.—Generally, neither a bankrupt nor an insolvent debtor can be arrested on a promise to pay debts from which they have been discharged. Anon. 1. Chit. 274, n.

A bankrupt may be held to bail in an action against him, grounded on the demand revived by a subsequent promise; because, as it becomes a good debt recoverable at law, it must have all the incidents of a legal debt, and all the ordinary modes of proceeding to recover it are open to the creditor. Blackbourn v. Ogle, 8 Price, 526: S. P. Drew v. Jefferies, 8 Price, 531, n.

A defendant, arrested for a debt contracted partly before and partly after his bankruptcy and certificate, was discharged out of custody, on filing common bail, although he made a subsequent promise to pay the former part of such a debt. Peers v. Gadderer, 2 D. & R. 240; 1 B. & C. 116.

A certificated bankrupt, who promised payment, when he should be able, of the balance of an account, due at the time of his bankruptcy, to a creditor who did not come in under the commission, was discharged on common bail. Bailey v. Dillon, 2 Burr. 736; 2 Ld. Ken. 426.

Other Cases.—The court of C. P. will not discharge a defendant out of custody on a common appearance, on the ground of a commission having been sued out against him by the plaintiff, as petitioning creditor, upon the same debt as that on which the arrest is founded. Percy v. Powell, 3 B. & P. 6.

The court of C. P. will not order a common appearance to be entered, on the ground of the plaintiff's being chosen an assignee under a commission against the defendant, and having proved his debt. Hill v. Reeves, 1 B. & P. 424.

So, in K. B.; but that court will suspend the execution of a rule on the sheriff to bring in the body, in order to give the defendant time to apply to the Chancellor. Oliver v. Ames, 8 T. R. 364.

And where a commission was sued out against the defendant, who was in custody under a ca. sa., and the plaintiff, in order to prove his debt, discharged him from an execution issued against him at his suit; and the commission being afterwards superseded, the plaintiff retok the defendant in execution:—The court of C. P. refused to discharge the defendant on motion, it appearing that the commission and supersedeas had been fraudulently obtained. Baker v. Ridgway, 9 Moore, 114; 2 Bing. 41.

Where separate commissions were issued against three of four partners, to which they conformed, and passed their examinations, and an order was made for allowing the joint creditors to prove their debts under the commission of one of the three, under which commission the plaintiffs proved their joint debt, and afterwards sued all the partners for the same debt, and arrested one of the other two under whose commission they had not proved:—Held that he was not entitled to be discharged out of custody. Young v. Hunter, 2 Rose, 120; 16 East, 251; 4 Taunt. 582.

(c) Discharge when in Custody.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 126, if a bankrupt shall be taken in execution, or detained in prison for a debt, claim, or demand, proveable under the commission, when judgment has been obtained before the allowance of the certificate, he shall be discharged out of custody.

The court of C. P. has no power to discharge a defendant out of execution, on the ground of a commission having since been sued out against him by the plaintiff; they thought the jurisdiction lay in the court of Chancery. At Master v. Kell, 1 B. & P. 302.

Nor where the commission has been sued out previously to the arrest. Percy v. Powell, 3 B. & P. 6.

A creditor having the bankrupt in custody, and presenting a petition to prove and stay the certificate, or to stay the certificate until the petitioner has had a reasonable time to ascertain the amount of his debt and to prove it, must discharge the bankrupt. Ex parte Blaydes, 1 Glyn & J. 179.

Quære, whether his presenting the petition for that purpose is not a resort to the commission, within the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 14? Ex parte Lord, 2 Rose, 421.

Where a debtor is in custody, and a detainer is lodged against him, he is not discharged at law from the detainer, until his bail justify, and a judge's order is made for his discharge; and where such detaining creditor proved under a commission against the debtor:—Held, that an order of court was necessary for his discharge. Ex parte Cross, 2 Glyn & J. 100.

A bankrupt at large on bail, and not in custody, is within the meaning of the exception in the 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 5. Ex parte Leigh, 1 Glyn & J. 264.

The court of C. P. will not stay proceedings in an action for the escape of a certificated bankrupt taken in execution, and released by the sheriff upon the mere production of his certificate. Sherwood v. Benson, 4 Taunt. 631; 2 Rose, 276.

(d) Proceedings to Discharge.

A bankrupt arrested in returning from commissioners, to whom he had surrendered at a private meeting, cannot be discharged on motion. Secus, if he had been taken under any circumstances amounting to a contempt of court; but leave was given to apply by petition immediately. In re —, 1 Rose, 230.

The court of Exchequer refused to cancel a bail bond, given by a debtor, who had been arrested at the suit of a creditor, on whose petition a commission of bankruptcy had been sued out against him, pending a petition to the Lord Chancellor, praying to be discharged from the arrest; but they allowed two day's time after the petition should be heard, to give notice of bail, and ordered the proceedings in the mean time to be stayed. Wise v. Prowse, 9 Price, 391.

Although a certificated bankrupt is entitled to be discharged; if the validity of the commission is disputed, the court will direct it to be tried on a feigned issue, notwithstanding the certificate, before they will discharge him. Yee v. Allen, 1 Tidd's Prac. 211; 3 Dougl. 214.

Upon an application by a bankrupt prisoner to be discharged from an illegal arrest, the court cannot impose terms, nor order the costs to be paid out of the estate. Ex parte Helsby, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 79.

3. Allowance.

(a) During Examination.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 114, the commissioners before the choice, and the assignees after, with their approbation in writing, may make such allowance to the bankrupt out of his estate, until he shall have passed his last examination, as shall be necessary for the support of himself and family.

Formerly a bankrupt was not entitled to any maintenance out of his effects during his examination. Thompson v. Council, 1 T. R. 157.

(b) Out of Estate.

Amount allowed.—By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 128, certificated bankrupts are allowed 5 per cent. out of the net produce of their estates, provided the allowance does not exceed 400*l.*, if the estates pay the creditors who have proved 10*s.* in the pound; 7*l.* 10*s.* per cent. not exceeding 500*l.*, if 12*s.* 6*d.* in the pound; and 10*l.* per cent., not exceeding 600*l.*, if 15*s.* or upwards in the pound; but if 10*s.* in the pound is not paid, only so much as the assignees and commissioners shall think fit, not exceeding 3*l.* per cent., and 300*l.*

Whether the allowance is payable where the net produce is only 10*s.* in the pound, quære? Ex parte Pave, 2 Glyn & J. 358.

Where a bankrupt's estate is exactly sufficient to pay 10*s.* in the pound, he is not entitled to 5 per cent. allowance: and a dividend being declared he cannot claim any allowance out of it. Ex parte Petheridge, 2 Deac. & Chit. 137: S. C. nom. Ex parte Petherbridge, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 161.

Upon a second bankruptcy there is no allowance to the bankrupt if the estate does not pay 15*s.* in the pound. Ex parte Gregg, 6 Ves. jun. 238.

Where the bankrupt's right to an allowance vested before the 1st of September, 1825—Held, that he was only entitled to the amount directed to be paid by the 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 7. Ex parte Rack, 1 Mont. & Mac. 297.

When allowed.—The right to allowance does not apply to dividends declared before the present statute came into operation. Anon. 1 Mont. 10.

A bankrupt could not call on his assignees for his allowance under stat. 5 Geo. 5, c. 30, s. 7, (his estate paying 10*s.* in the pound,) if his certificate was not allowed before payment of the dividends. Groome v. Petts, 6 T. R. 548; 1 Esp. 396.

The bankrupt had no right to his allowance until the certificate had been confirmed by the Chancellor. Ex parte Pave, 2 Glyn & J. 358.

The bankrupt is not entitled to claim his allowance until after a final dividend has been made. Ex parte Minchin, 1 Mont. & Mac. 135; S. P. Ex parte Surridge, 1 Mont. & Mac. 287.

Quære, whether any allowance before final dividend? Ex parte Gibbs, 1 Mont. 105.

The right to the allowance vests on the payment of the dividend; and if the bankrupt be then dead, it vests in his representatives. Ex parte Safford, 2 Glyn & J. 128.

Where a commission had issued in 1815, and it was stated in the petition that a final dividend had been advertised in June, 1827, the bankrupt's allowance was ordered to be paid, although it was admitted at the bar that there was still some reversionary property, but of small amount, to be realized. Ex parte Davis, 1 Mont. & Mac. 36.

Recovery and Forfeiture.—An action does not lie by a bankrupt against his assignees for his allowance. Groome v. Petts, 1 Esp. 396; 6 T. R. 548.

By s. 130, the right to allowance is forfeited by gaming, stock-jobbing, altering books and accounts, or making false entries, concealing property, and being privy to the proof of false debts.

(c) Where joint and several Estates.

Under present Statute.—By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 129, in joint commissions, under which a partner shall have obtained his certificate, if a sufficient dividend shall have been paid upon the joint estate, and upon the separate estate of such partner, he shall be entitled to his allowance, although his partner may not.

A partner is entitled to an allowance, although his separate estate does not contribute to the joint estate, so as to form the statutable amount for allowance. Ex parte Morris, 1 Mont. 505; 1 Deac. & Chit. 526; S. P. Ex parte Gibbs, 1 Mont. 105.

A., B., and C. are bankrupts; their joint estate pays 9s. in the pound; the separate assets of A. and B. contribute sufficient to make a dividend of 15s. in the pound; but C.'s separate estate contributes nothing:—Held, nevertheless, that he was entitled to an allowance. Id.

Where A., being one of three partners, had paid 20s. in the pound on the separate estate, and 12s. 6d. in the pound had been paid on the joint estate, but on the separate estates of the two other partners a sufficient dividend had not been paid:—Held, that under the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, A. was entitled to an allowance, for his sole use, of 5 per cent. not exceeding 400*l.* Ex parte Minchin, 1 Mont. & Mac. 135.

Under previous Acts.—The bankrupt's allowance was, in the case of partners, divided between them in the proportion in which their respective effects had contributed to the payment of the debts. Ex parte Bate, 1 Bro. C. C. 452.

Under a commission against one of a partnership, and the usual order for keeping distinct accounts, the joint estate paid 18s. in the pound, and the separate estate 2s.:—Held, that the bankrupt was entitled to no allowance, the payment to the joint creditors being not a payment under the bankruptcy, but under the order in the nature of a decree upon a bill for an account in equity. Ex parte Farlow, 1 Rose, 421; 2 Vea. & B. 209.

If one partner only had obtained his certificate, no allowance was given to him, as it was considered that the allowance was only jointly claimable. Ex parte Powell, 2 Rose, 449; 1 Madd. 68.

A bankrupt under a joint commission was not entitled to an allowance, though the joint estate paid 10s. in the pound, unless both joint and separate creditors, who have proved, were paid 10s. in the pound. Id.

The allowance being only jointly claimable. Id.

The usual order having been obtained to take the accounts of the joint and separate estate under a separate commission, the joint estate paid 17s., and was sufficient to pay the 3s. in the pound, leaving a surplus in the hands of the assignees; upon taking the partnership accounts, a balance appeared in favour of the solvent partners. The separate estate had paid 3s. in the pound:—Held, first, that the bankrupt was not entitled to an allowance under 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 7; 2dly, that the surplus of the joint estate was to be paid to the solvent partners, and if it proved insufficient, they were to be at liberty to prove against the separate estate for the difference. Ex parte Terrell, Buck, 345.

A bankrupt paying 20s. out of his separate estate was not entitled to his allowance, against the right which his joint creditors had to the surplus. Ex parte Holmes, 2 Rose, 95; 3 Vea. & B. 137.

The bankrupt was not entitled to allowance, unless a sufficient dividend was paid upon both the joint and the separate estate. Ex parte Goodall, 2 Glyn & J. 281.

4. Duty of Bankrupt.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 116, the bankrupt, after the choice of assignees, (if required,) must deliver up to them, on oath, all books of account, papers, and writings relating to his estate in his custody or power, and discover such as are in the custody or power of any other person; and shall at all times, after surrender, when not in custody or prison, attend the assignees, upon reasonable notice in writing, and assist them in making out the accounts; and he may at all reasonable times, during the time allowed for examination, inspect his books, papers, and writings, in the presence of his assignees, or any person appointed by them, and bring with him any two persons to assist him; and after the bankrupt has obtained his certificate, he shall, upon demand in writing, attend the assignees to settle any accounts, or any court of record to give evidence, for which he shall be allowed 5s. per day; and if he shall refuse, he may be committed.

By s. 119, the assignees may appoint a person to attend the bankrupt, when in custody, with his books and papers, in order to prepare a statement of his affairs.

5. Rights of Bankrupt.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 132, the assignees are, upon request by the bankrupt, to declare how they have disposed of the estate, and pay the surplus, if any, to him, his executors, administrators, or assigns; and the bankrupt, after the creditors who have proved shall have been paid, may recover the remainder of the debts due to him.

A surplus being shown, a bankrupt was permitted on petition to sue in the name of one assignee, the other assignee, who had been a trustee under a prior trust deed, having been restrained from setting up his character of assignee. Ex parte Archer, 2 Glyn & J. 110.

If a commission issue against three, and the joint estate is insufficient, and one partner pay the deficiency from his private estate, and there is a surplus on the separate estate of each of the others, the partner who paid the deficiency is entitled to such surplus before interest is paid to the separate creditors. Ex parte Rix, 1 Mont. 237.

Under a separate commission against one of two partners, the bankrupt having paid 20s. in the pound to all his creditors, obtained an order for the payment of the surplus to him, and the same was accordingly paid to him:—Held, that his partner was entitled to apply by petition in the bankruptcy for an account of such surplus, and for payment of his proportion of it, and that the court had jurisdiction to make the order required. Ex parte Lanfear, 1 Rose, 442.

Under a separate commission of bankruptcy, the joint property is administered as if both partners were bankrupts, viz. the satisfaction of the joint debts, in the first instance, in order to ascertain the surplus, which alone constitutes the separate interest. Everett v. Backhouse, 10 Ves. jun. 98.

A joint commission issued against A. and B., A. being a dormant partner; the joint creditors resorted to the separate estate of B., thereby diminishing that separate estate, and exonerating the joint estate of A. and B., so as to produce a surplus of it:—Held, that the separate creditors of B. had a lien upon that surplus to the extent which their funds had been diminished by the resort of the joint creditors. Ex parte Reid, 1 Rose, 84.

Where a man is partner in separate firms, each of which becomes bankrupt, the surplus of his separate estate shall be applied in discharging the joint debts of the firms, in proportion to the whole amount of debts proved against each firm respectively. Ex parte Franklyn, Buck, 332.

(b) Future Property.

An uncertificated bankrupt can have no right to property as against his assignees. Chambers v. Bernasconi, 6 Bing. 501; 4 M. & P. 278—Per Tindal.

Property acquired by an uncertificated bankrupt, after an act of bankruptcy committed by him, does not vest absolutely in his assignees, although they have a right to claim it; for if they remain passive, and do not make any claim, the bankrupt has a right to such property as against all other persons. Drayton v. Dale, 3 D. & R. 534; 2 B. & C. 293.

An uncertificated bankrupt has a right to goods acquired by him since his bankruptcy, against all the world but his assignees, and may maintain trover for them against a stranger. Webb v. Fox, 7 T. R. 391.

If an order for the delivery of goods in the hands of a third person be given to an uncertificated bankrupt, in payment of a debt accrued subsequent to his bankruptcy, he may maintain trover for them. Fowler v. Down, 1 B. & P. 44.

The after acquired goods of a certificated bankrupt having been taken in execution, for a debt which might have been proved under the commission, the court, on motion, set aside the fi. fa., and refused to put the bankrupt to an audit querela, though it was stated on behalf of the creditor that the bankruptcy was collusive, and that in an action by the assignees, a jury had found against the plaintiffs as to the fact of trading. Barrow v. Poile, 1 B. & Adol. 629.

It is a good plea to an action on a promissory note and for money lent, that the plaintiff is an uncertificated bankrupt, and that his assignees required the defendant to pay them the money claimed by the plaintiff; and it is no good replication that the causes of action accrued after the plaintiff became bankrupt, and that the defendant treated with the plaintiff as a person capable of receiving credit in that behalf, and that the commissioners had made no new assignment of the said notes and money: for the general assignment of the commissioners passes to the assignees of the bankrupt all his after-acquired as well as his present personal property and debts. Kitchen v. Bartsh, 7 East, 53; 3 Smith, 58.

If an uncertificated bankrupt carry on trade, and sell a vessel, of which he is the ostensible owner, to A., A. has a good title against all persons but the assignees. Laroche v. Wakeman, Peake, 140—Kenyon.

An uncertificated bankrupt, in general, can acquire property only for the creditors. Therefore, having entered into a trade, in partnership, the creditors of that partnership have no equity against the assignees for an account and application to their debts of the property used or acquired in that partnership. Everett v. Backhouse, 10 Ves. jun. 94.

The 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 121, enacts that a bankrupt shall be discharged from all debts due by him when he became bankrupt, and from all claims and demands, thereby made proveable under the commission, in case he shall obtain his certificate:—Held, that the goods as well as the person are protected by this section; therefore, goods of a certificated bankrupt, acquired after the bankruptcy, being siezed under a fieri facias, issued upon a judgment in respect of a debt due before the bankruptcy, the court on motion set aside the fieri facias. Davis v. Shapley, 1 B. & Adol. 54.

An uncertificated bankrupt may maintain an action for work and labour for his personal services, and for materials found, as well as for the mere work and labour. Silk v. Osborn, 1 Esp. 140—Kenyon.

And for money lent. Evans v. Brown, 1 Esp. 170—Kenyon.

Unless his assignees interfere to prevent him. Chippendale v. Tomlinson, 7 East, 57, n.; 4 Dougl. 318.

If the assignees of a bankrupt manufacturer, employ him in carrying on the manufacture for the benefit of the estate, and pay him money from time to time, this is evidence of such a contract between him and his assignees as will enable him to recover from them a reasonable compensation for his work and labour. Coles v. Barrow, 4 Taunt. 754; 2 Rose, 277.

So, he may sue as a trustee for his assignees, and the defendant cannot object to the action, unless they interpose. Cumming v. Rootuck, Holt, 172—Gibbs.

Though he is also a cestui que trust under the same instrument. Webster v. Scales, 4 Dougl. 7.

Semhle, that the assignees are not entitled to a debt which accrued to a bankrupt in respect of his personal labour. Crofton v. Poole, 1 B. & Adol. 568.

Plaintiff, a furniture broker, and uncertificated bankrupt, was employed by defendant to remove his goods, in the course of which business he employed several men and vans, supplied packing cases, repaired furniture, and provided materials for this purpose, and other articles to a trifling amount:—Held, that the debt which thereby accrued to the plaintiff was not in respect of personal labour, but was claimable by the assignees. Id.

If, after an uncertificated bankrupt has sued out a latitat, the defendant, before declaration, pay the debt to the assignees, this payment may be given in evidence under the general issue. Id.

An uncertificated bankrupt hires a shop; goods are supplied in the name of his son, but principally upon the father's guarantee:—Held, that his assignees were liable to an action of trespass at the suit of the son, for seizing them as the goods of the bankrupt. Davis v. Living, Holt, 275—Gibbs.

Where the assignees of an uncertificated bankrupt, by agreement, for a valuable consideration paid to them by a third person, had allowed the bankrupt to remain in the possession of his furniture, but which, notwithstanding, they afterwards seized:—Held, that they were warranted in so doing, on the ground that an uncertificated bankrupt cannot acquire property for himself, nor is he entitled to retain any property against his assignees. Niss v. Adamson, 3 B. & A. 225.

An uncertificated bankrupt cannot maintain an action of trespass against subsequent creditors for breaking open his house, and seizing his after-acquired property, although the assignees do not ratify the seizure, and although they were unknown to the defendants until after the commencement of the action. Hull v. Pickersgill, 3 Moore, 612; 1 B. & B. 282.

(c) Rights after Bankruptcy.

The assignees having sold the good-will and interest of the bankrupt's trade, does not preclude him from setting it up again, provided he does not hold himself out as carrying on the same trade which has been the subject of purchase, the benefits which he derives from his commission (as his certificate, &c.) not being a sufficient consideration to raise an implied undertaking on his part that he will not resume it. If there be an express covenant or fraud, the court will not interfere; but publishing advertisements and hand-bills, that he is reinstated in his business, and soliciting the old customers, is not a sufficient ground: an injunction therefore refused. Crutwell v. Lye, 1 Rose, 128.

6. Liability on new Promise.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 131, no certificated bankrupt is liable to pay or satisfy any debt, claim, or demand, from which he shall have been discharged by his certificate, or any part thereof, upon any contract, promise, or agreement made after the issuing of the commission, unless made in writing, signed by the bankrupt, or by some person authorized in writing by him.

A promise in the hand writing of the bankrupt, but bearing no signature, is not sufficient to take a case out of the statute. Hubert v. Moresu, 12 Moore, 216; 2 C. & P. 528.

A person after he became bankrupt, and before he had got his certificate, called at the office of his attorney, to whom he was indebted, and wrote there (the attorney not being at home) a letter, promising to pay him a sum of 100*l.* The only signature was a flourish of the pen, which it was contended by the plaintiff formed the letter M., the initial letter of the defendant's name:—Held, that if it was an M., it was not a sufficient signature under the statute. Id.

Semhle, that if such a letter be without date, the time when it was written cannot be proved by parol evidence. Id.

If a debtor, who has become bankrupt, and obtained his certificate, make a promise afterwards to a creditor to pay him a debt, which was due to him before the bankruptcy, at a future day, he revives the debt, and thereby renders himself liable to be sued for its recovery. Blackburn v. Ogle, 8 Price, 526: S. P. Drew v. Jefferies, 8 Price, 231, n.

Where a bankrupt, after his bankruptcy, and prior to his obtaining his certificate, promised to pay a debt due before the bankruptcy, and indorsed two promissory notes to the plaintiff for that purpose:—Held, that his certificate was no bar to an action brought on these notes, the debt due before the bankruptcy being a good consideration for the promise; and that it would have been available, even if made after such certificate had been obtained. Briz v. Braden, 8 Moore, 261; 1 Bing. 281.

If a bankrupt promise to pay a debt to his creditor, before he obtained his certificate under a former commission, such promise revives the debt, and is proveable under a second commission. Roberts v. Morgan, 2 Esp. 736—Eyre.

A bankrupt having obtained his certificate, is not liable to pay a former debt, unless the promise be express, distinct, and unequivocal. Fleming v. Horne, 1 Stark. 370—Ellenborough: S. P. Brook v. Wood, 13 Price, 667.

Therefore, a promise to pay every body 20*s.* in the pound is not sufficient. Lynday v. Weightman, 5 Esp. 198—Ellenborough.

And if he promise to pay when he is able, in indebitatus assumpsit brought on that promise, his ability to pay must be shown. Beauford v. Saunders, 2 H. Black. 116. And see Bailey v. Dillen, 2 Burr. 736; 2 Ld. Ken. 426.

If a bankrupt promise absolutely to pay a debt barred by his certificate, indebitatus assumpsit lies against him on the original consideration. Penn v. Bennett, 4 Camp. 205—Ellenborough: S. P. Williams v. Dyde, Peake, 68. And see Briz v. Braham, 8 Moore, 261; 1 Bing. 281.

But if he only promise conditionally, the plaintiff must declare specially, and prove the condition performed. Id.

But not so, when the promise is absolute Lang v. Mackenzie, 4 C. & P. 463—Tindal.

If the bankrupt write to a creditor, and says "by the end of next month I shall have my banker's account, and I shall remit the sum due to you in a draft on them," it has been held that this a sufficient new promise. Id.

It must be shown that the debt existed prior to the bankruptcy. Id.

A bankrupt, after a commission sued out, may, in consideration of a debt before the bankruptcy, and for which the creditor agrees to accept no dividend or benefit under the commission, make such creditor satisfaction in part or for the whole of his debt, by a new undertaking or agreement. Freeman v. Fenton, Cowp. 544.

And assumpsit will lie upon such new promise or undertaking. Id.

If a bond for the payment of money has been forfeited before a bankruptcy, payment of interest by the bankrupt after the certificate may perhaps render him liable to be sued upon it. Alsop v. Brown, 1 Dougl. 192.

A promise by a bankrupt to deliver goods in satisfaction of a debt due before bankruptcy, is not such a promise as will revive the debt after certificate. Tuttle v. Grimwood, 11 Moore, 432.

But if a bankrupt, or insolvent, after becoming free from his engagements, having no restraint on his mind, voluntarily give security for a former demand, which is only due in conscience, such a security may be enforced in a court of law. Cockshott v. Bennett, 2 T. R. 765.

In an action against a bankrupt on a new promise, proof that the plaintiff petitioned the Lord Chancellor against the allowance of the defendant's certificate, shall be held to be a waiver of the agreement by the bankrupt to pay and answer the action. Colls v. Lovell, 1 Esp. 282—Kenyon.

7. Actions by Bankrupts.

An uncertificated bankrupt cannot, in an action to try the validity of the commission, hold his assignees to bail. Chambers v. Bernasconi, 6 Bing. 500; 4 M. & P. 278.

A bankrupt had, before his bankruptcy, commenced an action, which was subsequently prosecuted by his assignees and failed, and the bankrupt having obtained his certificate was taken in execution for the costs. An application by the bankrupt for payment of these costs out of the estate was refused, on the ground of the bankrupt having by his wilful misrepresentations induced the assignees to pursue the action. Where a bankrupt has acted fairly, he is entitled to this protection. Ex parte Seaman, 1 Glyn & J. 260.

8. Bankrupt's Wife.

The equity of the wife to a provision out of her property attaches for the benefit of herself and her children, in the filing of the bill which gives the court jurisdiction as to that property, whether the bill is filed by the wife or others; but she may waive it even after a decree for a settlement, before its execution. The children held to be entitled to the benefit of that equity, attaching upon a bill filed by an executor, though the wife died before answer. Steinmetz v. Halthin, 1 Glyn & J. 64.

A bankrupt's wife has an equity against the assignees of her husband, or their vendee for a settlement of her choses in action. Basevi v. Serra, 3 Mer. 674.

Assignees must make a provision for a bankrupt's wife out of all her property, which can be obtained in equity only; and a settlement before marriage of part of her property to her separate use does not bar her. Burden v. Dean, 2 Ves. jun. 607.

If the wife insists upon her equity as against the assignees of her husband, it attaches for the benefit of her children, and she cannot afterwards release in favour of her husband. Barker v. Lea, 6 Madd. 330.

XX. CERTIFICATE.

1. Generally.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 122, the certificate must be signed by four-fifths in number and value of the creditors who shall have proved to the amount of 20*l.*, or after six calendar months from the last examination, either by three-fifths in number and value, or by nine-tenths in number of such creditors.

It is a moral obligation on a creditor to sign the certificate, when he is satisfied that the bankrupt has conformed to the provisions of the statute. Browne v. Carr, 7 Bing. 508; 2 Russ. 600.

But creditors have an absolute discretion to refuse to sign. Ex parte Cridland, 3 Ves. & B. 103; 2 Rose, 164.

The proof of the petitioning creditor, upon opening the commission, does not of itself entitle him to sign the certificate. Ex parte Davis, 2 Cox, 398.

A creditor having taken his remedy at law, cannot take a dividend too, but he may assent to, or dissent from, the certificate. Ex parte Hopkinson, 1 Ves. jun. 159.

An accountant, who has been employed in a bankruptcy, has no lien on the bankrupt's certificate for the payment of his costs. Anon. 1 Russ. & Mylne, 330.

2. Signature of Creditors.

One trustee cannot sign the certificate for himself and co-trustee, without an express authority, Ex parte Rigby, 2 Rose, 224; 19 Ves. jun. 463.

One partner may sign a certificate for a joint debt proved under the commission by himself and his co-partner. Ex parte Mitchell, 14 Ves.

jun. 507; S. P. Ex parte Hodgkinson, 19 Ves. jun. 293; 2 Rose, 172.

Even though the partnership be dissolved at the time of signing. Ex parte Hale, 1 Rose, 2; 17 Ves. jun. 62.

A creditor who is the executor of a creditor is only entitled to sign the certificate once. Ex parte Stracy, 1 Rose, 66.

An objection to the proof of a debt in point of form is not sustainable against the certificate. Id.

Where a creditor who has proved is fully paid by the surety, he cannot afterwards sign the certificate. Ratcliffe v. Gunson, 6 Madd. 193.

But the surety, on petition, would be allowed to sign. Ex parte Gee, 1 Glyn & J. 330.

A creditor who, after proof, assigns his debt, may sign the certificate. Ex parte Herbert, 2 Glyn & J. 66.

But not without the authority of the assignee. Ex parte Taylor, 1 Glyn & J. 399.

Quære, whether a person appointed by the court to prove, and receive dividends, can sign the certificate? Ex parte Shaw, 1 Glyn & J. 127.

The signature, by power of attorney, to a certificate was admitted, although the power was not strictly formal. Ex parte Wilkinson, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 257.

An application to stay the certificate, on the ground that the day of the month and year of the signature of the creditors was not inserted at the time, and that the affidavits of the parties witnessing their signatures did not state the time of such signature, was refused. Ex parte Laing, 1 Glyn & J. 348.

And where some creditors, instead of the day of the month, wrote "ditto," and others omitted the year, it was held immaterial. In re Davis, 2 Glyn & J. 80.

The commissioner was directed to sign a certificate in one case, although the year was omitted to one of the signatures, when it was preceded and followed by dates subsequent to that of the last examination. Ex parte Shoults, 1 Deac. & Chit. 531; S. C. nom. Ex parte Moul, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 262.

Where the date of the signatures of creditors to a certificate had been written by the clerk to the solicitor to the commission, and the names of the creditors signed afterwards, the court permitted it to pass, notwithstanding the general order of the 8th of August, 1809. Ex parte Reynolds, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 263; 1 Deac. & Chit. 459.

The certificate ought not to be signed by creditors before the bankrupt has passed his last examination. Ex parte Cusse, 2 Glyn & J. 327.

Quære, whether a signature, previously to the last examination, is valid? Ex parte King, 11 Ves. jun. 424.

In one case the certificate sent back, creditors having signed before the bankrupt had passed his last examination. Ex parte Brown, 1 Rose, 176.

3. Execution by Commissioners.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 122, the commissioners were, by writing under their hands and seals, to certify to the Chancellor that the bankrupt had made a full discovery of his estate and effects, and in all things conformed; and that there did not appear any reason to doubt the truth or fullness of such discovery; and also that the creditors had duly signed.

By s. 124, the commissioners are not to sign unless they have proof by affidavit in writing of the signature of the creditors, or of any person authorized by any creditor, and of such authority; and if any creditor reside abroad, the authority is to be attested by a notary public, British minister, or consul. All these documents were, with the certificate, to be laid before the Chancellor.

The signature and sealing of the certificate by the commissioners must be attested by the solicitor to the commission, or his clerk, or the messenger, or the clerk of the commissioner, in conformity to the general order of August, 1809, or the certificate will be sent back to the commissioners to recertify. Ex parte Jones, 1 Glyn & J. 186.

If there is no wilful concealment, the commissioners are bound to sign, and the Lord Chancellor to allow, without regard to conduct previous to the bankruptcy. Ex parte Joseph, 18 Ves. jun. 342.

The judicial discretion of the commissioners, as to the certificate, has been held to be not subject to control, either of the Lord Chancellor or of the courts of common law; for the court of K. B. has refused to grant a mandamus to commissioners to certify conformity. Ex parte King, 7 East, 92; 15 Ves. jun. 126; 11 Ves. jun. 417; 13 Ves. jun. 181.

A solicitor employed by the bankrupt to procure his certificate, who neglected to obtain the signature of the commissioners to the certificate, which had been long before signed by the proper number of creditors, was ordered to deliver up the certificate and affidavits to the bankrupt, and to pay the costs of the application. Ex parte Houghton, 1 Glyn & J. 14.

A bankrupt, who has employed a solicitor to obtain the signatures of creditors to his certificate, if he has ceased to employ him, cannot, by petition, compel the solicitor's clerk to make affidavit of witnessing the signatures, without paying to the solicitor the costs of business done. Ex parte Shore, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 268; 1 Deac. & Chit. 509.

4. Allowance.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 122, the bankrupt must make oath in writing, that the certificate and consent were obtained without fraud; and the certificate must be allowed by the Chancellor, against which allowance any of the creditors may be heard.

That there is a petition pending to supersede the commission, is no objection to the allowance of the certificate, which, while the commission stands, the bankrupt is entitled to, unless there be objections exclusively attaching upon it. Ex parte Bonsor, 2 Rose, 61.

Where the certificate has been stayed at the instance of creditors, who afterwards withdraw their opposition to it, and appear by counsel to consent to its allowance, the court will allow the certificate, without the usual explanatory affidavit. In re Hall, 2 Deac. & Chit. 44.

A joint certificate of the two bankrupts was ordered to be advertised for allowance as to the survivor, where one of the bankrupts died without having made the affidavit of conformity. Ex parte Cassart, 1 Glyn & J. 248: S. P. Ex parte Carrie, 18 Ves. jun. 51.

A certificate was allowed against the objection of creditors in Scotland, that the bankrupt was properly the object of a sequestration, and that the question of sequestration was then depending in the Court of Session. Ex parte Cockayne, 2 Rose, 233.

A bankrupt's certificate shall not overreach a legacy left to the bankrupt after the signing, but before the allowance thereof. Tudway v. Brown, 2 Burr. 716; 2 Ld. Ken. 423.

Sembla, that a certificate has no relation back to any earlier period than its allowance. Stapleton v. Macbar, 7 Taunt. 589: S. P. Walker v. Gible, 2 W. Black. 811.

The certificate of a bankrupt allowed after the filing of the plaintiff's bill, and before plea pleaded, is evidence to support the general plea in bar given by the stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 7, viz. that before the exhibiting of the plaintiff's bill the defendant became a bankrupt, and that the cause of action accrued before he became a bankrupt. Harris v. James, 9 East, 82.

5. Staying.

For what Cause.—The court would not stay the certificate upon a legal objection, unless it clearly appeared, as it would thereby preclude the validity of it from being ascertained by a trial at law. Ex parte Kennett, 1 Rose, 331.

A certificate was stayed, on the ground that the bankrupt, having suffered a fictitious debt to be proved, could not have made a full discovery. Ex parte Laffert, 1 Rose, 330.

So, a certificate was stayed, that a creditor, whose debt would turn it, might have an opportunity of assenting or dissenting. Ex parte Lord, 2 Rose, 421.

Where, under a separate commission, the separate debts were very small, and the joint creditors resided in Sicily, whither the bankrupt had traded, the court refused to allow the certificate till the joint creditors had an opportunity of coming in under the commission; and, without the usual undertaking to pay the separate creditors, gave them, in the mean time, liberty to make such proof as they might be able, with the offer of a new choice of assignees. Ex parte Basarra, 1 Rose, 266.

A petition to stay a certificate, because the commission is concerted, does not lie. Ex parte Smith, 1 Mont. 11.

A certificate under a separate commission of bankruptcy, lying before the Lord Chancellor for allowance, is not stayed by suing out a joint commission, Ex parte Tobin, 1 Ves. & B. 308.

A certificate was stayed upon the petition of the partner of the bankrupt, until the partnership accounts should be taken, no want of due diligence being imputable to the petitioner. Ex parte Hadley, 1 Glyn & J. 193.

A certificate shall not be stayed, in order to give a person insisting on a right to stop in transitu an opportunity of proving, in case he should fail in his action. Ex parte Heath, 6 Ves. jun. 613.

A petition praying that the certificate might be stayed, until the petitioner had had reasonable time for ascertaining the amount of his debt, and proving, was dismissed with costs. Ex parte Blaydes, 1 Glyn & J. 179.

A certificate will not be stayed upon matter contained in affidavits in Reply, where the petition and affidavits filed with it do not make a case for staying it. Ex parte Cundall, 1 Glyn & J. 37.

Misconduct, to stay a certificate, must be a misconduct under the bankruptcy. Ex parte Gardener, 1 Rose, 377; 1 Ves. & B. 45.

A certificate was stayed under circumstances appearing upon the examination, particularly the inconsistency of the statement that the bankrupt had no written documents except a book produced, appearing to have been compiled from other documents. Ex parte Bangley, 17 Ves. jun. 117.

Practice.—No affidavits can be admitted against the allowance of a certificate, but such as have been filed in the office at the same time with the petition, or are necessarily in reply. Ex parte Scotland (Bank), 1 Rose, 375; 1 Ves. & B. 5.

It is a general rule, that a petition to stay a certificate, if dismissed, is with costs, unless the bankrupt, by misconduct, has forfeited that privilege. Id.

The rule is dispensed with, if there has been misconduct in the bankrupt. Ex parte Gardener, 1 Rose, 377; 1 Ves. & B. 45.

Where a petition to stay a certificate fails, it is not of course that the petitioner should be ordered to pay the costs. Ex parte Stevens, Buck, 389.

If, upon a petition to stay a certificate, the bankrupt do not file his affidavits in answer till after the petition day, the petitioner is entitled to have the petition stand over, that he may have an opportunity of replying to any new matter in the bankrupt's affidavits. Ex parte Radcliffe, Buck, 489.

A petition to stay a certificate is an exception to the regular course of proceedings, and may be heard out of its turn. Ex parte Anderson, 1 Rose, 93.

Though a bankrupt applies to the court to have a petition to stay his certificate advanced, yet that is not a waiver of his right to be personally served before the petition day. Ex parte Groom, Buck, 39.

Sembla, a petition to stay a certificate prospectively cannot be supported. Id.

Upon a petition to stay a certificate, imputing conduct to the bankrupt, which, if proved, would amount to felony, the court will not direct an issue to try the fact of conformity. Ex parte Scott, Buck, 275.

Where a petition is presented to stay certificate, and the petitioner then withdraws his opposition, an affidavit of no collusion is requisite. Ex parte Cates, 1 Deac. & Chit. 546.

On a petition to stay the certificate, after an order has been obtained for its allowance, the court will not open the order, unless it appears from the petition, that the debt of the creditor would turn the certificate. Ex parte Skipp, 2 Deac. & Chit. 88.

A petition by a creditor to stay certificate, that he might prove a debt, not accounting for not having applied before, will be dismissed. Ex parte Adams, 2 Bro. C. C. 48.

A petition to prove, and stay certificate, presented eight months after the issuing of the commission, and the delay not accounted for, was dismissed with costs. Ex parte Smith, 1 Glyn & J. 195.

Petition.—A mortgagee may petition to stay a certificate. Ex parte Whitchurch, 1 Glyn & J. 71; 2 J. & W. 548.

The circumstance of his not having tendered any proof till the third meeting, will not prevent him from presenting such a petition. Id.

The court will not stay a certificate upon the petition of a creditor who has not come in under the commission, and who has the means of trying the validity of the certificate at law. Ex parte Dodson, Buck, 225.

Where a petition to stay a certificate is not served before the next petition day, the course is for the bankrupt to present a short petition, praying that his certificate may be allowed. Ex parte Moore, 1 Glyn & J. 253.

A petition to stay certificate must be served before the petition day. Ex parte Colburn, 2 Rose, 187.

A petition to stay a certificate must be personally served on the bankrupt before the petition day. Ex parte Harford, Buck, 38.

An admission by the bankrupt of the receipt of the copy of a petition to stay his certificate, is not a waiver of personal service. Ex parte Furnal, 1 Glyn & J. 254.

An affidavit of personal service of a petition to stay certificate, sworn but not filed on the day of hearing, was treated under the circumstances, as no affidavit, and the petition was dismissed with costs. Ex parte Long, 1 Glyn & J. 351.

The court will not order that service of a petition, to stay a certificate, at the bankrupt's residence, should be good service, unless the application be made before the petition day, except in cases where an earlier application is prevented by the conduct of the bankrupt. Ex parte Harrison, 1 Glyn & J. 71.

A petition to stay the certificate, and expunge a creditor's name from it who had signed it on the ground that he had been previously satisfied his debt, must be served on the creditor. Ex parte Bostock, 1 Deac. & Chit. 383.

Where a certificate had been suspended by a petition to stay it, and another petition to stay was presented during its suspension, but after the expiration of three weeks from the notice in the Gazette:—Held, that the latter was not presented in time, and it was dismissed with costs. Ex parte Wright, 1 Glyn & J. 352.

The costs of a petition by a bankrupt for his certificate, presented after the petition day, will not be allowed. Ex parte Birch, 2 Glyn & J. 206.

Where a creditor does not use due diligence to prove his debt, he is not entitled to petition to stay the bankrupt's certificate, in order to afford him time to do so, with a view of dissenting from its allowance. Ex parte Bostock, 1 Deac. & Chit. 383.

An affidavit by the bankrupt in answer to such a petition, filed two days before the hearing, may be read; but if it makes any charge of delay against the petitioner, which he is anxious to explain, the court of Review will give him time for that purpose, more especially if the amount of his debt would turn the certificate. Id.

A creditor, by petitioning to stay the certificate, makes his election to come in under the commission for every proveable debt which may be owing to him from the bankrupt; and, therefore, the bankrupt must be discharged from any action pending against him by the creditor, in respect of any such debt, before the petition can be proceeded in. Id.

By a general order in bankruptcy, affidavits in support of a petition to stay the certificate shall be brought into the office together with the petition except such as shall be necessary in reply to affidavits in answer to it. Ex parte Bowes, 11 Ves. jun. 540.

An affidavit in support of a petition to stay a certificate, filed after the petition is presented, cannot be read. Ex parte Dodson, Buck, 178.

The assignees cannot be heard on a petition by an individual creditor to stay the certificate, although they may have been served with the petition. Ex parte Bostock, 1 Deac. & Chit. 383.

Motions or petitions consented to, or unopposed, may be brought on at the sitting of the court of Review, before the paper of the day has been gone into; but none which are opposed will be taken until after the paper has been gone into. Mem. 1 Deac. & Chit. 396.

A petition to stay a certificate upon an allegation of concealment, sworn to only upon information and belief, was dismissed with costs. Ex parte Joseph, 18 Ves. jun. 340; 1 Rose, 184.

A bankrupt, not served with a petition to stay his certificate, on which an attendance had been ordered, is entitled to his certificate; and not bound by taking copies of the affidavits. Ex parte Kendall, 1 Ves. & B. 543.

6. Recalling.

A bankrupt's certificate, obtained by imposition practised upon the great seal, would have been revoked, if no injury accrued to persons subsequently dealing with the bankrupt on the faith of it. Ex parte Tallis, 1 Rose, 371.

A certificate will be recalled when obtained by fraud. Ex parte Cawthorn, 2 Rose, 186; 19 Ves. jun. 260.

A certificate will not be recalled but upon a clear case against the bankrupt. Ex parte Hood, 1 Glyn & J. 219.

Where a bankrupt has been long in possession of his certificate, the court will not recall it. Ex parte Reed, Buck, 430.

7. When void.

(a) Contract for Signature.

[The cases of Void Contracts generally will be found under the title CONTRACT.]

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 125, contracts or securities made or given by bankrupts, or other persons, to or in trust for creditors, or for securing the payment of any money due by the bankrupt, as a consideration, or with intent to persuade such creditor to consent to, or sign such certificate, are void, and the money thereby secured or agreed to be paid is not recoverable; and the party sued on such contract or security may plead the general issue, and give the special matter in evidence.

The fourth, amongst several other signatures of creditors to the certificate of a bankrupt, having been obtained by the promise of the bankrupt to pay that creditor his whole debt, such certificate is void by stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, ss. 7, 11; although the creditors who signed before and after the fourth were sufficient in number and value, without reckoning that one; for his example might have induced others to sign it. Phillips v. Dicus, 15 East, 248; 1 Rose, 345.

A deed of composition, framed only for the joint creditors of two bankrupts, and which was not signed or accepted by the separate creditors of one of the bankrupts, is not such a compounding with creditors, as will, within the stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 9, limit the effect of the certificate to the protection of the person only, and not the future property of the bankrupt. Norton v. Shakespear, 1 Rose, 347; 15 East, 619.

A certificate is void if obtained by money, though without the bankrupt's privity. Ex parte Butt, 10 Ves. jun. 359; S. P. Ex parte Hall, 17 Ves. jun. 62.

If any one of the creditors, though without the privity of the bankrupt, be induced by money to sign his certificate, it is void. Holland v. Palmer, 1 B. & P. 25.

Even though the bankrupt was not aware of it, at the time he made the necessary affidavit in order to obtain the allowance, if he knew of it before the actual allowance was granted. Robson v. Calze, 1 Dougl. 228.

(b) Gaming.

gaming or wagering in one day 20*l.*, or within one year next preceding his bankruptcy 200*l.*; or if he shall within one year have lost 200*l.* by any contract for the purchase or sale of any government or other stock, where such contract was not to be performed within one week, or where the stock was not actually transferred or delivered; or shall after an act of bankruptcy committed, or in contemplation of bankruptcy, have destroyed, altered, mutilated, or falsified any of his books, papers, writings, or securities, or made, or been privy to the making of any false or fraudulent entries in any book of account, or other document, with intent to defraud his creditors; or shall have concealed property to the amount of 10*l.*; or if, any person having proved a false debt, such bankrupt, being privy thereto or afterwards knowing the same, shall not have disclosed the same to his assignees within one month after such knowledge.

A loss by gaming invalidates a certificate, although the bankrupt on the same day wins more than the sum lost. Ex parte Newman, 2 Glyn & J. 329.

The Chancellor will, without an issue, decide the fact of gaming when it is not disputed. Id.

Upon a petition to stay a certificate, an issue was directed to try whether the bankrupt had lost 5*l.* at a horse-race. Ex parte Henderson, Buck, 557.

Insuring in the lottery was not gaming within stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 12, which would prevent a bankrupt's certificate being allowed. Lewis v. Piercey, 1 H. Black. 29.

The clause in the 12th section of stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, depriving a bankrupt of all benefit from his certificate, in the cases of losses at play, was to be considered as a qualification, restraining the operation of the 7th section, which made the certificate a bar; and evidence of such loss might be given in a court of law on the similitur to the general plea of bankruptcy. Hughes v. Morley, 1 B. & A. 22; Holt, 520.

The plaintiff must confine his evidence to one act, and elect whether he will give evidence of one loss amounting to 5*l.*, or of several losses, amounting to 100*l.* Id.

If the goods of a certificated bankrupt are taken in execution, it seems that the court will not set it aside on motion, if it appear that it may be void by gaming or other misconduct of the bankrupt specified in 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 130. Barrow v. Poile, 1 B. & Adol. 633.

(c) Other Causes.

It is a good answer to a plea of bankruptcy, that the certificate was obtained by fraud, though the enactment to that effect in 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 7, is not repeated in 6 Geo. 4, c. 16. Horn v. Ton, 4 B. & Adol. 78.

Where concealment of property by the bankrupt is positively established, the great seal will refuse the certificate; secus, where the petition alleges merely information and belief as to that fact. Ex parte Joseph, 1 Rose, 184; 18 Ves. jun. 340.

An application to stay the certificate, on the ground of concealment of property, where the circumstances of concealment had been disclosed, and the whole property delivered up to the assignees before the signature of the certificate by the commissioners was refused, but without costs. Ex parte Bryant, 1 Glyn. & J. 205.

It is no objection in the certificate that the assignees have permitted the bankrupts to carry on business on the same premises and in the same firm, and to continue their houses elegantly furnished, &c., or that the bankrupts have retained in their hands money as assignees under other commissions. Ex parte Anderson, 1 Rose, 93.

If assignees sign a certificate, and get a release from the bankrupt merely to get over a technical objection to evidence, it is by no means an improper transaction. Selby v. Grew, 2 Anst. 504.

A bankrupt knowingly permitting a fictitious debt to be proved, is not entitled to his certificate. Freydeburgh's case, 3 Ves. & B. 142.

8. Effect as a Discharge.

(a) Generally.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 121, every bankrupt who shall have duly surrendered, and in all things conformed, shall be discharged from all debts due by him when he became bankrupt, and from all claims and demands proveable under the commission, in case he shall obtain a certificate of conformity; but such certificate shall not release or discharge any person who was partner with the bankrupt, or who was jointly bound, or had made a joint contract with him.

The certificate protects the goods, as well as the person of the bankrupt from all debts proveable under the commission. Davis v. Shapley, 1 B. & Adol. 54.

The defendants being bankrupt, were sued, and suffered judgment by default in Trinity term, and final judgment was entered up, and execution issued thereon in Michaelmas term following; on the 13th November, in that term, the defendants obtained their certificate, and on the same day the sheriff's officer levied, and he, notwithstanding a notice that the defendants certificate had been allowed, being about to sell the goods seized, the defendants paid the amount of the debt and costs into court, under a judge's order to abide the event of a motion. On application by the defendants to have the money paid out to them, the court refused to interfere; but left the parties to their audita querela, although it was insisted by the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 126, the goods as well as the persons of bankrupts are protected. Hanson v. Blakey, 1 M. & P. 261; 4 Bing. 493.

A certificate pending a suit operates in the nature of a release. Anon. Loft, 437.

(b) Foreign Discharge.

A discharge under a commission of bankrupt in a foreign country is no bar to an action against the bankrupt by a subject of this country, for a debt arising here. Smith v. Buchanan, 1 East, 6.

A certificate obtained under the Irish bankruptcy act, 11 & 12 Geo. 3, is not pleadable to an action for a debt contracted in England before the commission issued. Shallcross v. Dyart, 2 Glyn & J. 87.

Nor will the courts here discharge a defendant who is holden to bail for a debt contracted in this country out of custody on a common appearance, on an affidavit of his having become a bankrupt in Ireland, and there obtained his certificate; but will put him to plead. Quin v. Keefe, 2 H. Black 553.

A bill of exchange, drawn by a defendant in Ireland, and accepted and paid by plaintiffs in England, is a debt contracted in England, and cannot be discharged by a certificate under an Irish commission of bankruptcy. Lewis v. Owen, 4 B. & A. 654.

A motion to discharge a defendant out of custody, on the ground of his bankruptcy and certificate in Ireland, must be on affidavit of the effect of the certificate by the laws there. Anon. 1 Anst. 80.

Quære, how far the cessio bonorum discharges a debt contracted in Guernsey. Whittingham v. De la Rieu, 2 Chit. 53.

The discharge of an insolvent, by cessio bonorum in Scotland, is no bar to an action brought by an English creditor in England for a debt contracted there, though the plaintiff opposed the defendant's discharge in Scotland; unless he sought relief from the Scotch law, by claiming a distributive share of the insolvent's property. Philips v. Allan, 2 M. & R. 575; 2 B. & C. 477. But see Ballantine v. Golding, Cook's Bkt. Laws, 499, 6th edit.; and Burrows v. Jemino, 2 Stra. 733.

A petition by the plaintiff for a sequestration in Scotland against the defendant, is not a sufficient cause for discharging him on common bail. Carruthers v. Parkin, 1 Tidd's Prac. 204.

A debt contracted in England by a trader residing in Scotland is barred by a discharge under a sequestration issued in conformity to the 45 Geo. 3, c. 137, in like manner as debts contracted in Scotland. Sidaway v. Hay, 3 B. & C. 12; 4 D. & R. 658.

A certificate obtained in Newfoundland, under the 49 Geo. 3, c. 27, s. 8, does not entitle the defendant to be discharged on entering a common appearance, but must be pleaded in bar. Philpotts v. Read, 3 Moore, 244; 1 B. & B. 13.

Nor in Bremen, where the debt was contracted. Earlier v. Langishe, 2 Chit. 55.

The court of C. P. will not discharge a defendant on entering a common appearance, on the ground of his having become insolvent and obtained his certificate at Newfoundland, under 49 Geo. 3, c. 27, s. 8, but will leave him to plead such certificate in bar; and such certificate may be pleaded in bar to an action brought in this country, for a debt contracted here previous to the insolvency. Philpotts v. Read, 3 Moore, 623; 1 B. & B. 294.

Where the plaintiff gave the defendant in a foreign country, where both were resident, a bill drawn by the defendant upon a person in England, which was afterwards protested here for non-acceptance, and the defendant afterwards, while still resident abroad, became bankrupt there, and obtained a certificate of discharge by the law of that state;—Held, that such certificate was a bar to an action here upon an implied assumpsit to pay the amount of the bill in consequence of such non-acceptance in England. Potter v. Brown, 5 East, 124; 1 Smith, 351.

Where parties have become bankrupt in France, but have been reinstated in their affairs by a concordat, it is not necessary in an action brought by them for money due to them before their bankruptcy, to prove that they have performed their part of the concordat, but they should show that the action is brought with the assent of the commissioners named therein. Orr v. Browne, 5 C. & P. 414—Parke.

A bankrupt, who has assigned his property to his assignees under a French commission of bankruptcy, cannot afterwards be sued in a court of justice in the British dominions, by one of his creditors, for a debt proved under it. Quelin v. Moisson, 1 Knapp's Priv. Coun. Cases, 266.

Semle, not even for a debt not proved under it. Id.

A certificate obtained under an English commission operates as a discharge of the debts of Scotch creditors proveable under the commission. Scotland (Bank) v. Stein, 1 Rose, 462.

A certificate of conformity, obtained under a commission of bankruptcy in England, is a bar to an action for a debt contracted by the bankrupt at Calcutta previously to his bankruptcy, although the creditor had no notice of the commission, and was resident at Calcutta. Edwards v. Ronald, 1 Knapp's Priv. Coun. Cases, 259.

So, where to a suit instituted in the Dutch colonial court of Demerara, for the recovery of the balance of an account for sugars consigned to and received by the defendant and his partner in London, the defendant pleaded his bankruptcy in England, of which the plaintiffs had notice, but had not proved their debt under it:—Held, that the bankruptcy and certificate were a discharge of the debt. Odwin v. Forbes, Buck. 57.

(c) Bankrupt an Assignee.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 105, if any assignee indebted to the estate of which he is assignee, in respect of money retained or employed by him, shall become bankrupt, and obtain his certificate, it shall only have the effect of freeing his person from arrest and imprisonment, but his future effects (tools, household goods, and wearing apparel excepted) shall remain liable for so much of his debt to the estate of which he was assignee, as shall not be paid by dividends under his commission, together with lawful interest for the whole debt.

(d) How available in Actions.

A certificate granted after plea pleaded, but before the trial, will not avail at law. Langmead v. Beard, 9 East, 85, n.—Kenyon.

If a bankrupt is sued upon a cause of action arising before his bankruptcy, and obtains his certificate pending the suit, he must plead it puis darrein continuance: and if he does not, and judgment is obtained, and an action upon that judgment be brought against him, he cannot plead his certificate to that action. Todd v. Maxfield, 9 D. & R. 171; 6 B. & C. 105.

If one of two defendants plead a plea of bankruptcy puis darrien continuance, the plaintiff cannot, at nisi prius, confess this plea to be true, and go on with the case as to the other defendant. Pascall v. Horsley, 3 C. & P. 372—Tent.

A bankrupt, who obtained his certificate after issue and before judgment, having after judgment been rendered in discharge of his bail, was held entitled to be liberated on a summary application, although he had not pleaded his certificate puis darrein continuance. Humphreys v. Knight, 6 Bing. 569; 4 M. & P. 375.

In an action against a member of parliament on bills of exchange, two persons became sureties in a bond conditioned for the payment of such sums as should be recovered, with costs. The cause proceeded, and notice of trial having been given, the defendant filed a bill in equity and obtained an injunction, pending which, he became bankrupt, obtained his certificate, and allowed a term to elapse without pleading it:—Held, that he could not plead it as of the preceding term, except on the condition of dismissing his bill in equity, and paying all costs at law and in equity, as between attorney and client. Duff v. Campbell, 3 B. & A. 577.

In assumpsit by several plaintiffs, the bankruptcy of one, and an assignment of his effects, is a good plea in bar. Marlar v. Hartley, 4 Dougl. 22, n.

Where the bankrupt pleads his bankruptcy, and relies on the certificate, which the plaintiff contends is void under the stat. 5 Geo. 2. c. 30, the plaintiff can only impeach the certificate, and not the commission. But, if the petitioning creditor signed the certificate, and the debt is bad, it may be impeached, though it may affect the commission. Bateson v. Hartsink, 4 Esp. 43—Kenyon.

If a certificated bankrupt apply before judgment for a discharge, the court will, if he has occasioned vexatious delay, order him to pay the costs attendant upon such delay. Sadler v. Cleaver, 7 Bing. 771.

The court may discharge a certificated bankrupt before judgment. Id.

Equity will not restrain by injunction further proceedings at law upon a verdict obtained through the defendant's neglect to produce his certificate in evidence. Lingard v. Hibbertson, 1 Rose, 459.

9. Proof of.

A certificate obtained after 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, on a commission of bankruptcy issued before that statute, is proved by the production of the certificate, duly allowed. Taylor v. Welsford, M. & M. 503—Tindal.

Unless the certificate of conformity be filed, the court of Review cannot order a copy of it to be delivered. Ex parte Shore, 1 Deac. & Chit. 531; 1 Mont. & Bligh, 268.

If a bankrupt pleads his certificate in bar, and the plaintiff relies on its having been obtained by fraud, by allowing persons to prove debts who were not bona fide creditors, such persons may be witnesses to prove the fraud, and should be called. Edmonstone v. Webb, 3 Esp. 264—Kenyon.

After notice to produce the former certificate, it is enough if witnesses state that they were employed by him to solicit that certificate, and that, looking at the entries in their books, they have no doubt it was allowed by the Lord Chancellor. Henry v. Leigh, 3 Camp. 499; 2 Rose, 144—Ellenborough.

But to prove the allowance of a bankrupt's certificate by the Lord Chancellor, the book kept in the office of the secretary of bankrupts, in which entries are made of the allowance of certificates, is not secondary evidence. Id.

XXI. SUPERSEDEAS AND ANNULLING.

1. Jurisdiction and Practice.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 19, the Chancellor may, upon the reversal of any adjudication, or for such other cause as he may think fit, order any fiat to be rescinded or annulled; and such order shall have all the force and effect of a writ of supersedeas of a commission.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 16, joint commissions may be superseded as to one or more persons, without affecting their validity as against the others.

The great seal was in no instance compelled to supersede a commission, except by the imperative language of the statute 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 24, (where a petitioning creditor received from the bankrupt greater security or satisfaction for his debt than the rest of the creditors;) but it was in the habit of exercising a discretionary power of supersedeas, to prevent an abuse of a commission as a process in the nature of an execution, and from analogy to the practice of other courts in this respect. Ex parte Freeman, 1 Rose, 380; 1 Ves. & B. 34; S. P. Ex parte Hodgkinson, 19 Ves. jun. 291; 2 Rose, 172.

The court of Review will not supersede a commission 30 years old, unless all the creditors consent. Ex parte Lupton, 2 Deac. & Chit. 136.

A writ of supersedeas is considered as sealed from the time of its delivery to the messenger. Ex parte Freeman, 1 Rose, 280; 1 Ves. & B. 34.

The court may supersede, notwithstanding a verdict in favour of the commission; and, if a new trial is directed, may restrain proceedings for double costs. Ex parte Eager, 1 Mont. 85.

A petition to supersede a commission, before any meeting, upon affidavits of the solvency of the bankrupt, that he never committed an act of bankruptcy, and did not owe the petitioning creditor 100*l.*, was refused, nor would the Lord Chancellor direct an issue. Ex parte Stokes, 7 Ves. jun. 405.

The Lord Chancellor refused to stay proceedings under a commission not opened, upon the allegation that there was no petitioning creditor's debt, as the commission issues of right under the act of parliament. Ex parte Lanchester, 17 Ves. jun. 512.

A petition lies to restrain a bankrupt from proceeding at law to supersedeas and the commission. Ex parte Hill, 1 Mont. 9.

A variance between the supersedeas and commission in the names and descriptions of the bankrupt or petitioning creditor, is fatal. Matthews v. Dickinson, 1 Moore, 104; 7 Taunt. 399.

It was discretionary in the Lord Chancellor to supersede a commission, although it might be unimpeachable on strictly legal grounds. Ex parte Dufrene, 1 Rose, 333; 1 Ves. & B. 54.

If a creditor petition to supersede, or that the assignees be removed, and the supersedeas is refused, but the assignees are removed upon the petitioner's counsel undertaking that the petitioner should prove, the creditor cannot appeal as to the supersedeas. Ex parte Green, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 90.

2. Defective Proceedings.

Although the requisites to sustain the commission appear on the proceedings to be established, yet, if the court be satisfied, on affidavit, of their insufficiency, it will supersede the commission without an issue. Ex parte Gallimore, 2 Rose, 234; 1 Madd. 67.

Where the act of bankruptcy, on the proceedings, was a conveyance of the bankrupt's estate and effects, which, upon the evidence, appeared not to be drawn according to the intention of the bankrupt, the commission was superseded. Ex parte Norris, 1 Glyn & J. 233.

A commission will not be superseded for want of an act of bankruptcy previous to striking the docket, the affidavit of belief that the party is a bankrupt at that time not being required by the statute, though according to the practice. Wydown's case, 14 Ves. jun. 80.

There not being a sufficient act of bankruptcy appearing on the proceedings, the Lord Chancellor ordered a further affidavit to be laid before him, and, it not being satisfactory, he superseded the commission with costs, having previously suspended the insertion of the advertisement in the Gazette. Ex parte Foster, 1 Rose, 49.

On the petition of the bankrupt, a commission was superseded, because the act on which the adjudication was made was invalid, and there was not an affidavit of any other act; it would have been otherwise if there had been such an affidavit. Ex parte Burgess, Buck, 233.

A commission, under which the bankrupt has obtained his certificate, is not to be superseded on an objection to the trading; or that debtors to the estate upon that ground refuse to pay the assignees. Ex parte Crowder, 2 Rose, 324.

Quære, if the application for that purpose were made by all the creditors under the commission? Id.

3. Delay in Prosecution.

London commissions were to be prosecuted within 14 days, and country commissions within 28 days, otherwise they were supersedeable. Order, Leugh, 26 June, 1793, 2 Ves. jun. 190.

Where there is a bona fide intention to prosecute a commission, the general order may be dispensed with, upon accident, sickness of commissioners or witnesses, or adjudication too late for the Gazette; but strict proof required of a bona fide intention to prosecute. Ex parte Freeman, 1 Rose, 380; 1 Ves. & B. 34.

A commission issued 23d of May, 1826, and not opened until the 19th of March, 1827, was superseded on the ground of improper delay. Ex parte Best, 1 Mont. & Mac. 63.

Where an adjudication was made on Saturday, too late for the Gazette, and on Monday, another solicitor obtained a supersedeas under the general order of 26th June, 1793, and both the bankruptcy and the supersedeas appeared in the Gazette on Tuesday, the supersedeas was quashed, and a procedendo was issued. Ex parte Ellis, 7 Ves. jun. 135.

Where, in a country commission the bankruptcy was found on the twenty-eighth day, but no notice given of it at the bankruptcy office till two days afterwards, the commission was held to be supersedeable within the order, although, by the course of post from place to place, where the commission was opened, an earlier communication was impossible; the practice being uniform, from the first existence of the order, to supersede on the thirtieth day, upon an application made on the twenty-ninth unless notice had been previously given on the twenty-ninth of the adjudication. Ex parte Henderson, 2 Rose, 190; Coop. C. C. 227.

A commission was superseded on the ground of delay in opening it, but the bond not assigned, because that is conclusive at law, and there may be a better remedy by action on the case. Ex parte Fletcher, 1 Rose, 454.

Where a commission is not prosecuted so far as to give an interest in it to others, the petitioning creditor may obtain a supersedeas as of course, unless the bankrupt oppose. Ex parte Prosser, 1 Glyn. & J. 92.

If a person, knowing that a commission supersedeable under the order is to be proceeded in, takes out another, he will be liable for the costs. Ex parte Sanden, 1 Rose, 85.

A commission was superseded after a delay of nine months, though the delay was occasioned by the acts of the bankrupt, and was, with the concurrence of the creditors. Ex parte Luke, 1 Glyn. & J. 361.

Although a commission, supersedeable for non-prosecution, has been actually superseded, yet a second commission is not, as a matter of absolute right, to be granted to another solicitor; but, under circumstances, the first commission may revive. Ex parte Freeman, 1 Rose, 380; 1 Ves. & B. 34.

A commission, supersedeable for want of prosecution under the order, cannot be superseded by the bankrupt without a petition. Ex parte Gale, 1 Glyn. & J. 43.

A commission was superseded for fraud, nothing having been done under it, and the petitioning creditor not to be found. Ex parte Hartop, 9 Ves. jun. 109.

4. Petitioning Creditor taking Money, &c.

Though a commission may be rendered void, by reason of the petitioning creditor taking money or goods from the bankrupt, it cannot be considered as void in an action at law, but can only be superseded by the Chancellor under the statute. Garratt v. Biddulph, 4 Esp. 104—Le Blanc.

A commission relinquished by the petitioning creditor, upon obtaining security, was superseded, and his proof under another commission expunged; and being an assignee, a new choice was directed. Ex parte Paxton, 15 Ves. jun. 461.

A bankrupt who had brought an action to try the validity of his commission, and obtained a verdict, and, pending a rule to set it aside, secretly confessed judgment to one of his assignees, who was the petitioning creditor for a sum of money, in discharge of his debt and the costs of the action, in consideration of the petitioning creditor's consenting not to oppose the bankrupt's petition for a supersedeas: the court of C. P. set aside the judgment on the bankrupt's application, on 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 24. Thomas v. Rhodes, 3 Taunt. 478; 2 Rose, 104.

But it was considered that the bankrupt himself could not supersede his commission by impeaching the petitioning creditor's debt, on the ground of a security taken privately; the remedy, under the stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 22, being given to some other creditor. Ex parte Paxton, 15 Ves. jun. 463.

A creditor is not of right entitled to a supersedeas for want of a good petitioning creditor's debt. Cross, diss. Ex parte Clarke, 1 Mont. & Bligh. 379.

Where the petitioning creditor may compound. Ex parte Smith, 2 Glyn. & J. 291.

The commission of a petitioning creditor, who, with the knowledge of two or three of the creditors received his debt from the bankrupt, was superseded under the stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 24, on the petition of a creditor privy to the transaction. Ex parte Brine, Buck. 19.

Quære, whether that creditor will be permitted to sue out a new commission. Id.

In an action against a petitioning creditor under a former commission, who illegally compounded with the bankrupt, the supersedeas of the former commission is conclusive evidence of the bankruptcy. Ledbetter v. Salt, 4 Bing. 623; 1 M. & P. 597.

A commission is an execution for all creditors; the petitioning creditor, therefore, cannot receive his debt and have the commission superseded while the others are unsatisfied. Ex parte Stokes, 7 Ves. jun. 408.

The Chancellor had not jurisdiction to enforce payment, from the petitioning creditors, of a forfeiture for compounding with the bankrupt. Ex parte Marshall, 2 Glyn & J. 265. Sed quære, see Ex parte Dimmock, 2 Glyn & J. 261.

5. Acceptance of Composition.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 133, where at a meeting (of which 21 days' notice shall have been given in the Gazette,) after the last examination, the bankrupt, or his friends, shall make an offer of composition, or security for composition, which nine-tenths in number and value of the creditors present shall agree to accept, another meeting for the purpose of deciding on such offer shall be appointed with similar notice: and if, at such second meeting, nine-tenths in number and value of the creditors present shall agree to accept the offer, and testify their acceptance in writing, the commission may be superseded.

By s. 134, creditors below 20*l.* are not to be reckoned in number, but the debts are to be computed in value, and creditors to the amount of 50*l.*, residing out of England, may vote by letter of attorney; and if any creditor agree to accept any gratuity or higher composition for assenting to such offer, he shall forfeit his debt, together with such gratuity or composition; and the bankrupt (if required) is to make oath that there has been no such transaction between him or any person with his privity, and any of his creditors, and that he has not used any undue means or influence with any of them to obtain their assent.

This enactment does not interfere with the rights or securities of persons not parties to the agreement. Per Lord Tenterden. Tuck v. Tooke, 9 B. & C. 437; 4 M. & R. 393.

Where a commission issues, under which nine-tenths of the creditors assembled at two meetings, called in pursuance of the statute, agree to accept a composition, whereupon the commission is superseded, a creditor, not present at the meetings, and not acceding to the composition, or proving his debt under the commission, is not barred of his action. Id.

On a supersedeas by consent, a creditor cannot privately stipulate for better terms than the other creditors. Ex parte Ridley, 1 Mont. 131.

A creditor who, upon receiving his debt, had superseded a commission, was ordered to refund. Ex parte Thompson, 1 Ves. jun. 157.

Where a bankrupt's creditors have agreed to accept a composition upon the amount of their debts, and consented to the commission being superseded, the court will grant an order for a supersedeas. Ex parte Osborne, 1 Deac. & Chit. 37.

6. Consent.

A commission may be superseded at any time after the first meeting, upon consent of all the creditors who have proved. Ex parte Duckworth, 16 Ves. jun. 416.

But not before the first meeting, even with the consent of the petitioning creditor. Ex parte Law, 4 Madd. 273.

A commission is not to be superseded without the consent of all the creditors who have proved, certified by the commissioners, and an affidavit of the bankrupt's confirmation of all purchases under the commission: the consent of creditors who had received 20*s.* in the pound is not dispensed with. Ex parte Milner, 19 Ves. jun. 204.

Upon supersedeas by consent, a purchaser is entitled to be indemnified against judgments outstanding before the bankruptcy. Ex parte Latour, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 89.

The consent of official assignees to a supersedeas upon consent of creditors is not necessary. Ex parte Barker, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 412.

A supersedeas is granted on a certificate by a surviving commissioner of the names of the creditors who had proved. Ex parte Wallis, 2 Glyn & J. 25.

Where all the creditors consented to a supersedeas except A., who was abroad, and B. held a power of attorney from A., authorizing him to consent:—Held, that B. was entitled to consent; and an attested copy of the power was ordered to be filed with the proceedings. Ex parte Hamilton, 2 Deac. & Chit. 139.

The court of Review refused to supersede a commission upon consent, as one of the bankrupts had not surrendered, but superseded as to the bankrupt who had surrendered. Anon. 1 Mont. & Bligh, 416.

Though 20*s.* in the pound have been paid under a commission, and the certificate obtained, the commission cannot be superseded without the consent of the creditors, upon the circumstance that some are abroad and not to be found. Ex parte Jackson, 8 Ves. jun. 533.

A commission was superseded where all the creditors had been paid and consented, except two, who could not be found, but their securities were delivered up with receipts upon them, and their signatures proved. Ex parte King, 2 Ves. jun. 40.

It is ground for superseding a commission, that a part of the bankrupt's property will satisfy all the debts; taking care to secure that object immediately and effectually. Ex parte Bryant, 1 Ves. & B. 211; 2 Rose, 1.

7. Proceedings.

(a) Within what Time.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 87, no title to any real or personal estate, sold under any commission or order, shall be impeached by the bankrupt, or any person claiming under him, in respect of any defect, unless he shall have commenced proceedings to supersede, and duly prosecute the same within twelve calendar months from the issuing.

A commission cannot be superseded before it is sealed; but the petitioning creditor delaying to seal it, and taking that objection, the time for sealing it was limited to three days. Ex parte Williams, 2 Ves. & B. 255; 2 Rose, 142.

A commission was superseded upon a petition presented on the thirteenth day from the date of the commission, on the ground of fraudulent collusion between the bankrupt and the petitioning creditor. In re Levy, 1 Mont. & Mac. 11.

The statute 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, does not prevent a bankrupt from applying to supersede, though two months have elapsed from the date of the fiat. Ex parte Palmer, 1 Mont. 497.

To supersede a commission, after certificate allowed, unless the invalidity appear upon the proceedings, a case of fraud must be made out. Ex parte Levi, Buck, 75.

A commission may be superseded after the certificate obtained, as where fraudulently taken out at the instance of the bankrupt; but where the application, which might have been made earlier, was delayed five years, and was founded upon objections to the trading and the petitioning creditor's debt, which must have been tried at law, the petition was dismissed. Ex parte Moule, 14 Ves. jun. 602.

A petition to supersede a commission, before the adjudication of the bankruptcy, is premature. Ex parte Hague, 1 Rose, 150.

(b) Petition.

A petition to supersede must contain an allegation that the petitioner is a creditor. Ex parte Oxley, 1 Glyn & J. 12.

On a petition by creditors to supersede, if they are styled "creditors" in the title of the petition, there need be no express allegation to that effect. Ex parte Springett, 1 Deac. & Chit. 381.

In petitions to annul a fiat, it is not necessary also to pray for a supersedeas. Anon. 1 Deac. & Chit. 498.

A single creditor who petitions to supersede a commission, on the ground of fraud and collusion, must also pray that a new fiat may issue; or without petitioning to supersede, he may pray for the removal of the assignees, and for others to be chosen in their room. If his petition is merely to supersede, it will be dismissed with costs. Ex parte Shum, 1 Deac. & Chit. 260.

(c) Practice.

A petition to supersede, accompanied with all the requisite certificates and signatures of the creditors and the commissioner, need not be served on the assignees. In re Eastcourt, 1 Deac. & Chit. 458.

If a person presenting a petition to supersede a commission, himself becomes a bankrupt before the petition is heard, his assignees must present a supplemental petition to have the benefit of that already presented, or it will be dismissed. Ex parte Birdwood, Buck, 99.

A commission having been superseded, with costs to be paid by the petitioning creditors, one of them, being a woman, after the costs were taxed, married, her husband was ordered to pay the taxed costs within a fortnight. Ex parte Eagle, Buck, 548.

Upon an application by a petitioning creditor, for liberty to proceed with a commission which had been kept unexecuted pending an arrangement for a composition, or to supersede it and take out another, the Lord Chancellor superseded it without prejudice to the bankrupt's action, and refused to order that the same petitioning creditor should take out another. Ex parte Smith, 1 Rose, 332.

Petitions to supersede commissions must be served on the bankrupt. Ex parte Barber, Buck, 493.

A petition to supersede a second commission must be served on the assignees under the first. Ex parte Irvine, 1 Madd. 74; 2 Rose, 451.

The pendency of an indictment is not a ground for deferring the hearing of a petition to supersede a commission of bankruptcy, if the parties indicted do not object to proceed. Ex parte Bromley, 1 Mont. & Mac. 92.

On a petition presented to the Lord Chancellor before the 11th of January, 1832, to supersede, an action at law was directed to try the validity of the commission; and verdict given in favour of the petitioner. A new petition was thereupon presented to the court of Review, and granted:—Held, that the petitioner was entitled to the costs of both petitions, and that the court of Review had no jurisdiction on the question whether the petitioning creditor could set off the debt really due to him against those costs. Ex parte Thomas, 1 Deac. & Chit. 443; Ex parte Billiald, Buck, 220; Ex parte Edwards, Buck, 232; Ex parte Marks, 1 Glyn & J. 70.

An affidavit of the petitioning creditor may be read in opposition to a petition to supersede. Ex parte Lowley, 1 Deac. & Chit. 460.

Where a petition to supersede was presented to the Lord Chancellor before the 11th of January, 1832, in order to save the expense of a new petition, service of a motion on the assignees that the prayer of the petition may be granted by the court of Review, is sufficient. Ex parte Embden, 1 Deac. & Chit. 461.

A bankrupt was permitted to petition against the commission in forma pauperis. Ex parte Northam, 2 Ves. & B. 124; 2 Rose, 140.

The court of Review has power to examine the bankrupt viva voce, on his petition to supersede the commission. Ex parte Palmer, 1 Deac. & Chit. 375.

On a petition to supersede, notice to produce the proceedings having been given to the assignees, the absence of such proceedings is not ground for ordering a supersedeas eo instanti: the petition must stand over at the costs of the assignees. Ex parte Clarke, 1 Deac. & Chit. 548.

On a petition by assignees to supersede a commission, the bankrupt's affidavit is admissible to show that the commission was fraudulently concerted. Ex parte Bellwood, 2 Deac. & Chit. 37.

Costs will not be given against a bankrupt upon petition to annul the fiat. Ex parte Heath, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 116.

Where a petition to supersede was filed on the ground of there being no petitioning creditor's debt, the deposition of the debt referring to an account, which purported to be annexed, but which was not to be found among the proceedings, the respondents were ordered to pay the costs of the day, the court having for this cause adjourned the hearing of the petition. Ex parte Clarke, 2 Deac. & Chit. 86.

8. Effect.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 94, persons from whom the assignees shall have received any real or personal estate, either by judgment or decree, are discharged in case the commission be afterwards superseded; so are persons who, without action or suit, shall bona fide deliver up possession of any real or personal estate to the assignees, or pay any debt claimed by them, if notice to try the validity had not been given and proceeded with.

Where a commission is superseded, every thing done under it falls with it; therefore, a joint and separate creditor, who sued out a separate commission, and proved under it, is, upon the supersedeas, restored to his right of election to prove against the joint estate. Such a creditor has a right to elect out of which estate he will be paid the costs of the supersedeas. Ex parte Brown, 1 Rose, 433.

The supersedeas divests the estates conveyed to the assignees by the bargain and sale of the commissioners. Ex parte Bowler, Buck, 262.

Where a commission is superseded, and another issued, though the same assignees are chosen, they have no title whatever under the first commission. Bartlett v Tuchin, 1 Marsh. 583; 6 Taunt. 259; 2 Rose, 435.

The assignees of a bankrupt are not bound by a sale under a former superseded commission; but may recover back the property, although the purchase were strictly bona fide. Gould v. Shoyer, 4 M. & P. 635; 6 Bing. 738.

The Lord Chancellor's jurisdiction, as to acts done in the bankruptcy, was not determined by the superseding of the commission. Ex parte Fector, Buck, 428.

So, after the commission is superseded, a petition will lie on behalf of a purchaser of the estates, put up to sale by the assignees, for the repayment of the deposit. Id.

In an action against a petitioning creditor under a former commission, who illegally compounded with the bankrupt, the supersedeas of the former commission is conclusive evidence of the bankruptcy. Ledbetter v. Salt, 4 Bing. 623; 1 M. & P. 597.

A commission supersedeable is not actually superseded till the writ of supersedeas issues Ex parte Layton, 6 Ves. jun. 434.

Therefore, having been opened, and the bankruptcy adjudged after the order made for the supersedeas, but before the writ sealed, notice of the application having been, according to the practice in the office, sent to the solicitor, the commission was supported. Ex parte Leicester, 6 Ves. jun. 429.

A commission superseded, to defeat a prosecution for omitting to surrender under circumstances of erroneous advice, is no fraud. Ex parte Lavender, 18 Ves. jun. 19; 1 Rose, 55.

9. Procedendo.

The Lord Chancellor might have directed the Vice-Chancellor to hear a petition for a writ of procedendo to issue, where a commission had been superseded on the Vice-Chancellor's order, confirmed by the Lord Chancellor. Ex parte Hurd, Buck, 45.

The Vice-Chancellor might certify the propriety of awarding the writ of procedendo in cases where a commission had been superseded upon his certificate. Ex parte Crump, Buck, 3.

A writ of supersedeas and a new commission being obtained, without disclosing that an attendance had been ordered upon a petition to compel the attendance of witnesses under the first commission, the writ was quashed, and the second commission superseded. Ex parte Freeman, 1 Ves. & B. 34; 1 Rose, 380.

XXII. ISSUE TO TRY VALIDITY.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 4, the court of Review may direct any issue of fact arising therein to be tried by a jury before one of the judges, or before a judge of assize.

By s. 30, if both parties, before the commissioner or subdivision court, consent to have the validity of any debt in dispute tried by a jury, an issue may be prepared under the direction of the commissioner or subdivision court, and sent for trial before one of the judges.

By s. 33, new trials of such issues may be moved for in, and granted by, the court of Review.

It is the practice of the court to take the assistance of a jury, when there is so much doubt that such assistance is felt to be necessary to the right determination of the case. But it is not the practice for the court to put the parties to the expense of a trial by jury, without first hearing all the evidence read, and the case fully argued, unless the counsel on both sides agree in stating that such must necessarily be the result, if the matter were gone into. Upon this principle the Lord Chancellor heard a petition, upon an appeal from the Vice-Chancellor's order, directing an action to be brought. Ex parte Heygate, Buck, 442.

Although the affidavits in support of a petition, and those in opposition to it, are conflicting, yet the court ought to hear them read, and the arguments of counsel, before it sends the parties to try the question at law. Where the trading upon the proceedings was only proved by a single witness, who, in an affidavit filed upon a petition to supersede the commission, contradicted that which he had formerly deposed to before the commissioners, the court superseded the commission. Ex parte Trustrum, Buck, 550.

Where a bankrupt applies to be discharged out of custody, on the ground that he has obtained his certificate; if the plaintiff in the action disputes the trading, the court will direct an issue to try that fact. Yeo v. Allen, 3 Dougl. 214; 1 Tidd's Prac. 211.

The party who has to sustain the affirmative, is to be plaintiff in an issue, and as such has the choice of the court in which it is to be tried. Ex parte Malkin, 2 Rose, 27.

For the form of an issue as to concert, and the practice as to the direction that parties should be examined on the trial of the issue, see Ex parte Carter and Curry, 1 Glyn & J. 326.

In directing an issue, the court will not order the examination of persons at the trial, who by the rules of the court at law could not be examined without such order, except sometimes in cases where the facts in dispute rest only on the knowledge of the plaintiff and defendant. Ex parte Diste, Buck, 234.

Upon an application for an order to examine the parties to a petition, as witnesses on the trial of an issue to try the validity of the commission, the Lord Chancellor declined to make such order. In re Christie, 1 Deac. & Chit. 290.

If, upon a petition to supersede for fraud in concocting a trading and petitioning creditor's debt, and praying costs against several persons, an issue is directed, such directions ought to be given as to give each person interested an opportunity of protecting himself at the trial. Ex parte Hudson, 2 Russ. 456.

If, upon hearing a petition to supersede for fraud in concocting a trading and petitioning creditor's debt, the court requires further investigation, and an issue would not do justice to all parties interested, without occasioning great expense and great complexity in the proceedings, the court would prefer a reference to the commissioners. Id.

On a petition by a bankrupt to supersede his commission, the court, in a plain case, will order a supersedeas, though the petitioning creditor desires an issue or an action. Ex parte Gallimore, 1 Madd. 67; 2 Rose, 234.

Where a separate commission issued against A. who was one of three partners, under which he obtained his certificate, and a joint commission afterwards issued against the three. On an application to supersede the separate commission, and an allegation that the certificate was not fairly obtained, the court directed an inquiry into the circumstances under which the certificate was obtained. Ex parte Gillam, 2 Cox, 193.

XXIII. COMMISSIONERS.

1. Generally.

Who may be—By 6 Geo. 4, s. 16, s. 12, the Chancellor had power to appoint such persons as he thought fit as commissioners, who had power and authority to take such order and direction with the bankrupt and his estate, as was given them by the act.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 7, any one or more of the six commissioners thereby created, have, and may perform and execute, the powers and authorities vested in commissioners of bankruptcy, as if they had been specially appointed.

By s. 14, country fiats are to be directed to certain persons, who must be practising barristers, solicitors, or attornies, returned by the judges of assize.

By ss. 8 & 15, the oaths to be taken are pointed out, in lieu of those required by 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 21.

The solicitor for a judgment creditor should not act as commissioner. Ex parte Shum, 1 Mont. 454.

A creditor ought not to act as a commissioner. Ex parte Prosser, 2 Rose, 370.

A creditor of the bankrupt was without his privity named a commissioner under the commission, but declined acting as such, and afterwards was chosen as assignee. On the petition of a creditor, he was restrained from acting as a commissioner. Ex parte Crundwell, 2 Madd. 292.

A commission was superseded upon an ex parte application, on the ground that two of the commissioners were creditors. Ex parte Mathews, 1 Glyn & J. 164.

A separate commission directed to a joint creditor, who acted under the commission, and permitted his debt to be proved without an order from the Lord Chancellor, was superseded at the costs of the petitioning creditor. Ex parte Story, Buck, 70.

When the barristers in a country commission were absent, an order might have been obtained for the others to hold the third meeting. Ex parte James, 1 Mont. 454.

The evasion of the order, which required the insertion of the names of two barristers in a country commission, was a ground for superseding. Ex parte Harbin, 1 Rose, 58.

A barrister who could not attend for the 20s. allowed by the statute, was not within the order. Id.

The commissioners shall sit daily (Sundays and holidays, to be hereinafter named, only excepted,) at 10 o'clock, at the court of Commissioners of bankrupts in Basinghall Street, and shall hold their subdivision courts at the same place, as occasion may require. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxv.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 9, registrars, and deputy registrars, were to be appointed.

A deputy registrar shall attend upon each commissioner, to take minutes of, to draw up, and have the charge of all proceedings before him, under the superintendence of the chief registrar. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxvi.

Power and Duty.—Commissioners were to proceed upon the commission submitted to them, without reference to the existence of any other commission against the same party. Ex parte Price, 2 Glyn & J. 161.

A commissioner cannot purchase under the commission, either for himself or another. Ex parte Bennett, 10 Ves. jun. 381.

A commissioner, though he had not acted, could not become a purchaser of the bankrupt's estate without the consent of the creditors at a general meeting. Ex parte Harrison, Buck, 17.

Commissioners ought not to make affidavits, unless they are served with the petition. Ex parte Husband. 1 Glyn & J. 108.

Commissioners ought not to decline to act, and have a petition presented merely to get the opinion of the Lord Chancellor. Anon. 13 Ves. jun. 590.

Commissioners may be removed for misconduct, but are not to pay costs. Ex parte Scarth, 14 Ves. jun. 204.

Commissioners may be ordered to pay costs, in respect of conduct out of the course of their duty as commissioners. Ex parte Scarth, 15 Ves. jun. 293.

A petition to restrain an action by commissioners against the assignees for the costs of defending an action against the commissioners and messenger for false imprisonment, in which the plaintiff was nonsuited, or for a contribution among the creditors, was dismissed. Ex parte Linthwaite, 16 Ves. jun. 234.

Fees.—By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 22, the fees to commissioners were formerly regulated.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 58, a penalty is given of 500*l.* against commissioners of the bankruptcy court taking any fees or gratuities.

The solicitor was answerable to the commissioners for their fees. Ex parte Griffiths, 2 Rose, 342; 1 Madd. 56.

and if not paid, on petition, he was ordered to pay them. Id.

2. Examination and Discovery of Property.

(a) Who may be examined.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 24, the commissioners might summon before them, and examine on oath, any person whom they believed capable of giving any information concerning the trading or act of bankruptcy; and might require them to produce all documents which appeared necessary.

By ss. 33 & 34, the commissioners might in like manner summon and examine persons suspected of having the bankrupt's property in their possession; and might compel them to produce books and documents.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 7, the commissioners, or any one of them, of the bankrupt's court, have the same power, except that no single commissioner can commit.

The commissioners under the stat. 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 10, had authority to examine persons supposed to have or detain a part of the bankrupt's estate, although such persons did not claim to be interested therein. Ex parte Anderson, Buck, 397.

The partner of the bankrupt was ordered to attend before the commissioners to be examined, and to produce the partnership books and papers, there being no suggestion of his being indebted to the bankrupt, or having property of the bankrupt in his possession. Ex parte Levett, 1 Glyn & J. 185.

The solicitor of a purchaser of an estate from the bankrupt was ordered to attend the commissioners, for the purpose of being examined, without prejudice to any question of privilege. Ex parte Hodgson and Watson, 2 Glyn & J. 21.

There was authority in the commissioners and the Chancellor in bankruptcy, to compel a discovery even from a purchaser for valuable consideration without notice. Ex parte Herbert, 13 Ves. jun. 189.

The commissioners have no power under the 33 & 34 sections of 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, to examine the executors of a debtor to the bankrupt, as to the amount of assets that have come to the hands of such executor. Ex parte Solarte, 1 Deac. & Chit. 311.

In 1811, A. and B. entered into a partnership, which continued till 1818, when it was dissolved, and the affairs wound up, except as to some outstanding debts. In 1820, a deed of release was executed, from which these debts were excluded. Partnership books relating generally to these and other debts were all along suffered to remain in A.'s hands. All the outstanding debts were subsequently settled. In 1830, B. was declared bankrupt, till which time the books were never called for by B.:—Held, that A. and B. nevertheless continued tenants in common in respect of them, and that the length of time did not affect that relationship; and therefore, although there was no charge of fraud in the settled account, yet the commissioner had jurisdiction to call A. before him, and examine him and the books relative to the former dealings of the bankrupt. Ex parte Truman, 1 Deac. & Chit. 464.

A testator by will directs his business to be carried on by his executors, and that when his son B. (the bankrupt) attains twenty-one, he should, on performing certain terms, be admitted to a fourth share. B., at the age of twenty, enters into another business on his own account, and never claims the right under the will, or perform those conditions:—Held, nevertheless, that he had not abandoned the right, and therefore that his assignees have a right to call the executors of the will before the commissioner, and examine them as to the affair of partnership. Ex parte Marks, 1 Deac. & Chit. 499.

(b) What Questions.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 34, if a person summoned shall refuse to be sworn, or to answer lawful questions touching the person, trade, dealings, or estate of the bankrupt, or concerning the act of bankruptcy, or shall not fully answer to the satisfaction of the commissioners, or shall refuse to sign and subscribe his examination reduced into writing, not having any lawful objection allowed by the commissioners, or shall not produce any books, papers, deeds, and writings, or other documents in his custody or power, which he was required to produce, the commissioners may commit him.

The authority of commissioners to commit depends upon the particular act of parliament, to which they must adhere. Isaac v. Impey, 4 C. & P. 120; 10 B. & C. 442.

Commissioners are authorized to examine a witness concerning the person, trade, dealings, estate, and effects of the bankrupt, and, incidentally to this power, they may examine him also respecting other individuals, through whom they may be likely to obtain information on the points; and, therefore, where a witness was asked questions as to when and where he last saw the bankrupt's wife:—Held, that such questions were legal and material, and that the commissioners were justified in committing him for giving unsatisfactory answers to these questions: Held, also, that the true criterion by which to judge as to the propriety of the commitment, was to consider all the questions and answers collectively, and then to say whether the whole examination was satisfactory or not; and therefore, where the commissioners in their warrant set out several questions, to some of which, taken alone, the answers were satisfactory, held also, that this was no objection to a warrant committing the party "till he should full answer make to the questions so put to him as aforesaid." Ex parte Vogel, 2 B. & A. 219.

The commissioners have a right to inquire whether one who comes to prove his debt means to proceed at law. Anon. Loft, 52.

But they have no right to ask questions, the answers to which may subject the witness to fine or other criminal punishment. Smith v. Beadnell, 1 Camp. 30—Ellenborough.

That a man cannot positively recollect a fact, but should rather believe the affirmative, is a full and satisfactory answer by a witness on a commission of bankruptcy. Miller's case, 2 W. Black. 881; 3 Wils. 427.

The commissioners may compel the production of a book, to enable them to read the entries—Per Bayley. Isaac v. Impey, 10 B. & C. 442; 4 C. & P. 120: S. P. Ex parte Isaac, 3 Y. & J. 38.

Commissioners have no authority to commit a witness for refusing to read an entry in a book which he produces. Id.

A witness summoned under the statute, being required to read certain entries in a book to which, during his examination, he had referred, but which he had not been called upon to produce, refused to read the entries, whereupon he was committed for refusing to answer the said question:—Held, that the warrant was bad in substance and in form; a request to read not being a question. Id.

The witness's speaking of it as a question at the time of his refusal made no difference. Id.

The commissioners were liable to an action for false imprisonment, although their only motive was a wish to discharge their duty. Id.

On a question on the legality of the commitment of a witness, all the questions and answers must be looked at as forming one examination; and a witness cannot be committed for not answering as to his belief the intention of the bankrupt, unless other parts of his examination show such belief to be material with reference to the person, trade, dealing or estate of the bankrupt. Ex parte Bagster, 1 M. & R. 572: S. C. nom. Ex parte Baxter, 7 B. & C. 673.

A commitment by commissioners must be for not satisfactorily answering a material question, and it is not sufficient that the witness, throughout his examination, was unwilling to make a full disclosure. Id.

And a question as to the witness's belief of the intention of the bankrupt on a particular occasion, which might have tended to show the bankruptcy was concerted between them, where other questions might have been put to show that, is immaterial. Id.

Where a party, brought before commissioners of bankrupt, and examined by them with a view to ascertain whether the bankruptcy had been concerted between him and the bankrupt, and how the stock of the latter had been disposed of, was asked with what intention he believed the bankrupt had come to him on a certain day before the docket was struck; to which he answered, that he did not know the bankrupt's intention, and did not know what to say as to his belief:—Held, that the question was not material, and that, therefore, although the answer might not be satisfactory, the commissioners had not authority to commit the party. Id.

The Court cannot receive affidavits to explain the conduct of, and the circumstances under which a person was committed by commissioners, for not satisfactorily answering questions put to him touching the bankrupt's estate and effects In re James, 2 Chit. 112.

A solicitor summoned as a witness to produce a mortgage-deed of the bankrupt's property, refused to produce such deed, and was committed by them for refusing to answer satisfactorily:—Held, that the warrant was defective in form, and that the commitment ought to have been for not producing. Ex parte Frowd, 7 Mont. & Mac. 269.

If a witness refuse to produce his books, or a copy to refresh his memory, so that he may be enabled to answer such questions as, without reference to his books, he cannot answer, he may be committed for not answering satisfactorily. In re Dale, 1 Mont. & Mac. 271.

(c) Compelling Attendance.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 33, commissioners are authorized, by writing under their hands, to summon before them certain persons, and, in case of non-attendance, to cause them to be apprehended by warrant.

Sect. 24, gives them the same power to compel attendance before adjudication.

In order to justify the commissioners in issuing their warrant to apprehend a witness to whom they had directed a summons, it was necessary that a reasonable time should intervene between the service of the summons and the time when the witness was required to attend, and that such reasonable time should be sufficient for the purpose. Grocock v. Cooper, 8 B. & C. 211; 2 M. & R. 78.

Semle, that the commissioners are not bound to have information on oath of the service of the summons before they issue their warrant, but that it is sufficient if the summons be actually served. Id.

In an action against commissioners for false imprisonment, by a person who had been apprehended under their warrant for not appearing to give evidence before them, the reasonableness of the summons, and of the tender of expenses, is a question of fact for the jury. Id.

Commissioners have no authority to commit one suspected to detain effects of the bankrupt, for not attending to be examined on the first summons. Dyer v. Missing, 2 W. Black. 1635.

A witness summoned by commissioners is bound to attend, although his expenses may not have been tendered to him; although if he, in fact, be prevented by want of means, it would be an answer to an application for an attachment. Such witness, however, is to have his reasonable costs, to be settled by the commissioners. Ex parte Benson, 2 Rose, 75.

All documents required to be produced should be described in the body of the summons, previously to such summons being signed by the commissioners. Ex parte Frowd, 1 Mont. & Mac. 270.

A witness who had been before summoned was ordered to attend the commissioners, to be examined touching the act of bankruptcy, and leaving the order at the place where the witness resided when served with the summons, was ordered to be good service. Ex parte Bowler, Buck, 258.

Under the stat. 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, ss. 10 & 11, it was not necessary, upon summoning a witness before the commissioners to be examined, to tender him the expenses of his journey beforehand; though, if he were in fact without the means of taking the journey, it might be an excuse for not obeying the summons; and consequently, a warrant issued by the commissioners on account of the non-attendance of such witness, without lawful impediment, authorizing his arrest for the purpose of examination, was not legal. Battye v. Gresley, 8 East, 319.

It lies on the party so summoned, having a lawful excuse for not attending, to prove the fact, in an action of trespass and false imprisonment brought by him for such arrest, admitting that an inability to bear the expense of the journey is a lawful impediment. Id.

Such warrant for the arrest of the witness, in order to examine him, may issue after his disobedience to the first summons. Id.

The propriety of granting the warrant, being an act of discretion, must be determined upon by the commissioners acting together at the time; and their order to their officer to make out such warrant must be taken to include their direction as to the persons to whom it is to be directed; but the mere act of signing the names of the commissioners to the warrant may be done by them separately. Id.

Commissioners, as they cannot issue subpoenas, must, upon questions of fact coming before them collaterally, proceed by affidavit. Ex parte Thistlewood, 19 Ves. jun. 250; 1 Rose, 290.

There was jurisdiction in bankruptcy to enforce the commissioners' summons for the attendance of witnesses, to prove the requisites to support the commission, and to commit for contempt by disobedience to an order, though there was no express authority by the general jurisdiction. Anon. 14 Ves. jun. 451.

A warrant to arrest a witness might issue at once, on disobedience to their summons, and did not require a second summons. Ex parte Linthwaite, 16 Ves. jun. 235.

Persons ordered to attend commissioners to prove the requisites of bankruptcy, having refused obedience to the warrant of the commissioners, on the ground that they were creditors, and therefore incompetent as witnesses; it was held, that if a party is a creditor it is not a preliminary objection to his being examined, as the result of the examination may establish that he is not a creditor. In re Gooldie, 2 Rose, 330.

(d) Expenses of Witnesses.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 35, the commissioners may give such costs and charges as they think fit to any person known or suspected to have any of the bankrupt's estate in his possession, or supposed to be indebted to him, who is summoned; and every witness who is summoned is to have his necessary expenses tendered to him in like manner as upon a subpoena.

A party attending commissioners for the purpose of being examined as to the property of the bankrupt, is not entitled to have his expenses paid or ascertained till his examination is concluded. Ex parte Roscoe, 2 Rose, 345; 1 Mer. 189.

Where a party, committed by commissioners of bankrupt for not answering to their satisfaction, wishes to be again brought before them, he must bear the expense of that proceeding. Ex parte Baxter, 8 B. & C. 344; 1 Mont. & Mac. 16.

An order was made that a witness, who had been twice committed by commissioners, should be again examined by them, on tendering to the solicitor under the commission the costs of the meeting, and of being brought up. Id.

The commissioners may make a verbal order for the payment of expenses to a person whom they have summoned to attend them, and it shall be recovered in assumpsit. Yarker v. Botham, 1 Esp. 64—Kenyon.

(e) Commitment.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 34, the commissioners had power to commit by warrant.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 7, no single commissioner has power to commit otherwise than to the custody of the messenger or other officer, to be brought up before a subdivision court, or the court of Review, within three days.

Upon a question of discharge from commitment by commissioners, the Lord Chancellor would not go out of the return to the writ of habeas corpus, into the conduct of the bankrupt under the bankruptcy, or into any examination, other than that stated in the return to the writ. Ex parte Oliver, 1 Rose, 407.

The Lord Chancellor refused to interfere with the discretion of the commissioners, by an order upon them to enforce answers from a person examined as to the bankrupt's property. Ex parte Farr, 9 Ves. jun. 513.

A commitment by two commissioners of the court of bankruptcy is valid: a warrant is sufficient, if enough appear to show that the court has jurisdiction. In re Smith, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 418.

Semble, that a commitment which does not set out all the questions, is not bad, if it appear on the warrant that the prisoner did not make any objections to the questions, or that the prisoner has answered all questions put to him. Ex parte Leake, 9 B. & C. 236.

The whole of the questions and answers should be set out in the warrant of commitment. Tomlin's case, 1 Glyn & J. 373.

The warrant need not state that the questions related to the bankrupt's person, trade, &c., or that they were lawful questions, as it is sufficient if, upon the examinations, they appear so to be. Ex parte Harrison, 1 B. & Adol. 410.

The court, on habeas corpus, will look into the examination themselves, to see whether the question were upon a subject within the jurisdiction of the commissioners. Id.

A warrant is defective which refers to, without setting out, previous examinations, and without which the court cannot judge of the sufficiency of what appears. Horton's case, 2 Glyn & J. 215.

A commitment is defective if the commissioners do not examine with sufficient minuteness. Id.

The omission to set out a previous examination does not vitiate a commitment upon a distinct ground. Atkinson's case, 2 Glyn. & J. 218.

A warrant of commitment, after reciting an examination of the bankrupt, and that he refused to sign or subscribe such examination, proceeded as follows: "These are therefore to require and authorize you, &c. to receive the said, &c. into your custody, &c., until such time as he shall submit himself to us, &c., and shall sign or subscribe the examination aforesaid, according, &c."—Held, that the submission was properly confined to the refusal to sign, and that the warrant was not informal. In re Davidson, 1 Mont. & Mac. 443.

A warrant, stating that various questions had been proposed, and, amongst others, the following, is defective. Lawrence's case, 2 Glyn & J. 209.

A warrant is defective which refers to documents in a former examination without setting them forth, so as to enable the judge to decide upon the same information as the commissioners possessed. Price's case, 2 Glyn & J. 211.

A commitment by commissioners renders the bankrupt in custody on criminal process. In re Taylor, 3 East, 232. And see In re Bromley, 3 D. & R. 310.

For a commitment warrant under the hands and seals of the commissioners is a criminal process. Id.

(f) Jurisdiction over.

It was in the discretion of the Lord Chancellor to permit or refuse a defendant at law to have copies of his examination before the commissioners upon his petition. The examinations having been laid before the Lord Chancellor, he refused the application. Ex parte Chater, Buck, 290.

The court would not restrain commissioners in their examinations, upon an allegation that the object of the examination was to procure evidence against the parties examined as to penalties incurred by gaming. Ex parte Burlton, 1 Glyn & J. 30.

The remedy was by an application to the Chancellor to have the examination taken off the file and cancelled. Stockfleth v. De Tastet, 2 Rose, 282; 4 Camp. 10—Ellenborough.

An application to compel a creditor taking the benefit of the commission to produce his books, relating to his transactions with the bankrupts, was refused. Ex parte Woolley, 1 Glyn & J. 395.

Where the legislature gives authority to commissioners, and not power to punish disobedience to that authority, the great seal will lend its aid; but not where the legislature has given no authority upon the subject. Id.

The court will not assume that commissioners are likely to exceed the authority vested in them. Where a mortgagee of the bankrupt's property, who was summoned to attend before the commissioners, petitioned that they might be restrained from requiring the production of the mortgage deed, the petition was dismissed with costs, as being premature. Ex parte Beeston, 1 Mont. & Mac. 244.

3. Actions against.

An action for false imprisonment was formerly maintainable against commissioners of bankruptcy for an illegal exercise of their discretion, in improperly committing a bankrupt who had made a satisfactory answer. Miller v. Sear, 2 W. Black. 1141; S. P. Isaac v. Impey, 10 B. & C. 442; 4 C. & P. 120; Ex parte Isaac, 3 Y. & J. 38. And see Crowley v. Impey, 2 Stark, 261, and Perkin v. Proctor, 2 Wils. 382.

But it would not lie for committing a witness to prison for not satisfactorily answering questions put to him, when under examination before them, touching the estate of a bankrupt, although the questions appeared to the court to have been satisfactorily answered. Doswell v. Impey, 2 D. & R. 350; 1 B. & C. 163.

As now the commitment is by a court of judicature, no action will lie, as regards town fiats: the law on this head, therefore, applies to country commissioners only.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 40, in actions of false imprisonment, the court may, at the request of the defendants, look at the whole examination of the party committed, even if it be not stated in the warrant.

By s. 41, no writ is to be issued against any commissioner in less than a month after notice of action given.

By s. 42, the plaintiff shall not recover, unless the notice be proved; and no evidence shall be given of any thing not contained in the notice.

By s. 43, tender of amends may be made within the month after notice, and may be pleaded in bar of the action; and may be paid into court before issue joined.

By s. 44, the time for bringing actions is limited to three calendar months after the fact committed: the general issue may be pleaded; and on verdict for the defendants, nonsuit, discontinuance or judgment for defendants on demurrer, the defendants are to have double costs.

XXIV. SOLICITOR.

1. Authority and Duty.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 10, all attornies and solicitors may practise in the court of Bankruptcy upon being admitted therein.

An attorney might sue out and prosecute a commission of bankruptcy, without being admitted a solicitor of the court of chancery. Wilkinson v. Diggles, 2 D. & R. 302; 1 B. & C. 158.

And might recover for his fees and disbursements. Id.

If a certificated conveyancer induce a creditor of a bankrupt to employ him in investigating the bankrupt's affairs, by representing himself to be an attorney and solicitor, he cannot maintain an action for his trouble, nor for money paid as fees to counsel. Crammond v. Crouch, 3 C. & P. 77—Tenterden.

And where, in an action of debt on the stat. 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, for acting as a solicitor in the court of Chancery, (viz. in the matter of T. S. a bankrupt,) the defendant, although a certificated conveyancer, not being a solicitor of the said court: the plaintiff having proved that the defendant had been consulted, and been instrumental in the matter of a petition to the Lord Chancellor by the creditors of T. S. (which petition bore the name of certain admitted solicitors, and was intitled "In bankruptcy,") praying for the taxation of the bill of the solicitor to the commission, was nonsuited; the court of C. P. refused to set it aside. Ford v. Webb, 3 B. & B. 241; 7 Moore, 54.

Quære, whether the court of Review has jurisdiction over a solicitor to order him to refund money, merely because he is a solicitor of the court. Ex parte Hicks, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 256.

The solicitor will not be charged with costs, unless guilty of such an abuse as amounts to a contempt, in which case he might even be struck off the roll; but the charges being denied, the creditor must bring an action against him. Ex parte Heywood, 13 Ves. jun. 67.

Upon superseding a fraudulent commission, the solicitor may be charged with costs, as well as the other parties, except as to a criminal prosecution not under a direction in bankruptcy, and in which he was not a defendant. Ex parte Arrowsmith, 14 Ves. jun. 209.

An application to remove a solicitor from being or acting as a master extraordinary of the court of Chancery, and to strike him off the roll of such court, though it may be properly made by reason of his conduct in a matter of bankruptcy, should not be made in the bankruptcy, but should be addressed to the general jurisdiction of the court. Ex parte Lowe, 1 Glyn & J. 78.

Upon an affidavit being taken off the file for scandal, the solicitor who filed it is liable for all costs and expenses, as between solicitor and client. Ex parte Wake, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 259.

The solicitor to a commission cannot purchase under it, either for himself or another. Ex parte Bennett, 10 Ves. jun. 381.

A purchase of dividends cannot be made by a solicitor to a commission, for his own benefit. Ex parte James, 8 Ves. jun. 337.

Where mortgaged property is sold, and the same solicitor is concerned for the assignees and the mortgagee, a separate solicitor should be appointed for the purposes of the sale. Ex parte Rolfe, 1 Deac. & Chit. 77.

The solicitor to a commission was restrained by injunction from negotiating a promissory note that he had received from the bankrupt for his bill of costs in procuring his certificate, where the bankrupt having purchased the debts of many of the creditors, and the solicitor being indebted to the estate in such a sum, the share of it coming to the bankrupt, standing in the place of the creditors, in respect of the debts so purchased by him, would exceed the amount of the promissory note. Ex parte Harding, Buck, 24, 37.

A purchase of a bankrupt's estate by the solicitor to the commission was set aside; and the Lord Chancellor would not permit him to bid upon the resale, upon discharging himself from the character of solicitor, without the previous consent of the persons interested, freely given upon full information. Ex parte James, 8 Ves. jun. 337.

If a solicitor, not being a bankrupt's solicitor, has in his custody a deed of assignment executed by the bankrupt, he must produce it, if required so to do by the commissioners. Ex parte Law, Buck, 110.

2. Bill of Costs.

(a) Taxation.

Proceedings.—By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 14, the commissioners are to tax the costs of the petitioning creditor up to the choice of assignees, and by writing to direct the payment by the assignees; the bill of the solicitor under a commission, for business done after the choice of assignees, is to be settled by the commissioners, except so much as relates to any action or suit, which is to be settled by the proper officer of the court in which the business was transacted, and the same so settled is to be paid by the assignees: provided that any creditor who has paid to the amount of 20*l.*, and is dissatisfied with such settlement, may have the bill taxed by a master in Chancery.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 5, and 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 47, s. 8, all costs of suit between party and party in the court of Review are in the discretion of the court, and are to be taxed by one of the registrars.

The commissioners are to tax bills of costs from time to time, and are not to wait until the whole business of the commission is concluded. Ex parte Gore, 2 Glyn & J. 117.

A bill of costs, by a solicitor, under a commission of bankruptcy, though approved by the commissioners, and stated and allowed in the accounts of the assignees, was held to be taxable under 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 46. Ex parte Gregson, 3 Madd. 49.

A master's jurisdiction to tax the bill of costs of the solicitor to a commission under the 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 46, was not conclusive until the master had signed his certificate. Ex parte Neale, 2 Glyn & J. 226.

Where a commission is superseded by an arrangement between the bankrupt and his creditors, and the bankrupt pays the solicitor's bill of costs without taxation, the court will afterwards order them to be taxed. Ex parte Heyden, 2 Glyn & J. 52.

The provision in the stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 25, for taxation of the petitioning creditor's costs on the day appointed for the choice, was merely directory. Ex parte Haynes, 1 Glyn & J. 35.

A bill of costs up to the choice, which had been taxed by the commissioners at 97*l.* 10*s.*, was ordered to be taxed by the master, on the ground that the commissioners had excluded the parties from attending the taxation. Ex parte Palmer, 2 Glyn & J. 34.

An order was made under the act 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, s. 12, to tax a solicitor's bill for striking the docket, and a journey to get an affidavit of debt, being business relating to the bankruptcy, though previous to it. Ex parte Smith, 3 Ves. jun. 706.

Where the amount of a solicitor's bill, up to the choice of assignees, is prima facie exorbitant, it is of course to refer it to the master to be taxed. Ex parte Emery, Buck, 422.

A solicitor's bill of costs, where the charges were prima facie exorbitant, ordered to be taxed after payment made, and after the death of the assignee who had paid it. Ex parte Neale, Buck, 111.

The rule of taxation of a solicitor's bill adopted in bankruptcy, applies to the bill taxed by the commissioners. Ex parte Westall, 3 Ves. & B. 141.

It is not of course to refer to the master a bill of costs up to the choice of assignees, already taxed by the commissioners; particular objections must be stated; if the solicitor refuses to give a copy of his bill, a reference will be made. Ex parte Sutton, 4 Madd. 395.

It is of course upon an ex parte application, to have an order to tax a solicitor's bill; if the solicitor wish to modify or discharge the order, he must apply to the court for that purpose. Ex parte Hewitt, Buck, 388.

To a petition that the assignees may out of the funds in their hands, pay the solicitor's bill up to the choice, and which had been taxed by the commissioners, it is a sufficient objection that they have allowed charges in which it ought to be expunged. Ex parte Thelwall, 1 Rose, 397.

An order in bankruptcy was made for the taxation of a solicitor's bill, for business done in bankruptcy and otherwise. Ex parte Arrowsmith, 13 Ves. jun. 124.

Before bringing an Action.]—An action may be maintained by a solicitor against an assignee for business done under a commission, although the bill had not been taxed by a master in Chancery, under the statute 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 45. Tarn v. Heys, 1 Stark. 278; Holt, 378, n.—Gibbs.

A solicitor to a commission may maintain an action for the amount of his bill up to the choice of assignees, without having had his bill taxed by the commissioners under s. 24 of the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, that provision applying only to cases between the assignees and the estate. Taylor v. McGaugan, 4 C. & P. 96—J. Parke: S. P. Crowder v. Davies, 3 Y. & J. 433.

An attorney brought an action against the petitioning creditor, under a commission of bankruptcy, for business done previous to the assignment:—Held, that, notwithstanding the statute, he might maintain the action, without proof that his charges had been allowed by the commissioners, according to the provisions of that section, as the whole was matter of investigation before the taxing officer. Fisher v. Filmer, 5 C. & P. 92—Vaughan.

Petition.]—Under the statute, where a creditor is dissatisfied with the taxation of the commissioners, he must present a petition for an order of reference to have the bill settled by a master in Chancery; without such order the masters have no authority to retax a bill which has been taxed by the commissioners. Ex parte Hickman, 1 Mont. & Mac. 252.

Upon a petition by a creditor under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 14, to retax a solicitor's bill, it is not necessary to serve the assignees. Ex parte Payne, 1 Mont. 455.

A petition to the court of Review to tax a solicitor's bill, must be served on the opposite party. Ex parte White, 1 Deac. & Chit. 41.

A petition to tax a bill after payment must state the objectionable items. Ex parte Beresford, 2 Glyn & J. 259.

A petition for an order to tax a solicitor's bill of costs up to the choice of assignees, after it has been taxed by the commissioners, will not be granted, unless specific errors are stated. Ex parte Brereton, 4 Madd. 479.

An assignee, who is not a creditor, may petition to tax a solicitor's bill. Ex parte Barlow, 1 Mont. 87.

A creditor cannot apply to have the solicitor's bill taxed, except on the ground of neglect of duty by the assignees. Ex parte Walker, 1 Glyn & J. 95.

A creditor may petition to refer the solicitor's bill, up to the choice of assignees, to the master for relaxation, without stating in his petition the items to which he objects as settled by the commissioners. Ex parte Key, 1 Mont. 133.

If the assignees neglect to have a solicitor's bill of costs taxed by the commissioners, the bankrupt may, after having settled with the creditors, apply to the general jurisdiction of the court, and obtain an order to tax the bill. Ex parte Bayley, 1 Mont. 208.

A. employs B., a solicitor, to strike a docket against C., which is done, but afterwards is abandoned. Subsequently, A. employs D. to strike a docket, which is regularly followed up:—Held, that A. is not entitled to have B.'s costs taxed under the commission. Ex parte Neale, 1 Deac. & Chit. 486.

Costs of Taxation.—Where one-sixth of a solicitor's bill has been taxed off upon a reference, and he applies to confirm the report, giving notice to the petitioning creditor, he must pay the costs of the appearance on such application, and of the petition and taxation. Ex parte Nutting, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 267; 1 Deac. & Chit. 551.

One-sixth of a bill of costs in bankruptcy delivered to the master to be taxed being taken off, the solicitor was ordered to pay the costs of the taxation. Ex parte Hatherway, 2 Madd. 329.

An order in bankruptcy was made, referring a solicitor's bill to a master for taxation, reserving the costs of taxation; and the bill being taxed, and more than one-sixth taken off, the solicitor brought an action for taxed costs, without deducting the costs of taxation: on petition the action was staid, and a reference made to the master to tax the costs of the taxation of costs, and, after deducting the amount thereof from the taxed costs, the same were ordered to be paid to the solicitor. Ex parte Bellott, 4 Madd. 379. And see Hewitt v. Bellott, 2 B. & A. 745.

A solicitor must pay the costs of the taxation of the bill reduced by the taxation more than one-sixth of the amount, which reduction arose from the master disallowing extra fees paid to the commissioners for travelling expenses. Ex parte Inman, Buck, 129.

(b) Recovery.

If a person who is not the petitioning creditor, employ an attorney to sue out a commission where no effects are received under the commission, he is liable to the attorney. Pocock v. Russen, M. & M. 358; S. C. nom. Pocock v. Russell, 4 C. & P. 14—Tenterden.

A solicitor may sue out a commission upon a debt for costs, without having delivered a bill signed. Ex parte Howell, 1 Rose, 312.

The attorney employed by the petitioning creditor before the choice of assignees, and continued by the assignees afterwards, having delivered his bill to the assignees, including all the charges incurred by order of the petitioning creditor in the first instance, and having received a certain sum, on account of his bill generally, from the assignees, is bound, as the assignees themselves were, by the statute, to appropriate the sum so received in reduction of the charges incurred by order of the petitioning creditor, and for which he was originally responsible; and therefore the amount of such charges, covered by the sum so received, cannot be set off by the attorney against a debt due from him to the petitioning creditor on his own account. Phillips v. Dicus, 15 East, 248; 1 Rose, 345.

So, an attorney may prove his bill under a commission of bankrupt, without delivering a signed bill. Eicke v. Nokes, M. & M. 303—Tenterden. Rule for new trial afterwards obtained. Id.

An attorney in bankruptcy is entitled, on petition, to have paid to him a fund in court in part payment of his bill of costs at law and in bankruptcy, relative to the claim under which the money was paid into court, although his client since the money was paid into court, had taken advantage of the insolvent act. Ex parte Moule, 5 Madd. 462.

3. Lien for Costs.

A solicitor has a lien upon costs ordered to be paid to his client upon a petition in bankruptcy, although there be no fund in court; nor can the client release the benefit of the order to the prejudice of the solicitor. Ex parte Bryant, 2 Rose, 237.

Quære, whether the proceedings under a commission that has been superseded are subject to the solicitor's lien? Ex parte Shaw, Jacob, 270.

The petitioning creditor's solicitor has no lien on the proceedings for his bill. Id.

XXV. MESSENGER.

1. Duty and Authority.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 27, the messenger appointed by the commissioners under their warrant, may break open any house, chamber, shop, warehouse, door, trunk, or chest, of any bankrupt, where such bankrupt or any of his property is reputed to be, and seize upon the body or property of any such bankrupt.

By s. 28, even in Ireland.

By s. 29, the messenger may obtain a search warrant from a justice where property of the bankrupt is sworn to be concealed.

By s. 30, even in Scotland.

By s. 31, no actions are to be brought against persons acting in obedience to the warrant of commissioners, unless demand of a perusal and copy of the warrant has been given, and making the petitioning creditor a defendant.

Messengers, upon taking possession, are forthwith to take an inventory of the bankrupt's effects, but no appraisement shall be made, or other expenses incurred, without the special direction of the commissioner, until after the appointment of the creditor's assignees. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxviii.

If the messenger show his warrant to a person supposed to be in possession of some bacon, the property of the bankrupt, and the bankrupt says, "I have it not: I have some that came from a shop in Exeter" (which was that of the son and daughter of the bankrupt); and the messenger desire him to take care of it, and not to part with it, as more would be heard about it, and he afterwards suffer it to be removed, this is a conversion. Hawkes v. Dunn, 1 Tyr. 413; 1 C. & J. 519.

The 27th section does not give power to break open all houses, &c., where the bankrupt's property is reputed to be, but only any houses, &c., of the bankrupt. Edge v. Parker, 8 B. & C. 700—Bayley.

A warrant under s. 29 to search for the goods of a bankrupt in the house of a third person, is not valid, if granted to any one except the messenger under the commission. Sly v. Stevenson, 2 C. & P. 464—Best.

There is no jurisdiction in bankruptcy to order goods seized by a messenger to be delivered up to a person claiming them as his. Ex parte Craggs, 1 Rose, 25.

The messenger is to enter and seize, at his own hazard, the property of the bankrupt; but if he enters the house, and seizes the property of another, acting under authority, he cannot be turned out, but the party must take his remedy at law. Ex parte Page, 1 Rose, 1; 17 Ves. jun. 59.

Obstructing a messenger in the execution of his warrant, is a contempt. Id.

And contemptuous language, or force, is a contempt. Id.

Quære, whether a messenger, having been in possession under a warrant, and abandoned it, the warrant is not spent? Id.

Where the messenger was put out of possession of property on board a ship, by threatening to throw him overboard, the parties also using contemptuous language, they were ordered to give security for answering the bankrupt's interest. Ex parte Dixon, 8 Ves. jun. 104.

A messenger having possessed property under a commission which had been superseded, and for which he had not accounted to the assignees under that commission, was ordered to account to the assignees under a subsequent subsisting commission. Ex parte Shaw, 2 Glyn & J. 73.

2. Fees.

The petitioning creditor is liable to pay the costs and expenses of a commission until the assignees are chosen. Finchett v. How, 2 Camp. 275—Ellenborough.

He is also liable to the messenger under a commission of bankruptcy, for the costs and expenses attending it, notwithstanding such messenger was employed by the solicitor. Hart v. White, Holt, 376—Gibbs.

But he is only liable to the messenger for necessary expenses. Billings v. Waters, 1 Stark. 363—Ellenborough.

Therefore, he is not liable for the expenses of an unnecessary and fruitless journey to the Isle of Man, unless upon a special contract. Id.

The messenger may recover from the petitioning creditor his fees for his services, before the party be declared a bankrupt, though the party was since declared a bankrupt, and the messenger's bill ordered by the commissioners to be paid by the assignees out of the estate. Burwood v. Kant, 2 C. & P. 123—Abbott.

A petitioning creditor was ordered to pay the messenger his costs as taxed by the commissioners, and the assignees to pay his subsequent costs, where the commission was supersedeable, and was considered as superseded. Ex parte Johnson, 1 Glyn & J. 23.

A petition by the messenger, praying that the solicitor to the petitioning creditor, who was insolvent, might pay the messenger's costs up to the choice of assignees, was dismissed with costs, as the solicitor is not liable to the messenger except upon special contract. Ex parte Burwood, 2 Glyn & J. 70.

The solicitor is not liable in the first instance to the messenger whom he nominates for his bill of fees; but if the solicitor agree with the petitioning creditor to work a commission for a sum certain, and receive a great part of that sum, he will be liable to such messenger. Hartop v. Jukes, 2 M. & S. 438; 2 Rose, 263.

The solicitor is an agent merely, and is not to be regarded as a principal as respects the messenger; and, although he makes himself responsible to the messenger, the petitioning creditor will not therefore be exonerated without the express consent of the messenger to discharge him. Hart v. White, Holt, 376—Gibbs.

Where a commission was superseded, the petitioning creditor absconding, the messenger, having recovered part of his demand from him, was permitted to bring an action against the solicitor for the residue, and damages and costs in an action against him acting under the commission. Ex parte Hartop, 12 Ves. jun. 349.

An assignee is not liable, under the 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 25, to pay the messenger the costs incurred by him previous to the appointment of the assignee. Burwood v. Felton, 4 D. & R. 621; 3 B. & C. 43.

It is no objection to an application by a messenger that the assignees may be directed to pay him his bill of fees, that he has neglected to make a demand upon them till after a final dividend; they must be presumed to have known of his having such a claim, and ought not to have distributed the funds without reserving sufficient to satisfy it. Ex parte Harlop, 1 Rose, 449.

There is no doubt of the jurisdiction of the Chancellor sitting in bankruptcy to order assignees to pay a messenger's bill of fees. Id.

Messenger's fees fixed. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxviii.

XXVI. EVIDENCE IN BANKRUPTCY.

1. Generally.

Proof of fact of Bankruptcy.—A writ of supersedeas, reciting that a commission issued on a day certain, is evidence to show that such a commission issued on that day. Gervis v. Grand Western Canal Company, 5 M. & S. 76.

In an action against a petitioning creditor under a former commission, who illegally compounded with the bankrupt, the supersedeas of the former commission is conclusive evidence of the bankruptcy. Ledbetter v. Salt, 4 Bing. 623; 1 M. & P. 597.

In an action by an uncertificated bankrupt for the payment of a sum which the defendant has paid to the assignees, the adjudication of bankruptcy, with the assignment, and proof that the plaintiff passed his examination and endeavoured to obtain his certificate, is sufficient evidence of the bankruptcy. Crofton v. Poole, 1 B. & Adol. 568.

Declarations of an assignee suing as such, made before he was chosen assignee, are not admissible against him. Fenwick v. Thornton, M. & M. 51—Abbott.

Where the defendant at the trial gave in evidence a commission of bankruptcy, and a receipt given by the assignees to prove the payment of a sum of money from him to them, and the judge was inclined to think such proof sufficient; and the defendant afterwards attempted to prove the validity of the commission, and failed, and the jury found a verdict for the plaintiff:—It was held, that the defendant was precluded from disturbing the verdict. Smith v. Evans, 2 Moore, 474.

On a general plea of bankruptcy under 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, the plaintiff may give the condition of the bond on which the action is brought in evidence, to show that he is not barred by the certificate. Aleop v. Price, 1 Dougl. 160.

An allegation, stating that before the execution of a certain release, the party who executed it "became and was a bankrupt," is supported by proof of his having executed it after an act of bankruptcy, which was not followed by a commission for nearly two years, where the execution took place while the party was in prison. Mavor v. Pyne, 2 C. & P. 91; 3 Bing. 285; 11 Moore, 2.

Proceedings Evidence.—By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 96, no commission, adjudication, assignment, or certificate, or other matter directed by the Chancellor to be inrolled, shall be evidence without inrolment; but the production of the instrument, with the certificate of inrolment indorsed, is sufficient evidence.

By s. 97, office copies are made evidence.

2. Examinations.

Of Bankrupt.—Upon a petition to supersede, the bankrupt's examination before the commissioners is evidence to show that the petitioner is not a creditor, although the petitioner was not present at the examination. Ex parte Fowles, Buck, 98.

It cannot be read as evidence against a third party who has no power of cross-examining the bankrupt. Ex parte Arnsby, 2 Deac. & Chit. 212.

Of third Parties.—Examinations of parties before the commissioners are evidence in actions against them by the assignees, unless such examinations were obtained by imposition, or under duress. Robson v. Alexander, 1 M. & P. 448.

Quære whether an admission obtained under such compulsory examination can be used as evidence? Tucker v. Barrow, 7 B. & C. 623; 3 C. & P. 85.

Where a party, examined before commissioners, admitted that he had received a sum of money on account of the bankrupt, after an act of bankruptcy, but not that it was a subsisting debt:—Held, that this was not evidence sufficient to support a count on an account stated with the assignees. Id.

Where a party had been examined before commissioners, but part only of his deposition had been written down, but which he had signed at the time:—Held, that the examination was evidence against him. Milward v. Forbes, 4 Esp. 172—Ellenborough.

So, an examination of a bankrupt before the commissioners, when proved to have been written and signed by the defendant, may be admitted against him, without considering how it was obtained. Stockfleth v. De Tastet, 4 Camp. 10; 2 Rose, 282—Ellenborough.

Although a person has been improperly examined before the commissioners, upon a subject unconnected with the interests of the bankrupt's estate, with a view to procure evidence in an action depending against him, the examination may be used as evidence by the plaintiff at the trial of the action, and the judge at Nisi Prius cannot inquire into the abuse of the authority of the great seal, by which the examination was obtained. Id.

The remedy of a party so improperly examined is by an application to the Lord Chancellor, to have the examination taken off the file and cancelled. Id.

The defendant's examination before the commissioners may be given in evidence, to show that, by his own confession, he had concealed property belonging to the bankrupt. Smith v. Beadnell, 1 Camp. 30—Ellenborough.

The examination of a creditor of a bankrupt who has taken the goods of the bankrupt in execution after an act of bankruptcy, cannot be used in an action by the assignees to show his knowledge of the bankrupt's insolvency at the time of the execution. Deady v. Harrison, 1 Stark, 60—Ellenborough.

If examinations are taken in the presence of the party, they may be used as evidence. In re Feaks, 1 Mont. & Bligh. 218.

The examinations of witnesses after the bankruptcy, are not evidence against the assignees. Hitchens v. Congreve, 1 Mont. 225.

Proof of.—Parol evidence of any thing that a bankrupt says at the time of his last examination, cannot be received, although it should appear that no part of what he said was taken down in writing. Rex v. Walters, 5 C. & P. 138—Park.

Evidence may be given by parol of material facts, which transpired at an examination before the commissioners, but which were not taken down in writing. Rowland v. Ashby, 1 C. & P. 649; R. & M. 231—Best.

Examinations of the defendant before commissioners, (proved to be correct,) are evidence although not signed. Boddenham v. Lewis, Peake's Add. Cas. 245—Wood.

Where a person is examined at a private examination before commissioners, and that examination is taken down, it is sufficient if so much only is taken down as is conceived to be necessary to be used in evidence, provided such part has been read over to him, and he has signed it: the whole of his examination need not to be taken down, to make that evidence which applies to the matter in dispute. Milward v. Forbes, 4 Esp. 172—Ellenborough.

3. When no proof of Requisites necessary.

Assignees' Title admitted.—If, in an action of trover by assignees, the defendant's attorney admit that the party was duly declared bankrupt, and the defendant do not give notice to dispute, he is precluded from objecting to any of the requisites to support the commission. Parring v. Tucker, 3 M. & P. 558.

In an action by assignees, on an account stated with the bankrupt:—Held, that evidence of that fact, without evidence of any promise to repay the assignees, was sufficient to support a count laying the promise to them. Skinner v. Rebow, 1 Selw. N. P. 239.

If a debtor to a bankrupt's estate, on being applied to by a person whom he knows to be the collector of debts for the assignee, says, "I will call and pay the money," such promise is an admission of the right of the assignee, and renders it unnecessary, in an action for the money, to give the usual proofs in support of the commission. Pope v. Monk, 2 C. & P. 112—Abbott.

It is competent to a defendant to impeach the title of a bankrupt, in an action by his assignees, though he himself claims title under the bankrupt. Taylor v. Kinlock, 1 Stark. 175—Ellenb.

Upon a plea of payment to debt on bond by the plaintiffs as assignees, it is not incumbent on the plaintiffs to prove themselves to be assignees.

Corbie v. Oliver, 1 Stark. 76; 2 Rose, 461—Ellenborough.

Where assignees declared as endorsees against the drawer of a bill, and, to prove notice to the latter of the dishonour by the acceptor, produced an agreement between the drawer and K. (an intermediate endorsee,) reciting that the bill in question was, amongst other bills to which the drawer was a party, overdue, and was or ought to be in the hands of K.:—Held, that the plaintiffs were not bound to prove that they were assignees, though they declared in that character. Gunsan v. Metz, 2 D. & R. 334: S. C. not S. P. 1 B. & C. 193.

In trover by the assignees of the sheriff against the assignees of a bankrupt, for taking goods which the former claimed under an execution issued before the bankruptcy:—Held, that he must prove the judgment against the bankrupt, as well as the writ of execution, unless it appears upon the record or judge's notes, that the defendants were the assignees of the bankrupt. Glasier v. Eve, 8 Moore, 46; 1 Bing. 209.

The defendant (in an action at the suit of the assignee of a bankrupt) had attended a meeting of the commissioners, and exhibited the account between him and the bankrupt, and afterwards made a part payment to the plaintiff on that account:—Held, in an action for the balance remaining due, that this was prima facie evidence, as against the defendant, that the plaintiff was assignee, and that it was not necessary to produce the proceedings under the commission, the defendant not having given notice of his intention to dispute the bankruptcy. Dickinson v. Coward, 1 B. & A. 677.

A defendant, in a suit by assignees, was told at an interview with their attorney (which was arranged by his own attorney, but which he thought proper to attend alone,) that his attorney had proposed that he should admit every fact, except the merits, provided the plaintiffs would waive their right of holding him to bail; and he was asked, whether that proposal was made by his authority. He replied, that it was; and that he was ready to carry it into effect, as the only question he wished to try was, whether he was liable on the undertaking he had given:—Held, that this amounted to an admission of the right of the assignees to sue, although no mention was made of it in the conversation. Davis v. Burton, 4 C. & P. 166—Tindal.

Semble, that it would have been otherwise, if, without further explanation, he had only said that he wished to try upon the merits. Id.

Held, also, that having received advantage from the admission, in the waiver of the right to hold to bail, he could not afterwards withdraw it, and insist upon proof of the bankruptcy. Id.

An admission by the defendant that he has received 300*l.* from a bankrupt, after an act of bankruptcy, will not support a count on an account stated with the assignee. Stafford v. Clark, 2 Bing. 377; 2 C. & P. 403.

In proving the title of assignees, if the petitioning creditor was the assignee of another bankrupt, it is necessary to prove the title of the petitioning creditor to be such assignee, by all the like proof by which the title of the assignee in question is to be proved. Doe d. Mawson v. Liston, 4 Taunt. 741; 2 Rose, 276.

Upon a plea in abatement, that A. and B. the assignees of C. a bankrupt, ought to have joined, it is not sufficient for the defendant to prove that A. and B. acted as assignees; he must prove that they were so, either by the production of the assignment, or by proving the admission of the plaintiff to that effect. Passmore v. Boufield, 1 Stark. 296—Ellenborough.

What Actions.—In an action by a bankrupt against his assignees, although they are not named as such in the record, notice must be given under the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 10, or the commission and proceedings will be sufficient evidence of the trading, act of bankruptcy, and petitioning creditor's debt. Simmonds v. Knight, 1 Rose, 358; 3 Camp. 251—Ellenborough.

In an action brought by the bankrupt against his assignees, independently of the notice, he will be presumed to know that the bankruptcy is disputed, and ought to be provided with evidence to support it. Ex parte Dick, 1 Rose, 51.

If the title of assignees who are strangers to the record comes in question incidentally, it must be proved in the same mode as before the stat. 49 Geo. 3, c. 129, although no notice of contesting the bankruptcy has been given by the opposite party. Doe d. Mawson v. Liston, 4 Taunt. 741; 2 Rose, 276.

In an action by the assignees of A., against whom a commission was sued out upon the petition of the assignees of B., and no notice being given to dispute the validity of the commission:—Held, upon 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 10, that proof of the proceedings under a commission was sufficient evidence of the petitioning creditor's debt, without going into any evidence of the validity of B.'s commission. Skaise v. Howard, 4 D. & R. 37.

Where it is immaterial whether the action is brought by the bankrupt or his assignees, the proceedings are evidence of the requisites, although notice is given to dispute. Smith v. Woodward, 4 C. & P. 542—Patteson.

In an action of detinue by the assignees, where no demand is made by the bankrupt before the bankruptcy, and notice is given to dispute the requisites, the proceedings are sufficient evidence. Id.

If a person who is, in fact, assignee of a bankrupt be sued in trover, and it appear that he claims the goods as property belonging to the bankrupt; in making out this defence he need not give evidence of the trading, &c., unless there has been notice of disputing the commission, although he be not in point of form sued as assignee. Newport v. Hollings, 3 C. & P. 223—Vaughan.

Trover is an action for a demand within the meaning of 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 92. Robson v. Alexander, 1 M. & P. 448.

4. When depositions evidence.

Generally.—By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 92, if the bankrupt shall not (if he was within the kingdom at the issuing of the commission) within two calendar months after the adjudication, or (if he was not) within twelve calendar months after the adjudication, have given notice of his intention to dispute the commission, and have proceeded therein with due diligence, the depositions of the petitioning creditor's debt, trading, and act of bankruptcy, shall be conclusive evidence of the matters therein respectively contained, in all actions at law, or suits in equity, brought by the assignees, for any debt or demand, for which the bankrupt might have maintained any action or suit.

By 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 114, s. 8, in the event of the death of any of the witnesses deposing to the petitioning creditor's debt, trading, or acts of bankruptcy, the depositions of such witnesses, if inrolled, may be used in all cases where the party using the same shall claim, maintain, or defend same right, title, interest, claim, or demand, which the bankrupt might.

The 92d section is prospective, and only applies to commissions to be issued after the passing of that act, as it binds the bankrupt if he does not give notice to dispute the commission within two months after the adjudication. Key v. Cook, 2 M. & P. 720.

The depositions are conclusive evidence, so as not to admit evidence of fraud in the concoction of any of the requisites to support the commission. Young v. Timmins, 1 Tyr. 15.

Notwithstanding there has been no notice to dispute under the act, the proceedings are not conclusive evidence of the facts therein stated, but the court is still to form a judgment upon them, whether they prove an act of bankruptcy or not. Brown v. Forrestall, Holt, 190—Gibbs.

Where no notice is given, the plaintiff may call witnesses to contradict the depositions respecting the trading, petitioning creditor's debt, or act of bankruptcy. Ellis v. Shirley, 3 Camp. 424; 2 Rose, 143—Ellenborough.

There is not any necessity for putting in the proceedings as evidence where there is no notice to dispute. Bevan v. Lewis, 2 Glyn & J. 245; 1 Sim. 376.

Although the objection appears upon the proceedings, and requires no evidence to support it. Id.

In an action by an assignee, for a demand for which the bankrupt, if solvent, might sue, after notice by the defendant to dispute the bankruptcy given within two months after adjudication, the depositions are evidence to prove the bankruptcy, unless the bankrupt himself has given notice to dispute the commission. Earith v. Schroder, M. & M. 24—Abbott.

The depositions are conclusive evidence in a case where the bankrupt might have sued, if no bankruptcy had ensued, though the conversion which gave the right of action took place after the act of bankruptcy. Fox v. Mahoney, 2 C. & J. 325; 2 Tyr. 285.

To render the proceedings evidence, pursuant to the act, it is enough to show that they are produced from the custody of the solicitor to the commission, or to prove the handwriting of one of the commissioners before whom they were taken. Collinson v. Hillear, 3 Camp. 30; 1 Rose, 221—Ellenborough.

In actions by assignees.—It is only in actions or suits brought by the bankrupt's own assignees for a debt or demand for which he might have sued, that the depositions are made evidence. Muskett v. Drummond, 10 B. & C. 153.

Where in an action by the assignees of B., a bankrupt, in order to prove the petitioning creditor's debt, they proved that B. was indebted to one R., that a commission afterwards issued against R., and that his assignees were the petitioning creditors against B., and, in order to support the commission against R., produced the proceedings under it:—Held, that they were not admissible in evidence, and that the plaintiffs were bound to prove by other evidence R.'s trading, act of bankruptcy, &c. Id.

If a bankrupt, before his bankruptcy, let a person have goods, telling him to keep them till he (the bankrupt) wants them back, and no demand be made of them till after the bankruptcy:—Held, that if, in an action of detinue by the assignees, notice is given of disputing the bankruptcy, the proceedings are evidence of the trading, &c. under sect. 92 of the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16. Smith v. Woodward, 4 C. & P. 541—Patteson.

The petitioning creditor's debt, trading, and act of bankruptcy, were sufficiently proved by the production of the commission, and the proceedings under it, in a case where the defendant was not named as assignee on the record, provided no notice under stat. 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 10, had been given by the plaintiff. Ross v. Lant, Gow, 24—Dallas. S. P. Simmonds v. Knight, 3 Camp. 251; 1 Rose, 358.

Where, upon a trial, no notice having been given to dispute the commission, the proceedings under it were put in as well as the commission, and a perfect petitioning creditor's debt did not appear upon the proceedings:—Held, nevertheless, that the validity of the commission could not be disputed. Macbeath v. Coates, 4 Bing. 34: S. C. nom. Macbeath v. Cooke, 12 Moore, 122.

In an action by assignees, where part of the claim might have been recovered by the bankrupt, and part not, and the assignees rely upon the proceedings as evidence of the requisites, they must elect to go for that part which the bankrupt might have recovered. Gibson v. Oldfield, 4 C. & P. 314—Tenterden.

In an action by assignees, where there are some counts or causes of action on which the bankrupt might have sued, and others on which he could not, the proceedings under the commission are admissible in evidence, if the plaintiffs elect to proceed only on those counts which the bankrupt might have sustained. Jones v. Fort, M. & M. 196—Tenterden.

A tenant having committed an act of bankruptcy in October, 1810, upon which a commission issued on the 21st of January, 1811, and the sheriff having on the 7th of January levied an execution under which he sold the goods of the tenant on the 21st and 22d of January for 520*l.*, and out of that sum paid the landlord 140*l.* for one year's rent in arrear:—Held, in an action for money had and received, brought by the assignees of the bankrupt tenant against the sheriff, to recover the whole amount of the sum levied, that the property in the goods being changed by the act of bankruptcy and commission, and transferred to the assignees, it lay upon the sheriff to prove that he had paid over the money to the landlord and execution creditor, before he had notice of the commission issued, and, not giving such proof, that he was liable for the amount to the assignee. Lee v. Lopes, 15 East, 231; 1 Rose, 342.

In an action against assignees and their servants, the proceedings may be read in evidence, where no notice has been given to dispute, although there are other defendants on the record besides the assignees. Gilman v. Cousins, 2 Stark. 182—Bayley.

5. Notice to dispute.

(a) Necessity.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 90, in actions by or against assignees, or in actions against commissioners, or persons acting under their warrant, for any thing done as such commissioners or under such warrant, no proof shall be required of the petitioning creditor's debt, trading, or act of bankruptcy, unless the other party in such action shall, if defendant, at or before pleading, or, if plaintiff, before issue joined, give notice in writing to such assignee, commissioner, or other person, that he intends to dispute some and which of such matters.

By s. 91, the same thing is to apply to suits in equity.

The commission and proceedings under the bankruptcy were conclusive evidence of the trading, the debt, and the act of bankruptcy, unless notice had been given in pursuance of the statute 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 11, of the party's intention to dispute them. Humphries v. Coggan, 1 Rose, 226.

In an action by assignees, if the defendant does not give notice to dispute, he cannot dispute the validity of the commission itself. Bernasconi v. Glengall (Earl), 1 M. & R. 326.

In trover by assignees, notice to a petitioning creditor of an act of bankruptcy previous to the debt, is not to be presumed; although the fact that such a prior act was committed appeared on the face of the depositions, which were read in evidence, to prove the act of bankruptcy on which the commission was founded. Thackrah v. Wood, 3 Stark. 141—Abbott.

A new trial was granted after a nonsuit, where assignees failed to prove the act of bankruptcy, and defendant's notice to dispute was in too general terms. Trimley v. Unwin, 6 B. & C. 537: S. C. nom. Trimley v. Uwins, 9 D. & R. 548.

In actions by assignees, if the commission issued between the 2d of May and the 1st of September, 1825, the formal proofs in support of the commission must be made out by parol evidence of the trading, act of bankruptcy, &c. whether notice of disputing them has been given or not. Giles v. Powell, 2 C. & P. 259—Best.

A commission of bankruptcy, issued against an infant upon a debt contracted, and an act of bankruptcy committed during his minority, is absolutely void; and if the assignees have reason to know that he intends to set up his infancy, it is not necessary for him to give them the notice required by the statute, that he intends to dispute the proceedings under the commission. Belton v. Hodges, 2 M. & Scott, 496; 9 Bing. 365.

(b) Practice.

Withdrawing Plea.—Where a defendant, in an action brought against him by the assignee of a bankrupt, pleads the general issue, without giving notice of his intention to dispute the bankruptcy, he may, under a judge's order, have leave to withdraw such plea, and plead de novo, with the notice required by the statute. Gardner v. Slack, 6 Moore, 489.

The defendant was allowed to withdraw his plea, and to replead, after giving notice that he intended to dispute the petitioning creditor's debt, &c. Radmore v. Gould, Wightw. 80; 1 Rose, 123.

Although the defendant had once pleaded without giving notice "at or before the time of his pleading;" yet if he had leave to withdraw the plea and plead de novo, such a notice given with the second plea was sufficient, under the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 10. Decharme v. Lane, 2 Camp. 324—Ellenborough.

So, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 90, if a plea is delivered without a notice, and upon the clerk discovering that he had omitted to give notice, he gets the plea back, and before the expiration of the time for pleading he delivers a fresh plea with a notice, it seems it is sufficient. Lawrence v. Crowder, 1 M. & P. 511; overruling S. C. 3 C. & P. 230.

A defendant pleads the general issue, without giving notice to dispute, but, before the time for pleading expires, delivers the general issue again, with notice, such notice is insufficient: the defendant in such a case, ought to move for leave to withdraw his plea. Poole v. London (Sheriff), 1 Stark. 328—Ellenborough.

In actions by assignees, to which the general issue was pleaded before the passing of stat. 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, it was unnecessary to prove the trading, act of bankruptcy, or petitioning creditors debt; but, under these circumstances, a judge would give the defendant leave to withdraw his plea, and plead de novo with notice. Willock v. Westmacott, 2 Camp. 184—Ellenborough. S. P. Clarkson v. Dadds, 2 Camp. 184, n.—Mansfield.

A defendant was allowed to withdraw his rejoinder and give notice to dispute, where the witnesses to the validity of the commission were dead. Brickwood v. Miller, 2 Rose, 340.

Form and Service.—A notice to dispute the bankruptcy is too general: the stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 90, requires that the defendant should give notice to dispute "the trading, the petitioning creditor's debt, or the act of bankruptcy." Trimley v. Unwin, 6 B. & C. 537: S. C. nom. Trimley v. Uwins, 9 D. & R. 548.

The notice to dispute required by stat. 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 10, might be served on the assignee, by delivery to his attorney. Howard v. Rambottom, 3 Taunt. 526; 2 Rose, 106.

But service, by leaving the notice with a maid-servant, at the dwelling-house of the assignee, was not sufficient service. Id.

If the notice be served at the same time when the issue is delivered with notice of trial on the back of it, it is not sufficient under the statute. Richmond v. Heapy, 4 Camp. 207: S. C. not & P. 1 Stark. 202—Ellenborough.

In an action by or against assignees, a notice to dispute left at the counting-house of the party, with his clerk, was sufficient to exclude the proceedings from being evidence under that statute, as personal service on the assignee was not necessary. Widger v. Browning, M. & M. 27; 3 C. & P. 523—Abbott.

It cannot be considered, at Nisi Prius, whether the defendant's attorney has agreed to accept a notice to dispute, which had been delivered after the time mentioned in the act of parliament. Folks v. Scudder, 3 C. & P. 232—Best.

Other things.—In an action by assignees, the notice to dispute is not to be considered as part of the defendant's regular evidence in the cause, but may be proved at the beginning of the trial, and immediately puts the plaintiff to strict proof of the matter disputed. Decharme v. Lane, 2 Camp. 324—Ellenborough.

In an action by a bankrupt against his assignees, to try the validity of the commission, where, notice being given only to dispute the act of bankruptcy, the defendants read the two depositions on the file of the proceedings which proved the trading and petitioning creditor's debt, the residue of the proceedings are not to be considered in evidence, and the plaintiff's counsel has no right to inspect them. Bluck v. Thorn, 4 Camp. 191; 2 Rose, 285—Ellenborough.

If the trading, petitioning creditor's debt, and act of bankruptcy are proved by the proceedings under the commission, the counsel for the opposite party has no right to look at any of the proceedings, but such as have been used for that purpose. Stafford v. Clark, 1 C. & P. 26—Barr.

(c) Effect.

A party omitting to give notice to dispute the requisites admits them, but not the effect of the commission in point of law. Phillips v. Hopwood, 1 B. & Adol. 321, 619.

In an action by assignees, under a commission against an uncertificated bankrupt, the defendant may give in evidence the existence of the previous commission: and that under such commission his effects were assigned, and the bankrupt uncertificated, without notice to dispute any of the requisites; which is an answer to the action. Phillips v. Hopwood, 1 B. & Adol. 321, 619.

If the defendant does not give notice to dispute the requisites to support the commission, it is unsettled whether the assignees can invalidate by relation to an act of bankruptcy, without proving a petitioning creditor's debt before the bankruptcy. Norman v. Booth, 8 B. & C. 703—Tenterden and Parke; contra, Bayley and Littledale.

6. Witnesses.

(a) Petitioning Creditor.

In an action by assignees, the petitioning creditor is not a competent witness to support the commission, although he may be called on the other side to prove it invalid. Green v. Jones, 2 Camp. 411—Ellenborough.

A petitioning creditor is a competent witness to defeat the commission, and even to cut down the petitioning creditor's debt. Loyd v. Stretton, 2 Camp. 411; 1 Stark. 40; 2 Rose, 461—Ellenb.

Quere, whether, in an action by assignees, the petitioning creditor is compellable to produce a bill indorsed by the bankrupt, on which the petitioning creditor's debt is founded? Reed v. James, 2 Rose, 464; 1 Stark. 132—Ellenborough.

A petitioning creditor, called for the mere purpose of producing such a document, cannot, although he has been sworn, be cross-examined by the defendant. Id.

(b) Other Creditors.

In all cases where an action is brought to try the validity of a commission, every creditor of the estate is incompetent as a witness. Hallen v. Homer, 1 C. & P. 108—Park.

So where an issue is directed to try its validity. Ex parte Malkin, 2 Rose, 27.

On an issue to try whether an act of bankruptcy has been committed or not, a creditor is incompetent as a witness, although he has not proved under the commission. Crooke v. Edwards, 2 Stark. 302—Ellenborough.

But it seems, that a commissioner is a competent witness to prove the bankruptcy, as he cannot be called on to refund the fees which he has received. Id.

A creditor who has not proved is a competent witness to support the commission, although not to increase the estate. Williams v. Stevens, 2 Camp. 301—Ellenborough. But see Adams v. Malkin, 3 Camp. 543—Gibbs.

A creditor having sold his chance of recovering his debt, is a good witness to support a commission. Granger v. Furlong, 2 W. Black. 1273.

A creditor who has assigned his debt is a competent witness to increase the fund out of which the debt is to be paid. Heath v. Hall, 4 Taunt. 326; 2 Rose, 271.

A creditor is not a competent witness to prove the trading. Ex parte Osborne, 2 Ves. & B. 177; 1 Rose, 387.

But where the adjudication was founded upon the evidence of a shopman, who, although a creditor, had stated at the time of his examination that he had no claim against the bankrupt, the court refused to supersede the commission. Semble, that if the objection be not taken before the commissioners at the time of the examination, it cannot afterwards be urged as an objection to the commission. Ex parte Hill, 1 Mont. & Mac. 272.

The objection to a creditor as a competent witness to sustain a commission, cannot be taken by himself to preclude his examination. Ex parte Chamberlain, 19 Ves. jun. 481.

A creditor may be asked questions, the answers to which cannot be open to the objection that they are swayed by interest, notwithstanding they may communicate information by which the commission may be sustained. Binfield v. Turner, Gow, 202—Holroyd.

Therefore, a creditor may be asked if he has in his custody the bond upon which the petitioning creditor's debt was founded, and if not, to whom he has delivered it. Id.

In an action for giving a false character, whereby the plaintiff has lost the value of his goods, and the person recommended having become bankrupt, a creditor of the bankrupt is a good witness to prove the plaintiff's case. Burton v. Loyd, 3 Esp. 207—Kenyon.

(c) Bankrupt.

A bankrupt can never be a witness to prove his own trading, act of bankruptcy, or the petitioning creditor's debt, or any other fact necessary to support the commission. Sanderson v. Laforest, 1 C. & P. 46—Burrough.

A bankrupt cannot be called as a witness, either to support or to defeat the commission, or even to explain a doubtful act, which might or might not have been an act of bankruptcy. Sayer v. Garnett, 4 M. & P. 734; 7 Bing. 103; S. P. Hoffman v. Pit, 5 Esp. 22, overruling Oxlade v. London (Sheriffs), 1 Esp. 287.

Even where he has obtained his certificate. Chapman v. Gardner, 2 H. Black. 279; S. P. Cross v. Fox, and Flower v. Herbert, 2 H. Black. 279, n.

And it is immaterial whether a question for such a purpose be asked upon examination or cross-examination; it is equally improper in both cases. Elsom v. Brailey, 1 Selw. N. P. 271—Lawrence.

A bankrupt who has been examined in chief, to increase the fund in an action by his assignee, cannot be cross-examined to any fact tending to defeat the commission. Bians v. Tetley, M'Clel. & Y. 397.

He, therefore, on examination, cannot be asked a question as to the fact of any bankruptcy committed previous to that on which the commission is founded. Wyatt v. Wilkinson, 5 Esp. 187—Chambre.

An uncertificated bankrupt cannot be a witness for his assignees. Dixon v. Purse, Peake's Add. Cas. 187—Kenyon.

But an uncertificated bankrupt may be a witness to decrease his estate. Butler v. Cooke, Cowp. 70.

In an action by the assignees of a bankrupt who had obtained his certificate, and released the surplus of his estate, such bankrupt is a competent witness to prove the signatures of the commissioners, in order to identify the proceedings taken under his commission. Morgan v. Pryor, 3 D. & R. 215; 2 B. & C. 14: S. C. nom. Morgan v. Price, 3 Stark. 58.

A bankrupt could not be a witness to defeat his bankruptcy, by proving it to have been concerted. Mills v. Dawson, Peake's Add. Cas. 54—Kenyon.

The practice of the court is, where the case requires it, to direct the bankrupt to be examined upon an issue to try the validity of the commission. Ex parte Staff, Buck, 431.

It is not a sufficient ground for the postponement of a trial, that the bankrupt is an important witness, and will shortly be competent by the Chancellor's allowance of his certificate, which has been signed by the commissioners. Tennant v. Strachan, M. & M. 378; 4 C. & P. 31.

For what Purpose.—In a suit against the crown, to which the assignees of a bankrupt, who but for his bankruptcy would have been in the same interest with the plaintiffs, are made defendants, the bankrupt cannot be examined as a witness on behalf of the plaintiffs, although he has released the assignees, because the crown is not bound by the statutes relating to bankrupts. Craufurd v. Att. Gen. 7 Price, 2.

The drawer of an accommodation bill, who has become a bankrupt, is a competent witness for the acceptor, after a general release from him, although he has not been released by his assignees. Cartwright v. Williams, 2 Stark. 341—Ellenb.

In an action by the indorsee against the maker of a promissory note without original consideration, if the indorsee has become bankrupt, and obtained his certificate subsequent to the date of the note, he is not a competent witness for the defendant. Maundrell v. Kennett, 1 Camp. 408, n.—Bayley.

Where A. and B. had dissolved partnership, and two days afterwards A. drew a bill in the name of the partnership, which was accepted and paid by C. without consideration; and C. afterwards sued A. and B. for money lent:—Held, that A. who had become bankrupt, and obtained his certificate, was a competent witness for B. to prove that the acceptance was for his (A.'s) sole accommodation, and not for that of B., inasmuch as B. was merely a surety within the meaning of the statute 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 8, and might consequently have proved under A.'s commission. Moody v. King, 4 D. & R. 30; 2 B. & C. 558.

In an action against the indorser of a bill which the defendant indorsed to secure a debt due to the plaintiff from I. S., the latter is not a competent witness for the plaintiff; but a guarantee or surety on a bill, who is discharged by the statute from his liability on the bill, is discharged from the costs also, which follow the debt, and is therefore not an incompetent witness in an action against the principal. Bottomley v. Wilson, 3 Stark. 148—Abbott.

The guarantee of a bill, discharged by bankruptcy from his liability on the bill is not an incompetent witness in an action on the bill, by reason of his liability to costs in an action on the bill. Brind v. Bacon, 5 Taunt. 183.

The indorser of a note, who has become bankrupt, may be a witness, in an action by the indorsee against the maker, to disprove the plaintiff's title. Sikes v. Marshal, 2 Esp. 705—Kenyon.

In an action on a bill accepted for the accommodation of the drawer who has become a bankrupt, and obtained his certificate, the latter is a competent witness for the acceptor. Ashton v. Longes, M. & M. 127—Tenterden.

A bankrupt, in an action by the assignees against a judgment creditor, who has taken the goods of the bankrupt in execution, is competent to prove that the creditor knew that the bankrupt was insolvent at the time of the execution. Reed v. James, 2 Rose, 465.

In an action for work and labour, an uncertificated bankrupt is a competent witness to prove that the employment of the plaintiff was by him and not by the defendant, by whom the debt has been paid to his assignees. Wilson v. Galletty, 2 C. & P. 467—Abbott.

In an ejectment between two persons (both claiming under a demise from the same person) the landlord, who has become bankrupt, may be a witness to prove that the premises in dispute were not included in the first lease. Longchamps d. Evitts v. Fawcett, Peake, 71—Kenyon.

Where in an action against several as partners, for goods sold; some of them pleaded bankruptcy, and others the general issue:—Held, that after the plaintiff had closed his case, and the bankrupt defendants had proved the bankruptcy, one of the bankrupts could not be admitted as a witness, to show a dissolution of the partnership, prior to the delivery of the goods. Emmett v. Bradley, 1 Moore, 332: S. C. nom. Emmett v. Butler, 7 Taunt. 599: S. P. Raven v. Dunning, 3 Esp. 25—Kenyon.

W. drew a bill on the defendant, to whom he had been sending goods for sale, and defendant accepted the bill, neither party knowing the state of the account between them; it turned out that W. was at the time indebted to the defendant: W., lurking from his creditors at large, after an act of bankruptcy indorsed the bill, upon importunity, to the plaintiff, one of his creditors with whom he was on friendly terms, and then became a bankrupt. Plaintiff having sued defendant on the bill:—Held, that W. was an admissible witness; and the jury having found for the defendant, the court refused to disturb the verdict. Bagnall v. Andrews, 7 Bing. 217; 4 M. & P. 839.

In an action by the obligees of a joint and several bond against one of the obligors, who was surety for another of them who had become bankrupt, which action was brought after the plaintiffs had elected to prove their debt under the commission, and thereby had relinquished their action against the bankrupt by s. 14 of the stat. 49 Geo. 3, c. 121; the bankrupt not having obtained his certificate, and being therefore still liable to be sued by the defendant, his surety, in case of a verdict against him by the plaintiffs, is not a competent witness for the defendant, to prove that a payment of a sum equal to the penalty of the bond, made by him (the bankrupt) to the plaintiffs before the action brought, was made in discharge of the bond, and not upon any other account. Townend v. Downing, 14 East, 565.

A., the holder of two bills, indorsed them over to the defendants, who, for the accommodation of A., indorsed them over to the plaintiff. A. having become bankrupt; in an action brought against the defendants for the amount of the bills:—Held, that the bankrupt being discharged from any suits by his certificate, was a competent witness for the defendants. Bassett v. Dodgin, 9 Bing. 653; 2 M. & Scott, 777.

Quære, if the wife of a bankrupt may be a witness to prove a payment to have been made in contemplation of a bankruptcy? Jourdain v. Lefevre, 1 Esp. 66—Kenyon.

How rendered competent.—A bankrupt cannot be a witness for his assignees, until he releases his allowance. Schneider v. Parr, Peake's Add. Cas. 66—Kenyon.

Quære, whether he can release it before he obtains his certificate? Id.

A general release by a creditor to a bankrupt is not sufficient to render the bankrupt a competent witness for the creditor, where the result of his testimony would give the creditor a right to prove under the commission. The creditor ought also to give a release to the assignee of all claim on the bankrupt's estate, and the bankrupt ought to release his claim to a surplus. Perryman v. Steggall, 8 Bing. 369; 1 M. & Scott, 540.

In an action by assignees, the bankrupt is not rendered competent, unless his certificate and release are produced, or the non-production of them is accounted for. Goodhay v. Hendry, M. & M. 319—Best.

If a bankrupt has obtained his certificate, and released his assignees, it is sufficient, on an objection as to his competency as a witness in an action by his assignees, for him to state on the voir dire, that he has released them, without producing the releases. Carlile v. Eady, 1 C. & P. 234—Park.

A bankrupt who has not paid 15s. in the pound, under a second commission, cannot be a witness for the assignees under that commission, although he has obtained his certificate, and released his allowance and surplus. Kenett v. Greenwoollers, Peake, 3—Kenyon.

Where an assignee brought an action upon the stat. 9 Anne, c. 14, to recover money lent by the bankrupt to the defendants at play; and the bankrupt, who had obtained his certificate, was called as a witness to prove the loss; and in order to render him competent, the bankrupt released the assignee from all claim upon the surplus fund, if any; and all the creditors who had proved, released the bankrupt from all future claims; and the assignee (who was not a creditor) executed a like release:—Held, that after the expiration of more than a year from the date of the commission, it was to be presumed that all the creditors had proved, and that a release signed by all who had proved was binding as a release by every one of the creditors:—Held, also, that such release did not destroy the assignee's right of action. Carter v. Abbott, 2 D. & R. 575; 1 B. & C. 444.

In a qui tam action, on the statute of usury, against the assignee of a bankrupt for taking usurious interest on a loan of money to the bankrupt before his bankruptcy, the bankrupt is not a competent witness to prove the offence, if he has not obtained his certificate, or repaid the money, notwithstanding he is ready to release to his assignees all benefit which may arise from the discharge of this debt in particular, and all claim to allowance and surplus in general, and notwithstanding the assignee has proved his demand for the money lent under the commission. Masters q. t. v. Drayton, 2 T. R. 496.

Where no notice was given of the defendant's intention to dispute the bankruptcy, the bankrupt, having obtained his certificate and released all claims on the surplus of his estate, is thereby rendered a competent witness to prove that the proceedings produced were those taken under the commission against him. Morgan v. Price, 3 Stark. 58—Abbott. S. C. nom. Morgan v. Pryor, 3 D. & R. 215; 2 B. & C. 14.

XXVII. PLEADINGS IN BANKRUPTCY.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 44, in actions brought against any person for any thing done in pursuance of the act, the defendant may plead the general issue, and give the statute and the special matter in evidence.

By s. 126, if a bankrupt, after the allowance of his certificate, shall have any action brought against him, for any debt, claim, or demand which was proveable under the commission, he may plead generally that the cause of action accrued before he became bankrupt, and give the act and the special matter in evidence; and the certificate and allowance shall be sufficient evidence of the trading, bankruptcy, commission, and other precedent proceedings.

A general plea of bankruptcy, under the statute, ought to pursue the terms of the statute, and conclude to the country. Sheen v. Garrett, 6 Bing. 686; 4 M. & P. 525.

The defendant cannot give his bankruptcy in evidence under the general issue. Gowland v. Warren, 1 Camp. 363—Ellenborough.

If a plea contain distinct allegations of a trading and petitioning creditor's debt, and then go on to state, that the plaintiff "became bankrupt;" and, in the replication, the plaintiff protest the trading and petitioning creditor's debt, and deny that the plaintiff "became bankrupt:" this merely puts in issue the act of bankruptcy; and the words, "became bankrupt," coupled with the other two allegations, will be held to extend to the act of bankruptcy only. Cotton v. James, 3 C. & P. 505; M. & M. 273—Tenterden.

A rule nisi for a new trial, on the ground of excessive damages, was afterwards obtained. Id.

A plea in bar, stating "that a commission of bankruptcy issued against the plaintiff, under which he was duly found, adjudged, and declared a bankrupt," without alleging that he was in fact a bankrupt, is bad. Gwinnis v. Carroll, 2 M. & R. 132.

Such a plea should state the trading, the act of bankruptcy, and the petitioning creditor's debt. Id.

Quære, whether, in debt on judgment, a replication to a plea of bankruptcy of the plaintiff, after the accruing of the cause of action whereon the judgment was recovered, that plaintiff obtained his certificate before the judgment was recovered, should allege expressly that the certificate was obtained after the commission issued. Id.

The plea of bankruptcy given by stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 7, must have stated that the cause of action accrued before the bankruptcy; stating that an indenture, on which an action of covenant was founded, was executed prior to the bankruptcy, was not sufficient. Charlton v. King, 4 T. R. 156.

The general plea of bankruptcy, and the certificate given by that statute, might be pleaded, without averring that the bankruptcy happened before the commencement of the suit. But if it appeared at nisi prius that it happened after the action brought, it seems that the defendant could not avail himself of the defence under such a general plea, which was only given by the statute in case any bankrupt who had conformed to the law should afterwards be arrested or impleaded for any debt due before such time as he became bankrupt. Tower v. Cameron, 6 East, 413; 2 Smith, 439.

A general plea of bankruptcy in Ireland, referring to an Irish act of parliament, and concluding to the country (in a mode similar to that given by stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 7, to bankrupts in England,) is clearly bad. Quin v. Keefe, 2 H. Black. 553.

To a declaration for money paid, the defendant pleaded his bankruptcy and certificate; and that the plaintiff, before the issuing of the commission, was a surety for a debt of the defendant, and that the money paid by the plaintiff for his use was paid by him as such surety, after the issuing of the commission, and before a final dividend had been made of the defendant's effects under the same; whereby the plaintiff became entitled to prove under the commission: replication, that the plaintiff, before the issuing of the commission, was surety to one J. I. for the defendant, that he, the defendant, should perform certain things contained in articles of agreement, by which an annual rent was to be paid by the defendant; and that, after his bankruptcy, three years' rent became due from the defendant; and that the money paid by the plaintiff for the defendant, was paid by him as such surety, by reason of the non-payment by the defendant of the rent, and for the costs of an action brought against the plaintiff as such surety by J. I.:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, as he could not be deemed liable as a surety, within the statute 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 8, as that section related only to debts of the bankrupt due at the time of issuing the commission. M'Dougal v. Paton, 2 Moore, 644; 8 Taunt. 480.

After a general plea of bankruptcy concluding to the country, a replication that defendant was before the commission discharged as a bankrupt, and that his estate had not produced 15s. in the pound, which was pleaded in maintenance of the action generally, and with a verification, was held ill on special demurrer. Wilson v. Kemp, 2 M. & S. 549.

Where the plaintiffs declared on four bills of exchange, and the defendant pleaded in bar, that he was indebted to them in divers large sums of money for goods sold; and that for securing to the plaintiffs the said several sums, the defendant, before his bankruptcy, accepted a bill of exchange drawn by the plaintiffs for and in payment of one of the said several sums in which he was so indebted; and that he had accepted each of the several bills of exchange for which the action was brought, in payment of one other of the said several sums in which he so stood indebted as aforesaid; that the defendant had duly become bankrupt; and that the bills of exchange mentioned in the declaration were proveable under the commission; and that the plaintiffs being creditors of the defendant for the amount of the money comprised in all the several bills, proved the amount of one bill only under the commission; and thereby made their election to take the benefit of the commission, not only with respect to the debt so proved, but also as to the bills and debts mentioned in the declaration:—Held, on demurrer, that this plea could not be supported; because the proof of a debt under a commission of bankruptcy could not be pleaded in bar to an action at law brought for the same debt. Harley v. Greenwood, 5 B. & A. 95.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 9, a plaintiff may reply a discharge by bankruptcy and certificate to a plea in abatement of non-joinder.

In assumpsit against two persons who sever in pleading, a nolle prosequi may be entered as to one, who has pleaded bankruptcy, and it shall not destroy the action as to the other. Nate v. Ingham (in error,) 1 Wils. 89.

In assumpsit against two, where one pleads non assumpsit, and a plea of bankruptcy, and the plaintiff enters a nolle prosequi as to him, as to the several matters pleaded by him, and the other defendant pleads non assumpsit, the latter is not discharged by the nolle prosequi. Morris v. Hunter, 2 M. & S. 444; 2 Rose, 264.

Where several are sued, and one pleads his bankruptcy, upon which the plaintiff enters a nolle prosequi as to him, he may still give evidence of the admission of such defendant made before he obtained a certificate. Grant v. Jackson, Peake, 203—Kenyon.

In assumpsit against two defendants for goods sold, they pleaded the general issue, whereupon issue was joined in Michaelmas term, 1830, and notice of trial given for the sittings after that term. Continuances were entered on the record to the 23d of May, 1831. On the 14th of May in that year, one of the defendants obtained his certificate under a commission of bankruptcy, and on the 5th of June he pleaded his bankruptcy puis darrein continuance, to which the plaintiff demurred; but this plea and demurrer were never entered on the nisi prius record. The cause was tried on the 29th of June, and a general verdict found against both defendants. The court set aside this verdict for irregularity, on the ground that the jury had given an absolute verdict as to both defendants, whereas they should have been summoned only to try the issue as to one, and to assess contingent damages as against the other. Thompson v. Percival, 2 C. & Adol. 968.

XXVIII. PRACTICE IN BANKRUPTCY.

1. Practice in Court of Review.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 11, the judges of the court of Review, with the consent of the Chancellor, have power to make rules and orders regulating the practice of the court of bankruptcy.

By s. 21, the powers given to the commissioners may be exercised by the judges.

The practice in the court of Review shall, until otherwise ordered, be conformed as nearly as may be to the present practice in matters before the Lord Chancellor. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxix.

All petitions now depending before the Lord Chancellor in matters of bankruptcy, may be set down for hearing in the court of Review upon motion for that purpose. Reg. Gen. January 16, 1832, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxxi.

The court of Review will not interpose upon the petition of a stranger, except in cases of immediate injury—Cross, dissent. Ex parte Heath, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 169.

If, in the court of Review, a petition is ordered to stand over on payment of the costs of the day, the objection to the petition being heard till the costs are paid cannot be made unless the order has been drawn up. Ex parte Clarke, 1 Mont. 503.

All petitions presented to the court of Review shall be entered in the registrar's office; and the fiat directing the attendance thereon shall be under the seal of the court of Bankruptcy; and the original petition shall, when served, be returned to the registrar on or before the hearing, and be filed of record; and it shall not be necessary to recite such petitions at length in any order pronounced by the court thereon. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxix.

All the process of the court of Review shall be under the seal of the court of Bankruptcy. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxix.

All proceedings before the commissioners in the court of Bankruptcy shall be written on parchment or paper of one uniform size, and shall remain of record in the said court. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxv.

Where, under an order in bankruptcy, money is directed to be paid, the next order is to pay within four days, or stand committed. Ex parte Davison, 1 Glyn & J. 227.

An order was made that the defendant should pay a sum of money by a certain day, or, in default, should stand committed. The plaintiff having been unable to serve that order in time, obtained, as of course, a second order to enlarge the time allowed for the payment, and make service of it on the defendant's clerk in court, good service: the second order was irregular, it ought to have been made on notice. Leake v. Nalder, 1 Russ. & Mylne, 357.

The court of Review cannot proceed towards the commitment of a party for non-payment of costs on the usual seven days' order of the Vice-Chancellor. Ex parte Ferris, 1 Deac. & Chit. 498.

If a petition is ordered to stand over, without prejudice to the petitioner's proceeding at law, and the petitioner commence an action, the court of Review will not compel him to elect. Ex parte Heath, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 183.

Upon an application to the court of Review for an order of reference to the commissioners to certify whether a contract made by a bankrupt was beneficial for the creditors of the bankrupt, the court said that one of the judges would take the reference; and the same in all cases where it had been the practice to refer any matter to a master in Chancery. Ex parte Jeffery, 1 Deac. & Chit. 206.

Leave to except to the report of an officer of the court of Review need not be applied for. Ex parte Crockwell, 1 Deac. & Chit. 546.

The court of Review has jurisdiction to hear a petition of appeal in bankruptcy from the Vice-Chancellor's decision to the Lord Chancellor, provided the party prefers a fresh petition to that court, for the purpose of having such petition heard. Ex parte Lowe, 1 Deac. & Chit. 79. But see Ex parte Benson, 1 Deac. & Chit. 324.

The period of eight days, in which a petition was to be answered, was allowed to be enlarged as a matter of course. Ex parte Beardsworth, 1 Deac. & Chit. 369.

But a special application would have been necessary in order to lessen it. Id.

Notice must be given to the other side of an application to the court of Review to discharge an order. Ex parte Lowe, 1 Deac. & Chit. 43.

One day's notice to vary an order is insufficient. Ex parte Giles, 1 Deac. & Chit. 552.

Whatever ground there may be for the discharge of a party, who is arrested on an attachment for not paying costs pursuant to an order, previous notice of the application must be given to the other side. Ex parte White, 1 Deac. & Chit. 39.

Where a creditor alleges that there has been a fraudulent preference, the court will, on his petition, send the case for inquiry before the commissioners, the creditor undertaking to pay the costs of such inquiry. Ex parte Billing, 1 Deac. & Chit. 112.

Though the appearance of a party is wholly unnecessary; yet, if he is served with notice of an intended application to the court of Review, he is entitled to his costs of appearance. Ex parte Reid, 1 Deac. & Chit. 322.

But if he makes affidavits which are unnecessary, he must pay the costs occasioned thereby. Id.

All agreements of reference to be made rules of the court of Bankruptcy shall be so made by order of the court of Review; and all matters arising thereon shall be heard and determined by the court of Review. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxix.

All questions respecting the conduct of the officers and practitioners of the court of Bankruptcy, shall be brought before the court of Review. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxix.

All recognisances to be taken and acknowledged in the court of Bankruptcy, shall be taken and acknowledged before the court of Review. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxix.

In all matters referred by the court to any judge or commissioner of the court of Bankruptcy, such judge or commissioner may, in his report, state such special circumstances as he shall think fit, without being specially directed so to do. Reg. Gen. March 19, 1832, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxii. a.

2. Petition.

(a) Signing and Attestation.

Signing.]—The general orders may be dispensed with, under circumstances, in the discretion of the court. Ex parte Reynolds, 1 Deac. & Chit. 459.

A petition of a person in Ireland must be signed by the petitioner. Ex parte Cumming, 1 Mont. 206.

A petition presented by assignees must, under the general order, 12th Aug. 1809, be signed by all who present it, and not by one only, as in the case of partners. Ex parte Morgan, Buck, 109.

If a petitioner reside in Scotland, the signature of the petitioner is sufficient, and the petition need not be signed by an agent in London. Ex parte Paul, 1 Mont. 252.

An application to permit a petition to be signed by the petitioner's agent in London was granted, near the end of the sittings after Trinity term. Ex parte Stone, Buck, 255.

Form.]—A petition, merely addressed to the chief judge and the other judges, without adding "of the court of Review," was held to be informal, and ordered to be amended. Anon. 1 Deac. & Chit. 281.

The court of Review gave leave to amend the address of a petition, which by mistake was addressed to the Lord Chancellor, instead of the judges of the court of Review. Anon. 2 Deac. & Chit. 22.

The title of a petition was allowed to be altered, on paying the costs of the day. Ex parte Ren, 1 Madd. 309.

A petition was allowed to stand over, to amend the title. Ex parte Mills, Buck, 230.

A petition was amended upon paying the costs of the day. Ex parte Peyron, 2 Rose, 368.

A petition may be framed in the alternative and the respondent cannot call upon the petitioner to elect, to proceed for only one of the objects of the petition, unless under special circumstances. Ex parte Scholey, Buck, 476.

An order to amend was made conditionally, that a party should be served, and the petition be heard in fourteen days; default having been made in these conditions, the petition was dismissed with costs. Ex parte Green, 2 Deac. & Chit. 85.

Where notice is given to the respondent of a motion for leave to amend the petition, and such permission is granted after the respondent appears to oppose it, the respondent will not be entitled to the costs of the day. Ex parte Green, 2 Deac. & Chit. 42.

Attestation.]—When a solicitor, on his own behalf, presents a petition in bankruptcy, an attestation is dispensed with. Ex parte Kingston, 1 Madd. 446.

Although a petition by a solicitor need not be attested, it must appear on the petition that he is a solicitor. Ex parte Barrow, 1 Mont. 93.

A petition, which, upon the face of it, does not appear to be by a solicitor, must be properly attested. Ex parte Cole, 2 Glyn & J. 269.

The attestation of the solicitor to a petition is a guarantee that the petition is proper; not a security for costs. Ex parte Cadby, 1 Mont. 352.

The attestation must be to the name of the petitioner, and not to the petition. Ex parte Cracklowe, 1 Mont. 353.

Where a petition is attested according to the spirit of the general order, the court of Review will always endeavour to get rid of formal objections, by allowing time to amend. Ex parte Wiggin, 1 Deac. & Chit. 497.

A petition presented by a bankrupt in person, and which he appears to support, may be signed by him, and need not be attested; and if it is attested by a person who is not a solicitor, and who does not state himself to be the agent of the petitioner, it is not defective. In re Bruce, 4 Russ. 223.

What Solicitor.]—Unless the person attesting the signatures of the petitioners, under the general order of August 1809, be the solicitor actually presenting the petition, he should state himself in the attestation to be the attorney, so licitor or agent of the party signing in the matter of the petition. Ex parte Clapham, 1 Mont. & Mac. 51: S. P. Ex parte Wilkinson, 1 Glyn & J. 363.

An objection that the solicitor attesting the petition, being at the time in prison, was within 12 Geo. 2, c. 13, s. 9, was overruled. Ex parte Thompson, 1 Glyn & J. 308.

The petition being presented by a person who is not a solicitor of the court, is not an objection to the hearing. Ex parte Tanner, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 391.

A petition attested by the agent of the attorney for the petitioner, is a sufficient compliance with the general order of the 12th of August, 1809. Ex parte Bellott, 2 Madd. 258: S. P. Ex parte Weston, 2 Rose, 451.

A petition to stay the bankrupt's certificate, attested by the solicitor's agent, which is not in conformity with the general order, was dismissed with costs. Ex parte Hirst, 1 Glyn & J. 70.

A solicitor was allowed to sign a petition for a petitioner, under circumstances; the order not to be drawn up, but attached to the petition. Ex parte Alexander, 1 Deac. & Chit. 532.

Form of Attestation.—The general order of the 12th August, 1809, held to be complied with by the solicitor "authenticating" the signature of the petitioner, without "attesting" it: the object of the order being to secure the responsibility of a solicitor to the propriety of the application. Ex parte Titley, 2 Rose 83.

The order is not complied with by the solicitor authenticating the signature of the petitioner, without attesting it. Ex parte Bury, Buck, 393.

The signature of the petitioner to the petition, "authenticated by me, James Lowe, solicitor to the petitioner," is not a compliance with the order. Ex parte Dumbell, 2 Glyn & J. 121.

A petition which purported to be signed in the presence of Thomas Lee, master extraordinary in Chancery, was permitted to stand over for the purpose of amendment, and of an affidavit being filed to show that Lee was, at the time of the signature, the petitioner's solicitor or agent, the petitioner paying the costs of the day. Ex parte Rawlinson, 1 Glyn & J. 19.

The signature of a petitioner, attested in the following terms: "I attest this to be the signature of the said A. Caldecott. W. H. Ashurst, his solicitor in the matter of this petition," is a sufficient compliance with the general order of the 12th of August, 1809. Semble, that the word "authenticate" would also be sufficient. Where a petition was presented by one of four assignees, describing himself as "acting assignee," and stating the absence of two of his co-assignees, the petition was permitted to proceed. Ex parte Caldecott, 1 Mont. & Mac. 433.

Attestation thus: "Witness, J. L., solicitor to the petitioner," J. L. being the country attorney, and the petition presented by agent in town:—Held, informal. Quære, tamen. Ex parte Rose, 1 Deac. & Chit. 554.

An insufficient attestation is not waived by answer. Ex parte Hutchinson, 1 Mont. 130.

A defective attestation is waived by an order on the petition. Ex parte Tanner, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 390.

(b) Affidavit to support.

Time and Manner of Swearing.—Where the affidavit to support a petition had been sworn before a master extraordinary, who was solicitor to the commission, it was ordered to stand over, with liberty to file another affidavit. Ex parte Brockhurst, 1 Rose, 145.

An affidavit, sworn before the clerk of the solicitor to the commission, was not allowed to be read. Ex parte Green, 1 Glyn & J. 16.

An affidavit, sworn before the petition is answered, cannot be read. Ex parte Parks, Buck, 332.

Affidavits in support of petitions to stay certificates, are from necessity an exception to the rule, that an affidavit, sworn previously to the answering of the petition, is inadmissible in evidence. Ex parte Overton, 2 Rose, 257.

Quære, whether an affidavit, sworn before the petition was filed, will support an indictment for perjury? Rex v. Dudman, 2 Glyn & J. 389.

Filing affidavits in answer is a waiver of the objection to the affidavits in support of the petition, that they were filed before the petition was presented. Ex parte Gilpin, 1 Glyn & J. 183.

If a respondent, knowing that the affidavits in support of the petition are filed after the petitioning day, answer them, he thereby waives the objection to the irregularity. Ex parte Bury, Buck, 393.

Where affidavits in support of a petition are irregularly filed, a respondent answering them does not waive the objection to their being read, if he have not notice of the irregularity. Ex parte Smith, Buck, 395.

Where respondents are too late in filing their affidavits, the court will let the petition stand over, to give the petitioner an opportunity of replying to them, the respondent paying the costs of the day. Ex parte Doncaster (Corporation), Buck, 463.

Affidavits in support of the petition, filed after the petitioning day, cannot be read. In such a case, the petition was permitted to stand over till the next day of petitions, that the respondent might answer the affidavits, the petitioner paying the costs of the day. Ex parte Peel, Buck, 394.

An office copy is the only evidence the court will admit of the filing of the affidavit. Ex parte North, Buck, 396.

Where a petitioner's affidavits were only filed the day before the petition was appointed to be heard, the court ordered it to stand over, that the respondent might answer the affidavits. Ex parte Billings, 1 Deac. & Chit. 42.

Form.—It is no objection to an affidavit that it is not headed in the matter of the bankruptcy in which it is used, if, from the accompanying circumstances, it is manifest that it is judicially used in the bankruptcy. Ex parte Simonds, 2 Glyn & J. 44.

The mode of proceeding upon an irrelevant or scandalous affidavit. Ex parte Chisman, 2 Glyn & J. 315.

An affidavit was ordered to be taken off the file as irrelevant and scandalous, with costs, as between attorney and client. Ex parte Simpson, 15 Ves. jun. 476.

The court of Review will not, before hearing a petition, decide upon impertinent matter in affidavits; but serus, as to scandalous matter. Ex parte Williamson, 1 Deac. & Chit. 529.

A petition to refer an affidavit for impertinence must be presented before the original petition is heard. Ex parte Pelham, 1 Mont. 209.

The person scandalized must petition. Id.

In a recent case, the court refused to refer an affidavit for impertinence till the hearing of the petition. Ex parte Arnsby, 2 Deac. & Chit. 119.

An affidavit cannot be referred for impertinence, after an affidavit in answer to it has been filed. Chimelli v. Chauvet, 1 Younge, 385.

A formal objection, successfully urged on one occasion, is not a waiver of the respondent's right to refer for impertinence, when the same petition is again called on for hearing. Ex parte Cunningham, 1 Mont. & Mac. 193.

Other things.]—All affidavits and other documents directed to be filed in the court of Bankruptcy, must be filed with the registrars of the court. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxiii.

The registrar's officer shall be at the court of Commissioners of Bankrupts in Basinghall Street, in the city of London, and shall be kept open daily, Sundays only excepted, in the morning from ten to four, and in the evening from seven to nine. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxiii.

Affidavits in reply are only to be permitted in cases where new matter is introduced in the affidavits answering the petition. Ex parte Shayle, Buck, 244.

A party using affidavits already filed, in support of a petition to the Lord Chancellor, which is transferred to the court of Review, must give notice to the other party. Ex parte Donaldson, 1 Deac. & Chit. 36.

Where the original petition is filed, and affidavits put in, and then the petition is amended, by adding the name of another party as respondent, those affidavits cannot be read against him. Ex parte Mascarenas, 1 Deac. & Chit. 507.

Where a petition has been part heard, and then adjourned, fresh affidavits cannot be filed. Ex parte Fry, 1 Deac. & Chit. 489.

An affidavit filed before the petition is filed, bad, unless notice be given of reading it, which notice must be verified. Ex parte Palmer, 1 Deac. & Chit. 490.

An affidavit of the service of a petition ought to be in court. Id.

(c) Service.

A petition to stay a certificate must be personally served two clear days before the petition day. Ex parte Hopley, 1 Glyn & J. 63.

Where it was not served till the day of petitions, though not answered till the day before the service, the bankrupt was declared entitled to his certificate. Ex parte Brenchley, Coop. C. C. 97.

An order was made, on motion, that service of a petition on the attorney of a person abroad, whose debt was sought to be expunged, should be deemed good service. Ex parte Pelon, 3 Madd. 116.

Where a person kept out of the way, to avoid the service of an order made upon petition, it was ordered, upon motion, that service at his office should be good service. Ex parte Anderson, Buck, 38.

Where the bankrupt is one of two executors, the petition of a party interested under the will must be served on the other executor, as well as on the bankrupt and the assignees. Ex parte Cutting, 2 Deac. & Chit. 3.

An order, in the absence of parties, was made on production of an affidavit of service. In re Roberts, 1 Deac. & Chit. 555.

This order may be nunc pro tunc, provided service was originally good. Id.

(d) Hearing.

No application to take a petition out of its turn can be heard, unless notice has been given of the intention to make such application. Ex parte —, 1 Glyn and J. 182.

The Vice-Chancellor had not jurisdiction to direct a petition to be heard before the day for hearing fixed by the Lord Chancellor. Ex parte Charlton, 2 Glyn & J. 390.

A motion could not be made to adjourn a petition in bankruptcy: a petition in the bankruptcy was necessary for that purpose. In re Hardy and Dale, 6 Madd. 252.

Notice of an intention to read certain parts of the proceedings, prevents other parts being read. Ex parte Langley, 1 Mont. 355.

If, when a petition is called, the petitioner do not appear, the respondent must produce an office copy of the affidavit of service, before the rising of the court, to entitle him to his costs. Ex parte Astell, Buck, 396.

Where a petition is ordered to stand over until after a trial, there need not be a new petition for further directions. Ex parte Window, 2 Glyn & J. 280.

A motion to postpone a petition in the paper of the day, may be heard in precedence of the paper, though opposed. Ex parte Clarke, 1 Deac. & Chit. 452.

A petition to stand over, for the purpose of replying to affidavits, will not be granted, unless the application be made at least two days before the petition appears in the papers. Ex parte Wiltshire, Buck, 232.

The examination of a bankrupt, taken not in his own bankruptcy, but under another commission, is not, upon the death of the bankrupt, evidence, upon a petition in his bankruptcy to expunge the debt of a creditor; but it may be used by the commissioners as a clue to direct them in the investigation of the subject upon which it has proceeded. Ex parte Campbell, 2 Rose, 51.

Where documents are referred to in an affidavit, it does not give the other side an absolute right to their production; but it is a matter for the discretion of the court: a motion for this purpose, before hearing a petition, was refused, with costs. Ex parte Arnsby, 2 Deac. & Chit. 192.

Fiats, upon a petition for hearing in the court of Review, are to direct the attendance of parties thereon to be on the eighth day from the day of presenting every such petition; the petition to be served four days before the expiration of the time at which the attendance thereon is ordered, except in the cases of a petition presented to stay a certificate. The above directions to be without prejudice to any application to the court in respect of either the attendance of, or service on, parties, or the hearing of the petition. Reg. Gen. Jan. 1832, 1 Deac. & Chit. lvii.

It is to be understood, that the eight days and four days respectively, in the directions above mentioned, be taken as inclusive of the days of presenting and serving such petitions respectively, and exclusive of Sundays, although an intermediate day. Mem. 1 Deac. & Chit. lvii.

In strict practice, the application to postpone the hearing of a petition cannot be by motion; but if the opposite party do not object to the application by motion, affidavits filed after the petition day may be read in support of it. Ex parte Gillon, Buck, 549.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 38, the judges and commissioners of the court of Bankruptcy, in all matters within their respective jurisdictions, have power to take the whole or any part of the evidence, either viva voce on oath, or upon affidavits.

Where the court is not satisfied as to the facts sworn to in an affidavit, it will order the deponent to be examined viva voce. Ex parte Howell, 1 Deac. & Chit. 358.

The court has the power, under the 38th section, after hearing a case partly on affidavit, to examine viva voce the parties who have made affidavits. Ex parte Palmer, 1 Deac. & Chit. 341.

Where the court of Review makes a general order for the examination of the parties, on the hearing of the petition, there is no need for a special order as to any particular witness, but the proper course is to take out a subpoena. Id.

The court will not order a viva voce examination in the first instance before the hearing. Ex parte Arnsby, 2 Deac. & Chit. 120: S. P. Anon. 2 Deac. & Chit. 140.

In the ordinary practice of hearing a petition on affidavit, it is irregular for a counsel to examine a witness viva voce, without any previous order of the court obtained for that purpose. Ex parte Baldock, 2 Deac. & Chit. 60.

The bankrupt's affidavit in support of the respondent's case is admissible in evidence, notwithstanding he has previously made one in support of the petition; but when the party is dead, who could best have answered such affidavit, the bankrupt's allegations, uncorroborated, will not go for much. Ex parte Howell Gwyn, 2 Deac. & Chit. 12.

The late receipt of affidavits, and consequent non-delivery of briefs to counsel, is no cause for putting off a petition, as the briefs ought to have been delivered without waiting for the affidavits. Ex parte Bell, 1 Deac. & Chit. 496.

Costs.]—In general, costs cannot be allowed on a petition not praying costs. Ex parte Daintry, 1 Mont. 7.

The general rule is, that if the petitioner do not pray his costs, he cannot have them. Ex parte Atkinson, Buck, 215.

If upon a petition to except to taxation, and which does not pray costs, an order to retax is made, the petition praying confirmation of the certificate of retaxation may pray the costs of the original petition. Ex parte Spurr, 1 Mont. 6.

An attorney, under the circumstances, was ordered to pay the costs of an improper petition. Ex parte Cuthbert, 2 Rose, 452.

Where a bankrupt presented an unnecessary petition, his solicitor was ordered to pay 40s. costs. Ex parte Barker, Buck, 313.

Though an order might be made upon part of a petition; viz. for interest against an assignee who did not pay into the bank appointed by the creditors under the act of parliament, the petition also praying his removal, with much groundless imputation; the whole was dismissed with costs, without prejudice to another petition, confined to the proper object. Ex parte Vernon, 13 Ves. jun. 275.

A petition to expunge a charge of collusion made in another petition, and to be heard before that petition, was dismissed with costs; that other petition, coming on to be heard, and the charge of collusion being unfounded, it was dismissed with costs as against the party so charged. Ex parte Leigh, Buck, 132.

The costs of, and occasioned by, the application, include the costs of an interlocutory order, made in pursuance of part of the application; costs of the day can only be obtained by a special order at the time. Ex parte Green, 1 Glyn. & J. 188.

Where a petition is ordered to stand over, and costs of the day to be paid by the petitioner, it is not usual to draw up the order; therefore the non-payment of these costs is not such an objection as prevents the petitioner from being heard on the future day. Ex parte Clarke, 1 Deac. & Chit. 525.

The court will not, under any circumstances, before hearing, order a bankrupt to give security for costs. Ex parte Munk, 2 Deac. & Chit. 120.

A motion for it was refused, with costs, to be set off against those due from the bankrupt. Id.

A petition is not necessarily dismissed with costs, because a previous petition for the same object has been also dismissed, if the dismissal of the prior petition was on a mere matter of form. Ex parte Hooper, 1 Deac. & Chit. 117.

(c) Appeal and Rehearing.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, ss. 3 & 31, if a commissioner or subdivision court shall determine any point of law, or matter of equity, or decide on the refusal or admission of evidence in the case of any disputed debt, the matter may be brought under review of the court of Review; and, in like manner, there may be an appeal on the like matter of law or equity, from the court of Review to the Lord Chancellor.

By s. 32, the determination of the court of Review, in favour of appeals touching such decisions, is to be final, unless appealed against within one month.

By s. 39, in certain cases appeals are allowed to the House of Lords.

A petition of appeal from the Vice-Chancellor's order must have had the signature of a barrister. Ex parte Holt, Buck, 429.

A petition cannot be reheard, unless the order made on the former hearing is drawn up. Ex parte Jenkins, 1 Deac. & Chit. 222.

Where a petition prayed that the court would reverse an order of the Lord Chancellor, and it was objected to for irregularity, on the ground that the court of Review has no power to reverse such order, the objection was overruled; for though the court cannot rescind such order, it can intimate its opinion to the Lord Chancellor, who would act accordingly. Ex parte Anjer, 2 Deac. & Chit. 67.

Upon an appeal in bankruptcy, the appellant is entitled to begin. Ex parte Belcher, 1 Mont. & Bligh. 281. See also Ex parte Cunningham, 1 Mont. & Bligh. 269.

When a petition for rehearing is presented, an order to have the original petition reheard may be made upon an ex parte application. Ex parte Hensor, Buck, 427.

Where a former petition in bankruptcy was by the Vice-Chancellor dismissed on merits, with costs to be paid by the bankrupt, who continues in contempt for non-payment of them, he has no locus standi in the court of Review, being considered in contempt of that court also; and the former decision on the same matter was held an estoppel. Ex parte Munk, 2 Deac. & Chit. 120.

XXIX. PROCEEDINGS.

1. Inrolment.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 95, an office for registering proceedings in bankruptcy was appointed:

it was transferred to the court of Bankruptcy by 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 114, s. 1.

By s. 98, all proceedings in bankruptcy are exempted from stamp duty.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 96, no commission, adjudication, assignment, or certificate shall be received as evidence, unless inrolled, which those matters might be without any petition; and the Chancellor might direct upon petition any deposition, proceeding, or other matter to be inrolled: the production of the instrument merely, with the certificate of inrolment, to be sufficient evidence, without any proof of signature.

By 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 114, s. 2, matters inrolled before Sept. 1825, are deemed to be effectually entered of record.

By s. 4, the judges of the court of bankruptcy may order commissions to be entered of record.

By ss. 5 & 8, fiats are to be entered of record on the application of any interested party; and are not to be evidence unless so entered.

By s. 9, proceedings in bankruptcy, purporting to be sealed with the seal of the court, are to be received as evidence.

The court of C. P. had no authority, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 96, to compel parties to inrol the proceedings under a commission of bankruptcy. Johnson v. Gillett, 5 Bing. 5; 2 M. & P. 8.

The application to inrol must be made to the court of Chancery, and not to any court of common law. Id.

The clerk of the inrolments was not entitled, as against the assignees, to a lien on the proceedings for the expenses of the inrolment upon an order obtained by the bankrupt. Ex parte Sanderson, 1 Rose, 275; 19 Ves. jun. 161.

It was not necessary to inrol a provisional assignment, because it appeared in the general assignment. Ex parte Martin, 1 Mont. 64.

An application to the court for an order to inrol the proceedings under s. 96, must have been on petition. Ex parte Johnson, 1 Mont. & Macf. 82.

Assignees, who refuse, at the request of parties interested, to inrol proceedings, which before the statute they were bound to produce on subpoena duces tecum, refuse at the peril of costs. Id.

One of the two assignees petitioned that his co-assignee, or the solicitor of the commission, (one of whom had the custody of the proceedings) might inrol them pursuant to 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 96:—Held, that before he petitioned for this purpose, he ought to have applied to the co-assignee, or solicitor, to produce the proceedings at the office for inrolment. Ex parte Evans, 1 Deac. & Chit. 353.

The 5 Geo. 4, c. 98, which repealed the former bankrupt acts, enacted, that, after June, 1824, a bankrupt's certificate should not be received in evidence unless entered of record. The 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, repealed the 5 Geo. 4, c. 98, from May 2, 1825, and the old statutes from September, 1825; it provided also, that its enactments respecting certificates should take effect from May 2, 1825, and that certificates on commissions, issued after the act took effect, should be entered of record.

was issued in January, 1825, and the certificate obtained in November, 1825:—Held, that it need not be entered of record. Tottle v. Greenwood, 3 Bing. 493; 11 Moore 432.

There cannot now be any enrolment under 5 Geo. 2, c. 30. Kay v. Goodwin, 6 Bing. 576; 4 M. & P. 341.

The proceedings under a commission of bankruptcy sued out in 1822, were not enrolled till after the repeal of the 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, in 1825:—Held, that they were not admissible in evidence, the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, not applying to the enrolment of proceedings under a commission anterior to the act. Id.

Quere, whether the adjudication need be enrolled under 6 Geo. 4, and 1 & 2 Will. 4, in order to be evidence on a trial at Nisi Prius; but, to avoid the difficulty, the court allowed the assignees to have the proceedings, in order to enrol the adjudication. Ex parte Bowden, 1 Deac. & Chit. 453.

If the assignee is not bound, in an action where he is plaintiff, to produce the assignment, as he proves his title aliunde, there is no necessity to show the enrolment. Bates v. Sturges, 7 Bing. 586; 5 M. & P. 568.

A bill of exchange, on which the commission was sued out, was ordered to be left with the assignees, and enrolled of record with the commission and proceedings. Ex parte Jackson, 2 Rose, 182.

2. Inspection.

A bankrupt is entitled to the inspection of the proceedings, for the purpose of ascertaining the debts proved, with a view to his certificate. Ex parte Morgan, 1 Glyn & J. 404.

An assignee cannot refuse the bankrupt an inspection of his books previous to his last examination, on the ground that such examination is with a fraudulent object. Ex parte Ross, 1 Rose, 33; 17 Ves. jun. 374.

The right of a bankrupt to an inspection of his books, &c., or to a list of the debts proved, under the statute 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 5, for the purpose of his examination, depends on his conduct. Id.

A bankrupt disputing the bankruptcy is not permitted to see the proceedings. Ex parte Vaughan, 14 Ves. jun. 513.

A general inspection of a bankrupt's books, for the purpose of getting rid of the certificate, by proving gambling transactions, was refused. Ex parte Mawson, 6 Ves. jun. 614.

A bankrupt, pending a commission, has a right to an inspection in respect to the surplus; and the Lord Chancellor will take care, that at the close of it, he shall have justice; but in this case the bankrupt was not permitted to surcharge and falsify in the master's office the accounts settled by the commissioners long ago, though a palpable error, specifically pointed out by a short position would be rectified. Twogood v. Spooner, 6 Ves. jun. 485.

A commission against the petitioner had been chambers for liberty to inspect the commission, &c. The judge thought he had no authority to make the order. The petitioner then presented his petition for the same purpose, and obtained an order; but, under the circumstances, with no costs on either side. Ex parte Warren, 1 Rose, 276; 19 Ves. jun. 162.

A person who is interested in the proceedings under a commission, is entitled to have them produced in a collateral cause. Cohen v. Templar, 2 Stark. 260—Harroyd.

3. Custody.

What are.]—Books of the bankrupt noticed or referred to by him on his last examination, form part of the proceedings under the commission, to be delivered with costs to the assignees by any person, who, by refusal to part with them, renders an application necessary to obtain them. Ex parte Hardy, 1 Rose, 395.

Depositions upon which the commissioners have founded a report, are proceedings in the bankruptcy, and, as such, to be left in the custody of the assignees. Ex parte Newton, 2 Rose, 19.

An application by the petitioning creditor and provisional assignee, under a subsisting commission, to compel the solicitors, under a superseded commission against the same parties, to deliver up the proceedings under the superseded commission was refused. Ex parte Shaw, 1 Glyn & J. 124.

Custody.]—In bankruptcy, the assignees and not the commissioners are entitled to the custody of the proceedings. Ex parte Scarth, 15 Ves. jun. 293.

Neither the assignees nor the solicitor under the commission are permitted to say that the proceedings are in any person's hands but their own. Ex parte Bullen, 1 Rose, 134.

Proceedings under a commission of bankruptcy, in the secretary's office, were not permitted to be used as evidence in actions, by strangers unconnected with the commission. Jervis v. White, 8 Ves. jun. 314.

After a commission has been superseded, the great seal has power over the proceedings for the purpose of safe custody, and sometimes orders them to be deposited in the bankrupts' office. Ex parte Shaw, Jacob, 270.

Where a commission was superseded, and an action brought, the Lord Chancellor ordered the commission and proceedings to be delivered by the solicitor to the secretary, and by him to the associate, to be produced on the trial, with liberty to inspect and copy. Ex parte Warren, 19 Ves. jun. 162; 1 Rose, 276.

The proceedings under a commission superseded, were ordered to be produced at the hearing of a cause in the court of Chancery in Ireland, with a view to evidence from the bankrupt's examination; but not of course. Ex parte Bernal, 11 Ves. jun. 557.

The assignees appointed under old commissions shall be at liberty to retain, until further order, the custody of the commission and proceedings heretofore taken thereon, according to the present practice in bankruptcy. Reg. Gen. H. T. 2 Will. 4, 1 Deac. & Chit. xxiv.

If a solicitor refuse to deliver the commission and proceedings to the assignee, the order is of course, with costs. Ex parte Crowe, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 90.

The proceedings were ordered to be deposited in the office, sometimes with a view to a criminal prosecution, as for a conspiracy; even if the bond was assigned, because the remedy, being limited to the penalty, was less beneficial than an action on the case. Ex parte Warren, 19 Ves. jun. 163; 1 Rose, 276.

If a true bill for perjury is found against the solicitor to a commission, who made an affidavit in opposition to a petition to supersede, and it is necessary to produce the commission and proceedings, and the original affidavit at the trial; the court will order the solicitor to deposit them in the secretary's office, to be produced. Ex parte Tipton, 1 Mont. 214.

BARON AND FEME—See HUSBAND AND WIFE.

BARRATRY—See INSURANCE.

BARRISTER.

[For his rights, on account of his Client, at the time of Trial—See PRACTICE.]

Calling to the bar.—A mandamus does not lie to the benchers of an inn of court to compel them to admit an individual to be a member of the society, for the purpose of qualifying himself to become a barrister. Rex v. Lincoln's Inn (Benchers), 7 D. & R. 351; 4 B. & C. 855.

The only mode of relief is by appeal to the twelve judges. Rex v. Gray's Inn, 1 Dougl. 353.

No mandamus lies to the Archbishop of Canterbury to issue his fiat to the proper officer, &c. for the admission of a doctor of civil law, graduated at Cambridge, as an advocate of the court of Arches. Rex v. Canterbury (Archbishop), 8 East, 212.

By 55 Geo. 3, c. 184. sched. 1, the stamp upon the admission to the degree of barrister is 50l.

A bill in equity will not lie against the benchers of an inn of court, relative to a grant of chambers. Cunningham v. Wegg, 2 Bro. C. C. 241.

An action at law may be maintained upon the bond usually given to the society on being called to the bar, to recover arrears of "absent commons," "vacation commons," "preacher's duties," and "pensions" which have occurred while the party has remained a member of the society, although he has not lived in the inn, or practised at the bar. Rosslyn (Earl of) v. Jodrell, 4 Camp. 303; 1 Stark. 147—Ellenborough.

Actions by and against.—No action lies against a barrister for misconduct in the management of a cause. Fell v. Brown, Peake, 96—Kenyon.

Nor to recover back a fee given to him to argue a cause which he did not attend. Turner v. Phillipps, Peake, 122—Kenyon.

An action for defamation will not lie against a barrister for words spoken by him as counsel in a cause pertinent to the matter in issue. Hodgson v. Scarlett, 1 B. & A. 232.

But although counsel in the discharge of their duty are privileged to utter matter injurious to individuals, the subsequent publication of such matter is unlawful. Flint v. Pike, 6 D. & R. 528; 4 B. & C. 473.

A certificated conveyancer may maintain an action for his fees. Poucher v. Norman, 5 D. & R. 648; 3 B. & C. 744; S. P. Davies v. Sibly, 6 D. & R. 4; overruling S. P. contra Jenkins v. Slade, 1 C. & P. 270. And see Crammond v. Crouch, 3 C. & P. 77.

Persons required to take out certificates under the 55 Geo. 3, c. 184 (schedule A. part I. title certificate,) are only persons being members of one of the four Inns of Court, &c. Edgar v. Hunter, Holt. 528—Gibbs.

Serjeants and barristers, when they sue, are entitled to lay and retain the venue in Middlesex. Sparke v. Stokes, 1 Tidd's Prac. 76, 656.

Even though the cause of action arose in another county. Spelman v. —, 1 Wils. 159; S. C. nom. Spelman's case, 1 W. Black. 19.

But when a barrister is defendant, he has no privilege whatever respecting the venue, and therefore cannot change it to Middlesex when laid in another county. Id.

He is privileged from arrest whilst in attendance on the courts, and therefore will be discharged if arrested on the circuit. In re Hippeley, 1 H. Black. 636.

He is privileged from arrest whilst he is on his return from court. Luntly v. Nathaniel, 2 Dowl. P. C. 51; 1 C. & M. 579.

Practice.—After the 14th Dec. 1814, the attorney and solicitor general took precedence before all the king's serjeants; whereas, before then, they were accustomed to have place and audience in the courts next after the two most ancient of the king's serjeants, but before the others. 6 Taunt. 424; 2 Ves. & B. 422.

The attorney-general is the only legal representative of the crown in the courts. Rex v. Austen, 8 Price, 142. And see Rex v. Wilkes, 4 Burr, 2570.

The attorney-general is an officer of the crown.

and in that sense only the officer of the public. Att. Gen. v. Brown, 1 Swans. 288.

The Chancellor had not jurisdiction in bankruptcy to interfere with the practice of a barrister as to a retainer. Ex parte Elsee, 1 Mont. 69.

On an application by a person against whom a commission of bankruptcy had issued, that counsel might be permitted to attend the commissioners on his behalf, before adjudication; the Lord Chancellor declined to make any order, but intimated his opinion that under the circumstances it would be proper for the commissioners to comply with the request. Ex parte Taylor, 1 Mont. & Mac. 427.

Semble, that the House of Lords will, under peculiar circumstances, hear two counsel for a respondent, although to hear but one on each side may be part of the order made on advancing the appeal, on the petition of the appellant. Dillon v. Parker, 1 Clark & Fin. 303.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 2, practising barristers are exempted from serving on juries.

The salary of the assistant parliamentary counsel to the treasury is not assignable, and the court will not appoint a receiver for it. Cooper v. Reilly, 2 Sim. 560, 1 Russ. & Mylne, 560.

Cases and statements for the opinion of counsel, admitted by the answer of the defendant to be in his custody, possession, or power, were ordered to be produced for the usual purposes; but it would seem that, for the future, cases laid before counsel in the progress of the cause, or prepared in contemplation of, or with reference to the cause, will not be ordered to be produced for the purposes of the cause. Newton v. Berresford, 1 Younge, 377.

Authority to bind Client.]—A counsel, to whom a retainer in a cause has been given, no brief having been delivered, cannot withdraw the record. Doe d. Crake v. Brown, 5 C. & P. 315—Gurney.

A statement made by a counsel upon his address to the jury; but in the hearing of his client, is binding on the client if he make no objection. Colledge v. Horn, 3 Bing. 119; 10 Moore, 431.

A party is bound by the consent of his counsel given in court, though they had no instructions to consent, if they were at the time apprized of all those facts of which the knowledge was essential to the proper exercise of their discretion; but he may be relieved from an order made by such consent, if they give that consent in ignorance of a material circumstance. Furnival v. Bogle, 4 Russ. 142.

To support an action against a party, founded on an undertaking entered into by him (after having appeared and pleaded to an indictment for an assault), to do an act in consideration of the prosecutor consenting to a nominal fine only being imposed on him, the indorsement to that effect of the terms of the agreement between the parties on the briefs signed by the counsel on both sides was held at Nisi Prius not sufficient to be left to the jury, without proving the assent of the defendant; and a nonsuit was directed on that ground, which the court refused to set aside.

Elworthy v. Bird, 13 Price, 222; 9 Moore, 430; 2 Bing, 258; 1 Tam. 38.

Held in equity, on a bill for a specific performance, that it was not incumbent on the plaintiffs to prove that the defendant did assent to the agreement entered into by his counsel, but on the defendant to disprove it. Id.

Held, also, that the weight of the evidence being, that the defendant did not dissent, the court will conclude that the counsel had authority. Id.

Held, also, that the plaintiffs were entitled to a decree for a specific performance, with costs. Id.

I. WHO ARE, AND HOW PROVED TO BE SO.

In case of a child born in wedlock, the access or non-access of the husband may now be proved like any other fact; the old rule by which access was always presumed when the husband was within the four seas, having given way. Shelley v. —, 13 Ves. jun. 58.

Every child born in wedlock, the husband and wife being in England, and not separated by any sentence of divorce, is presumed to be legitimate; but this presumption may be repelled by proof of such facts as satisfy the jury, beyond all doubt, that no sexual intercourse took place between the parties at a time when the husband could by possibility be the father of the child. Morris v. Davies, 3 C. & P. 215—Vaughan. S. C. 3 C. & P. 427—Gaslee.

And the jury, before they can find against the legitimacy, must be convinced that no such sexual intercourse took place, by irresistible evidence, and not by a mere balance of probabilities. Id.

If such intercourse did take place, the adultery of the wife is immaterial. Id.

And if there was an opportunity for sexual intercourse between the husband and wife, the law presumes that such intercourse did take place, unless the contrary be satisfactorily proved. Id.

Where personal access between husband and wife is established, sexual intercourse is to be presumed; and the presumption must stand rebutted by clear and satisfactory evidence. Head v. Head, 1 Turn. & Russ. 138; 1 Sim. & Stu. 150.

A child born of a married woman whose husband is within the four seas, is always to be presumed to be legitimate, unless there is evidence affording irresistible presumption that sexual intercourse did not take place between them at any time, when, in the course of nature, the husband might have been the father of the child. Id.

If the husband be found to have gone beyond seas above two years before the birth of a child borne by his wife, she remaining at home, the conclusion is irresistible, that such child is a bastard. Rex v. Maidstone, 12 East, 550.

Non-access of the husband need not be proved during the whole period of the wife's pregnancy; it is sufficient if the circumstances of the case show a natural impossibility that the husband could be the father, as where he had access only a fortnight before the birth. Rex v. Luffe, 8 East, 193.

If the husband have access, and others at the same period have a criminal intimacy with his wife, and she have a child, such a child is legitimate; but if the husband and wife be living separately, and the wife is notoriously living in adultery, a child born under such circumstances would be illegitimate, although the husband had an opportunity of access. Cope v. Cope, 5 C. & P. 604; 1 M. & Rob. 269—Alderson.

On an issue to try the legitimacy of a party born of a married woman, since dead, declarations by her that he was not the son of her husband, but of another man, are not admissible; nor are such declarations of the husband admissible. Id.

But a baptismal register, in which the party is described as the illegitimate son of his mother, is admissible evidence on the trial of such an issue. Id.

The child of a married woman may be proved a bastard by other evidence than that of the husband's non-access. Goodright d. Thompson v. Saul, 4 T. R. 356. And see Rex v. Lubbenham, 4 T. R. 251.

A woman cannot give evidence of the non-access of her husband, to bastardize her issue, though he be dead at the time of her examination as a witness; and therefore an order of sessions, stated by that court to be founded in part upon credence given to her testimony of that fact, was quashed. Rex v. Kea, 11 East, 132: S. P. Goodright d. Stevens v. Moss, Cowp. 591.

But the mother is a competent witness to prove the illegitimacy of her children. Rex v. Bramley, 6 T. R. 330: S. P. Standen v. Standen, 6 T. R. 331. And see Rex v. Ravenstone, 5 T. R. 373.

And evidence of the reputed father may be admitted to prove the bastardy of the children after the mother's death. Rex v. St. Peter's, Burr. S. C. 25.

A child born in Scotland before marriage of parents domiciled there, and who afterwards marry there, cannot inherit lands in England. Doe d. Birtwhistle v. Vardill, 8 D. & R. 185; 2 B. & C. 438.

II. FILIATION.

1. Jurisdiction of Justices and Sessions.

The right to examine women who have been delivered of bastards is given by 6 Geo. 2, c. 31; and women who are pregnant, but not delivered, by 49 Geo. 3, c. 68.

Under these statutes concerning bastards, no order of filiation for payment of the expenses can be made, unless the child be born alive. Rex v. De Brouquens, 14 East, 277.

An action for false imprisonment lies against overseers for imprisoning a man under a justice's warrant, until he paid a sum of money for the maintenance of a child, which should be born of a woman then pregnant by the plaintiff, but who had not as yet been delivered. Wexman v. Fisher, 2 Selw. N. P. 896.

If a person be bound by a recognisance by one magistrate under 6 Geo. 2, c. 31, to appear at the next sessions, and perform such order as shall there be made on him, under the 18th Eliz. c. 3, respecting bastards, the sessions can only make an order of bastardy on him, but cannot order him also to give security for the performance of that order. Rex v. Price, 6 T. R. 147.

Nor can the magistrates order the father to find security. Rex v. Fox, 1 Bott's P. L. 477; 6 T. R. 148: S. P. — v. Messenger, 1 Bott's P. L. 474.

But they may order the payment of a sum in gross. Rex v. Gravesend, 1 Bott's P. L. 500.

An original order of bastardy may be made at the quarter sessions. Rex v. Greaves, 2 Dougl. 632.

Two justices out of sessions cannot make an order to acquit or discharge a person who is charged with being the reputed father of a bastard child. Rex v. Jenkins, 1 Bott's P. L. 474.

Nor can they commit a person for refusing to discover the father of a bastard child. Rex v. Southby, 1 Bott's P. L. 477.

The sessions cannot fine a constable for suffering a putative father to escape. Rex v. Ridge, 1 Bott's P. L. 507.

If an unmarried woman be committed for disobedience to an order of bastardy, a subsequent marriage is no cause for discharging her. Rex v. Taylor, 3 Burr. 1679.

The defendant must appear in court when an order of bastardy is quashed. Rex v. Gibson, 1 W. Black. 198.

If an order of sessions recite that it was made on full hearing, the merits must have come before them, and their discharge is conclusive. Rex v. Teriam, 1 Bott's P. L. 509.

If a court of general quarter sessions next after an order of bastardy quash the order, the court of King's Bench will not intend that a court of general sessions intervened; and unless that appear, the order of sessions will be confirmed. Rex v. Chichester, (Guardians, &c.) 3 T. R. 496.

A rule for a certiorari to remove an order of bastardy was discharged because not applied for within six months. Rex v. Howlett, 1 Wils. 35.

A soldier in actual service is not protected under the Mutiny Act from being committed to prison under 6 Geo. 2, c. 31, for want of sureties, &c. upon an oath charging him to be the father of a child likely to be born a bastard. Rex v. Bowen, Nolan, 186; 5 T. R. 156; S. P. Rex v. Archer, 2 T. R. 156.

2. Examination of Mother.

The two justices must be present at the same time and place, when a woman is examined and committed for not affiliating a bastard child. Billings v. Prinn, 2 W. Black. 1017. And see Rex v. Forrest, 3 T. R. 38; Rex v. Great Marlow, 2 East, 244; Rex v. Hamstall Ridware, 3 T. R. 380.

One magistrate has no power to commit a single woman for refusing to be examined respecting the father of her bastard child. Ex parte Martin, 9 D. & R. 65; 6 B. & C. 80.

Trespass will not lie against one magistrate for committing the mother of a bastard child for refusing to affiliate it, without the previous notice of action required by the stat. 42 G. 2, c. 24, although the jurisdiction in such matters is given by 18 Eliz. c. 2, s. 2, to two magistrates only. Bird v. Gunston, Hull. Costs, 240; 2 Chit. 459. And see Weller v. Toke, 9 East, 364; and Briggs v. Evelyn, 2 H. Black. 115.

An order of filiation may be made under the stat. 6 Geo. 2, c. 31, upon an examination of the woman pregnant when taken, if the woman die before the application is made. Rex v. Ruvenstone, 5 T. R. 373.

Every reasonable intendment will be made in favour of an order of justices. Therefore, where an order of bastardy, reciting that it had appeared to the justices on the oath of R. T. that the said Mary Cole (referring to the title in which she was named as Mary Cole, deceased) was delivered of a bastard child, &c.; and further, that upon the examination of the said M. C. taken on oath, &c.; dated, &c. in the presence of the said R. T., the said M. C., upon her oath, charged the defendant with being the father, &c., adjudged that therefore upon examination of the cause and circumstances of the premises, as well on the oath of the said M. C. before birth so taken, and also upon the oath of the said R. T., that the defendant was the father, and that he should pay so much, &c.; the court would intend, (especially after appeal confirming the order,) that M. C. was dead at the time of the order made, and that her examination on oath before taken in writing under the stat. 6 Geo. 2, c. 31, was verified on the oath of R. T. before the magistrates making the order; which examination was sufficient after the death of the mother to warrant a subsequent order of filiation. Rex v. Clayton, 3 East, 58.

It is not necessary to the validity of an order of filiation, that the putative father should be present at the examination of the woman before the two justices. Rex v. Upton Gray, Cald. 308.

3. Who may apply for.

An order of bastardy must be made on complaint of the parish where the child is born, and it must be stated in the order to have been made on such complaint. Rex v. St. Mary Nottingham, 13 East, 57; 1 Bott's P. L. 482.

Therefore, where, by the order, it did not appear to have been made on complaint of the parish where the child was born, but on the contrary stated that she was a casual poor there, it was held bad: for, non constat but that she may have been born in a parish in another county, out of the jurisdiction of the justices making the order. Id.

But as to orders in bastardy, and upon whose complaint they must be made, see Rex v. Fox, 6 T. R. 148.

Justices have no authority to make an order of bastardy where the child is born in an extra-parochial place. Rex v. Baker, 1 Bott's P. L. 476; and see Rex v. Hexham, 1 Bott's P. L. 498; S. P. Rex v. Willey, 1 Bott's P. L. 499; Rex v. Stanley, Cald. 172.

One who is de facto guardian of the poor of a parish, united with other parishes under the stat. 22 Geo. 3, c. 83, for the better relief and employment of the poor, and who is received and acknowledged by the parish as guardian, though not legally appointed such under the statute, is yet competent to apply in that character to a justice of the peace, to take the examination of a single woman with child, in order to filiate the bastard; which by the stat. 6 Geo. 2, c. 31, s. 1, is directed to be made upon application by the overseers of the poor, in whose place such guardian is appointed; and he is also competent to apply to the justice for a summons against a reputed father for not obeying an order of bastardy; which by stat. 49 Geo. 3, c. 68, s. 3, is directed to be made upon complaint by any one of the overseers of the poor. And though the latter stat. direct the magistrate upon such complaint, and proof upon oath of the order for payment of maintenance, and non-payment thereof, to issue his warrant to apprehend the reputed father; yet it is proper for the justice to issue a summons in the first instance to the party charged, to attend and show cause, &c. Rex v. Martyr, 13 East, 56.

4. Form of Order.

An order of bastardy, stated to be as well upon the oath of the wife, as otherwise, is good; for it will be presumed that the non-access of the husband was proved by competent witnesses on oath other than the wife; or if proved by her also, that the judgment of the justices was founded on the other proof. Rex v. Luffe, 8 East, 193.

Such an order filiating the child of a married woman is good; though it only state that such child was likely to become chargeable; which are the words of the stat. 8 Geo. 2, c. 31, s. 1, as applied to the bastards of single women; for upon that statute, as well as the stat. 18 Eliz. c. 3, which has the words, born out of lawful matrimony, the only question is, whether the child be by law a bastard. Id.

An order of filiation, stating that the child is likely to become chargeable, is sufficient, without showing that it was actually chargeable. Rex v. Hartington, 4 M. & S. 559.

The justices must expressly adjudge that the child was born in the parish. Rex v. Hexham, 1 Bott's P. L. 498; S. P. Rex v. Willey, 1 Bott's P. L. 499; Rex v. Stanley, Cald. 172.

But if it appear in any part of the order—as in the title—that the child was born in the parish, it is sufficient. Rex v. Fox, 1 Bott's P. L. 501; 6 T. R. 148.

To wit, Liberty of the Tower Hamlets, London, in an order of bastardy, is sufficient, without saying in what county. Rex v. Messenger, 1 Bott's P. L. 499.

An order of bastardy stating "whereas it hath appeared to us, &c." without an express adjudication that the person charged is the putative father, is void. Rex v. Pitts, 2 Dougl. 662.

5. Appeal to the Sessions.

The sessions have no jurisdiction to receive an appeal in a matter of bastardy, until the requisites of 49 Geo. 3, c. 68, ss. 5 & 7, have been complied with, as to the notice of appeal and entering into a recognisance: notice of appeal for an adjourned sessions for a different division of a county, does not satisfy the requisites of that statute. Rex v. Lincolnshire, (Justice), 5 D. & R. 347; 3 B. & C. 548.

By the stat. 49 Geo. 3, c. 68, s. 5, the notice of appeal in a matter of bastardy must specify the cause and matter of such appeal: where, therefore, a notice given by the reputed father of a bastard child, of his intention to appeal against an order of filiation, merely stated that he intended to prosecute an appeal against an order of filiation, whereby he was adjudged to be the father of a female bastard child, born on the body of E. H. and chargeable to the parish of S., pursuing the words of the order, without specifying the particular grounds of appeal:—Held, that the notice of appeal was insufficient. Rex v. Gloucestershire (Justices), 2 D. & R. 426; S. C. nom. Rex v. Oxfordshire (Justices), 1 B. & C. 279.

And, under the 5th section of that statute, the notice of appeal in a matter of bastardy must specify the cause and matter thereof. Id.

A verbal notice of appeal is sufficient. Rex v. Salop (Justices), 4 B. & A. 626.

Upon an appeal to the sessions against an order of filiation, the respondents are to begin by supporting their order as in all other cases. Rex v. Knill, 12 East, 50. And see Rex v. Newbury, 4 T. R. 475; Nolan, 25.

III. INDEMNITY TO THE PARISH.

1. Bond.

By 54 Geo. 3, c. 170, ss. 8 & 9, overseers are to sue on the bond of indemnity; and the inhabitants are made competent witnesses.

By that statute, an action on a bastardy bond must be brought in the names of the overseers for the time being, and not of those to whom the bond was given. Addey v. Woolley, 3 Moore, 21; 8 Taunt. 691.

Where the putative father gave a voluntary bond, and not under the compulsory clause of 6 Geo. 2, c. 31, to the parish officers, conditioned for the payment of a sum certain every three months until the child should be deemed capable of providing for herself:—Held, that such bond was good, and the condition sufficiently certain. Middleham v. Bellerby, 1 M. & S. 310.

A bond, conditioned for payment to the overseers of a parish of a certain weekly sum so long as a bastard child shall continue chargeable, is not illegal or contrary to public policy. Strangeways v. Robinson, 4 Taunt. 498.

To debt on such a bond, it is no plea, that after the child attained the age of seven years, the putative father offered thenceforth to keep and maintain the child, and requested the overseers to deliver it to him, without showing that the child was within the power and custody of the overseers. Id.

And in a very recent case, where the putative father voluntarily entered into a bond, conditioned to pay the plaintiffs, parish officers, and their successors, 2s. 6d. per week, for all costs and charges concerning the child, so long as it should live, and be provided for at the expense of the parish: to an action on the bond, to recover divers weekly payments, the defendant pleaded that he was able and willing to provide for the child, without the assistance of the parish, and that he had requested the plaintiffs to deliver it over to his care; but that the child had been provided for at the expense of the parish, by the plaintiffs, of their own wrong, and that if they were damnified, they were damnified of their own wrong:—Held, that the bond was a valid security, and an indemnity to the parish to a certain extent. Pope v. Sale, 5 M. & P. 334; 7 Ring. 477.

Held also, that the plea disclosed no matter of legal defence to the action, as the only plea in discharge of the bond would be performance, as the child had been provided for at the expense of the parish. Id.

Where the father of a bastard child, upon whom an order of affiliation had been made, paid several sums on that account to the parish, and during all that time for which he paid, the child was in the Foundling Hospital, and the parish put to no expense:—Held, that he might recover the money back. Hodgson v. Williams, 6 Esp. 29—Mansfield.

The court of C. P. will stay the proceedings in an action on a bastardy bond, on payment of the penalty and costs. Shutt v. Proctor, 2 Marsh. 226.

Before the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 56, the obligor was not discharged by his bankruptcy and certificate. St. Martin v. Warren, 1 B. & A. 491; 2 Stark. 188.

Surety obligors in a bastardy bond, discharged under the Insolvent Debtors' Act subsequently to a judgment on the bond, are liable on scire facias on the judgment, for expenses incurred in respect of the bastard subsequently to their discharge. Davies v. Arnott, 3 Bing. 154; S. C. nom. Dawes v. Arnott, 10 Moore, 539.

If the father offer to take and maintain the child, and the parish choose to support it, they cannot proceed on the bond. Newland v. Osman, 1 Bott's P. L. 460.

A plea, that the mother of a bastard child took it away, to debt on a bond to indemnify the plaintiff from all charges, was held bad. Holland v. Walker, 2 Wils. 126.

The parish officers have a right to fix the amount of the security. Dickenson v. Brown, Peake, 234—Kenyon.

2. Deposit or other Security.

The stat. 6 Geo. 2, c. 31, only authorizes parish officers to take security from the putative father of a bastard child, to indemnify the parish: therefore parish officers can only require from him security to indemnify the parish from any charge for its maintenance: consequently a deposit of money for that purpose is contrary to the policy of the law, and such deposit may be recovered back. Clark v. Johnson, 11 Moore, 319; 3 Bing. 424.

The mother of an illegitimate child may recover, in an action for money had and received, money deposited with a parish officer to meet any charges to which the parent might be liable in respect of the child. Id.

If the putative father pay, before the birth, a fixed sum to the parish officers, to discharge him from all future responsibility for the maintenance of the child; after the birth and death of the child, he may recover back such part of the money as remains unexpended, as had and received to his use. Watkins v. Hewlett, 1 B. & B. 1: S. C. not S. P. 3 Moore, 211.

A note given to the officers of a parish, to indemnify them against the expenses of a bastard child, is to be taken as an indemnity only so far as the parish have been put to expense, though not so expressed in the note. The maker may set up the defence, that they were not damnified. Wilde v. Griffin, 5 Esp. 143—Ellenborough.

And if a sum be paid sufficient to cover the whole of the expenses which the parish has been put to, no action can be maintained on the note. Id.

Where the parish officers had taken a promissory note absolute for a sum certain, to which there was a plea of tender of a lesser sum as the amount of the charge actually sustained by the parish, which tender was found for the defendant:—Held, that the plaintiffs could not recover further upon the note. Cole v. Gower, 6 East, 110; 2 Smith, 246.

Where 40*l.* had been paid to the parish, and 4*l.* only expended:—Held, that the remainder might be recovered back. Anon. 1 Camp. 398—Lawrence.

Rule for a new trial refused under the names of Stainforth v. Staggs, 1 Camp. 564. And see Ferrall v. Horne, 1 Camp. 564.

An action lies to recover back money paid to parish officers by a person taken up under a warrant, as the putative father of a bastard child, by way of bargain with the parish to be released from all liability respecting the child, against those who receive the money; although before the commencement of the action, they may have gone out of office, and accounted with their successors for so much of the money as was not expended on the child and its mother during her lying-in:—However, in such action, the plaintiff is only entitled to recover the surplus after the charges have been deducted. Townson v. Wilson, 1 Camp. 396—Ellenborough.

If an overseer receive from the putative father, a sum of money as a composition with the parish for the maintenance of a child, he is liable to an indictment for fraudulently omitting to give credit for this sum in his accounts with the parish. Rex v. Martin, 2 Camp. 268—Ellenborough.

Even though the putative father pay the money under a mistake of law, and not under duress, it may be recovered back. Id.

IV. LIABILITY OF PARISH.

Where a bastard child is born, for whose sustenance the parents neglect to provide necessities, the parish officers are obliged to do it, without an order of justices for that purpose. Hays v. Bryant, 1 H. Black. 253.

A certificate, acknowledging an unmarried woman to be pregnant, and undertaking to provide for the child or children she went with, will oblige the parish granting it to provide for an after-born bastard. Rex v. Ipeley, Burr. S. C. 650.

Where a bastard having a different settlement from the mother, lives with her for nurture, the parish where the bastard's settlement is must maintain it. Simpson v. Johnson, 1 Dougl. 7: S. P. Rex v. Hemlington, Cald. 6.

V. CUSTODY OF CHILD.

The mother of an infant illegitimate child is entitled to the custody of the child in preference to the father, though from his circumstances he may be better able to educate it. Ex parte Kner, 1 N. R. 148.

And if the putative father obtain possession of the child from the mother by fraud, the court of K. B. will order it to be restored to the mother, Rex v. Soper, 5 T. R. 278: S. P. Rex v. Moseley, 5 East, 224, n.

The court will grant a habeas corpus to bring up the body of a bastard child, within the age of nurture, for the purpose of restoring it to the custody of the mother, from whose quiet possession it was taken, at one time by fraud, and afterwards by force; and this without prejudice to the question of guardianship, which belongs to the Lord Chancellor representing the King in Chancery. Rex v. Hopkins, 7 East, 579; 3 Smith, 577.

For quære, whether the putative father of a bastard child has any right to the custody of the child in any case. Strangeways v. Robinson, 4 Taunt. 498.

Although in one case it was held, that the putative father had a natural right to the care and education of the child, and therefore that it could not be taken from his custody. Rex v. Cornfoot, 1 Bott's P. L. 465.

And the putative father may take the child from the parish, and maintain it himself. Newland v. Osman, 1 Bott's P. L. 466.

Justices cannot order a bastard child to be delivered to the care of its mother. Rex v. Felton, 1 Bott's P. L. 478.

VI. LIABILITY OF PUTATIVE FATHER.

1. On Order of Affiliation.

Expenses.—The reputed father cannot be ordered to pay a gross sum at a future day, for the purpose of binding the child out apprentice. Rex v. Willey, 1 Bott's P. L. 499. And see Rex v. Gravesend, 1 Bott's P. L. 500.

An order of bastardy is only binding on the reputed father, to indemnify the parish in which the bastard is born, till the bastard has acquired another settlement for herself elsewhere. Rex v. St. Mary Nottingham, 13 East, 57.

A party is not compellable to find sureties for the performance of an order in bastardy made upon him. Rex v. Price, 6 T. R. 147.

An order of bastardy, awarding a gross sum to be paid for the midwife and other charges, and for the past maintenance, &c. is good. Rex v. Fox, 6 T. R. 148; 1 Bott's P. L. 501.

And if it direct the sum to be paid towards the lying-in and maintenance, it seems to be enough, without stating that the sum was expended by the overseers. And if it be stated to be on complaint of the overseers of the township, it need not state that it is a township maintaining its own poor. Rex v. Hartington, 4 M. & S. 559.

So, an adjudication that the child was baptized in the parish, and that 36l. should be paid, part whereof had already been expended for maintenance of the child, and other incidental charges, was held good. Rex v. Morana, 1 Bott's, P. L. 500.

Costs.—In an order of filiation and maintenance, the justices have no power, by the stat. 18 Eliz. c. 3, to direct the defendant to pay the costs of the parish in obtaining the order; but having in such order separated the sum to be paid for maintenance, and the sum to be paid for costs, the order was quashed as to the latter, and confirmed as to the rest of it. Rex v. Sweet, 9 East, 25.

So, a commitment "until he should pay the sum due for the maintenance of the child and legal accustomed fees, or until he should be otherwise delivered by due course of law," is bad. Robson v. Spearman, 3 B. & A. 493; S. P. Marsh's case, 2 W. Black. 806.

An order of bastardy made twelve years after the death of the child, whereby the putative father (who had in the mean time absconded) was adjudged to pay two several sums, one for the bygone maintenance, and the other for the costs, is void in toto; and though the filiating justices committed the father upon an illegal warrant, from which he was discharged at the next sessions, still they might afterwards issue a fresh warrant, founded on the original order: but if the case fell within the 49 Geo. 3, c. 68. s. 3, as an order unappealed from, the commitment for non-payment of maintenance, must be for three months, unless the money was sooner paid. In re Addis, 2 D. & R. 167; 1 B. & C. 87.

2. Independent of Order.

A father of a bastard child, if he has adopted it as his own, though no order has been made on him, is liable for nursing and necessaries. Hesketh v. Gowing, 5 Esp. 131—Ellenborough.

Bankruptcy is no discharge of a promise to allow a weekly sum for the support of an illegitimate child. Millen v. Whittenbury, 1 Camp. 498—Ellenborough. And see St. Martin v. Warren, 1 B. & A. 491; 2 Stark. 188.

If the father of an illegitimate child has consented to pay an annual sum for its support, he must continue to do so, or provide for the child at his own expense, or give the most distinct notice of his intention to discontinue the payment of such annual sum. Cameron v. Baker, 1 C. & P. 268—Best.

If a person know that his illegitimate daughter, of the age of sixteen, is boarded and clothed by a party, and neither expresses dissent, nor takes his daughter away, he is liable to pay for such board and lodging, without any express promise to do so, unless he can show that his daughter was so boarded and clothed against his consent, or that he has refused to maintain her any longer at his expense. Nichols v. Allen, 3 C. & P. 36—Tenterden.

Where the putative father had made various payments for maintenance, and then refused to continue its support until the mother obtained an order of filiation:—Held, that no action would lie at the suit of the mother for arrears of maintenance. Furrillie v. Crowther, 7 D. & R. 612.

The father of two illegitimate children executed a bond, conditioned for the payment of an annuity of 30l. for the support of them and their mother during their joint natural lives; or in case of the death of the children, during the natural life of the mother; one of the children having died:—Held, that the executor of the obligor was liable on the bond, for the arrears of the annuity accruing after the death of that child. James v. Tallent, 1 D. & R. 548; 5 B. & A. 889.

VII. RIGHTS TO INHERIT.

A natural child cannot take by a prospective bequest made before his birth. Arnold v. Preston, 18 Ves. jun. 289.

It is a rule that a bastard cannot take as the issue of a particular person, until it has acquired the reputation of being the child of that person, which cannot be before its birth. Earle v. Wilson, 17 Ves. jun. 531.

Under a devise by a married man, having no legitimate children, "to the children which I may have by A. and living at my decease," natural children who had acquired the reputation of being his children by her before the date of the will, were held to be entitled. Williamson v. Adam, 1 Ves. & B. 422.

Quære, whether future illegitimate children can take under any description in a will. Id.

Under a bequest "to such child or children, if more than one, as A. may happen to be enciente of by me," a natural child of which she was then pregnant cannot take, though a bequest to the natural child of which a woman was enciente without reference to any person as the father, would probably be good, having no uncertainty. Earle v. Wilson, 17 Ves. jun. 528.

BAWDY HOUSE.

[See statutes 25 Geo. 2, c. 36, s. 6, 7, 8, & 9; 28 Geo. 3, c. 19; 58 Geo. 3, c. 70.]

In an action founded upon the statute 25 Geo. 2, c. 36, by one of the two inhabitants who had given information &c. to the parish constable, of A. B. keeping a bawdy-house, in consequence of which A. B. was prosecuted to conviction, it is necessary, in order to entitle the plaintiff upon such conviction to recover the reward of 10*l.* from the overseers, that the prosecution should have been conducted by the parish constable; and therefore, where the two inhabitants had taken upon themselves to conduct it, it was holden that they were not entitled to the reward; and that a demand upon the overseer, stating the prosecution so to have been carried on, was insufficient to entitle them to an action for the double penalty given by the act, in case of a neglect or refusal by the overseer to pay such sum of 10*l.* on demand. Clarke v. Rice, 1 B. & A. 694.

BERWICK-UPON-TWEED.

The town and liberties of Berwick-upon-Tweed are not for any purpose within, or part of, the county of Northumberland. Berwick-upon-Tweed (Mayor, &c.) v. Shanks, 11 Moore, 372.

Quære, whether a local act, enabling a corporation to issue promissory notes under their seal, enables them to make a promise, and subjects them to an action of assumpsit as incident to the making of such note? Slark v. Highgate Archway Company, 5 Taunt. 792.

If a corporation is authorized to raise money on promissory notes for a particular purpose, semble that evidence may be received to impeach the notes, by showing they were issued for another purpose. Id.

Assumpsit may be maintained on a bill against a trading corporation, whose power of drawing and accepting bills is recognised by statute. Murray v. E. I. Company, 5 B. & A. 204.

By the provisions of several statutes passed for the protection of the Bank of England, it is enacted, that "it shall not be lawful for any body corporate to borrow, owe, or take up any money upon their bills or notes payable on demand, or at any less time than six months from the borrowing thereof."—Held, that a corporation not established for trading purposes, cannot become acceptors of a bill of exchange payable at a less period than six months from the date. Broughton v. Manchester Waterworks, 3 B. & A. 1.

It is doubtful whether any, except a trading corporation, can bind themselves as parties to a bill. Id.

Quære, whether a Scotch Corporation, called the British Linen Company, has any authority to issue bills? Rea v. McKay, R. & R. C. C. 71.

The directors of a mining association cannot bind the members by accepting a bill, unless they are authorized so to do by the deed or instrument of co-partnership, by the necessity of such a power to the carrying on of the business, by the usage of similar establishments, or the express assent of the party sought to be charged. Still less can the directors bind the members by a bill drawn upon the directors by their own servant, such a bill being in effect a promissory note. Dickinson v. Valpy, 5 M. & R. 126; 10 B. & C. 128.

2. Infants.

In an action against the acceptor by the indorsee, it is no defence that the drawers who had drawn the bill payable to themselves, and of course indorsed it, were infants when it was drawn. Taylor v. Croker, 4 Esp. 187—Ellenb.

The infancy of the payee is no answer in an action by the indorsee of a bill of exchange against the drawer. Grey v. Cooper, 3 Dougl. 65; 1 Selw. N. P. 306.

An infant cannot accept a bill even for necessities. Williamson v. Watts, 1 Camp. 552—Mansfield. But see Trueman v. Hurst, 1 T. R. 40.]

A person is liable as acceptor of a bill which was drawn while he was an infant, but was accepted by him after he came of age. Stevens v. Jackson, 2 Rose, 285; 1 Marsh. 469; 6 Taunt. 106; 4 Camp. 164.

In an action against acceptors, where the payee and first indorser was an infant, the jury having found a verdict for the plaintiffs, on evidence that the defendants knew, when they accepted it, that the payee was an infant, and that he had, in fact, indorsed the bill before they accepted it—the court refused to disturb the verdict; but they refrained from giving any opinion on the effect of it, if brought before them on a case more free from imputation. Jones v. Darch, 4 Price, 300.

3. Agents.

If an agent for A. draw a bill upon B. in favour of C., though he direct B. to place the amount to A.'s debit, he will be personally liable to C. if the bill is not paid, though C. knew he was only agent for A., unless he uses proper words to prevent such liability. Leadbitter v. Farrow, 5 M. & S. 345; Bayl. Bills, 55.

An agent to a country bank, to whom the plaintiff sent a sum of money, in order to procure a bill upon London, drew in his own name for the amount upon the firm in London, the two firms being the same:—Held, that the agent was liable as drawer, although the plaintiff knew that he was merely an agent, and supposed that the bill was drawn by him as such, and on account of the country bank, to which the agent paid over the money. Id.

An authority given to A., to draw bills in the name of B., may be exercised by the clerks of A. Ex parte Sutton, 2 Cox, 84.

An agent for an association who draws bills in his own name for the purposes of the company, does not bind the partners as drawers, though authorized to draw bills. Ducarrey v. Gill, M. & M. 450; 4 C. & P. 121—Tenterden.

Where a bill is drawn on an agent, and made payable out of a particular fund, and the agent says he will pay it when he gets money from the principal; this is binding on him; and if he gets money at any subsequent time, he is bound to pay the bill. Stevens v. Hill, 5 Esp. 247—Ellen.

The declaration in an action on a bill stated it to have been drawn by one H. P., accepted by the defendant, and indorsed by the said H. P. to the plaintiffs. The drawing appeared to be in this form:—Per pro. H. P., J. P. A clerk of the plaintiffs proved that the drawing and indorsement were of the handwriting of Mr. John P., whom he understood to be the son of Mrs P., whom he had never seen, but with whose house, the house of his employers had dealings, and that he had seen bills drawn and accepted in the same form as the bill in question, some of which had been paid. The plaintiffs, on this evidence, had a verdict, and a rule nisi for a new trial having been obtained, an affidavit in consequence of an observation made by the Lord Chief Justice, was produced, stating the name of the party to be H. P., and that the bill was drawn by her authority; the court on the whole evidence, refused to make the rule for a new trial absolute. Jones v. Turnour, 4 C. & P. 204.

Where one gives a power of attorney to another, to demand and receive all monies due to him, on any account whatsoever, and to use all means for the recovery thereof, and to appoint attorneys for the purpose of bringing actions, and to revoke the same, "and to do all other business;" the latter words must be understood, with reference to the former, as meaning all business appertaining thereto, and although the attorney may receive monies due in autre droit to the principal, yet he cannot indorse a bill for him, which comes to his hands under the power. Hay v. Goldsmith, 2 Smith, 79.

The indorsee of a bill accepted by procuration is bound to use due caution, and should not only see the general power of the agent to accept, but also inquire into the propriety of his accepting that particular bill; and if he does not and it was improperly accepted, he cannot recover against the acceptor. Attwood v. Munnings, 7 B. & C. 278; 1 M. & R. 66.

An averment in a declaration that A. B. & Co. accepted a bill of exchange according to the usage and custom of merchants, is supported by evidence that the bill was accepted by C. D. their authorized agent, thus, "for A. B. & Co., C. D." Heys v. Heseltine, 2 Camp. 604—Ellenb.

The defendant is not at liberty to object that the indorsement is not in the handwriting of the payee himself, after a promise, with a knowledge of this circumstance, to pay the bill. Helmaley v. Loader, 2 Camp. 450—Ellenborough.

If a bill is indorsed by procuration, it should not be stated in the declaration that the party indorsed it, his own proper hand being thereunto subscribed: for if it appears to have been done by procuration from such party, it is a fatal variance. Levi v. Wilson, 5 Esp. 180—Ellenborough.

If A. permits B. to draw bills in his name, he is liable as drawer to ignorant indorsees, although he had neither any interest nor knew of the particular bills drawn: but he is not liable to a payee having knowledge of the transaction. Smith v. Strange, Peake's Add. Cas. 116—Kenyon: S. P. Curtis v. Barrs, Peake's Add. Cas. 119.

From the fact that the defendants' confidential clerk had been accustomed to draw checks for them; that, in one instance at least, they had authorized him to indorse; and in two other instances had received money obtained by his indorsing in their name, a jury was held warranted in inferring that the clerk had a general authority to indorse. Prescott v. Flynn, 9 Bing. 19; 2 M. & Scott, 18.

4. Husband and Wife.

Where a note is payable to a feme sole, or order, and she marries, it becomes her husband's property, and she cannot indorse it over whilst she is covert. Conner v. Martin, 3 Wils. 5.

The indorsement by a married woman, with her husband's assent, of a bill drawn by her, is binding upon him, and will pass the interest in the bill to the indorsee, so as to enable him to sue the acceptor. Prestwick v. Marshall, 5 M. & P. 513; 7 Bing. 765; 4 C. & P. 594.

If a note is made payable to a married woman, and she indorses it for value in her own name, and the maker afterwards promises to pay it; in an action against him by the indorsee, it will be presumed that the nominal payee had authority from her husband to indorse the note in that form, and the indorsement will be considered as vesting a legal title to the note in the plaintiff. Cotes v. Davis, 1 Camp. 485—Ellenborough.

Though a note were given to a married woman, knowing her to be such, with intent that she should indorse it to the plaintiff, in payment of a debt which she owed him (in the course of carrying on a trade in her own name, by the consent of her husband,) yet the property in the note vested in the husband by the delivery to the wife, and no interest passed by her indorsement to the plaintiff; neither could the plaintiff recover upon the money counts under such circumstances. Barlow v. Bishop, 1 East, 432; 3 Esp. 266.

Husband and wife may sue on a note made to the wife during coverture. Philliskirk v. Pluckwell, 2 M. & S. 393.

Where a bill was payable to a feme sole, who intermarried before the same was due, it was held that the husband might sue in his own name, without joining the wife, although the latter had not indorsed the bill. McNeillage v. Holloway, 1 B. & A. 218; S. P. Burrough v. Moss, 10 B. & C. 558.

Defendant, who carried on business on his own account, and in partnership, gave a general power of attorney to his wife and partners to act for him and in his name, and to his use, and to indorse bills, and generally to act for him while abroad. He gave another power to his wife alone, to act for him and on his behalf, and to pay and accept such bills as should be drawn by his agents and correspondents as occasion should require. One of the partners drew a bill on defendant for money to supply the partnership concerns, defendant having received while abroad money on the partnership account, and the wife accepted the bill for her husband:—Held, 1st, that the partner could not be called defendant's agent; and therefore, that the wife had not power to accept the bill. 2dly, That she had not power to accept a bill for partnership transactions, but only bills on his account. Attwood v. Munnings, 1 M. & R. 66; 7 B. & C. 278.

A married woman, separated from her husband, and having a separate maintenance, renders the same liable by accepting a bill. Stuart v. Kirkwell (Viscount), 3 Madd. 387.

5. Joint or several.

A note, beginning, "I promise to pay," &c. and signed by two parties, is joint and several. Clerk v. Blackstock, Holt, 474—Bayley: S. P. March v. Ward, Peake, 130.

A member of a country bank signing for himself and partners notes beginning with the words, "I promise to pay," was held to make himself severally liable. Hall v. Smith, 2 D. & R. 584; 1 B. & C. 407.

But if A., B., and C., are in partnership, and A. draws a note, by which he promises individually to pay the money, and which he signs with his own name only, but prefixing to his signature "for A., B., & C.," this binds the whole partnership. Galway (Lord) v. Matthew, 10 East, 264; 1 Camp. 403. And see Mason v. Ramsey, 1 Camp. 284.

A note in these words, "I, J. C., promise to pay J. F., or his order, 50*l.*, with interest, at six months' notice," dated, &c., (signed) "J. C., or else H. B.," is no note as against H. B. Ferny. Bond, 4 B. & A. 679; Bayl. Bills, 13.

A bill, drawn in this form—"pay to our order," &c. signed in the name of two persons, and Co., and accepted by defendant, may be declared upon by the indorsees as a bill drawn by an aggregate firm; and if it be proved that the firm consists of only one person, yet it is not a variance. Bass v. Clive, 4 M. & S. 13; 4 Camp. 78. And see S. C. 3 M. & S. 283.

A note which appears on the face of it to be the separate note of A. only, cannot be declared on as the joint note of A. and B., though given to secure a debt for which A. and B. were jointly liable. Siffin v. Walker, 2 Camp. 308—Ellenborough: S. P. Emley v. Lye, 15 East, 7.

A declaration that the defendant and another made their note, by which they jointly or severally promised to pay, is good. Rees v. Abbott, Cowp. 832.

In an action against one of the several makers of a joint note, or one of several drawers of a joint bill, if it be stated as a several one made by one alone, the objection can only be taken by a plea in abatement. Evans v. Lewis, Bayl. Bills, 307; 1 B. & A. 226; 1 Phil. Evid. 199.

If a bill be drawn by two, payable to "us or our order," and subscribed by both, though not in partnership, they make themselves partners by the form of the bill, to the effect of making an indorsement by one of them valid. Carrick v. Vickery, 2 Dougl. 653, n.

But a universal usage of merchants and bankers may render such an indorsement void. Id.

In an action by indorsee against acceptor of a bill, payable to two persons not partners, and, when accepted, indorsed by one of those persons in the name of both—it was held that the defendant could not dispute the regularity of this indorsement. Jones v. Radford, 1 Camp. 83, n.—Ellenborough.

The non-joinder of one of two joint drawers of a bill, is no variance in an action by an indorsee against the other. Wilson v. Reddall, Gow, 161—Dallas.

When the plaintiff, on a joint and several note, declares against the defendants jointly, and they sever in their pleas, and one of them by his plea admits his handwriting to the note, and the other pleads non-assumpsit; at the trial, the plaintiff must prove the handwriting of all. Gray v. Palmers, 1 Esp. 135—Kenyon.

Where, in an action against the drawer, who had pleaded non-assumpsit, it appeared that the bill was drawn by him and another jointly:—Held, to be no variance. Germain v. Frederick, 1 Phil. Evid. 199; Bayl. Bills, 307; 2 B. & A. 226.

Where a declaration stated a bill to be drawn upon and accepted by three persons, and it was proved to have been drawn upon and accepted by the three jointly with a fourth:—Held, that this was no variance. Mountstephen v. Brooke, 1 B. & A. 224.

Where the parties intended that a promissory note should be joint and several; but, through ignorance, it was expressed to be joint only, a court of equity would not relieve. Rawstone v. Parr, 3 Russ. 424.

But where a joint note, signed "J. and J. E., J. P., surety," was given to a creditor of the firm of J. and J. E., and J. P. died; and J. and J. E. being both alive, one of whom afterwards became bankrupt, and the other insolvent:—Held, that the note must be considered as joint against J. P., the surety. Id.

A court of equity will reform an instrument which, by the mistake of the drawer, admits of a construction inconsistent with the true agreement of the parties, although the party seeking to reform it, himself drew the instrument. Ball v. Story, 1 Sim. & Stu. 210.

When a person signs a note on a representation that others are to join, and one afterwards refuses to sign, the payee cannot recover against the person who signed it, unless the jury are satisfied that such person, knowing the facts, and being aware of his rights, had consented to waive his objection. Leaf v. Gibbs, 4 C. & P. 466—Tindal.

Where two persons were joint agents of the Royal Veteran Battalion, but were not otherwise connected in business, and were in the habit of accepting bills by means of a clerk, in this form, "for agents of the R. V. B., J. G.," it was held to be no answer to a joint action against them by the indorsee of such a bill, to show that it was accepted for the private advantage of one without the knowledge of the other, although it appeared that the indorsee might, if he had inquired of the clerk who accepted it, have ascertained that such was the fact. Sanderson v. Brookbank, 4 C. & P. 286—Tindal.

II. FORM AND OPERATION.

1. Payable at all events.

Contingency.—By 3 & 4 Anne, c. 9 s. 1 (made perpetual by 7 Anne, c. 25, s. 3,) promissory notes are put on the same footing in all respects as bills of exchange.

A bill or note payable on a contingency, is absolutely void. Palmer v. Pratt, 9 Moore, 358; 2 Bing. 185.

An order for the payment of a sum of money on a contingency, is not a note within the statute of Anne. Carlos v. Fancourt, (in error) 5 T. R. 482.

Nor a bill. Id.

Even though accepted by the drawee. Ralli v. Sarell, D. & R. N. P. C. 33—Abbott. And see Sproule v. Legge, 2 D. & R. 15; 1 B. & C. 16; 3 Stark. 156.

But a note given to pay 8*l.* on receipt of prize money, is a good negotiable note within the statute. Evans v. Underwood, 1 Wils. 262.

A note given to an infant payable when he shall come of age, is good if it specify the particular day. Goss v. Nelson, 1 Burr. 226; 1 Ld. Ken. 498.

An order or promise to pay money, "provided the terms mentioned in certain letters written by the drawer were complied with," is not a bill or note. Kingston v. Long, Bayl. Bills, 13; 4 Dougl. 9.

An instrument by which a man promised to pay a sum of money if his brother did not pay it within a specified time, was held not to be a note on account of the contingency. Appleby v. Bidulph, Bayl. Bills, 13.

So, a note in the name of two, but signed by one only, promising to pay "on the death of G. H., provided he leaves either of us sufficient to pay the said sum, or if we shall be otherwise able to pay," is not a negotiable note. Roberts v. Peake, 1 Burr. 323.

A note to pay when the circumstances of the drawer will admit, without detriment to himself or family, creates no debt. Ex parte Tootell, 4 Ves. jun. 372.

An instrument by which money was made payable on a contingency, cannot be given in evidence as a promissory note, on the counts for money lent, or on the account stated, though sued on between the original parties, and expressing value to have been received. Morgan v. Jones, 1 Tyr. 21; 1 C. & J. 162. And see Blanckenhagen v. Blundell, 2 B. & A. 417.

Particular Fund.—A bill or note, drawn on a particular fund, and not payable generally, is not valid. Dawkes v. Deloraine (Earl), 2 W. Black. 782; 3 Wils. 207.

An instrument in this form, "out of my half pay, which will become due the 1st of January, pay to Stevens 15l.," and addressed to a navy agent, is not a bill: Stevens v. Hill, 5 Esp. 247—Ellenborough.

So, a note, promising to pay "on the sale or produce, immediately when sold, of the White Hart, St. Alban's, Herts, and the goods, &c., value received," cannot be declared upon as a promissory note within the statute, though it be averred that before the action commenced the White Hart and the goods were sold. Hill v. Halford (in error,) 2 B. & P. 413.

L. being indebted to plaintiff, and about to sell his property by auction, gave an order in writing signed by him and addressed to defendant (the auctioneer,) "to pay to plaintiff, out of the produce of the sale of his goods and furniture, 200l., and interest from the 23d of June last, due to plaintiff on warrant of attorney; and also 110l. due to plaintiff for goods sold, for which several sums the receipt of plaintiff was to be defendant's discharge:"—Held, that this order required an inland bill stamp. Emly v. Collins, 6 M. & S. 144.

But where A., being indebted to B., and B. to C., B. by letter requested A. to pay C. the balance due to him (B.) and stated that C.'s receipt should be a sufficient discharge:—Held, that this was not a bill of exchange, or requiring a stamp as such within the 55 Geo. 3, c. 184. Crowfoot v. Gurney, 2 M. & Scott, 473.

An instrument, by which A. promises to pay to the bearer 50l., "being the portion of a value, as under, deposited in security for the payment thereof," may be declared upon as a promissory note. Haussoullier v. Hartsinck, 7 T. R. 733. And see Collis v. Emmett, 1 H. Black. 313.

An order or promise to pay money "in good East India bonds," or "in cash or Bank of England notes," is in neither case a bill or note. Anon. Bull. N. P. 272; Bayl. Bills, 7; S. P. Ex parte Imeson, Bayl. Bills, 7; 2 Rose, 225; Rex v. Wilcox, Bayl. Bills, 8; Ex parte Davison, Buck, 31.

Definite Sum.—An instrument, by which a party promised to pay 65l., "and also all other sums which may be due," is too indefinite to be a note within the statute. Smith v. Nightingale, 2 Stark. 375—Ellenborough.

A note payable to the representatives of J. S., three months after his decease, "first deducting thereout any interest or money which J. S. might owe the defendant on any account," is a note for the payment of a definite sum at all events, within the statute. Barlow v. Broadhurst, 4 Moore, 471.

And such note may be given in evidence in an action brought by the representatives of J. S. against the defendant, on an account stated between him and J. S., although it was improperly stamped as a note. Id.

Where a testatrix gave to the plaintiff a note to pay him or order "on demand, the sum of 100l. for value received and his kindness to me," with a verbal engagement on the part of the plaintiff, that the note should not be demanded until after her death:—Held, that it did not operate by way of testamentary disposition; nor was it void on the ground that it was a fraud on the legacy duty, that duty never having attached upon it, and there being nothing to show that the amount passed by way of a donatio causa mortis. Woodbridge v. Spooner, 1 Chit. 661.

A. having given his daughter, on her marriage, the stock of a public house, amounting in value to 1200l., she and her husband signed the following instrument:—"On demand, we promise to pay to A. or his order for value received in stock, &c., this being intended to stand against me, M. (the daughter,) as a set-off for that sum left me in my father's will above my sister Ann's share:"—Held, that this was not a promissory note. Clarke v. Percival, 2 B. & Adol. 661.

Certainty of Payee.—A bill or note payable to the order of a person is payable to himself, Sheldon v. Occarson, Bayl. Bills, 329; S. P. Smith v. McClure, 5 East, 476; 2 Smith, 43.

And a note payable to A. without the words "or bearer," "or order," is a valid note within the statute. Smith v. Kendall, 6 T. R. 123; 1 Esp. 231.

A note, whereby the maker promised to pay to A. or to B. and C. a sum therein specified, value received, is not a promissory note within the meaning of the statute of Anne. An action cannot be maintained at common law upon such an instrument, even by the payee against the maker, although it is stated on the face of the note to be given for value received. Blanchenhagen v. Blundell, 2 B. & A. 417. And see Morgan v. Jones, 1 Tyr. 21; 1 C. & J. 162.

But a note of this tenor, "on demand we promise to pay Mesdames S. W. and S. D. stewardesses for the time being of the Provident Daughters' Society, held at Mr. Pope's, the Hope, Smithfield, or their successors in office, 64l., with 5 per cent. interest for the same, value received, this 7th day of February, 1815, for F. C.," is within the stat. 2 Geo. 2, c. 25. Rex v. Bar, 6 Taunt. 325.

Proof of a note payable to A. B. generally, is prima facie evidence of a promise to A. B. the father, and not A. B. the son, the names being the same; and A. B. the son, although styled in the declaration A. B. the younger, bringing the action, and being in the possession of the note, is entitled to recover upon it. Sweeting v. Fowler, 1 Stark. 106—Bayley.

2. Acknowledgments merely.

An instrument in the following terms, "Received of Mr. D. B. 100l. which I promise to pay on demand, with lawful interest. J. D." is a note. Green v. Davis, 6 D. & R. 306; 4 B. & C. 235; 1 C. & P. 451. And see Butts v. Smart, 2 B. & B. 78; 4 Moore, 484.

An instrument, acknowledging the receipt of drafts for the payment of money, and promising to repay the money, is a special agreement, and not a promissory note. Williamson v. Bennett, 2 Camp. 417—Ellenborough.

So, an acknowledgment of having received the acceptance of a bill of exchange, is a receipt for money, and not a promissory note. Scholey v. Walsby, Peake, 24—Kenyon.

An "I O U" is neither a promissory note nor a receipt, and may be received in evidence to prove an acknowledgment of a debt, without any stamp. Childers v. Boulnois, D. & R. N. P. C. 8—Abbott: S. P. Fisher v. Leslie, 1 Esp. 426. But see Guy v. Harris, Bayl. Bills, 8.

A paper in these words, "Mr. L., please to let the bearer have 7*l*. and place it to my account, and you will oblige your humble servant, R. S." is not a bill of exchange. Little v. Slackford, M. & M. 171—Tenterden.

A written paper containing a bare acknowledgment of a debt, is good evidence under the money counts without a stamp. Israel v. Israel, 1 Camp. 499—Ellenborough: S. P. Fisher v. Leslie, 1 Esp. 426.

A document in the following form, "I have this day received a bill of exchange, which I hold as your attorney, to recover the value from the parties, or to make such other arrangement for your benefit as may appear to me in my professional capacity reasonable and proper:"—Held to be a mere acknowledgment of the duty which the party took upon himself to perform, and therefore admissible in evidence without a stamp. Longdon v. Wilson, 7 B. & C. 640; 2 M. & R. 10.

A paper stating that the party signing it has received certain bills in his hands, which he has "to get discounted, or return on demand," does not require an agreement stamp. Mullett v. Hutchison, 1 M. & R. 522; 7 B. & C. 639; 3 C. & P. 92.

An acknowledgment in this form, "Sept. 15, 1824, Mr. T. has left in my hands 200*l*. J. A." does not require a stamp. Tompkins v. Ashby, 6 B. & C. 541; 9 D. & R. 543; S. C. not S. P. M. & M. 32.

A document in this form, "Received of A. B. 150*l*., which I promise to pay on demand with interest," is a promissory note and requires to be stamped as such. Ashby v. Ashby, 3 M. & P. 186.

An instrument whereby the plaintiff acknowledges a loan of money, and promises repayment, and engages to pay an unliquidated demand out of the interest, and to pay the principal and the remainder of the interest to the lender, his executors, administrators, and assigns, is not a promissory note, and it is properly stamped with an agreement stamp. Bolton v. Dugdale, 1 Nev. & M. 412.

3. Ambiguous as Bills or Notes.

If it be ambiguous whether an instrument be a bill or a note, the person who receives it may treat it as against the maker as either. Edis v. Bury, 6 B. & C. 433; 9 D. & R. 492; 2 C. & P. 559.

An instrument which is in the form of a note, but which is in addition addressed to a third party, who accepts it, is a promissory note. Id.

VOL. I.

8 L

And may be declared on as such. Block v. Bell, 1 M. & Rob. 149—Lyndhurst.

An instrument in the common form of a bill, except that the word "at," is substituted for "to," before the name of the drawee, is a bill, and not a note. Shuttleworth v. Stephens, 1 Camp. 407—Ellenborough.

But semble, that it may be treated as either by the holder. Id.

Particularly where "at" is written so as to be scarcely legible, for the purpose of deceit. Allan v. Mawson, 4 Camp. 115 & Gibbs.

It is not absolutely essential that the drawee's name should be mentioned on the bill by the drawer, if there be a place of payment fixed, and the drawee accept the bill in such form, by writing thereon his name, which will be an adoption of the bill on his part. Gray v. Milner, 3 Moore, 90; 8 Taunt. 739; 2 Stark. 336.

4. Qualifying Stipulations.

A stipulation indorsed on a note by the payee, is not to be taken as part of that instrument, without evidence that it was written at the time the note was made. Stone v. Metcalfe, 4 Camp. 217; 1 Stark. 53—Ellenborough.

A note promising to pay J. F. or order a sum certain, the amount of the purchase money of a quantity of fir belonging to H., with an indorsement thereon at the time of making the note, that it was given on condition that it should be void if any dispute should arise between H. and W. respecting the fir, was held not to be a promissory note within stat. 3 & 4 Ann. c. 9. Hartley v. Wilkinson, 4 M. & S. 25; 1 Camp. 137.

The words, "accepted on myself, payable every where," written in the margin of a note payable at a specified time after sight by the maker at the time of making it, constitute no part of the original instrument, and need not be noticed in the declaration. Splitgerber v. Kohn, 1 Stark. 125—Ellenborough.

An instrument in the common form of a joint and several note, signed by three persons, is indorsed with a memorandum made at the time of signature, which states that it is taken as a security for all the balances, to the amount of the sum within specified, which one of the three might happen to owe to the payee, that it shall be in force for six months, and that no money shall be liable to be called for sooner in any case. In an action against one of the sureties, the payee cannot declare upon this instrument as a promissory note payable either on demand, or at six months after date. Between these parties the instrument is an agreement, and must be stamped and declared upon as such. Leeds v. Lancashire, 2 Camp. 205—Ellenborough.

5. Fictitious Payees.

A bill payable to a fictitious person or order is completely void. Bennett v. Farnell, 1 Camp. 130—Ellenborough.

The indorsee of a bill payable to a fictitious payee cannot recover against the acceptor. Id.

Such a bill is not a bill payable to bearer. Were v. Taylor, 1 Camp. 131 cited.

Where a bill was drawn by defendant and others, on the defendant alone, in favour of a fictitious person, (which was known to all the parties concerned in drawing the bill,) and the defendant received the value of it from the second indorser:—it was held, that a bona fide holder for a valuable consideration might recover the amount of it, in an action against the acceptor, for money paid, or money had and received. Tutlock v. Harris, 3 T. R. 174.

Quere, if a bill so drawn is not, in its legal operation, payable to bearer? Vere v. Lewis, 3 T. R. 188.

If a bill be drawn in favour of a fictitious payee, and that circumstance be known as well to the acceptor as the drawer, and the name of such payee be indorsed on the bill as indorsing it to the drawer, who indorses it to an innocent indorsee, for a valuable consideration, the latter may recover on it against the acceptor, as on a bill payable to bearer. Gibson v. Minet (in error), 1 H. Black. 569; 3 T. R. 481. And see Collis v. Emmett, 1 H. Black. 313.

Perhaps also, in such case, the innocent indorsee might recover against the acceptor as on a bill payable to the order of the drawer, or on a count stating the special circumstances. Id.

A person discounting a bill payable to a fictitious payee, for the benefit of the drawers, and with knowledge of the transaction, cannot recover against the acceptor. Hunter v. Jeffery, Peake's Add. Cas. 146—Kenyon.

A. draws a bill upon B. payable to a fictitious payee or order, and indorsed in the name of such payee, which B. accepts. In an action by an innocent indorsee, for a valuable consideration, against B. on the bill, in order to draw an inference, either that B. at the time of his acceptance knew the name of the payee to be fictitious, or that B. had given an authority to A. to draw the bill in question, by having given a general authority to A. to draw bills on B. payable to fictitious persons, evidence is admissible of irregular and suspicious transactions and circumstances relating to other bills drawn by A. on B. payable to fictitious payees and accepted by B., though none of these transactions or circumstances have any efficient relation to the bill in question, and though none of them prove that B. accepted any of those other bills with a knowledge that the payees mentioned in them were fictitious. Gibson v. Hunter (in error), 6 Bro. P. C. 255; 2 H. Black. 228.

In an action by indorsee against acceptor of a bill payable to "A. or order," the defendant may give in evidence, that the person who indorsed to the plaintiff was not the real payee, though he be of the same name, and though there were no addition to the name of the payee on the bill. Mead v. Young, 4 T. R. 28.

Where a bill is drawn in the name of a fictitious person, payable to the order of the drawer, the acceptor is considered as undertaking to pay to the order of the person who signed as the drawer; and, therefore, an indorsee may bring evidence to show that the signatures of the supposed drawer to the bill and to the first indorsement are in the same hand-writing. Cooper v. Meyer, 10 B. & C. 469.

6. Other Points of Form.

It is not essential that a bill or note should import to be for value received. White v. Lednich, Bayl. Bills, 34; 4 Dougl. 247.

A bill in this form: "pay to T. G. B. or order, 315*l.* value received," and subscribed by the drawer, may be alleged to be a bill for value received by the drawer. Grant v. Da Costa, 3 M. & S. 351.

A bill drawn by J. S. to his own order, value received, means value received by the drawee; and if it be alleged in the declaration to be for value received by the said J. S. it is a variance. Higmore v. Primrose, 5 M. & S. 65; 2 Chitt. 333.

A declaration by the payee against the maker of a note payable to the order of the payee for "value received," generally, is not disproved by evidence of a note payable to the plaintiff's order for "value received in Mrs. L.'s estate." Bond v. Stockdale, 7 D. & R. 140.

An order or promise to pay so many "pound," instead of "pounds," is a bill or note. Rex v. Post, Bayl. Bills, 8.

A bill for twenty-five, seventeen shillings and three pence, is a bill for twenty-five pounds, seventeen shillings and three pence, and may be declared on as such. Phipps v. Tanner, 5 C. & P. 488—Tindal.

The word "sterling," in a bill, must be taken to mean sterling in that part of the kingdom where payable. Taylor v. Booth, 1 C. & P. 286—Best.

In the case of a note in these words, "borrowed of J. S. 10*l.* which I promise not to pay," it was held that the word "not," might be rejected, as a man could not be allowed to say, I am a cheat, and have defrauded. Russell v. Lanstaffe, and Peach v. Kay, Bayl. Bills, 6.

A note payable on demand, with interest until paid, is not to be considered as payable immediately. Gascoyne v. Smith, M'Clel. & Y. 338.

A note payable with interest twelve months after notice, which is expressed to be for value received, may be proved under a commission of bankruptcy against the maker, before any notice has been given. Clayton v. Gosling, 5 B. & C. 360.

A bill payable at sight is not to be considered as a bill payable on demand. Anson v. Thomas, Bayl. Bills, 79: S. C. nom. Janson v. Thomas, 3 Dougl. 421.

An indorsee may recover against the acceptor of a bill dated on a Sunday, when there is no evidence that the bill was accepted on that day. Begbie v. Levy, 1 Tyr. 130; 1 C. & P. 180.

III. AMOUNT UNDER £5.

By 15 Geo. 3, c. 51, and 48 Geo. 3, c. 88, s. 2, all bills and notes for sums under 20s. are void.

By 17 Geo. 3, c. 30, s. 1, all negotiable promissory notes, bills, drafts, and undertakings in writing for 20s. and less than 5l., must specify the names and places of abode of the persons to whom they are payable; bear date before the time of drawing or issuing; be made payable within twenty-one days after date; and cannot be transferred or negotiated after the time limited for payment. Every indorsement thereof must be made before the expiration of the time limited for payment; must bear date at the time of making; and must specify the name and place of abode of the person to whom it is made: the signature both of the note and of every indorsement must be attested by one witness at least. A form is given to which they must conform; and all others are void.

By 7 Geo. 4, c. 6, s. 1, these regulations do not extend to bankers' notes under 5l. payable on demand.

Quære, whether a promissory note, by which the defendants jointly and severally promised to pay the plaintiff 4l. 16s. six months after date, is a negotiable or transferable note within the statute 17 Geo. 3, c. 30; or void, on the ground that it was not attested by a subscribing witness? Quarterman v. Green, 1 C. & P. 92—Hullock.

IV. STAMPS.

By 37 Geo. 3, c. 136, s. 5, bills or notes made after July, 1797, if on stamps of an equal or superior value, though on different denominations than the legal stamp, may be properly stamped on payment of the duty and a penalty.

By 55 Geo. 3, c. 184 s. 11, a penalty of 50l. is given for making, signing, or issuing, or accepting, or paying any bills, drafts, orders, or notes, without being duly stamped.

By s. 12, a penalty of 100l. is given for post dating.

By 1 Sched. inland bills, drafts, or orders to the bearer, or to order, either on demand or otherwise, are to have the following stamps.

Which notes may be reissued.

Promissory notes for the payment in any other manner than to the bearer on demand, but not exceeding two months after date or sixty days after sight, the same duty as tills.

A bill purporting to be payable two months after date, is properly stamped with the duty imposed on bills payable at two months after date, though it be issued before the day on which it bears date. Williamson v. Garratt, 2 Nev. & M. 49.

A note payable to bearer, generally, is in law payable on demand. Whitlock v. Underwood, 3 D. & R. 356; 2 B. & C. 157.

A note, whereby the maker promised to pay “W. or bearer, the sum of 40l., value received, with interest,” being, in law, a note payable on demand; a five shilling stamp is required to be affixed thereto by the 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, sched. 1, class 1. Id.

A promissory note for 11l. payable to A. B. on demand, was held to be a promissory note payable to bearer on demand, and required a stamp of two shillings. Keates v. Whieldon, 8 B. & C. 7.

A note payable to A. B. was held not to be a note payable to bearer. Cheetham v. Butler, K. B. Nov. 22, 1833, MS.

A note payable to A. B. or order, on demand, is within the second class of notes mentioned in the schedule, being a note payable in another manner than to bearer on demand, and not exceeding two months after date. Moyser v. Whitaker, 9 B. & C. 409; S. P. Ex parte Robinson, 1 Deac. & Chit. 275.

A note for 100l., payable to A. B. or order on demand, is subject only to a stamp of 3s. 6d. Armitage v. Berry, 5 Bing. 501; 3 M. & P. 211.

It is distinguishable from a note payable to bearer on demand, which may be reissued after payment. Id.

A note for 11l. 10s. made payable “on demand to the bearer, with interest, for value received,” requires a 2s. stamp by 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, sched. 1. East v. —, 2 M. & R. 8.

A bill payable at sight, was not a bill payable on demand, within the exception in 23 Geo. 3, c.

49. Janson v. Thomas, 3 Dougl. 421 : S. C. nom. Anson v. Thomas, Bayl. Bills, 79.

The value of a stamp on a bill under 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, sched. 1, tit. Bills of Exchange, depends on the date on the face of the bill. Peacock v. Murrell, 2 Stark. 558—Abbott.

A bill drawn on the 21st of December, for 30*l.*, payable at two month after date, on a 2*s.* stamp, and altered on the same day, before acceptance, to the 31st of December, does not require a 2*s.* 6*d.* stamp, within the statute 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, the word date, as used in that statute, meaning the period of payment expressed on the face of the bill. Upston v. Marshall, 3 D. & R. 198; 2 B. & C. 10.

A note for the payment of 30*l.* at three months after date, with interest from the date, only requires a stamp applicable to a note not exceeding 30*l.* Pruessing v. Ing, 4 B. & A. 204.

A note payable two months after sight requires a stamp appropriated to a note payable more than sixty days after sight, or two months after date, as the two months begin to run not from the day of the date, but on the presentment for sight. Sturdy v. Henderson, 4 B. & A. 592.

A draft on a banker, post-dated and delivered before the day of the date, though not intended to be used till that day, required to be stamped by the stat. 31 Geo. 3, c. 25. Allen v. Keeses, 1 East, 435, 3 Esp. 281: S. P. Whitwell v. Bennett, 3 B. & P. 559.

An unstamped draft drawn on A. B., brick-layer, was not within the exception of 23 Geo. 3, c. 49, s. 4, in favour of drafts drawn on persons acting as bankers within ten miles of the place where the draft was drawn: if at the bottom of such a draft there be an acknowledgment of the drawee, that a third person paid for him, that acknowledgment cannot be received in evidence. Castleman v. Ray, 2 B. & P. 383. And see Rex v. Pooley, 3 B. & P. 311.

The proper stamp for a note of 45*l.* was 1*s.* 6*d.* composed of three different sums applicable to different funds, under three acts of parliament. But such a note on a 2*s.* stamp composed of three different sums applicable to the same funds, though in larger proportions to each than was required, was holden valid. Taylor v. Hague, 2 East, 414.

A note written upon a stamp of greater value than the proper stamp required, cannot be received in evidence, though the stamp was applicable to the same kind of instrument. Farr v. Price, 1 East, 55.

So a note drawn before the 37 Geo. 3, c. 136, upon a receipt stamp of equal value with that required for a promissory note, was not available in law. Chamberlain v. Porter, 1 N. R. 30.

A note written on a receipt stamp of the same amount as the necessary note stamp under the same stamp act, was admitted in evidence. Aitchison v. Sharland, 1 Esp. 292—Kenyon.

In an action on a note by an indorsee, the stamp appeared to be a 7*s.* deep stamp:—Held, at Nisi Prius, that the note could not be read, and the plaintiff was nonsuited. Manning v. Livie, Bayl. Bills, 454.

Though a note has not the proper stamp, so that it cannot be given in evidence, the plaintiff may go into evidence of the debt for which it was given. Wilson v. Kennedy, 1 Esp. 245—Kenyon. S. P. Brown v. Watts, 1 Tannt. 353.

A receipt for interest on the back of a note without a stamp, and which cannot therefore be given in evidence, is evidence to go to the jury, from which they may presume that, from the payment of so much for interest, there was a principal sum in proportion due. Manley v. Peel, 5 Esp. 121—Ellenborough.

It is no defence to an action at the suit of an indorsee of a note or bill, that it was not stamped at the time of making it, if it has a proper stamp when produced at the trial. Wright v. Riley, Peake, 173—Kenyon.

Although a promissory note without a stamp cannot be received in evidence as a security, or to prove the loan of money, it may be looked at by the jury with a view to ascertain a collateral fact. Gregory v. Fraser, 3 Camp. 454—Ellenborough.

An instrument, by which a party promises to pay the sum of 65*l.*, and also all such other sums as by reference to his books he owed to another, with interest, requires an agreement stamp. Smith v. Nightingale, 2 Stark. 375—Ellenborough.

A bill of exchange, expressing the terms of an agreement between a landlord and an in-coming tenant, is not admissible in evidence without an agreement stamp. Nicholson v. Smith, 3 Stark. 128—Abbott.

By the statute 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, sched. 1, orders for the payment of money out of any particular fund which may or may not be available, or upon any condition or contingency which may or may not be performed, are to be placed on the same footing as bills of exchange: therefore, a letter written from A. to B., requesting him to pay C. & Co., or their order, 600*l.* out of the first proceeds of a stock of gunpowder, then in the hands of B., and to charge the same to the account of A., although followed by a subsequent correspondence between the parties, was held to require a stamp, as an order for the payment of money within the provisions of that statute; and consequently, that an agreement stamp affixed on payment of a penalty was improper. Butts v. Swan, 4 Moore, 484; 2 B. & B. 78.

The consignor of goods sent to the consignee the following order: "Please to pay to N. on account of G. & Co. the proceeds of a shipment of 12 bales of goods, value about 2000*l.* consigned by me to you." The consignee, in a letter by way of answer, agreed so to do:—Held, that neither of these two instruments required such a stamp as the statute 48 Geo. 3, c. 149, and 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, impose on bills, drafts, or orders for the payment of money. Jones v. Simpton, 3 D. & R. 545; 2 B. & C. 318.

Where C. was directed by a letter from B. to pay out of the proceeds of his goods, then unsold, in his, C.'s hands a certain sum of money to D., which C. consented to do by letter to D., (which letter was stamped with an agreement stamp,) and these letters being given in evidence to prove that the money was paid by order of B.:—It was holden, that they did not amount to an agreement between B. and C., and, consequently, that the stamp was improper, and that the order itself for payment should be stamped, as being an order for the payment of money out of a fund, which might or might not be available, within the meaning of the stat. 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, sched. 1. Firbank v. Bell, 1 B. & A. 36.

Where B. drew a check at the place of his residence, a small house four miles from Llanelly, on unstamped paper, dated at Llanelly, upon a banker there, and delivered it to his farming bailiff to give to C., in whose favour it was drawn; and the bailiff discounted it with A., a banker at Carmarthen, twelve miles from Llanelly, and five days afterwards the drawee stopped payment, A. not having presented the check:—Held, that the check was not admissible in evidence, because void for want of a stamp. Waters v. Brogden, 1 Y. & J. 457.

V. MADE ABROAD.

It was once doubted whether notes made abroad were within the statute of Anne; but it was afterwards considered that they were. Carr v. Shaw, Bayl. Bills, 22. And see Pollard v. Herries, 3 B. & P. 335.

A note made in Scotland is within the statute of Anne, and may be sued upon in England by the indorsee against the maker. Milne v. Graham, 2 D. & R. 293; 1 B. & C. 192: S. P. Bentley v. Northouse, M. & M. 66.

And in another case where a note sued upon was made in Prussia, no objection was taken on that point. Splitgerber v. Kohn, 1 Stark. 125—Ellenborough.

Where the body of a bill is written, and the acceptance of it made in England; yet if it be afterwards transmitted to the drawer abroad for his signature, and it is there drawn, the bill is a foreign bill; and, consequently, does not require an English stamp. Boehm v. Campbell, Gow, 56—Dallas.

A., in Jamaica, draws a bill on B., in London, on a Jamaica stamp, leaving the payee's name in blank; C. gets possession of the bill, and inserts his own name as payee, without any other authority than a letter from B., promising to accept it; but having the address torn off, and containing nothing to show to whom it was addressed:—Held, that though the bill might not require an English stamp, the letter, had it been sufficient, being a separate contract, would require a stamp. Crutchley v. Mann, 1 Marsh. 29; 5 Taunt. 529.

In an action by the payee against the drawer of a bill, the declaration stated that the latter drew it "at St. Helena, to wit, at Westminster," and did not aver a protest either for non-acceptance or non-payment: on the production of the bill, it was dated at St. Helena, and not stamped: on an objection that it was inadmissible as an inland bill for want of such a stamp, and that the plaintiff had given no evidence of a protest for non-acceptance or non-payment:—Held, that as there was evidence of a subsequent promise by the defendant to pay the amount of the bill, coupled with a letter written by his attorney, offering terms for payment, it was a waiver of those objections, although such attorney swore that such offer was made without prejudice. Patterson v. Becher, 6 Moore, 319.

A bill drawn in Ireland upon a person in England is not an inland bill, and may therefore be accepted without writing on such bill, notwithstanding the stat. 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 78, s. 2. Mahoney v. Ashlin, 2 B. & Adol. 478.

Where partners resident in Ireland signed and indorsed a copperplate impression of a bill, leaving blanks for the date, sum, time when payable, and name of the drawee, and transmitted it to B., in England, for his use, who filled up the blanks and negotiated it:—Held, that this was to be considered a bill of exchange by relation, from the time of the signing and indorsing in Ireland, and consequently, that an English stamp was not necessary. Snaithe v. Mingay, 1 M. & S. 87.

A bill drawn in Ireland for 256l. 18s. sterling, payable in England, must be taken to mean English money. Taylor v. Booth, 1 C. & P. 286—Best.

A foreign bill is accepted for the payment of 100l. sterling: the omission of the word "sterling" is not a material variance. Glossop v. Jacob, 1 Stark. 69; 4 Camp. 227—Ellenborough.

The declaration stated that a bill was drawn and accepted at Dublin, to wit, at Westminster, for a certain sum therein mentioned, without alleging it to be at Dublin, in Ireland:—Held, that the bill upon this declaration must be taken to have been drawn in England for English money, and therefore proof of a bill drawn at Dublin, in Ireland, for the same sum in Irish money, which differed in value from English money, did not support the declaration, and that this was a fatal variance:—Held, also, the bill having been drawn for a certain sum sterling, that the omission of the word "sterling" in the declaration was immaterial. Kearney v. King, 2 B. & A. 301; 1 Chit. 28.

Where a declaration upon a note made in Ireland, alleged that it was made payable at No. 81, Dame-street, Dublin, for sterling money, without averring that Dublin was in Ireland, and that the money for which the note was given was Irish currency:—Held, to be insufficient, as the note must be taken to have been drawn in England, and for English money, and was not supported by proof that it was made payable at Dublin, in Ireland, and for Irish money. Sproule v. Legge, 2 D. & R. 15; 1 B. & C. 16; 3 Stark. 156.

To prove that a bill, purporting to be drawn abroad, was in point of fact drawn in England, and is therefore void for want of a stamp, it is not sufficient barely to show that the drawer was in England at the time the bill bears date. Abraham v. Du Bois, 4 Camp. 269—Ellenborough.

If an action be brought on a bill not having any English stamp, and purporting to be drawn at Paris, the defendant will be entitled to a verdict, if it appear from the evidence that the plaintiff must have been in England on the day on which it purports to have been drawn; but it will be sufficient to enable the plaintiff to recover, if the bill was drawn at a place in France nearer to England than Paris, though it be dated as from Paris. Bire v. Moreau, 2 C. & P. 376—Abbott.

If a promissory note made in Scotland be sued upon in this country, and there is any difference in the law of the two countries as to the liability of the defendant, it lies upon the latter to prove such difference. Brown v. Gracey, D. & R. N. P. C. 41, n.—Abbott.

A holder may recover in an English court on a bill drawn in France on a French stamp, though, in consequence of its not being in the form required by the French code, he had failed in an action which he brought on it in France. Wyne v. Jackson, 2 Russ. 351.

Quære, whether the property in a promissory note made in England, and payable to order or bearer, is transferable by indorsement or delivery in a foreign country? De La Chaumette v. Bank of England, 9 B. & C. 208.

A promissory note payable to the bearer, made in England, is by the statute of Anne transferable by delivery in a foreign country? De La Chaumette v. Bank of England, 2 B. & Adol. 385.

VI. ALTERATION.

1. When considered as issued.

An alteration of a bill or note, so as to make a new stamp necessary, is not material, until it is in the hands of some one who is entitled to claim payment, even though it is accepted and indorsed. Downes v. Richardson, 5 B. & A. 674; 1 D. & R. 332; Bayl. Bills, 94.

An accommodation bill is not issued until it is in the hands of some person who is entitled to treat it as a security available in law. Id.

An accommodation bill, payable to the drawer's own order, cannot be altered after acceptance and an attempt to negotiate it, though before it is actually negotiated. Calvert v. Roberts, 3 Camp. 343—Ellenborough.

One having made and signed a promissory note, handed it to a third person, the payee being present; but before it was given to the payee, it was altered by the consent of all parties:—Held, that this giving it to the third person was not an issuing of it, and that it did not require a new stamp. Sherington v. Jermyn, 3 C. & P. 374—Tenterden.

If accommodation acceptances be exchanged, after an alteration in the date, made with the consent of all parties, but without a fresh stamp, it is sufficient to render the bills invalid. Cardwell, v. Martin, 9 East, 190; 1 Camp. 79, 180.

A. and B. having exchanged their acceptances of bills drawn by each on the other at so many days' date:—Held, that the delivery of the respective bills for acceptance, and the redelivery of the same by the acceptors to the respective drawers, was a negotiation of the bills; and that such bills could not after they had been so exchanged for valuable consideration (as the exchange of acceptance is) for twenty days, be post-dated without a new stamp, as upon new bills; although during all that time, each had remained in the hands of the original drawer. Id.

Before it is negotiated, an instrument altered from a note to a bill, is valid without a fresh stamp. Webber v. Maddocks, 3 Camp. 1—Ellenborough.

Where a promissory note had been altered without having a new stamp, it was held evidence of the terms on which the money had been originally lent. Sutton v. Toomer, 7 B. & C. 416; 1 M. & R. 125.

2. What a material Alteration.

Generally.]—To make a bill or note void, the alteration must be in a material part, as in the sum or date. Trapp v. Spearman, 3 Esp. 57—Kenyon.

And if it be altered in any material part, after it has been once issued, though with the consent of all parties, it requires a new stamp. Wilson v. Justice, Bayl. Bills, 89; Peake's Add. Cas. 96.

But the insertion of words in a bill which do not affect the responsibility of the parties will not vitiate it. Marson v. Petit, 1 Camp. 82, n.—Ellenborough.

Where the bill was originally addressed "Messrs. J. C. & Co." but the words "& Co." were obliterated, and the word "and" inserted, so that the address was "Messrs. J. and C.," and it did not appear when the alteration was made:—Held, immaterial, though made after acceptance, as it made no difference in the liability of the parties. Farquhar v. Southey, M. & M. 14; 2 C. & P. 497—Littledale.

So an alteration by the payee by making the bill payable at a particular place, after it had been accepted, and whilst it remained in his hands, was held immaterial. Jacobs v. Hart, 6 M. & S. 142; 2 Stark. 45.

A bill of exchange was drawn by mistake, as dated on the corresponding day of the preceding month, instead of the day when drawn, and carried by the payee to the defendant for acceptance, who accepted it, noticing the mistake; afterwards the payee, upon communication with the drawer, altered the date to the day when drawn, and acquainted defendant with what he had done, who approved of the same; before the bill was negotiated, defendant, at the request of the payee that he would make it payable in London, added to his acceptance the words "payable at Mr. A. Isaacs, St. Mary-Axe, London:"—Held, that a new stamp was not required on account of either of these alterations. Id.

A bill drawn by A., payable to his own order, and accepted by B. generally, was altered with the consent of B. while it continued in the hands of A., by the addition of a particular place of payment to the acceptance. This alteration does not vitiate the bill so as to prevent the acceptor from being liable on it. Stephens v. Lloyd, M. & M. 292—Tenterden.

A bill having been accepted generally, the drawer added the words, "payable at Mr. B's, Chiswell-street," without the consent or knowledge of the acceptor:—Held, a material alteration, and that it discharged the acceptor. Cowie v. Halsall, 4 B. & A. 197; 3 Stark. 36.

So also since the statute 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 78. Mackintosh v. Haydon, R. & M. 362—Abbott.

If an accommodation bill be drawn payable to "bearer," and after acceptance the words "or order" be added, the bill is not thereby vitiated, and it may be sued upon without any fresh stamp. Attwood v. Griffin, 2 C. & P. 368; R. & M. 425—Best.

Where the drawer of a bill, accepted payable at B. & Co.'s, after keeping it three or four years, indorsed it to plaintiff, erasing the name of B. & Co., and substituting E. & Co., without the knowledge of the acceptor, B. & Co. having failed since the acceptance:—Held, that plaintiff could not recover against the acceptor. Tidmarsh v. Grover, 1 M. & S. 735.

An acceptor may cancel his acceptance before he returns the bill. Cox v. Trey, 1 D. & R. 38; 5 B. & A. 474. But see Thornton v. Dick, 4 Esp. 270.

Where the words "or order" had been added by the drawer subsequently to his indorsement: it neither vitiates the bill, nor makes a new stamp necessary. Kershaw v. Cox, 2 Esp. 246—Le Blanc.

A note to pay 250*l.* and 3 per cent. interest, was, after several years, altered by consent of the parties to 2½ per cent.: Held, that it was thereby made void, but was evidence of the terms of the original loan. Sutton v. Toomer, 7 B. & C. 416; 1 M. & R. 125.

If a note be signed by A., and subsequently by B. as a security for A., unless such signature of B. is in virtue of a previous agreement, it will be void without an additional stamp. Clerk v. Blackstock, Holt, 474—Bayley.

A note for 100*l.* payable to the plaintiff, or order, and originally expressed to be for value received generally, being altered the next day, upon the suggestion of one of the parties, by the addition of the words "for the good-will of the lease and trade of Mr. F. K. deceased," requires a new stamp; such words being material, and not having been originally intended to be inserted, and omitted by mistake. Knill v. Williams, 10 East, 431.

When a joint note, signed by the directors of a joint stock company, was afterwards altered by the secretary into a joint and several note, without the knowledge or authority of the directors, of whom the defendant was one, and in answer to a letter from the holders, informing the defendant of the dishonour of the joint and separate note of himself and the other directors who were parties to it, he said that their letter should have his earliest attention:—Held, that this did not amount to an assent to the alteration of the note by the defendant, and that he was not bound thereby. Perring v. Hone, 12 Moore, 135; 4 Bing. 28.

Date and Time of Payment.—An alteration in the date of a bill, with the assent of the acceptor before its negotiation by the drawer, is not such a reissuing of the bill as to render a new stamp necessary. Leykariff v. Ashford, 12 Moore, 281.

Where the date has been altered after the bill is due, but before it is negotiated, it is invalid without a fresh stamp. Bowman v. Nicholl, 5 T. R. 537; 1 Esp. 81.

A bill is drawn on a proper stamp, dated 2d September, payable 21 days after date; it is afterwards altered, and made payable fifty-one days after date, and on the 30th September is again altered to twenty-one days after date, and the date is brought forward to the 14th September:—Held, that this is a distinct transaction from the first, and requires a new stamp, although the alterations are made with the consent of the acceptor before the bill is negotiated. Id.

An accommodation bill, altered in its date before negotiation, with the consent of the parties, does not require a new stamp; and therefore, if it be in the hands of a bona fide holder for a valuable consideration, the acceptor, who had assented to such alteration before the bill became due, cannot avail himself of such an objection. Downes v. Richardson, 1 D. & R. 332; 5 B. & A. 674; Bayl. Bills, 94.

The alteration of a bill by the drawee, after it has been drawn and indorsed, and before it is accepted, postponing the time of payment, vitiates the bill. Outhwaite v. Lantley, 4 Camp. 179—Ellenborough.

Where a bill indorsed by the drawer was left with the drawee, who, without the consent of the drawer, altered the date from 5th March to 15th March before he accepted it: the alteration rendered the bill void. Id.

Nor would the consent justify the alteration, with a view to the stamp laws, after the bill had been negotiated. Id.

But the bill altered in date, after acceptance, but before it was put into the indorsee's hands, was held good. Johnson v. Garnett, 2 Chit. 122.

So, an alteration of the date after acceptance, whereby the payment would be accelerated, avoids the instrument; and no action can be afterwards brought upon it, even by an innocent holder for a valuable consideration. Master v. Miller, 4 T. & R. 320. Affirmed in the Exchequer Chamber, 2 H. Black. 141; 1 Anst. 225; 5 T. R. 367.

But though a bill be altered by the drawer after acceptance, with the consent of the payee, but without the actual assent of the acceptor, and which alteration makes the bill payable twenty days later, yet the acceptor is liable if it appear to be an accommodation bill, and the acceptor have agreed to accept any bill drawn by the drawer, which is strong presumptive evidence that the latter was sufficiently the agent of the acceptor to make the alteration. Johnson v. Gibb, 2 Chit. 123; Bayl. Bills, 42.

A bill which, after delivery by the drawer to the payee, is post-dated by the son of the payee at the acceptor's request, without any communication with the drawer, is void. Walter v. Hastings, 2 Chit. 121; 1 Stark. 215; 4 Camp. 223.

And semble, that if the drawer had assented, a new stamp would have been necessary. Id.

If, upon a bill being presented for acceptance, the drawee alters it as to the time of payment, and accepts it so altered, he vacates the bill as against the drawer and indorsers; but if the holder acquiesce in such alteration and acceptance, it is a good bill as between the holder and acceptor. Patton v. Winter, 1 Taunt. 420.

And the holder cannot afterwards maintain an action on the case against the acceptor for thereby destroying the bill. Id.

In assumpsit by the indorsee of a bill against the acceptor, where after acceptance the word "date" had been inserted in the place of "sight," in which form it had originally been drawn:—Held, that the acceptor being thereby discharged, the plaintiff could not recover at all; for, as the defendant was liable only by virtue of the instrument, that being vitiated, his liability was at an end. Long v. Moore, 3 Esp. 155, n.—Kenyon.

A bill drawn on the 1st of August at two months, by A. on B., payable to the order of the drawer, and accepted and redelivered by B. as a security for a debt, and kept by A. for twenty days, cannot be altered in its legal effect by bringing forward the date to the 21st, without a new stamp; though by the consent of the acceptor, and before indorsement and delivery to a third person; the alteration not being made to correct a mistake in the original form of the bill, which was drawn conformably to the original intention of the parties, and available in that form. Bathe v. Taylor, 15 East, 412. And see Cole v. Parkin, 12 East, 471.

Where a bill was dated, by mistake, in January, 1822, instead of January, 1823, and the agent of the drawer and acceptor, to whom it had been given to be delivered to the indorsee, corrected the mistake, by altering the figure 2 into a 3, without their knowledge or consent:—Held that such alteration did not vacate the bill. Brutt v. Picard, R. & M. 37—Abbott.

On a bill in which four months is substituted for three, by the assent of the drawer, a new stamp is not requisite. Kennerly v. Nash, 1 Stark. 452—Ellenborough.

3. Proof of Circumstances.

Where a party sues on an instrument which, on the face of it, appears to have been altered, it is for him to show that the alteration has not been improperly made. Henman v. Dickinson, 5 Bing. 183; 2 M. & P. 289.

In an action on a bill or note, if it appear on inspection to have been altered, it lies on the plaintiff to show that the alteration took place under such circumstances as will entitle him to recover. Bishop v. Chambre, 3 C. & P. 55; M. & M. 116—Tenterden.

And if the plaintiff gives no account of the note, it is for the jury to say if an alteration was made after the completion of the instrument. Id.

In an action by the indorsee against the acceptor of a note, the date of which appears to have been altered by the acceptor, it lies on the plaintiff to show that the alteration was made before the first indorsement; if not proved to have been made before acceptance, the bill of course would be void for want of a new stamp. Johnson v. Marlborough, (Duke,) 2 Stark. 313—Abbott.

In an action on a bill, where the defence is, that the bill has been altered, the defendant cannot go into evidence to show that other bills have been likewise altered. Thompson v. Mozely, 5 C. & P. 501—Lyndhurst.

On the day before an acceptance becomes due, the name of the acceptor was erased, and a renewed bill was indorsed on the back, but no new stamp was affixed:—Held, that the jury could not look at the indorsement for the purpose of ascertaining whether the acceptance was struck out with the drawer's assent. Sweeting v. Hale, 4 M. & R. 287; 9 B. & C. 365.

VII. TRANSFER.

1. To what extent negotiable.

An indorsement written on a note with a blacklead-pencil instead of ink, is a writing in law, and gives the indorsee a right to recover upon the note in a court of law. Geary v. Thysie, 7 D. & R. 653; 5 B. & C. 234.

The indorser is bound by his indorsement, though the bill is bad. Ex parte Clarke, 3 Bro. C. C. 238.

A bill is negotiable ad infinitum until it has been paid by, or discharged on behalf of the acceptor. Callow v. Lawrence, 3 M. & S. 95—Ellenborough.

If a bill is paid and afterwards indorsed before it becomes due, it is a valid instrument in the hands of a bona fide indorsee. Burbridge v. Manners, 3 Camp. 194—Ellenborough.

A bill which has been paid by the drawer in default of payment by the acceptor, may afterwards be reissued by the drawer, and the acceptor will be still liable to pay it. Hubbard v. Jackson, 1 M. & P. 11; 4 Bing. 390; 3 C. & P. 134.

In such case, if an action be brought against the acceptor by the indorsee of the drawer, the acceptor cannot inquire into the state of the accounts between the indorsee and drawer, nor will the state of such accounts furnish him with any defence. Id.

A bill or note cannot be indorsed or negotiated after it has been once paid, if such indorsement or negotiation would make any of the parties liable who would otherwise be discharged. Beck v. Robley, Bayl. Bills, 125; 1 H. Black. 89, n.

The drawer of a bill payable to his own order, after settling with the acceptor, and giving him a receipt in full of all demands, cannot, afterwards, by indorsing the bill, give a title against the acceptor. Thoregood v. Clarke, 2 Stark. 251—Ellenborough.

B. paid to C. a note drawn by A., payable to B. or order, and afterwards took it up, and paid to C. the value, and paid it to C. the second time, and then failed: Held, that C. might bring an action against A. the drawer. Serra v. Berkley, 1 Wils. 46.

A having declared on a note against B., made by C. to A., and by him indorsed to B., and by him again indorsed to A., and having obtained a verdict, the judgment was arrested. Bishop v. Hayward, 4 T. R. 470.

A bill was drawn by A., and accepted by B., for the purpose of being discounted, and having the proceeds applied in the payment of other bills accepted by B., but the other bills, before they became due, were paid by B., who directed A. to hold the first-mentioned bill for his, B.'s use, and not to part with it without his authority: A. however, for his own purposes, indorsed it to C., for a valuable consideration, having first informed the latter that it belonged to B., and that he, A., had no authority to part with it:—Held, that the property in the bill was in B., the acceptor, and that he might, under these circumstances, maintain trover for the bill against C. Evans v. Kymer, 1 B. & Adol. 528.

A bill or note payable to bearer is negotiable like other bills. Grant v. Vaughan, 1 W. Black. 485; 3 Burr. 1516.

A foreign note is transferable in England by an indorsement by virtue of 3 & 4 Anne, c. 9. Bentley v. Northhouse, M. & M. 66—Tenterden. S. P. Miln v. Graham, 1 B. & C. 192; 2 D. & R. 293.

An injunction will lie to restrain the negotiating of bills or notes void at their creation. Lloyd v. Gurdon, 2 Swana. 180.

If the payee of a note prove that part has been paid before indorsement, but that the plaintiff, on indorsing, had no notice of such payment, he is entitled to recover the full amount. Cooper v. Davies, 1 Esp. 463—Kenyon.

When a check is given on a verbal condition which the holder expresses his intention to elude, the drawer may resist the payment. Wienholt v. Spitta, 3 Camp. 376—Ellenborough.

2. When issued in blank.

A bill or note with a blank for the payee's name is not a legal instrument until filled up. Rex v. Randall, Bayl. Bills, 31.

A bill drawn, and issued in blank for the name of the payee, may be filled up by a bona fide holder, with his own name, and it will bind the drawer. Crutchley v. Clarence, 2 M. & S. 90. And see Attwood v. Rattenbury, 6 Moore, 579.

If he can show that he came regularly to the possession of it. Crutchley v. Mann, 2 Marsh. 29; 5 Taunt. 529.

A., in Jamaica, draws a bill on B., in London, on a Jamaica stamp, leaving the payee's name in blank. C. gets possession of the bill, and inserts his own name as payee, without any other authority than a letter from B. promising to accept it, but having the address torn off, and containing nothing to show to whom it was addressed:—Held, that this was not evidence to show that C. was the payee of the bill. Id.

If a bona fide holder of a bill, accepted, payable to — or order, insert his own name as payee, and indorse the same, the bill may be declared on in that form. Attwood v. Griffin, R. & M. 425; 2 C. & P. 368—Best.

An indorsement written on a blank note or check, will afterwards bind the indorser for any sum and time of payment, which the person to whom he intrusts the note chooses to insert in it. Russel v. Langstaffe, 2 Dougl. 514.

So, where an indorsement is in blank, the holder may over-write what he pleases. Edie v. E. L. Comp. 2 Burr. 1216; 1 W. Black. 297.

Where A. draws a bill on B., payable to his own order, to enable him by accepting it and passing it away, to raise money, and sends it to him with his name indorsed in blank: quære, whether B. can restrain its general negotiability by inserting the words, "pay to C., or order," over the name of A. written on the back. Bland v. Ryan, Peake's Add. Cas. 39—Kenyon.

Where the payee of a bill indorses it in blank, and delivers it to B., and B. writes above A.'s indorsement, "pay the contents to C.," B. is not liable to C. as an indorser of the bill. Vincent v. Horlock, 1 Camp. 442—Ellenborough.

But after an indorsement by the payee in blank, no subsequent indorsee can restrain its negotiability by a special indorsement. Smith v. Clarke, Peake, 225; 1 Esp. 180—Kenyon. And see Peacock v. Rhodes, 2 Dougl. 611.

3. After Maturity.

By the general rule, any person receiving a negotiable instrument after it is due is deemed to have taken it upon the credit of the person from whom he received it, and subject to all the objections and equities to which it was liable in the hands of the person from whom he takes it. Taylor v. Mayther, Bayl. Bills, 118; 3 T. R. 83, n.: S. P. Banks v. Colwell, Bayl. Bills, 454.

The indorsee of an overdue note is liable in an action against the maker to all equities arising out of the note transaction itself, but not to a set-off in respect of a debt due from the indorser to the maker of the note arising out of collateral matters. Burrough v. Moss, 10 B. & C. 559.

Where a note has been indorsed to the plaintiff after it became due, who sues the maker upon it, the latter is entitled to go into evidence to show that the note was paid as between him and the original payee from whom the plaintiff received it. Brown v. Davies, 3 T. R. 80. But see Hubbard v. Jackson, 4 Bing. 390; 1 M. & P. 11; 3 C. & P. 134.

So, if the holder of a note, made without consideration, himself gave a full consideration for it, yet if he took it after it was due from an indorser who had given none, he cannot sue upon it. Tinson v. Francis, 1 Camp. 19—Ellenb.

Where the drawers of a banker's check issued it nine months after it bore date, upon a consideration which afterwards failed:—Held, that, as between them and the persons to whom they delivered it, they could not be permitted to object to this circumstance in an action brought by a subsequent holder for a valuable consideration and without notice. Boehm v. Stirling, 7 T. R. 423; 2 Esp. 575. And see Grant v. Vaughan, 3 Burr. 1516; 1 W. Black. 485.

Where one bill is substituted for another, it is subject to the same equities as the one in lieu of which it was given. Lee v. Zagury, 1 Moore, 556; 8 Taunt. 114.

The holder in America of two bills of the same tenor, having transmitted them to his agents here to present them for acceptance, and receive the money when due, and pay over a part of it to the plaintiff, while the bills so remained in his agent's hands, agreed with the defendant, the indorser, (who had lent his indorsement on each to the drawer, from whom the holder received them) that upon payment of one of the bills he should be exonerated from both. In the mean time, the bills having been presented for acceptance by the agents, were dishonoured; and after the dishonour, the agents, not knowing of such agreement between their principal and the indorser, assigned one of the dishonoured bills to the plaintiff, who was informed of the dishonour, and who received it liable to all its infirmities, but without notice of such agreement:—Held, that the bill so received by the plaintiff was bound by the agreement; and that the defendant, having afterwards taken up and discharged the other bill, which had remained in the hands of the same agents, was discharged from both. Crossley v. Ham, 13 East, 498.

Where two indorsements of the same party appeared on a bill, with an intermediate one of another person:—Held, that the first must be presumed to have been made before the bill became due. Fryer v. Brown, R. & M. 145—Abbott.

A banker's check, overdue, stands on the same footing as a bill or note put into circulation after its date has expired, and the holder must show title in his immediate payer before he can retain the proceeds. Down v. Halling, 6 D. & R. 455; 4 B. & C. 330; 2 C. & P. 11.

Where the defendant received, in payment of goods, a check which had been due five days, it was held, that he could have no better title than the party from whom he received it; and the plaintiff having shown the property in the check to have once been in himself, that it lay upon the defendant in such case to show that the party from whom he took it had a good title to it. Id.

Courts of equity have a concurrent jurisdiction with the courts of law in relieving against notes taken when overdue. Hodgson v. Murray, 2 Sim. 515.

Where it appeared by parol evidence that the holder had paid the balance remaining due on a bill to a previous holder after maturity, not on the account of the acceptor or drawer, but in order to acquire an interest in the bill as purchaser:—Held, that it might be indorsed, so as to give the indorsee all the rights which the previous holder had before the indorsement, and such indorsee might therefore recover from the drawer the balance unpaid by him. Graves v. Key, 3 B. & Adol. 313.

In an action by the indorsee of a bill, if the declaration states the indorsement to have been made before the bill became due, and it appears in evidence to have been made after the bill was due, this is not a material variance. Young v. Wright, 1 Camp. 139—Ellenborough.

4. After Death or Bankruptcy.

A note being handed over for valuable consideration, the indorsement is a form which the party is entitled to call for. Watkins v. Maule, 2 J. & W. 243.

A note, drawn for the accommodation of A., was transferred by him to B. & C., without indorsement, for valuable consideration, and afterwards he became bankrupt, and died intestate: Held, that B. & C. might recover against the drawer, the note having been indorsed, several years after it was due, by B. to B. and C., B. having for that purpose procured letters of administration to the effects of A. Id.

There is no difference between an indorsement of a note by the party and one of his personal representatives. Id.

The indorsee of a bill, made payable sixty-five days after date, which was issued by the drawer, and indorsed by the payee, who died before the day when it bore date, may make title through such indorsement to recover on the bill against the drawer. Pasmore v. North, 13 East, 517.

A note payable to A. or his order may be indorsed and assigned over by his administratrix; and the indorsee being plaintiff, need not make a profer in curiam of the letters of administration. Rawlinson v. Stone (in error,) 3 Wils. 1.

If a bill be remitted to two agents, payable to them personally, who on the death of the principal become his executors, the mere indorsement of one, after they are executors, in order to enable the other to receive the money, is not sufficient to charge him who does not receive it. Hovey v. Blakeman, 4 Ves. jun. 608.

Where an agent, having money in his hands belonging to his principal, bought a bill of exchange with it, which he indorsed specially to the latter, who was dead at the time of the indorsement, but of which circumstance the agent was ignorant:—Held, that the property in the bill passed to the administrator of the principal; and consequently, that he might sue on it in his character as such. Murray v. E. I. Company, 5 B. & A. 204.

In an action by an indorsee against acceptor, it is a good defence under the general issue, that the bill was indorsed after an act of bankruptcy committed by the indorser. Pinkerton v. Adams, 2 Esp. 611—Kenyon.

In an action by indorsee against acceptor, the latter cannot defend himself on the ground of the drawer's bankruptcy at the time of such indorsement. Arden v. Watkins, 3 East, 322. [The cases as to indorsement after bankruptcy are fully collected in tit. BANKRUPT.]

The debtor of an uncertificated bankrupt made a note payable to the bankrupt "or his order," in discharge of a debt contracted before the bankruptcy, who indorsed it for a bona fide debt to A., who indorsed it to B. for a valuable consideration; in an action by B.—Held, that such maker, by the terms of his note, was estopped from saying that the bankrupt had no authority to indorse. Drayton v. Dale, 3 D. & R. 534; 2 B. & C. 293.

Where one of two partners in trade had, after an act of bankruptcy, accepted a bill of exchange in the name of the firm, without the privity of his co-partner:—Held, that in the hands of an innocent indorsee it was an available security. Lacy v. Woolcott, 2 D. & R. 458.

5. Of Stolen or Lost Bills.

If a bill or note with a blank indorsement be stolen and negotiated, an innocent indorsee may recover upon it against the drawer. Peacock v. Rhodes, 2 Dougl. 633.

Where a bill has been lost, or fraudulently or feloniously obtained from the defendant, the holder who sues must prove that he came to the bill upon good consideration. Patterson v. Hardacre, 4 Taunt. 114.

But the defendant will not be permitted to object to the want of such proof, unless he has given the plaintiff reasonable previous notice, that the plaintiff may come to trial prepared to prove his consideration. Id.

Where a bill when lost had only a special indorsement upon it, it was held that the indorsee might recover at law without producing the bill. Long v. Bailie, 2 Camp. 214, n.—Ellenborough.

If a bill has been lost, and the loser has advertised it in the newspaper, and it is discounted for the person who found it, and so came fraudulently by it, this entitles the person discounting it to recover the amount, if done bona fide, and without notice of the way in which the holder became possessed of it. Lawson v. Weston, 4 Esp. 56—Kenyon. This case is doubted in Gill v. Cubitt, next case.

A bill broker cannot recover against the acceptor of a bill indorsed generally, if he discounted it under circumstances which ought to have excited suspicion in his mind at the time: he ought in such a case, to act with care, and a reasonable degree of caution. Gill v. Cubitt, 5 D. & R. 324; 3 B. & C. 466; 1 C. & P. 163, 487.

In an action, by the owner of a lost bill against a banker, who had cashed it to a stranger, held, that the jury were properly directed to consider whether the plaintiff had used due diligence in apprizing the public of his loss, and whether the defendant had acted with good faith and sufficient caution in the receipt of the bill. Beckwith v. Corall, 3 Bing. 444; 2 C. & P. 261.

A tradesman, having in the course of business received a banker's check, which had been stolen from the payee, and given the difference to a stranger, who presented it in payment of an article purchased, brought assumpsit against the drawer for the amount:—Held, in the absence of fraud and negligence on his part, that the action was maintainable. Lee v. Newsom, 2 D. & R. N. P. C. 50—Abbott. And see Down v. Halling, 6 D. & R. 455; 4 B. & C. 330; 2 C. & P. 11.

A bank note for 1000*l.* dated 12th October, 1820, was lost in London, in April, 1821, and in June 1822, was presented for change to a money broker in Liverpool, by a person with whom the latter was well acquainted, but who was then in pecuniary difficulties, and he changed it by giving bills, which had some time to run, and cash, deducting a commission, without asking any questions how the holder became possessed of it:—Held, in an action of trover by the true owner against the money broker, that it was for the jury to say whether the defendant had received the note fairly and bona fide in the ordinary course of business, and had given full value for it; and the jury having found for the plaintiff, the court refused to disturb the verdict. Egan v. Threlfall, 5 D. & R. 326.

A trader in London took a bill in part payment for goods, of a person representing himself to be a tradesman from the country, and to have been recommended by a customer; and sent the goods, in consequence of an order from the buyer to a public house, which was not a booking-office, without making any inquiries except as to the respectability of the acceptor. The bill turned out to have been stolen, and in an action by the trader against the acceptor, the defendant had a verdict, on the ground that the plaintiff had taken the bill out of the ordinary course of trade, and under circumstances which ought to have excited suspicion. Slater v. West, 3 C. & P. 325—Tenterden.

6. Conditional or qualified.

Quære, whether a negotiable bill can by any words of restriction be rendered not negotiable? Edie v. E. I. Comp. 1 W. Black. 295; 2 Burr. 1216.

A bill payable to A. or order, and indorsed personally to B., may be afterwards indorsed by B. to another. Id.

A bill payable to order, and become negotiable, may be indorsed over, without the word order to the indorsement. Id.

A bill being drawn by A. on B., payable to C. or order, and indorsed by C. in these words—"the within must be credited to D., value in account," D. being indebted to B., and the bill being sent to B. and accepted by him; and he having given D. notice that he had received it, and placed it to C.'s account, this is such a special indorsement as restrains the negotiability of the bill. And if afterwards a forged indorsement, purporting to be by D., to pay to E. or order, is written upon it, and the bill is discounted, the person discounting it shall stand to the loss. Archer v. England (Bank), 2 Dougl. 697. And see Robertson v. Kensington, 4 Taunt. 20.

And if an agent of A. (B. having become insolvent) pay the money for A., and take up the bill, A. may recover back the money paid by his agent to the person who discounted it, in an action for money had and received. Id.

But where a bill was indorsed by the drawer in this form, "pay the contents to A. B., being part of the consideration in a certain deed of assignment, executed by the said A. B. to the indorsee and others," it is not a limited indorsement. Potts v. Reed, 6 Esp. 57—Ellenborough. And see Haussoullier v. Hartsinck, 7 T. R. 733.

"Pay to A. or his order for my use," is a restrictive indorsement; and the indorsee of A. must hold the proceeds to the use of the restricting indorser. Sigourney v. Lloyd, 8 B. & C. 622; 3 M. & R. 58; S. C. nom. Lloyd v. Sigourney, 3 M. & P. 229; 3 Y. & J. 220; 5 Bing. 525.

A special indorsement does not transfer property in bills of exchange till delivery. Rex v. Lambton, 5 Price, 428.

The drawer and payee of a bill, after it became due, indorsed it to B., on condition that he would take up bills discounted by the payee: B. did not take them up, but transferred the bill to C.:—Held, that he might recover against the acceptor. Wright v. Hay, 2 Stark. 398—Abbott.

If a defendant, having promised to pay over to the plaintiff the amount of a bill delivered to him to get discounted, pay it away in discharge of a debt of his own; he is liable to the plaintiff as having discounted the bill. Oughton v. West, 2 Stark. 321—Ellenborough.

Bills are drawn on the 12th May, by a house in London, on a house in Lisbon, payable thirty days after sight, and indorsed to A. in London. A. indorses them, without any qualification, to B. at Paris; B. without presenting them for acceptance, puts them in circulation, and on the 22d August, they are presented at Lisbon for acceptance, and dishonoured. In an action by B. against A.:—Held, that A. was bound by his unqualified indorsement, and could not offer evidence to show that he was acting merely as B.'s agent. Goupy v. Harden, 2 Marsh. 454; 7 Taunt. 159; Holt, 342.

There is a distinction between the discount and deposit of bills, depending not on the mere fact of indorsement, but the intention to make an absolute transfer, giving full power to go against all parties on the bills, or merely to enable the person with whom they are deposited to receive the amount from the other parties. Ex parte Tweed, 19 Ves. jun. 229.

Indorsement is prima facie evidence of the former, unless the object of mere deposit is clearly shown. Id.

A bill remitted, indorsed merely to enable the person receiving it to raise money to meet future advances, is, while retained, a mere deposit applicable to the demands of the remitter, subject to the right under the indorsement of constituting a third person a creditor, by negotiating it. Id.

Where the plaintiffs had drawn a bill on J. S., which he accepted, and they indorsed it to the defendant, who reindorsed it to the plaintiffs, in pursuance of an agreement (without consideration) that he should do so, as a security for the payment of it by the acceptor, and for the purpose of rendering the bill more negotiable: on demurrer to a declaration against the defendant upon the bill, in the usual form, containing an averment, that, at the time of the drawing of the bill, and of the indorsement by the defendant to the plaintiffs, it had been agreed between them that the name of the defendant should be indorsed on the bill as a security to the plaintiffs for the due payment thereof by the acceptor, and that the bill was so indorsed by the defendant under such agreement, and for such purpose only; and that the plaintiffs took and received the bill in satisfaction of such debt of the acceptor, upon the faith that the defendant would indorse the same as such security, and that the indorsement by the plaintiffs was made without any consideration, and for the purpose only, of procuring the indorsement of the defendant, and making the bill negotiable, and an averment that the bill was presented to the acceptor, and that he refused to pay it; that notice of such refusal was given to the defendant, and he thereby became liable to pay, and being so liable, promised accordingly:—Held, that the declaration was bad, as, if the action was founded on the bill, the plaintiffs could only recover according to the custom of merchants, and that by such custom, they, as indorsers and drawers, would be liable to pay its amount to the defendant; and that if the action could be considered as founded on the special contract, it could not be maintained, as there was no consideration for the defendant's indorsement. Britain v. Webb, 3 D. & R. 650; 2 B. & C. 483.

7. Proof of Indorsement.

An indorsement upon a bill or note is prima facie evidence of money lent by the indorsee to the indorser. Kessebower v. Times, Bayl. Bills, 288.

Semble, that a subsequent indorsement of a bill by a holder, does not imply a warranty by him that a former indorsement is genuine. E. I. Comp. v. Tritton, 5 D. & R. 214; 3 B. & C. 280.

If the payee of a bill deliver it, with his name indorsed on it, to another, no proof is required of the handwriting of the indorsement. Glover v. Thompson, R. & M. 403—Abbott.

In an action against the indorser of a bill, it is not necessary to prove any indorsements on the bill prior to the defendant's. Critchlow v. Parry, 2 Camp. 182—Ellenborough.

In an action by the indorsee of a bill, where several indorsements have taken place, which are laid in the declaration, though necessary to be proved in general; yet if the defendant apply for time to the holder, and offer terms, it is an admission of the holder's title, and a waiver of proof of all the indorsements except the first. Besanquet v. Anderson, 6 Esp. 43—Ellenborough.

In an action against the maker of a note payable to A. B. or bearer, if the declaration state that A. B. indorsed it to the plaintiff, this in-indorsement must be proved. Waynam v. Bend, 1 Camp. 175—Ellenborough.

The acceptance of a bill admits merely the drawing, but not the indorsement of the drawer. Therefore, if a bill be drawn and indorsed by procuration, in an action by the indorsees against the acceptor, the indorsement by procuration must be proved. Robinson v. Yarrow, 1 Moore, 150; 7 Taunt. 455. And see Macferson v. Thoytes, Peake, 20.

In an action by bankers to recover the amount of a bill accepted by the defendant, payable at their house, and paid by them after it was indorsed, they are bound to prove the indorsement by the payee, as well as the acceptance by the defendant. Forster v. Clements, 2 Camp. 17—Ellenb. And see Mead v. Young, 4 T. R. 28.

Where a foreign bill was drawn by A. upon, and accepted by B., payable to the order of C., and a person representing himself to be C. indorsed the bill to D. for value, and the alleged indorsement turned out to be forged:—Held, that in an action by indorsee against acceptor, it was unnecessary to give positive proof of the identity of the indorser, as the person to whom the bill was really payable; prima facie evidence being sufficient for that purpose. Bulkeley v. Butler (in error,) 3 D. & R. 625; 2 B. & C. 434.

A declaration by indorsee against acceptor, averred that the bill had been indorsed to certain persons trading under the firm of H. & F.; and that they had indorsed the bill by procuration of one J. D. to C., from whom the plaintiff derived title: it appeared in evidence that the firm of H. & F. had ceased to exist for ten years prior to the indorsement, but that a new firm of H. & Co. had been established; and that D., one of the members thereof, was in the habit of indorsing bills by procuration in the name of H. & F., but that all other transactions in trade were carried on in the name of H. & Co. only;—Held, that as between an innocent indorsee and the acceptor there was sufficient evidence to satisfy the allegation in the declaration. Williamson v. Johnson, 2 D. & R. 281; 1 B. & C. 146.

In an action against acceptor, it is necessary to prove the hand-writing of the first indorser, notwithstanding such indorsement was on the bill at the time it was accepted. Smith v. Chester, 1 T. R. 654; S. P. Cooper v. Lindo, 1 Selw. N. P. 380.

An indorsement on a bill of exchange, not stated in the declaration, may be struck out after the bill has been read in evidence, and after one objection has been made on account of the variance. Mayer v. Jadis, 1 M. & Rob. 247—Denman.

Although a bill has been shown to the drawer, with the name of the payee indorsed upon it, and he merely objects to paying it because he had drawn it, without consideration; in an action against him by the indorsee, this does not dispense with regular proof of the indorsement: Duncan v. Scott, 1 Camp. 101—Ellenborough.

In an action on a note by the indorsee against the maker, notice of the indorsement need not be averred. Reynolds v. Davies (in error,) 1 B. & P. 625.

So, in a declaration by indorsee against acceptor, it is unnecessary to aver notice of the indorsement. Heald v. Johnson, 2 Smith, 44.

8. Without Indorsement.

A promissory note given as a security for a debt passes to the crown by act and operation of law, upon an inquisition before a coroner, and verdict of felo de se upon the body of the payee and holder. Lambe v. Taylor, 6 D. & R. 188; 4 B. & C. 138.

So it passes by grant from the crown, under the sign manual, to the grantee, without indorsement. Id.

A mere discount of a bill, without the indorsement of the party who receives the money, does not give the holder of the bill any claim against such party. Ex parte Roberts, 2 Cox, 171.

A. employs B. to get bills, which he had not indorsed, discounted for him; B., in order to effect the discounting, indorses them:—Held, that A.'s estate must relieve B.'s from the liability incurred by the indorsement. Ex parte Robinson, Buck, 113.

A note payable on demand with interest, drawn by A. in favour of B. as a security for a debt, was by him indorsed to C. for the same purpose; after the indorsement, it passed backwards and forwards between B. and C. several times, and previous to its being ultimately deposited with C. he received an intimation from B. not to negotiate it, as he should want it when he settled accounts with A.:—Held, that C. could not, after a settlement of accounts between A. and B., without a delivery of the note, recover on it against A. Roberts v. Eden, 1 B. & P. 398.

If the holder of a bill receive from the drawer a second bill to get discounted, in order to provide for the first, there is a sufficient transfer to him of the second, to enable him to retain the proceeds. Walsh v. Tyler, 2 Stark. 288—Ellenb.

Where a party discounts bills with a banker, and receives in part of the discount other bills, not indorsed by the banker, which bills turn out to be bad, the banker is not liable. Fyddell v. Clarke 1 Esp. 447—Kenyon.

J. S. drew a bill on the defendant (which the latter accepted for the accommodation of the former,) and indorsed it to the plaintiff as his agent, in which character the plaintiff paid it away on account of the drawer, for wine contracted to be purchased for him. Subsequently the wine contract being rescinded, the holder of the bill refused to give it up until he had been paid a sum of 150*l.*, which he alleged to be due to him from the drawer. The plaintiff engaged to pay it, received the bill, and sued the defendant as the acceptor:—Held, that he was not entitled to recover, although it was insisted that he had a lien on it to the amount he had promised to pay to the holder on its being delivered up to him. Hallett v. Davis, 1 M. & P. 79.

Where A. deposits with B. a banker, a pro-

ure. Dufaur v. Orenden, 1 M. & Rob. 114.

can be liable as acceptor but the person the bill is addressed, unless he be for honour. Polhill v. Walter, 3 B. 114.

person other than the drawee write an acceptance upon the bill in the usual form, he is liable as an acceptor, but must be sued on the general undertaking. Jackson v. Hudson, 447—Ellenborough.

fore, where a bill was drawn in the following form: "London, two months after date, by order 1571. for value received. F. To Mr. I. Irving," and accepted by him and afterwards specially by Hudson:—that Hudson was not liable as acceptor, drawn, payable to plaintiff's order in London, and accepted payable there, is a general acceptance within the statute. Fayle v. Bird, C. 531; 9 D. & R. 639; 2 C. & P. 303.

three persons undertake to accept bills in particular concern, and the drawer draws an account of one of them only, which he signs in the name of the three, a bona fide holder who received it from the drawer cannot sue against the other two. Williams v. Thorne, Esp. 18—Ellenborough. But see Ridley v. East, 13 East, 182.

(b) Acceptance in Blank.

Acceptance in blank is sufficient to charge the acceptor, where the bill is afterwards drawn in pursuance of his authority. The 1 & 2 Geo. 2, s. 2, does affect such acceptances. Leslie v. Hastings, 1 M. & Rob. 119—Lyndhurst.

An action by indorsee against acceptor, with objection that the acceptance actually took effect before the drawer's name was signed, although the declaration be in the usual form, is not good, the bill being drawn, the defendant admits it was accepted, and that the transaction was according to the custom of merchants; and it is unnecessary to offer any evidence to show the custom of merchants so to transact bills. Molloy v. Delves, 7 Bing. 428; 5 M. & C. & P. 492.

Irving signed his name to a blank paper stamped, and delivered it to B. for the purpose of drawing a bill in such a manner as B. thought fit. B. drew a bill payable to a fictitious payee or order, and indorsed it over for a consideration to C., who was ignorant of the transaction between A. and the indorser:—that C. might maintain an action against the drawer of a bill payable to bearer, on a bill drawn to that effect. Collis v. Emmett, 1 H. Black.

in a count stating the special circumstances. Id.

(c) Keeping Bill.

In those cases to which the stat. 1 & 2 Geo. 4, s. 2, does not apply, the drawees keeping a bill which is presented to him for acceptance may amount to such. Harvey v. Martin, Bayl. Bills, 149; 1 Camp. 525, n.

Where a bill is sent for acceptance to the drawee, and he retains it in his possession contrary to the usual mode of dealing between himself and the drawee, it amounts to an acceptance. Id.

Quere, whether in any case the mere detention of a bill for an unreasonable time, by the drawee, with whom it is left for acceptance, in point of law amounts to an acceptance. Mason v. Barff, 2 B. & A. 26.

In that case, the vendor of goods had been in the habit of drawing bills in payment upon the vendee, and discounting the same with bankers, by whom the bills were transmitted by post for acceptance; the vendee cautioned the bankers to inquire, when they discounted any such bills, whether the goods for which such bills were respectively drawn had been delivered, and the carrier's receipt sent, and assured them that, in that case, they would be accepted; the bankers afterwards discounted a bill, and transmitted the same for acceptance to the vendee, who detained it in his possession for ten days, and then informed the bankers that he could not accept the bill, as the invoice of the goods had not been delivered; and after a further interval of sixteen days, the bankers having made no objection to his detaining the bill, returned the same; the vendor having then stopped payment, without delivering the goods, or sending the carrier's receipt:—Held, that the drawee of the bill was not liable as acceptor. Id.

Where an acceptance of a bill was refused by the defendant, but it remained afterwards for a considerable space of time in his hands, and was ultimately destroyed by him:—Held, by three justices, diss. Lord Ellenborough, C. J., that the defendant was not thereby liable as acceptor of the bill. Jeune v. Ward, 1 B. & A. 653; 2 Stark. 326.

(d) By Letter.

A letter, undertaking to accept bills, was held to be an acceptance. Ex parte Dyer, 6 Ves. jun. 9.

And a letter from the drawees of a bill in England, to the drawer in America, stating that "their prospect of security being so much improved, they should accept or certainly pay the bill," was held to be an acceptance in law, although the drawees had before refused to accept the bill when presented for acceptance by the holder, who resided in England; and again after the writing such letter, refused payment of it when presented for payment; and although such letter, written before, was not received by the drawer in America till after the bill became due. Wayne v. Raikes, 5 East, 514; 2 Smith, 98.

But where the drawer of a bill wrote to the drawee, stating that he had valued on him for the amount, and added "which please to honour," to which the drawee answered, "the bill shall have attention:—"Held, that these words were ambiguous, and did not amount to an acceptance of the bill, inasmuch as although an acceptance may be made by letter to a drawer, still that can only be so where the terms of the letter do not admit of doubt. Rees v. Warwick, 2 B. & A. 113; 2 Stark. 411.

A., in consideration of having commissioned B. to receive certain African bills payable to him, drew a bill upon B. for the amount payable to his own order; B. acknowledged by letter the receipt of the list of the African bills, and assured A. that the bill would meet with due honour from him:—Held, that this was an acceptance by B. Clarke v. Cock, 4 East, 57.

(e) Undertaking to accept.

An answer received at the house of the drawee, "that the bill would be taken up when due," does not amount to an acceptance, unless it can be shown that the answer was given by the drawee or by his authority. Sayer v. Kitchen, 1 Esp. 209—Kenyon.

A mere promise by a debtor to his creditor, that if he would draw a bill upon him at a certain date for the amount of his demand, he should then have the money and would pay it, does not amount to an acceptance of the bill when drawn; and an indorsee for a valuable consideration, between whom and the drawee no communication passed at the time of his taking the bill, can neither recover upon a count upon the bill as accepted, nor on the general counts for money had and received, &c. Johnson v. Collings, 1 East, 98.

Where the holders of a foreign bill presented it to the drawees for acceptance, which being refused, they protested it for non-acceptance, and afterwards, on the day when it became due, presented it to the drawees for payment, making a charge for the expenses for protesting it; to which the drawees said, "this bill will be paid, but we cannot allow you for a duplicate protest," when the holders refused to receive payment without the charges:—Held, that the drawees might revoke their offer to pay, for it did not amount to an acceptance of the bill by them. Anderson v. Heath, 4 M. & S. 303.

A promise to give notice to a party when he might draw a bill, amounts to an undertaking to accept the bill when drawn in pursuance thereof. Smith v. Brown, 2 Marsh. 41; 6 Taunt. 440.

Except the communication is to another than the party who is to receive the bill, and who is thereby induced to take it. Miln v. Prest, Holt. 181; 4 Camp. 393—Gibbs.

Bills having been drawn on the defendants by their agents, and with their authority, in respect of a mine which they afterwards transferred to A., they requested A. to place funds in their hands to meet the bills when due, saying, "it would be unpleasant to have bills drawn on them paid by another party." A. placed funds accordingly; but when the bills were left with defendants for acceptance, no acceptance was written on them. A's. agent having complained to one of the defendants on the subject, he said, "What! not accepted? we have had the money, and they ought to be paid; but I do not interfere in this business, you should see my partner:—Held, that all this amounted to a patrol acceptance of the bills, on which the defendants were liable to an indorsee, between whom and A. there was no privity; and that the indorsee was not precluded from suing by having made a protest in ignorance of this acceptance. Farlie v. Herring, 3 Bing. 625; 11 Moore, 520.

By a letter of credit, merchants in London agreed to accept at ninety days sight the drafts of a merchant at Demerara, on receiving invoices, bills of lading, &c. of certain colonial produce to be remitted; and added, that "on receiving these documents, and no irregularity appearing, they would accept his drafts at the usual date, to the extent of 30,000*l*." In pursuance of this agreement, two several cargoes were remitted in different ships, and shortly afterwards the consignor drew a bill at six months sight upon the credit of the cargoes remitted, and in the bill directed the same "to be charged to account as advised," without specifying to the account of which cargo it was to be placed, and the consignees refused to accept:—Held, that they were liable upon their agreement in damages for not accepting. Laing v. Barclay, 2 D. & R. 530; 1 B. & C. 398; 3 Stark. 38.

The words, "There is your bill, it is all right," are no acceptance. Powell v. Jones, 1 Esp. 17—Kenyon.

A mere acceptance without delivery to the holder is not sufficient to make the contract binding. Cox v. Troy, 1 D. & R. 38; 5 B. & A. 474.

A bill being presented by the indorsee to the drawee for acceptance, the latter on accepting it said, that he expected a remittance from the drawer in a few days, and that as he had a bill of the drawer in his hands, which would be paid, he would take all risks:—Held, that this conversation, together with the bill accepted by the drawee, did not amount to sufficient evidence to entitle the indorsee to recover against the drawee the amount of the bill accepted, on a count for money had and received. Whitwell v. Bennett, 3 B. & P. 559. And see Bishop v. Rowe, and Same v. Bailey, 3 M. & S. 362.

But a direction to a third person to pay a bill, was held to be prima facie a complete acceptance. Moor v. Whitby, Bayl. Bills, 142; Bull. N. P. 270.

Upon a request to A. to accept a bill, and draw upon B. for the like sum; the mere act of drawing upon B. does not amount to an acceptance. Smith v. Nissen, 1 T. R. 269.

8. Conditional or qualified.

A conditional acceptance of a bill is good. Ju- lian v. Sholrooke, 2 Will. 9.

A conditional acceptance is as effectual as an absolute one, if the condition be complied with. Miln v. Prest, Holt, 181; 4 Camp. 393—Gibbs.

If the drawee of a bill drawn on account of a cargo of wheat consigned to him, says, when presented, "it will not be accepted until the ship with the wheat arrives," on the arrival of the ship with the wheat, this amounts to an actual acceptance. Id.

So, if he says that he cannot accept till stores are paid for, it is an undertaking to accept when the stores are paid for. Pierson v. Dunlop, Cowp. 571.

Whether a conditional or an absolute acceptance, is a question of law. Sproat v. Matthews, 1 T. R. 182.

Where a bill was drawn upon A. residing in London, by a consignor of goods living abroad, and on its being presented to A., who said he could not then accept, because he did not know whether the ship would arrive at London or Bristol, B., the holder of the bill, agreed to leave it for some time, reserving the liberty of protesting it for non-acceptance, in case A. did not accept: on a second application A. said the bill would be paid even if the ship were lost:—Held, that this was only a conditional acceptance, depending on two events, the ship's arriving in London, or being lost: and that B., having the liberty of refusal, precluded himself from recovering against A., by afterwards noting the bill for non-acceptance. Id.

If A. accept a bill payable on condition to be performed by B., the performance of this condition by C. will not support an action by the holder of the bill against A. Swan v. Cox, 1 Marsh. 176. And see Harrison v. Hannel, 1 Marsh. 349; 5 Taunt. 780.

Where the drawee of a bill, who had once refused to accept it, said to the holder, "if you will send it to the counting-house again, I will give directions for its being accepted," he is not liable as acceptor, without evidence that the bill was so again sent back. Anderson v. Hick, 3 Camp. 179—Ellenborough.

An agreement to accept a bill on certain conditions, is discharged if the conditions are not complied with. Mason v. Hunt, 1 Dougl. 297.

If the payee of a bill annex a condition to his indorsement, the drawee, who afterwards accepts it, is bound by that condition; and if it is not performed, the property in the bill reverts to the payee, and he may recover the contents against the acceptor. Robertson v. Kensington, 4 Taunt. 30. And see Prevôt v. Abbott, 5 Taunt. 786.

If a person to whom a bill is directed generally, accept it, payable at a particular place, the holder need not receive such a qualified acceptance, but may resort to the drawer as for non-acceptance. Gammon v. Schmoll, 5 Taunt. 344; 1 Marsh. 80.

Because it amounts to a contract to pay at that particular place and no where else, and narrows the general liability of the acceptor. Id.

The holder of a bill may insist upon the drawee accepting it generally in the very words in which it is drawn, or may protest it for non-acceptance. Boehm v. Garcias, 1 Camp. 425, n.—Ellenborough. And see 7 East, 387.

And without considering whether a payment in the terms of the acceptance might not have satisfied the terms of the bill, the acceptance otherwise is not sufficient. Id.

Before the statute, a part acceptance was considered good. Julian v. Sholrooke, 2 Wills. 9.

9. Proof of.

The date of the acceptance of a bill payable after sight, over the defendant's acceptance, although in a different handwriting, will be presumed to have been written by his authority. Glossop v. Jacob, 4 Camp. 227; 1 Stark. 60—Ellenborough.

Although an acceptance is prima facie an admission of the handwriting of the drawer, in an action against the acceptor, it is not conclusive so as to prevent him from proving the contrary. Smith v. Sear, Bull. N. P. 270.

The acceptance of the drawee is prima facie evidence of his having effects of the drawer in his hands. Vere v. Lewis, 3 T. R. 182.

For every bill of exchange implies a command to the drawee to pay, and his acceptance is not only an admission of money or effects in his hands sufficient to pay, but is an undertaking by the acceptor, as well with respect to the drawer as the payee, to pay the bill. Perminter v. Symons (in error), 2 Bro. P. C. 43.

Where the acceptors of a bill are partners, and one partner accepts for the firm, his admission of his acceptance, although not evidence of the partnership against the others who appear and defend, will be good evidence of his acceptance as against the whole aggregate body. Hodenspyl v. Wingerhoed, 2 Phil. Evid. 26.

In an action against the drawers of a bill drawn by a firm upon one partner, if it is proved that the bill was accepted by the drawee, this is evidence of its having been regularly drawn. Porthouse v. Parker, 1 Camp. 82—Ellenborough.

In an action by a second indorsee against the drawer of a bill payable to his own order, proof that the bill purported to have been accepted when it was indorsed to the plaintiff, does not render it unnecessary to prove an actual acceptance. Smith v. Bellamy, 2 Stark. 223—Ellenb.

In an action against the acceptor of a bill, where defendant's attorney had given notice to the plaintiff to produce all papers relating to a bill described as the bill in question, and said to be "accepted by the said defendant:"—Held, that such notice was prima facie evidence of the defendant's acceptance. Hott v. Squire, R. & M. 282—Abbott.

Where a bill is by the acceptor made payable at a particular place, which is not his residence, proof of presentment at that place is not sufficient evidence of dishonour, in an action against the drawer, without proof of the acceptor's handwriting. Sedgwick v. Jager, 5 C. & P. 199—Parke.

The drawee (who was also payee) of a foreign bill drawn in three parts, accepted, and indorsed one part to a creditor, to remain in his hands until some other security was given for it; and afterwards accepted and indorsed another part for value to a third person. The acceptor substituted another security for the part first accepted, whereupon it was given up to him:—Held, that, under these circumstances, the holder of the part secondly accepted was entitled to recover on the bill against the acceptor, and that the bill being foreign did not require a stamp:—Held, also, by Lord Tenterden, C. J., and Parke, J., that the acceptor would have been liable on the part secondly accepted, even if the first part had been indorsed and circulated unconditionally. Holdsworth v. Hunter, 10 B. & C. 449.

10. Revocation and Cancelling

If the drawee of a bill has put his name on it as acceptor, he cannot afterwards, by erasing his name, discharge his acceptance. Thornton v. Dick, 4 Esp. 270—Ellenborough.

So, where a bill was left for acceptance, and accepted, but the acceptance was afterwards cut off, and the bill returned in that mutilated state: Held, that the acceptance being once made, it could not be revoked, and that the acceptor was still bound. Trimmer v. Oddie, Bayl. Bills. 161. Kenyon.

Quære, whether an acceptance of a bill once made by the drawee may be cancelled or recalled by him before the bill be delivered back to the holder; yet, if the acceptance be so cancelled, and the bill noted for non-acceptance, the holder cannot afterwards sue upon it as an acceptance. Bentinck v. Dorrien, 6 East, 199; 2 Smith, 337.

A bill of exchange having been accepted, payable at Ladbroke's, with a direction in writing on it, "in case of need to apply at Boldero's," and having been dishonoured when due at Ladbroke's, and therefore brought to Boldero, who, thinking that it had been made payable at his house, under that mistake cancelled the acceptance; but presently, observing the mistake, wrote under it, "cancelled by mistake," and signed his initials to it, yet nevertheless paid the bill for the honour of the plaintiffs, whose indorsement was on it:—Held, that the plaintiffs, on proof of such cancellation by mistake, might recover upon the bill against prior indorsors. Raper v. Birkbeck, 15 East, 17.

Where a bill was left for acceptance at the house of a banker, and was in fact, accepted; but, before delivery to the holder, the acceptance was cancelled:—Held, that the banker might so cancel his acceptance; and that, before delivery to the holder, the contract was not complete. Cox v. Troy, 1 D. & R. 38; 5 B. & A. 474. And see Paton v. Winter, 1 Taunt. 420.

By the usage of trade, a check may be returned by the banker on whom it is drawn till five in the afternoon of the day on which it is presented for payment; even although it has previously been cancelled by mistake. Fernandey v. Glynn, 1 Camp. 426, n.—Ellenborough.

The obligation of a complete acceptance may be waived. Whatley v. Tricker, 1 Camp. 35—Ellenborough.

Defendant, in discharge of a debt to plaintiff, indorsed bills to him, which had been drawn and indorsed to the defendant by parties in France, but were accepted by a person in this country, and payable at a banker's here; plaintiff indorsed them over. On their being presented for payment, the banker's clerk inadvertently cancelled the acceptances, but immediately wrote opposite to them "cancelled by mistake;" and the bills were not, however, paid, there being no effects. The holders then presented them at a house to which they were addressed in case of need, but that house refused payment in consequence of the cancelling; they would otherwise have honoured them. A reacceptance was obtained from the acceptor, but he did not pay the bills. The plaintiff then took them up and returned them, regularly protested, to the defendant, who applied to the prior indorsors for payment, but they refused. The defendant, who resided abroad, cited the drawers, the intermediate indorsors, and the plaintiff, before the Tribunal of Commerce at Lyons, for the purpose of obtaining a guarantee for himself against liability on the bills. That court adjudged him and the other parties, except the plaintiff, discharged from liability, and decreed that the bills should remain to the plaintiff's debit. The plaintiff then carried the cause to a court of appeal in France, which confirmed this decree, assigning as a reason that the cancelling of the acceptances operated as a suspension of legal remedies against the acceptor, and was equivalent to a delay granted him by the holders, with whom the plaintiff was identified, and, consequently, that the other parties to the bills were discharged; Held, that the French courts had mistaken the law of England as to the effect of the cancellation; and, therefore, that the defendant was still liable at the plaintiff's suit for the debt in respect of which the bills were given, notwithstanding the decree. Novelli v. Rossi, 2 B. & Adol. 757.

IX. PRESENTMENT FOR PAYMENT.

1. Necessity.

Although, on the day before a bill becomes due, the holder applies to the drawee, who informs him that he has no effects of the drawer's in his hands, but that they will probably be supplied before the next day, and on that day the drawer informs him that he will endeavour to provide effects, and will call upon him again, it does not supersede the necessity of a presentment on that day. Prideaux v. Collier, 2 Stark. 57—Ellenborough.

If the drawee goes abroad, leaving an agent in England, with power to accept bills, a bill so accepted must, when due, be presented to the agent for payment, if the drawee continue absent. Phillips v. Astling, 2 Taunt. 206.

An acceptance for honour is conditional only, and therefore presentment for payment must be made to the drawee at maturity; even in the case of a bill payable after sight. Williams v. Germaine, 7 B. & C. 468; 1 M. & R. 394.

An acceptor for the honour of the drawer of a bill originally accepted by the bankrupts having taken up the bill, ought, if the bankrupts had no effects in their hands, to resort first to the drawer. Ex parte Wackerbath, 5 Ves. jun. 574.

The acceptors of a foreign bill, who, after presentment to the drawees for acceptance, and refusal by them to accept, and protest for non-acceptance, accept the same for the honour of the first indorsors, are not liable on such acceptance, unless there has been a presentment of the bill to the drawees for payment, and a protest for non-payment. Hoare v. Cazenove, 16 East, 391.

An allegation in a declaration that a bill was presented for payment by I. S. does not render it incumbent on the plaintiff to show that a presentment by I. S. was made. The material allegation is the presentment, and by whom it was made is immaterial. Boehm v. Campbell, Gow, 55—Dallas.

2. At what Time.

By 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 42, bills and notes becoming due on Good Friday are to be payable, and may be noted and protested on the day preceding, in the same manner as bills and notes becoming due on Sunday or Christmas-day.

By 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 15, s. 2, the same regulation is made as regards proclamation days of fast and thanksgiving.

By s. 3, Good Friday, Christmas-day, and proclamation days of fast and thanksgiving, are to be considered, as to bills and notes, as in all respects as Sunday.

Three days' grace are allowed on promissory notes, as well as on bills of exchange; for 3 & 4 Ann. c. 9, puts them both on the same footing, in all respects. Brown v. Harraden, 4 T. R. 148. And see Ward v. Honeywood, 1 Dougl. 61.

Three days' grace are allowed on a promissory note payable to A., without adding, "or to his order," "or to bearer." Smith v. Kendall, 6 T. R. 123; 1 Esp. 231.

A presentment for payment on the day before the bill became due, allowing days of grace, is premature. Wiffen v. Roberts, 1 Esp. 261—Kenyon.

The three days' grace allowed by the custom of merchants are allowable on bills drawn and payable in Scotland, the limitation of an action on such a bill therefore only begins to run from the third or last day of grace. Ferguson v. Douglas, 6 Bro. P. C. 276.

At Hamburg, the holder of a bill is not bound to present it until the eleventh day after the time limited for its payment, where the eleventh day is a post day: if it is not, he must present it on the next preceding post day, unless the drawee reside at Lubec, or Bremen, or other places near Hamburg, which are in daily intercourse with it, in which case the holder need not present it until the eleventh day, although that day be not a post day. Goldsmith v. Shee, and Same v. Blund, Bayl. Bills, 199.

Quære, whether days of grace are allowed on bills payable at sight? Janson v. Thomas, 3

Dougl. 421; S. C. nom. Anson v. Thomas, Bayl. Bills, 79.

A bill payable after sight having been refused acceptance and protested, was accepted eight days after by a person for the honour of the drawer; when at maturity, according to that acceptance, it was presented for payment to the drawee and the acceptor for honour: in actions against the latter and the drawer, held, these presentments for payment were made at a proper time. Williams v. Germaine, 7 B. & C. 468; 1 M. & R. 394.

A bill, payable sixty days after sight, becomes due sixty days after acceptance, or after protest for non-acceptance. Campbell v. French (in error,) 6 T. R. 200; 2 H. Black. 163.

The holder of a bill or note is entitled to know on the very day the bill becomes due whether it is to be paid or dishonoured. Cocks v. Masterman, 4 M. & R. 676; 9 B. & C. 902.

Therefore, where the bankers of the drawee pay the amount to the holder on the day the bill becomes due, and on the following day discover the acceptance to be a forgery, and give the holder notice of the fact, they cannot recover back the amount from the holder. Id.

In the time for the presentment of a bill, the day of presentment is exclusive. Lester v. Garland, 15 Ves. jun. 254.

3. What are Laches.

If a man accept a note or draft of his debtor upon a third person, and hold it an unreasonable time before he demands the money, and the person upon whom it is drawn becomes insolvent, it is the creditor's own loss, although the note or draft be not a bill of exchange or negotiable. Chamberlyn v. Delarvie, 2 Wils. 353.

Where the plaintiff, in Yorkshire, on the 26th of December, received a bill payable in London, which became due on the 28th, and kept it in his own hands until the 29th, when he sent it by post to his bankers at Lincoln, who duly forwarded it to London for presentment, and the bill was dishonoured:—Held, that the plaintiff, by keeping it in his hands until the 29th, was guilty of laches. Anderton v. Beck, 16 East, 248.

A bill drawn on Leghorn was not presented in due time, owing to the political state of the country at that time, which rendered it impossible to present it:—Held, that it being afterwards presented for payment with due diligence, and refused for want of presentation at the time when it was due, the holder might recover against the antecedent parties; and evidence of this impossibility of presenting at the time of the maturity of the bill might be given on the ordinary averment that it was duly presented. Patience v. Townley, 2 Smith, 223.

Where a bill, payable on demand, is taken in payment for goods, it is not necessary to present it the same day on which it is received. Appleton v. Sweetapple, 3 Dougl. 137; Bayl. Bills, 192.

Semble, that reasonable time is a question of law. Id.

A check should be presented with due diligence to the bankers on whom drawn, but a banker in London who receives a check by the general post, is not bound to present it for payment until the following day. Rickford v. Ridge, 2 Camp. 537—Ellenborough.

By the practice of the London bankers, if one banker, who holds a check drawn on another banker, present it after four o'clock, if it is not then paid, but a mark is put on it, to show that the drawee has assets, and that it will be paid; checks so marked have a priority, and are exchanged or paid next day at noon, at the clearing house:—Held, that a check presented after four, and so marked, and carried to the clearing house next day, but not paid, no clerk from the drawee's house attending, need not be presented for payment at the banking house of the drawee. Robson v. Bennett, 2 Taunt. 388.

Such a marking under this practice amounts to an acceptance, payable next day at the clearing house. Id.

Neither is it necessary to present for payment a check payable on demand, till the day following the day on which it is given. Id.

A person receiving a check on a banker is equally justified in lodging it with his own banker to obtain payment, as he would be in paying it away in the course of trade. Id.

The holder of a check is bound to present it for payment on the day following that on which he receives it; but if he pay it to his bankers before the time at which the bankers, by presenting it at the clearing house, might obtain payment of the same, the drawer is not discharged by their omitting so to present it, although, according to the custom of London, it may be imperative upon the bankers, as between them and their customers, so to present it. Boddington v. Schlencker, 1 Nev. & M. 541.

The holder of a banker's note, payable at two places, has a right to present it at either, and if payment be refused at one, there are no laches if it be proved, that, if payment had been demanded at the other, which was more convenient, the note would have been paid. Beeching v. Gower, Holt, 313—Gibbs.

The not presenting a draft upon the same day on which it is received is not laches. Medcalf v. Hall, 3 Dougl. 113.

Where a note was given in London at one o'clock, and not presented till next morning, the jury held it unreasonable, against the opinion of the court. Appleton v. Sweetapple, Bayl. Bills, 192; 3 Dougl. 137: S. P. contra, Williams v. Smith, 2 B. & A. 496.

Where a servant received on behalf of his master, in payment of goods sold, country bank notes, at one o'clock on Friday afternoon, and paid them to his master after banking-hours on Saturday evening, and between three and four in the afternoon of Saturday the bank stopped payment:—Held, that there was no laches in not presenting the notes before the bank stopped on the Saturday. James v. Holditch, 8 D. & R. 40.

4. Within what Hours.

The holder of a bill accepted, payable at a banker's, impliedly agrees to present it for payment within the usual banking hours. Parker v. Gordon, 7 East, 385; 3 Smith, 358; 6 Esp. 41: S. P. Jameson v. Swinton, 2 Taunt. 224; 2 Camp. 373.

Overruling a former case, in which it was held, that the court would not take notice of banking hours. Lefley v. Mills, 4 T. R. 170.

But the presentment of a bill after the usual hours, is sufficient, provided there be somebody at the place, who sees the bill, or gives an answer; otherwise it would not be sufficient. Henry v. Lee, 2 Chit. 124. See also Bynner v. Russell, 7 Moore, 267; 1 Bing. 23; Hill v. Heap, D. & R. N. P. C. 57.

So, a presentment at the banking-house where payable, after banking hours, is sufficient, if a person be stationed at the banking house, and return for answer, no orders. Garnett v. Woodcock, 6 M. & S. 44; 1 Stark. 475.

It would have been otherwise if the bank had been shut. Id.

And a presentment at a banking house after banking hours, when the house is shut, is not sufficient to charge the drawer; and no inference is to be drawn from the circumstance of the bill being presented by a notary, that it had been before presented within banking hours. Elford v. Teed, 1 M. & S. 28.

Where a bill was drawn and accepted for the accommodation of the indorser, which was not duly presented for payment when due, by reason that the bill having been accepted, payable at a banking house, was not presented till after banking hours, when the answer given to the holder was "no effects;" and the indorser applied to the indorsee, after declaration filed, for further time to make payment of the bill; which declaration alleged the fact, that the bill was duly presented for payment:—Held, that it was evidence of a waiver of the objection, with notice of the fact, of which he had the means of informing himself. Hopley v. Dufresne, 15 East, 275.

A presentment of a bill at a counting house (where it is made payable) between six and seven o'clock in the evening, is sufficient. Morgan v. Davison, 1 Stark. 114—Ellenborough.

Or eight in the evening at the house of a merchant in London. Barclay v. Bailey, 2 Camp. 527—Ellenborough.

Or the same hour at the office of an attorney, and that in the month of February. Triggs v. Newham, 10 Moore, 249; 1 C. & P. 631.

Presentment at the house of a trader or merchant, between eight and nine in the evening—Held, sufficient. Id.

A presentment of a bill for payment at a house in London, where it is made payable, at eight o'clock in the evening of the day when it becomes due, is sufficient to charge the drawer, although at that time the house be shut up, and no person there to pay the bill. Wilkins v. Jadis, 2 B. & Adol. 188; 1 M. & Rob. 41.

5. To whom and where.

Bills since statute 1 & 2 Geo. 4.—The statute 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 78, embraces all bills payable at a particular place, whether made so payable by the drawer or by the acceptor.

An acceptance of a bill drawn payable to plaintiff's order in London, is a general acceptance within the statute; and a special presentment need not be alleged or proved. Fayle v. Bird, 6 B. & C. 531; 9 D. & R. 639; 2 C. & P. 303.

Nor need proof of presentment for payment in London, or of excuse for non-presentment in London, be given. Selby v. Eden, 3 Bing. 611; 11 Moore, 511.

Where a bill, drawn with the words "pay to my order in London," in the body of the bill, and directed to the drawees payable in London, was accepted at Messrs. J. L. & Co. bankers in London:—Held, that a presentment at J. L. & Co.'s, was necessary to charge the drawer, although by the statute such an acceptance is general; and that the circumstance of the drawer having negotiated it after such acceptance made no difference. Gibbs v. Mather (in error), 2 C. & J. 254; 2 Tyr. 189; 8 Bing. 214; 1 M. & Scott, 387.

A holder of a bill carried it, when due, to the residence of the acceptor stated in the bill, found the house closed, and inquired for the acceptor in the neighbourhood, but could not hear of him: Held, that the bill was dishonoured. Hins v. Allely, 1 Nev. & M. 433.

In a declaration on a bill made payable by the acceptor at the house of S. P. & S., an averment of presentment at the house of S. P. & S. is sufficient, without averring a presentment to the acceptor, or to S. P. & S. Hawkey v. Borwick, 4 Bing. 135; S. C. not S. P. 1 Y. & J. 376; 12 Moore, 478.

A bill accepted for honour must be presented to the drawee at maturity before the drawer can be charged, and a presentment to the acceptor for honour only is not sufficient. Williams v. Germaine, 7 B. & C. 468; 1 M. & R. 394.

Presentment of a bill payable at Messrs. A. B. & Co.'s, who are bankers in London, to their clerks at the clearing house, is sufficient. Reynolds v. Chettle, 2 Camp. 596—Ellenborough. S. P. Robson v. Bennett, 2 Taunt. 388.

Before the statute.—Before the statute 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 78, if a bill was accepted, payable at a banker's, it must have been presented there for payment, and the neglect so to present it was equally a discharge to the acceptor as to the drawer. Callaghan v. Aylett, 3 Taunt. 397; 2 Camp. 549; S. P. Gammon v. Schmoll, 1 Marsh. 80; 5 Taunt. 344. And see Fenton v. Goundry, 13 East, 459; 2 Camp. 656; and Sebag v. Abitol, 4 M. & S. 462; 1 Stark. 79.

Where a bill was drawn payable in London, and accepted payable at a London banker's, a presentment for payment there must have been proved against the acceptor. Hodge v. Fillis, 3 Camp. 463—Ellenborough.

If a bill was "accepted, payable at the house of P. & Co." it was a qualified acceptance, restricting the place of payment, and the holder was bound to present the bill at that house for payment, in order to charge the acceptor of the bill; and as against the acceptor, he must have averred, and proved that he made such presentment. Rowe v. Young (in error), 2 Bligh, 391; 2 B. & B. 165.

In assumpsit by indorser against the indorsee of a bill, plaintiff declared that A. B. accepted, and by that acceptance appointed the money in the bill specified to be paid at the house of G. & Co., and averred that the bill was in due manner presented to G. and Co. and to A. B. for payment, and that G. and Co. and A. B. were then and there required to pay the same to plaintiff according to the tenor and effect of the bill, and the acceptance and indorsement. Upon special demurrer, for that it did not appear that the bill was presented at the house:—Held, that the averment was sufficient. Bush v. Kieneer, 6 M. & S. 210.

Where persons have received money for the express purpose of taking up a bill, two days after it became due; and, upon tendering it to the holders, and demanding the bill, find that they have sent it back protested for non-acceptance to the persons who indorsed it to them:—Held, that such persons, having received fresh orders not to pay the bill, were not liable in an action by the holders for money had and received, when, upon the bill being reprocurd and tendered to them, they refused to pay the money. Stewart v. Fry, 1 Moore, 74; 7 Taunt. 339.

In an action for money had and received by the holder of a bill, against a person who has received a sum of money from the acceptor to satisfy it, any defence may be set up which would have been available, if the action had been brought against the acceptor himself. Redshaw v. Jackson, 1 Camp. 372—Ellenborough.

Promissory Notes.—A memorandum at the foot of a promissory note indicating a particular place of payment, forms no part of the contract, though shown to be contemporaneous with the note itself. Williams v. Waring, 5 M. & R. 9; 10 B. & C. 2.

Where, by such a memorandum, it was made payable at a particular place:—Held, that this did not constitute a part of the contract, so as to make it necessary for a party suing on the note to aver and prove a presentment there. Id.

Where the indorsee declared against the maker of a note, that he made the same payable at the house of Messrs. B. & Co., London, and upon production of the note at the trial, it appeared that the address at the house of Messrs. B. & Co. was not a part of the note, but only a memorandum at the foot of the note:—Held, that this was a variance. Exon v. Russell, 4 M. & S. 505.

Payment of a note, made payable at a certain place named in it, must be demanded there before the makers can be sued on it. But upon such demand proved in an action by the holder against the maker, it is no objection to the plaintiff's recovery, that one of the makers, whose real name was John Key, (who had suffered judgment by default,) was sued on the joint promise by the name of Thos. Kay; it being proved that the real person had been served with the process, though under a mistaken Christian name; and the variance between Key and Kay, which were sounded alike, not being material. There had also been a part payment on the notes duly presented. Dickinson v. Bowes, 16 East, 110.

If by a memorandum at the foot of a note it is made payable at a particular place, it is to be considered as part of the contract and it is not a variance to allege the note to be so payable. Sproule v. Legge, 2 D. & R. 15; 1 B. & C. 16; 3 Stark. 156.

If the maker of a note, by a note at the foot, make it payable at a particular place, an allegation, (after stating the promise to pay in the usual manner,) that the defendant then and there made the note payable at the particular place, does not amount to a misdescription of the note. Hardy v. Woodroffe, 2 Stark. 319—Abbott.

If a particular house be mentioned in the body of a note, a presentment there is necessary even to charge the maker. Sanderson v. Bowes, 14 East, 500; Bayl. Bills, 175: S. P. Roche v. Campbell, 3 Camp. 247.

A note of the defendants, promising to pay so much at their banking house at W., requires a demand of payment there, in order to give the holder a cause of action, if it be not paid. Id.

But in a case at Nisi Prius it was held, that in an action against the maker of a note, payable at a particular place, there is no necessity to prove that it was presented there for payment. Wild v. Rennard, 1 Camp. 425, n.—Bayley.

Even though the place was in the body, and not by way of memorandum. Nicholls v. Bowes, 2 Camp. 498—Ellenborough.

But if the place of payment is mentioned in the margin or foot, it is no part of the contract but a mere memorandum. Price v. Mitchell, 4 Camp. 200—Gibbs.

Though if the whole note be printed except names, &c. and the place of payment be also printed at the bottom, a special presentment there is necessary. Trecothick v. Edwin, 1 Stark. 468—Ellenborough.

If a country banker's note is made payable both in the country and in town, and the holder only present it in London, it is no defence that he might with more convenience have presented it in the country, where it would have been paid. Beeching v. Gower, Holt, 313—Gibbs.

A note, promising to pay on demand at a particular place, must be presented; and a demand of payment made at that place, unless the makers discharge the holder from the presentment and demand; and the presentment and demand must be alleged, unless a discharge is shown. Bowes v. Howe (in error,) 5 Taunt. 30. And see 3 Taunt. 399, n.

An allegation that the makers of a note became insolvent, and ceased, and wholly declined, and refused then and thenceforth to pay at the place specified any of their notes, does not show a discharge of presentment and demand. Nor can it be intended from the allegation of refusal, that there was a presentment. Id.

But if the makers (who had become insolvent) shut up and abandoned their shop, that is evidence of a declaration to all the world of their refusal to pay their notes there. Howe v. Bowes, 16 East, 112.

If a note be made payable at a particular house, a demand of payment at that house is a demand on the maker. Saunderson v. Judge, 2 H. Black. 509.

A. makes a note payable to B. or order with a memorandum upon it that it will be paid at the house of C., who is A.'s banker; in the course of business the note is indorsed to C.; in an action by C. against the indorser, it is not necessary to prove an actual demand on A. Id.

Allegation and Proof.—Where the acceptor of a bill accepts, payable at a banker's, it is not necessary, even since the stat. 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 78, in an action against the drawer, to allege that the bill was presented to the acceptor in person, if there be an averment that it was duly presented at the banker's. De Bergareche v. Pillin, 3 Bing. 476; 11 Moore, 350.

In an action against an indorser of a bill, though it is necessary to prove a presentment at the place pointed out by the acceptance, it is not necessary to allege in the declaration that the bill was accepted at that place; though, if such special acceptance is stated, there must be a corresponding allegation of presentment. Parker v. Ade, 1 Dowl. P. C. 643: S. C. nom. Parker v. Edge, 1 C. & M. 429.

Where the place of payment is stated in the body of the note, such statement is a material one, and must be averred in the declaration, and the omission is not cured by an averment that the note was duly presented. Roche v. Campbell, 3 Camp. 247—Ellenborough.

If a declaration in an action by the indorsee of a bill against the acceptor, allege that it was directed to the defendant; this allegation is not supported by proof that the drawer drew the bill payable to his own order at a specified place, although the defendant, when it was presented there, wrote his name upon it as the acceptor. Gray v. Milner, 3 Moore, 90; 8 Taunt. 739; 2 Stark. 336.

A presentment of a note made payable at G. at a banker's at G., the maker being absent from G. when the note became due, is sufficient evidence of a presentment to the maker at G. as alleged in the declaration. Hardy v. Woodroffe 2 Stark. 319—Abbott.

It has been held at Nisi Prius, that if a bill is accepted payable at a particular place, in an action against the acceptor, this addition does not require to be noticed in the declaration, being no part of the contract, but merely a memorandum where payment may be demanded. Lyon v. Sundius, 1 Camp. 423—Ellenborough. S. P. Head v. Sewell, Holt, 363; and Macbride v. Woodroffe, 2 Stark. 253.

of, and that as well the bankers as the acceptor refused payment, shall be supported after judgment on a sham plea. Huffam v. Ellis (in error), 3 Taunt. 415.

And semble, that it shall be intended that the bill was presented for payment to the acceptor himself at the house of those persons; for evidence of those facts would be admissible under such an allegation, and not repugnant to it. Id.

In a declaration against the drawer and acceptor of a bill accepted for honour, it is necessary to aver that presentment for payment was made to the drawee, and for want of such averment judgment was arrested. Williams v. Germaine, 7 B. & C. 468; 1 M. & R. 394, 403.

The plaintiff declared on a bill of exchange, averring a general acceptance. The defendant pleaded, that the acceptance was a qualified acceptance, and that he did, according to the form of the statute in such case made and provided, in his said acceptance express that he accepted the same payable at a certain place only, to wit, at No. 32, Albany street, Regent's Park, that is to say, and not otherwise or elsewhere. The plaintiff replied that the said acceptance was a general acceptance, as in the count set forth, "and that the defendant did not, in his acceptance, express that he accepted the said bill payable at a certain place only, in manner and form as the defendant in his plea alleged:"—Held, on special demurrer, that the traverse sufficiently incorporated the particular mode of acceptance alleged in the plea, and was therefore good. Lyon v. Wells, 2 M. & Bostl. 736; 9 Bing. 660.

And semble, that the defendant should have negatived in his plea a presentment of the bill, at the place at which it was alleged to have been made specially payable. Id.

X. NOTICE OF DISHONOUR.

1. No Effects.

Notice of dishonour need not be given to the drawer, when he had no effects in the hands of the drawee, either at the time of drawing the bill, or when it became due. Bickerdike v. Bellman, 1 T. R. 405; S. P. Clagge v. Cotton, 3 B. & P. 239.

But nothing but that circumstance will dispense with the necessity of notice; it is not enough to show that the drawer has not been damaged. Dennis v. Morris, 3 Esp. 158—Kenyon. And see Van Wart v. Woolley, 5 D. & R. 374; 3 B. & C. 439; R. & M. 4. And Rogers v. Stephens, 2 T. R. 713.

Nor that there was an understanding between the drawee and drawer, that the latter should provide for the bill. Staples v. Okies, 1 Esp. 332—Kenyon; S. P. Nicholson v. Genthil, 2 H. Black. 607.

But if the drawer have no effects in the hands of Nor is the indorser of a note, when there are no effects in the maker's hands. Corney v. Mendez de Costa, 1 Esp. 302—Buller.

Nor the drawer of an accommodation bill, because he can suffer no injury from the want of notice. Callot v. Heigh, 3 Camp. 261—Ellenb.

But it is otherwise if the drawer has reasonable expectation of having assets in the hands of the drawee, as by having shipped goods on his own account, which were on their way to the drawee, but without the bill of lading or invoice. Rucker v. Hiller, 16 East, 43; 3 Camp. 217; S. P. Robins v. Gibson, 3 Camp. 334; 1 M. & R. 168.

A drawer, who has no effects in the hands of the drawee, except that he has supplied him with goods upon credit, which credit does not expire until long after the bill would become due, is not discharged by want of notice of the dishonour. Claridge v. Dalton, 4 M. & R. 226.

And if the drawer have any effects in the hands of the drawee, at any time between the drawing the bill and its becoming due, he is entitled to notice. Hammond v. Dufrane, 3 Camp. 145—Ellenborough.

But if the drawer have no effects in the hands of the drawee, though the indorser have, the former is not entitled to notice. Walwyn v. St. Quintin, 1 B. & P. 652; 2 Esp. 515.

If the drawer at the time of presentment have effects, but is indebted to the drawee to a larger amount, and they without his privity have appropriated the effects in their hands to the satisfaction of the debt, he is entitled to notice. Blackham v. Doren, 2 Camp. 503—Ellenborough.

Where the drawer had no effects in the hands of the acceptor, from the time of drawing until the bill became due; but, previously to the delivery of the bill, had given some acceptances of his, upon which the acceptor had raised money, part of which acceptances had been returned dishonoured, and others were outstanding:—Held, that the drawer was entitled to notice of its dishonour by the acceptor. Spencer v. Gardner, R. & M. 84—Best.

Where a bill was drawn and accepted for the accommodation of an indorsee, who, as well as the drawer, had no effects in the hands of the acceptor:—Held, that a subsequent indorsee, in order to entitle himself to recover in an action against the drawee was bound to give notice of the dishonour, as the drawer might have called on the acceptor, or the previous indorsee for payment, if he had had such notice. Cory v. Scott, 3 B. & A. 619; R. C. not S. P. Bayl. Bills, 329.

A bill was drawn by A. upon B. for the accommodation of C., who indorsed it for value to D. Neither A. nor C. had any effects in the hands of B. The bill was dishonoured by B.:—Held, that the drawer was entitled to notice. Norton v. Pickering, 8 B. & C. 610; 3 M. & R. 22.

Where a bill was drawn, accepted, and indorsed by several indorsors for the accommodation of the last indorser, and the acceptor had no effects of the drawer in his hands, but that fact was not known to the defendant, who was one of the prior indorsors:—Held, that he was entitled to notice of the dishonour, before the holder could maintain an action against him, in order to enable him (even if he had no remedy upon the bill) to call immediately upon the last indorser, to whom in fact he had lent the security of his indorsement, without value received, and who had in fact, received the money upon that security. Brown v. Maffey, 15 East, 216.

A bill drawn, payable at the house of the drawer, must be presumed to be an accommodation bill, and the drawer is not entitled to notice of its dishonour. Sharpe v. Bailey, 4 M. & R. 4; 9 B. & C. 44.

The drawer of a dishonoured bill is entitled to notice of dishonour, although he knows the bill will not be paid by the acceptor, provided he has reason to expect it will be paid by any other person, or has a remedy over against such person; therefore, where the defendant drew a bill upon one T. for the accommodation of one R., who was considerably indebted to the plaintiff, and who procured T.'s acceptance:—Held, that the drawer was entitled to notice of the dishonour of the bill notwithstanding the acceptor had no assets of his in his hands, and had informed him, prior to the bill becoming due, that he would not provide for it, he having a reasonable expectation that it would be provided for by R., and having a remedy over against him in case he was called upon to pay it. Lafitte v. Slatter, 4 M. & P. 457; 6 Bing. 623.

It is no excuse for not giving notice to the indorsee of a bill that the acceptor had no effects. Wilkes v. Jacks, Peake, 202—Kenyon.

An indorser who has given no consideration for a bill, and knows that the drawer has no effects in the hands of the drawee, is not entitled to notice of non-payment. Sisson v. Tomlinson, 1 Selw. N. P. 346—Ellenborough.

A. draws a note payable to B. or order, which B. indorses, having given no value for it, and knowing that A. is insolvent: in an action by the indorsee against B., it is not necessary to prove that the note was presented for payment to A. immediately when it became due, or that notice was given to B. of A.'s refusal to pay it. De Berdt v. Atkinson, 2 H. Black. 336.

Quære, whether securities, as title deeds and short bills, are not effects for this purpose? Ex parte Heath, 2 Ves. & B. 240.

2. Bill or Note specially payable.

In an action against the drawer of a bill, payable at a particular place, it is no defence that no notice of the dishonour had been given to the acceptor. Edwards v. Dick, 4 B. & A. 212.

The acceptor of a bill, having made it payable at Messrs. C. & Co.'s, and not having sufficient effects in their hands to pay the bill when it became due, is not entitled to notice of its dishonour.

nour; and it is doubtful, whether in the case of such an acceptance, any notice whatever is necessary. Smith v. Thatcher, 4 B. & A. 200.

And afterwards held, that in an action against the acceptor, on a bill payable at a banker's, it is not necessary to prove notice of non-payment to him. Treacher v. Hinton, 4 B. & A. 413.

So, upon a note payable at a banking-house, it is not necessary to prove that the maker had notice of its dishonour. Pearce v. Pemberthy, 3 Camp. 261—Ellenborough.

3. Ignorance of Place of Residence.

Ignorance of the place of residence of the drawer is a sufficient answer to an objection arising out of the want of due notice of the dishonour of a bill, provided due diligence be used to discover his place of residence. Browning v. Kinnear, Gow, 81—Dallas. And see Williams v. Germaine, 7 B. & C. 468; 1 M. & R. 394.

Whether the holder has used due diligence to find out the place of residence, is a question of fact to be left to the jury. Bateman v. Joseph, 12 East, 433; 2 Camp. 461. And see Goodall v. Dolley, 1 T. R. 712.

But it was held in the Exchequer, that what is due diligence in such a case is a question of law. Sturges v. Derrick, Wightw. 76.

It is not enough to show that the holder, being ignorant of the drawer's residence, made inquiries upon the subject at the place where the bill was payable. Beveridge v. Burgis, 3 Camp. 262—Ell.

But where, in the case of a notice required by a bond, the party had left his house, it was held sufficient for the obligee to make reasonable inquiries after him, and that laches were not imputable to him if he did so. Harrison v. Fitzhenry, 3 Esp. 240—Le Blanc.

So, where the ignorance of residence arises from the drawer having a few days before the bill was due, stated to the holder that he had no regular place of abode, and that he would call and see if the bill was paid. Phipson v. Kneller, 4 Camp. 285; 1 Stark. 116—Ellenborough.

An indorsee not knowing the indorser's address, employs his attorney to discover it, and give notice of dishonour. The attorney discovers the address one day, consults his client the second, and gives notice the third:—Held, a valid notice. Firth v. Thrush, 2 M. & R. 359; 8 B. & C. 387.

On an allegation that a bill or note was presented, and that acceptance or payment was refused the plaintiff cannot give in evidence that the drawer or maker could not be found. Jensen v. Pigott, Bayl. Bills, 324.

Semble, that such an allegation is not satisfied by proof of the use of due diligence in endeavouring to find the party, where no notice has been given at all. Harris v. Richardson, 4 C. & P. 522—Tenterden.

4. In other Cases.

Bankruptcy of the acceptor does not dispense insolvency of the acceptor, before and at the time when the bill became due; and, within a day after notice might (but for a mistake of the holders) in due course have reached them from the holders, communicated such their knowledge to the bankers in Liverpool, with whom they had before discounted the bill, and who had transmitted it to the holders in London:—Held, that it did not dispense with such holders giving notice of the dishonour in due time to the indorser. Kedzie v. Smirley, 11 East, 114.

The drawer of a bill became bankrupt, and absconded before it was due, but his house remained open, in the possession of the messenger under a commission of bankruptcy issued against him, for some time after the bill became due, and before that time the holder of the bill had notice that A. and B. were chosen assignees of the bankrupt's estate. The acceptor also became bankrupt before the bill was due, and when due it was dishonoured. The holder did not give notice of the dishonour to the drawer, or leave it at his house, nor did he make any attempt to give such notice to the assignees of the drawer:—Held, that the drawer was discharged. Ex parte Rolde, 1 Mont. & Mac. 431.

A., the agent in America of B. in England, drew a bill upon him, and indorsed it to C., also residing in America, who indorsed it over. Before the bill became due, A., having reason to believe that B. would fail, lodged property belonging to B. in the hands of C. to answer the bill in case it should be returned, C. undertaking to restore the same whenever it should appear that he was exonerated from the bill: acceptance and payment of the bill were refused, but no notice was given to A.:—Held, that A. was discharged. Clegg v. Cotton, 3 B. & P. 239.

The holders of a bill, having presented it for payment to the acceptor without effect, gave regular notice of the dishonour to the drawers, who lived at a distance, but informed them at the same time, that having reason to believe that a friend of the acceptor's would take it up in a few days, they would, in order to save expense, hold the bill till the latter end of the week, unless they heard from the drawers to the contrary:—Held, that such notice gave the holders a remedy upon the bill against the drawers, though no further notice of non-payment was given to them at the end of the week; but if the construction of the letter bound the plaintiffs to give such further notice at the end of the week, they were only answerable for the neglect in their implied character of agents for the drawers, which they had taken upon themselves, without disturbing their remedy upon the bill itself. Forster v. Jurdien, 16 East, 105.

Where the defendant lent his indorsement to the drawer of a note payable on demand, to enable him to raise money from the plaintiffs, who were bankers and had agreed to advance money thereon for six months:—Held that the bankers, and regular notice of the dishonour given to the defendant. Smith v. Beckett, 13 East, 187.

The drawer of a bill, who before it became due receives notice that it was accidentally destroyed, and is called upon to give another in its stead according to stat. 9 & 10 Will 3, c. 17, is nevertheless entitled to notice, though the drawee was insolvent. Thomson v. Blackett, 3 Camp. 164—Ellenborough.

And if there are several bills in the hands of the same owner, becoming due on different days, the drawer is entitled to notice as to each, though the drawee was only indebted to him to an amount less than any one of the bills. Id.

Where a bill is drawn by a firm upon one of the partners, who accepts it, notice to the drawers is unnecessary. Parthous v. Parker, 3 Camp. 69—Ellenborough. And see Jessell v. French, 12 East 317.

Persons who were bankers both for the drawers and acceptor of a bill, and had received it from the drawer, and given credit for it in an account current between them, before it became due received directions from the acceptor to stop the payment of it at the place of payment, and did so accordingly:—Held, that they were not bound to give notice of this circumstance to the drawer, but upon non-payment of the bill might look to the drawers, notwithstanding they have not given such notice; and that they were not bound to apply the money of the acceptor in their hands in discharge of the bill; but if the drawers had become bankrupt, it would have constituted an item in the account between them and the bankers. Croser v. Smith, 1 M. & S. 545.

The holder of a check is not bound to give notice of its dishonour to the drawer, for the purpose of charging the person from whom he received it: he does enough if he presents it with due diligence to the bankers on whom it is drawn, and gives due notice of dishonour to those only against whom he seeks a remedy. Rickford v. Ridge, 2 Camp. 537—Ellenborough.

The vendor of goods gave in payment an instrument purporting to be a bill of exchange, but it was written on a paper which had not affixed to it a sufficient stamp. It was not paid by the acceptor, but the vendor (the indorser of the bill) did not give any notice of dishonour to the vendee, who was the indorser:—Held, that the instrument being of no value for want of a sufficient stamp, notice of dishonour was unnecessary. Candy v. Merriett, 1 B. & Adol. 696.

5. By and to whom.

Notice of dishonour must come from the holder. Tindal v. Brown, 1 T. R. 167: & P. Ex parte Barclay, 7 Ven. jura. 597.

It is not sufficient unless it be given to the drawer and indorsers by the holder himself, or some person authorized by him. Stewart v. Kemmet, 2 Camp. 177—Ellenborough.

But notice to the drawer by any party to the bill enures to the benefit of all. Wilson v. Swadby, 1 Stark. 34—Ellenborough.

Even a notice to the drawer from the acceptor has been held good. Rosher v. Kieran, 4 Camp. 87—Ellenborough.

But notice from the drawee to the drawer the next day, will not suffice for notice by the holder. Hopes v. Alder, 6 East, 16.

If the drawer or indorser of a bill receive due notice of its dishonour from any person who is a party to it, he is directly liable upon it to a subsequent indorsee, from whom he had no direct notice. Jameson v. Swinton, 2 Taunt. 224; 2 Camp. 373.

A person who is a stranger to the transaction by not being a party to a bill or note, is not entitled to notice of dishonour. Swinyard v. Bowes, 5 M. & S. 62; S. P. Warrington v. Furber, 8 East, 242.

Where defendant being indebted to plaintiffs for goods sold, and C. being indebted to defendant, plaintiffs, with the consent of defendant, drew a bill on C. payable at two months, which C. accepted, but afterwards dishonoured:—Held, that defendant was not entitled to notice of the dishonour, his name not being on the bill, and that the bill was not to be esteemed a complete payment of the debt under stat. 3 & 4 Anne, c. 9, s. 7. Id.

A., residing at New York, having ordered goods of B., residing at Birmingham, sent to B., on account of the goods, a bill drawn by C. in New York, upon D. in London, payable to the order of B., but not indorsed by A. B., through his bankers, presented the bill for acceptance to D., who refused to accept, but no notice of the non-acceptance was given until the day of payment, when the bill was presented for payment, and dishonoured. C., the drawer, became bankrupt before the bill reached B.'s hands, and never had any funds in the hands of D., the drawee, to meet the bill. In assumpsit by B. against his bankers for neglecting to give notice of the non-acceptance:—Held, that A., not having indorsed the bill, was not entitled to notice of dishonour, and remained liable to B. for the amount of the goods; that C., the drawer, never having had any funds in the hands of D., the drawee, was likewise not entitled to notice; and therefore that B. could not recover the full amount of the bill, but only such damages as he had sustained by being delayed in pursuit of his remedy against the drawer. Van Wart v. Woolley, 5 D. & R. 374; 3 B. & C. 439; R. & M. 4.

One who without consideration, but without fraud, indorses a bill in which both the holder and acceptor are fictitious persons, is entitled to notice of the dishonour of the bill. Leach v. Hewitt, 4 Taunt. 731.

Semble, that if a man make another his agent for the purpose of indorsing the bill, he also makes him his agent for the purpose of receiving notice of dishonour, and that a notice given to him will be good. Firth v. Thrush, 2 M. & R. 359; 8 B. & C. 387.

Upon a guarantee of the price of goods, to be paid for by a bill, due notice of the non-payment of the bill must be given both to the drawer and person who guarantees, unless both drawer and acceptor are bankrupts when the bill becomes due. Philips v. Astling, 2 Taunt. 206.

W., a broker, sold twenty bags of wool for H. to C., to be paid for by a bill accepted by the latter; and offered to his employer, for an allowance of one per cent., to guarantee half the amount: H. confirmed the sale, and informed W. that if he could not procure from C. acceptances of approved houses, that they would take his guarantee on the terms proposed: the wool was delivered without the intervention of the broker, and the acceptance of the vendees taken for the amount, payable at a banker's; before the bill was at maturity, the vendees became insolvent, and the vendors resorted to the broker upon his guarantee:—Held, that the latter was liable on such guarantee, though the bill had not been presented for payment, and though there was no proof that it would not have been paid, if presented; and supposing it to have been presented and dishonoured, he would not have been entitled to notice of non-payment. Holborn v. Wilkins, 2 D. & R. 59; 1 B. & C. 10.

Notice of a dishonoured bill to a bankrupt, as drawer, before the choice of assignees, is good. Ex parte Moline, 19 Ves. jun. 216.

6. What must be stated in Notice.

The notice of dishonour should at least inform the party, either by express terms, or by necessary implication, that the bill has been dishonoured, and that the owner looks to him for payment of the amount. Where, therefore, the attorney of the holder of a bill, the day after it had been dishonoured, sent a letter to the indorser, stating that a bill for 683*l.*, drawn by J. K. upon Messrs. D., J., & Co., bearing the indorsement of the person to whom the letter was addressed, had been put into the hands of the attorney by the holder, with directions to take legal measures for the recovery thereof, unless immediately paid to the attorney:—Held, not to be a sufficient notice of the dishonour, to enable the holder to recover against the indorser in an action upon the bill. Solarte v. Palmer, 5 M. & P. 475; 7 Bing. 530; 1 Tyr. 371; 1 C. & J. 417.

In a letter, intended as a notice of dishonour of a bill, the presentment and dishonour ought to be stated as specific facts; and it is not sufficient for the letter merely to demand the money of the drawer, and leave him to infer from that circumstance that the bill has been dishonoured. Hartley v. Case, 6 D. & R. 505; 4 B. & C. 339; 1 C. & P. 555.

A notice in the following terms, "I give you notice that a bill for &c., drawn by you upon &c., lies at &c., dishonoured," is not sufficient to sustain an action against the indorser, who was not also the drawer. Beauchamp v. Cash, D. & R. N. P. C. 3—Abbott.

7. At what Place given.

Where a bill is indorsed abroad, yet if the

A letter, directed "Mr. Haynes, Bristol," containing notice of dishonour, was proved to have been put into the post-office:—Held, that this was not sufficient proof of notice, the direction being too general to raise a presumption that the letter reached the particular individual intended. Walter v. Haynes, R. & M. 149—Abbott.

But in an action against the drawer of a bill, dated "Manchester," held, that it was sufficient evidence of his having had notice of its dishonour to prove that a letter, containing such notice, had been put into the post-office in London, directed to him, "Manchester." Mann v. Moore, R. & M. 949—Abbott.

Sending a verbal notice of dishonour to a merchant's counting-house is sufficient; and if no person be there in the ordinary hours of business, it is not necessary to leave or send a written one. Goldsmith v. Bland, Bayl. Bills, 224.

A notice given at the counting-house of a merchant or manufacturer, between the hours of six and seven in the evening, is not too late. Bancroft v. Hall, Holt, 476—Bayley.

Notice to the drawers, by sending to their counting-house, during the hours of business, on two successive days, knocking there, and making noise sufficient to be heard by persons within, and waiting there several minutes, the inner door of the counting-house being locked, is sufficient without leaving a notice in writing, or sending by the post, though some of the drawers live at a small distance from the place. Cress v. Smith, 1 M. & S. 545.

A copy of a letter, containing notice of dishonour of a bill, delivered at the house in which the defendant lodged, is sufficient notice to the defendant. Stedman v. Gosh, 1 Esp. 4—Ken.

B. Transmission by Post.

The twopenny post may be used as a means for sending notice, whether the parties reside near or at a distance from one another. Hilton v. Peirclough, 2 Camp. 633—Lawrence.

Notice of the dishonour of a bill is sufficiently given by proving that a letter was regularly put into the post informing the party of the fact. Kufz v. Weston, 3 Esp. 54—Kanyon.

And putting a letter in the post office to the indorser in proper time, informing him that the maker had not paid a note when due, is sufficient evidence of notice to the indorser. Stranderson v. Judge, 2 H. Black. 509.

But it is not sufficient prima facie evidence of a letter being sent by the post, that it was written by a merchant in his counting-house, and put upon a table for the purpose of being carried from thence to the post-office, and that, by the course of business in the counting-house, all letters deposited on this table were carried to the post-office by a porter. Hetherington v. Kemp, 4 letter in question, he invariably carried to the post-office all the letters found upon the table, that might have done; but mere general evidence of the course of business in the counting-house is not sufficient. Id.

The plaintiff's clerk proved that the letter giving notice of the dishonour of a bill was copied by him on the Monday into a book kept for that purpose; and said, that, by the course of business at their house, all letters copied into that book were sent to the post-office in the evening of the day on which they were so copied, but that he himself did not carry the letter in question to the post, it being the duty of one of the other clerks to do so:—Held, not sufficient evidence that the letter was sent. Humber v. Satter, 4 Bing. 715; 1 M. & P. 750.

It is sufficient, if notice of a bill drawn in England on a person in the East Indies being dishonoured, is sent to England by the first direct and regular mode of conveyance, whether it be by an English or a foreign ship; the holder is not bound to send such notice by the accidental, though earlier conveyance of a foreign ship, not destined to this country. Mulhens v. D'Egerton, 2 H. Black. 565.

Notice need not be sent by the mail or first conveyance, it is sufficient if there be no essential delay if it be sent by private hand, though it would arrive later in the day than by mail. Bancroft v. Hall, Holt, 476—Bayley.

Where notice of the dishonour of a bill by the acceptor in London was sent by the post to the holder in Manchester, where the letter was delivered out between eight and nine in the morning, and the post went out for Liverpool, where the drawer lived, between twelve and one, and the holder did not send notice to the drawer by the post either of the same day or the next, but sent it in a letter by a private person on the latter day, who did not deliver it to the drawer till two hours after the post delivery, and only about one hour before the post left Liverpool for London:—Held, that at all events the holder had made the bill his own by his delay, and that he should have written by the post of the next day after notice received by him. Darbishire v. Parker, 6 East, 3; 1 Smith, 195.

If a letter giving notice of the dishonour of a bill is put into the twopenny post office, in time to be delivered on the proper day, in the ordinary course of business, but from some delay in the office does not reach its destination till afterwards, such delay in the office will not prejudice the party by whom the notice was given. Debtors v. Eastwood, 3 C. & P. 250—Burrough.

Where a postmaster agreed to deliver letters in a particular mode, and by mistake omitted to deliver one for two days, which contained a returned bill, he is not liable in damages for the amount of the bill, if the plaintiff could give notice of dishonour in time, by sending a special messenger for that purpose, though he might be too late to do so by post. Hordern v. Dalton, 1 C. & P. 181—Abbott.

9. Within what Time.

By 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 15, s. 1, where bills or notes become due on the day preceding Good-Friday or Christmas-day, notice of dishonour need not be given until the day next after those days respectively; and if Christmas-day happens on a Monday, when the bill or note would be due on Saturday, notice may be given on the Tuesday.

Quere, whether a notice of dishonour, given on the same day the bill is presented and dishonoured, be premature? Hartley v. Case, 6 D. & R. 505; 4 B. & C. 339; 1 C. & P. 555: S. P. Barbridge v. Manners, 3 Camp. 193.

Immediate notice of a bill dishonoured at an early hour is good. Ex parte Moline, 19 Ves. jun. 216.

What shall be deemed a reasonable time for notice of dishonour, must depend upon the circumstances of the case, and is a question of law arising out of the facts. Tindal v. Brown, 1 T. R. 167: S. P. Metcalf v. Hall, Bull. N. P. 275. And see Parker v. Gordon, 7 East, 385; 3 Smith, 358; 6 Esp. 41.

Although it was at one time doubtful whether the question of reasonable notice was not a question of fact to be submitted to the jury under all the circumstances of the case. Hilton v. Shepherd, 6 East, 14, n.: S. P. Hopes v. Alder, 6 East, 16.

The general rule as to what shall be a reasonable notice seems to be, that, with respect to persons living in the same town, the notice must be given by the next day. Darbishire v. Parker, 6 East, 3; 1 Smith, 195: S. P. Smith v. Mullett, 2 Camp. 208.

And with regard to persons living at different places, that a party, in order to avoid laches, must give notice by the next post,—which does not mean the next possible post, but the next post at which it would be reasonably practicable to give notice. Williams v. Smith, 2 B. & A. 496.

A bill indorsed in blank, and deposited by the holder with his bankers, became due on Saturday, and was presented for payment about two o'clock on that day; payment being refused, the bill was noted and again presented between nine and ten in the evening by a notary: on Monday, the bankers informed the holder that the bill was dishonoured, who on Tuesday about noon gave notice to the indorser; the holder lived at Knightsbridge, and the indorser in Tottenham-court-road:—Held, that this notice was sufficient to entitle the holder to recover against the indorser. Haynes v. Birks, 3 B. & P. 599.

A bill was presented and dishonoured on the 3d; on the 4th a letter was written to the plaintiff, informing him of it, which he received on the 6th, being Sunday, and on the Tuesday evening sent notice by the post to the defendant:—Held, that the plaintiff was not bound to open the letter till the Monday morning, and that therefore he had given the defendant notice by the next day's post. Wright v. Shawcross, 2 B. & A. 501, n.

Notice of non-payment given by an indorsee, living in Holborn, to an indorser living at Islington, by nine on the night of the day following the day on which the indorsee knew it, is reasonable notice. Jameson v. Swinton, 2 Taunt. 224; 2 Camp. 373.

Where a bill was dishonoured on Saturday, in a place where the post went out at half-past nine in the morning:—Held, that it was sufficient notice to send a letter by the following Tuesday morning's post. Hawkes v. Salter, 4 Bing. 715; 1 M. & P. 750.

A party receiving notice of dishonour of a bill of exchange, need not give notice to the person above him till the next post after the day on which he himself receives the notice, although he might easily give it that day, and there is no post the day following. Grill v. Jeremy, M. & M. 61—Tenterden.

A bill due on the 4th was presented for payment that day by the payees' bankers. On the 5th it was returned dishonoured to the payees, who, in the course of the 6th, sent a letter to the drawer by the two-penny post:—Held, that this was sufficient notice. Scott v. Lifford, 9 East, 347; 1 Camp. 246—Ellenborough.

It is sufficient if the letter conveying the notice be proved to have been put into a receiving-house at such an hour, that, according to the course of the two-penny post, it would be delivered on the day in which the party was entitled to notice. Hilton v. Fairclough, 2 Camp. 633—Lawrence.

But it is not sufficient where the party received notice on the 20th, and gave notice by a letter put into the two-penny post on the evening of the 21st, but so late that it was not delivered until the morning of the 22d. Smith v. Mullett, 2 Camp. 208—Ellenborough.

A country banker has an entire day, after receiving notice of the dishonour of a bill payable in London, to transmit the same to his customer, so that notice by the next day's post, though it be not the next post, will be time enough; therefore where a bill was dishonoured on the 14th, and notice sent by the post to the country bankers on the 15th, which reached them on the morning of the 17th, (being Sunday,) and they on the next day sent notice by the post to the indorsee, but not before twelve at noon, at which time the post set out for the place where the indorsee resided:—Held, that this notice was within time. Bray v. Hadwen, 5 M. & S. 68.

Where the defendant paid the plaintiff notes on Friday, several hours before the post went out, and the plaintiff transmitted them partly by a coach on Saturday, and partly by Sunday night's post, and both parts arrived in London on Monday, and were presented for payment and dishonoured on the Tuesday:—Held, that the plaintiff, in so transmitting these notes, had been guilty of no laches, and might consider them as no payment, and recover for the original debt. Williams v. Smith, 2 B. & A. 496: S. P. Wright v. Shawcross, 2 B. & A. 501, n.

Where a bill of exchange passed through the hands of five persons, all of whom lived in London or the neighbourhood, and the bill when due

A banker in London, corresponding with a banker abroad, has the same right, with respect to English bills of his correspondent becoming due while in his hands, as an English banker has with respect to his customer in England; and therefore, if such a bill be dishonoured, he may send it, when returned, to his correspondent abroad; but remember, that if the foreign correspondent be afterwards in London, in possession of the bill, he ought not to send it again to the London banker, but should himself give notice of dishonour to the party who indorsed it to him. Daly v. Slatter, 4 Car. & Payne, 200—Tenterden.

If there are several indorsors of a bill, and the last indorsee and holder resorts in the first instance to the first of such indorsors, he is not entitled to as many days as there are indorsors to give notice of dishonour in, but must give it within the same time as he would have been obliged to do it in, if he had resorted at first to his own immediate indorser. Dobres v. Eastwood, 3 C. & P. 250—Barrow.

It is not enough that the drawer or indorser receives notice in as many days as there are subsequent indorsees, unless it is shown that each indorser gave notice within a day after receiving it. Marah v. Marshall, 2 Camp. 210, n.—Ellenb.

A bill was presented for payment at a banking house in London, where it was made payable on the 25th, when it was dishonoured, but under a doubt whether the presentment was not made too early on that day, it was again presented shortly before 5 o'clock on the 26th, and again dishonoured; it was returned to the indorser in London, on that day, and notice sent of the dishonour by the post of the 27th, into the country, where the indorser lived:—Held, that this was due diligence, and due notice of the dishonour. Langdale v. Trimmer, 15 East, 291.

As the law of merchants respects the religion of different people, a Hebrew indorsee was held not guilty of laches, who neglected to give notice on the regular day, that day being a festival, whereon he was forbid to attend to secular business. Linde v. Unsworth, 2 Camp. 602—Ellenb.

The time consumed in making necessary inquiries relative to the parties to a note, is not to be imputed as laches. Thus, where the plaintiff became acquainted with the dishonour on the 5th, and, not knowing the parties, notice was not despatched to them till the 16th, the original indorser was still held liable. Baldwin v. Richardson, 2 D. & R. 285; 1 B. & C. 245.

In an action on a bill, where the declaration alleges that notice of dishonour was given to the defendant, it will satisfy the allegation, to show that notice was given before action brought, although from the parties not being to be found it was not given at the proper time. Harris v. Richardson, 4 C. & P. 522—Tenterden.

Proof that duplicate notices of the dishonour of a bill were written, and that a letter was delivered to the defendant upon the dishonour of a bill, together with proof of notice to produce the letter so delivered, as containing notice of dishonour, is evidence (on default of production) that the defendant had notice. Id.

And it seems that there is no substantial distinction between a duplicate original and a copy made at the time, and authenticated on oath. Kine v. Beumont, 7 Moore, 112; 3 B. & R. 200.

A duplicate copy of an original letter giving notice of the dishonour of a bill, is admissible in evidence without any notice to produce such original letter. Id.

Although it has been held at Nisi Prius, that a copy of the letter cannot be given in evidence, without notice to produce the original. Longden v. Hulla, 5 Esp. 157—Ellenborough.

So, also, that parol evidence of its contents is inadmissible. Shaw v. Markham, Peake, 165—Kenyon.

The plaintiff being required to prove notice, it is not sufficient to show that a letter was sent on the second or third day, and the non-production of the letter of notice by defendant affords no presumption in plaintiff's favour. Lawson v. Sherrwood, 1 Stark. 314—Ellenborough.

If a letter, giving notice of the dishonour of a bill, contain this passage, "I did not know till within these few days where you were to be found;" such passage is not to be taken as proving that the notice was not given on the next day after the residence of the party was discovered. Kerby v. England, 2 C. & P. 300—Abbott.

Where the assignee of a bankrupt declared an indorsee against the drawer, and, to prove notice to the latter of the dishonour by the acceptor, produced an agreement between the drawer and K. (an intermediate indorsee,) reciting that the bill was, amongst other bills to which the drawer was a party, over-due, and was or ought to be in the hands of K., was evidence to satisfy the averment of due notice of the dishonour to the drawer, though the assignee were no parties to the agreement. Gunn v. Mize, 2 D. & R. 334; 1 B. & C. 193.

An indorsee, three months after a bill became due, demanded payment of the indorser, who first promised to pay it if he would call again with the account, and afterwards said that he had not had regular notice, but as the debt was justly due he would pay it.—Held, that the first conversation, being an absolute promise to pay the bill, was, prima facie, an admission that the bill had been presented to the acceptor for payment in due time, and had been dishonoured, and that due notice had been given of it, to the indorsee, and superseded the necessity of other proof to satisfy those averments in the declaration. Landis v. Robertson, 7 East, 291.

Under an allegation of notice, it may be questionable whether evidence can be given of facts to excuse notice, or whether to let in such evidence the facts should not be specially pleaded. Corey v. Scott, Bayl. Bills. 329: S. C. not S. P. 3 B. & A. 619.

Where, in an action against the indorsor of a bill, notice of its dishonour was proved on a particular day, being the second day of the term in which the action was brought, and the memorandum on the record was intitled as of that term generally; it was sufficient for the plaintiff's attorney to produce the draft of the declaration, and prove that it was in fact filed on a day subsequent to that on which the notice of dishonour was proved. Howe v. Cocker, 3 Stark. 138—Abbott.

11. Consequence of Neglect.

Want of due notice of non-acceptance of a bill discharges the drawer and indorsor, and if, under ignorance of the circumstances, any indorsor should pay, he does not by that act revive the liability of the previous indorsor or drawer. Roscoe v. Hardy, 12 East, 434; 2 Camp. 458.

The indorsor of a bill, which had been dishonoured, and which a subsequent indorsee had made his own by laches, paid the bill and immediately gave notice of its dishonour to the defendant, a prior indorsor:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover the amount, although it appeared that the defendant, in case successive notices had been given by all the parties on the bill, could not have received notice of dishonour at an earlier period; for the plaintiff by paying the bill could not place the prior indorsors in a worse situation than they would otherwise have been in. Turner v. Leech, 4 B. & A. 451.

If the indorsee of an inland bill, not due, present it for acceptance, which is refused, and delay giving notice to his indorsor, the indorsor will be discharged. Goodall v. Dolley, 1 T. R. 712.

But where the payee, having presented a bill for acceptance, which was refused, indorses it to the plaintiff for value, without giving notice of the dishonour, either to the drawer or the indorsee, and the latter presents it, when it is again refused acceptance, of which the drawer receives due notice:—Held, that the drawer was not discharged from his liability to the indorsee, by the payee's neglect to give notice of the previous dishonour. O'Keefe v. Dunn, 1 Marsh. 613; 6 Taunt. 305. And see Dunn v. O'Keefe, (in error,) 5 M. & S. 282.

The drawer of a bill absconded, and was made a bankrupt before the bill was due. His house continued open in the possession of the messenger under the commission after the bill was due. The holder knew of the appointment of the drawer's assignees before the bill was due, before which time the acceptor became bankrupt, and the holder neither gave, nor made any attempt to give notice of the dishonour, either to the drawer or his assignees: Held, that he was guilty of laches, and that his claim against the drawer was barred, and consequently, that he had no right to prove the bills under the drawer's commission. Rohda v. Proctor, 6 D. & R. 610; 4 B. & C. 517.

A. being in insolvent circumstances, B. undertook to be a security for a debt owing from A. to C. by indorsing a promissory note made by A. payable to B. at the house of D.; the note was accordingly so made and indorsed with the knowledge of all parties; just before it became due, B. being informed that D. had no effects of A. in his hands, desired D. to send the note to him, and said he would pay it, B. having then a fund in his hands for that purpose; it was not presented at D.'s house till three days after it was due:—Held, that C. could not maintain an action against B. on the note, due diligence not having been used in presenting the note, as soon as it was due, to D. for payment, and in giving immediate notice to B. of the non-payment by D.; for B. had a right to insist on the strict rule of law respecting the indorsor of a note, notwithstanding the particular circumstances of the case. Nicholson v. Gouthit, 2 H. Black. 609.

The defendant, being unable to pay a bill when due, which he had accepted, obtained time, and indorsed to the plaintiff, as a security, a bill drawn by himself to his own order, which, when due, was dishonoured by the drawee, but the holder omitted to give the defendant notice:—Held, that by these laches the defendant was not only discharged as indorsor of the one bill, but also as acceptor of the other. Bridges v. Berry, 3 Taunt. 130.

12. When waived.

The expression by the drawer, "if I am bound to pay it I will," is no waiver of the want of notice of non-payment by the acceptor. Dennis v. Morrice, 3 Esp. 158—Kenyon.

But where the drawer said he had no regular residence, but would call and see if the bill was paid:—Held, that he had waived the objection of want of notice. Phipson v. Kneller, 4 Camp. 285; 1 Stark. 116—Ellenborough.

If, after a bill is dishonoured, the indorsor offer to pay the holder so much in the pound on the amount; this dispenses with proof of the notice of dishonour. Margetson v. Aitken, 3 C. & P. 338—Tenterden.

An offer on the part of the indorsor of a bill to pay part of the amount, and the costs, and to give a warrant of attorney for the residue, will not dispense with the proof of notice of dishonour. Standage v. Creighton, 5 C. & P. 406—Denman.

It was proved, in an action against the indorsor of a bill, that two months after it was due, it was produced to him, and inquiries were made as to the drawer and acceptor; upon which he said that if the holder would take 10s. in the pound, he would secure it:—Held, sufficient to dispense with proof of notice of dishonour. Dixon v. Elliott, 5 C. & P. 437—Park.

In an action against the drawer of a foreign bill, a promise of payment by the defendant after the bill was due, is sufficient evidence of a protest for non-payment, and notice of the dishonour commodation bill, that the bill will be satisfied before the next term. Weed v. Brown, 1 Stark. 217—Ellenborough.

And, semble, that a defence of payment by the drawer is a waiver of laches in the holder not having given due notice of dishonour. Sturges v. Derrick, Wightw. 76.

After part payment, with a full knowledge of the default, a party cannot insist upon want of notice or neglect of presentment. Vaughan v. Fuller, 2 Sira. 1246.

So, after a promise to pay. Anson v. Bailey, Bull. N. P. 276.

But a knowledge of the default is essential. Bleasard v. Hirst, 5 Burr. 2670.

The indorsee of a note may recover upon it against the payee and indorser, on evidence of a promise to pay it, made some time after the dishonour of the note by him to a subsequent indorsee, who then held it; without direct proof by the plaintiff, that due notice of the dishonour was given to such payee and indorser. Potter v. Raynor, 13 East, 417.

But a subsequent proposal by the indorser to pay the bill by instalments, made without knowledge of the indorsee's laches, is not a waiver of the want of notice. Goodall v. Dally, 1 T. R. 712. And see Roscoe v. Hardy, 12 East, 434; 2 Camp. 458.

And where the drawer or indorser, after being arrested, without acknowledging his liability, merely offers to give a bill by way of compromise, it does not obviate the necessity of proving notice. Cuming v. French, 2 Camp. 106, n.—Ellenborough.

Where the holder of a bill, upon its being dishonoured, received part payment, and for the residue another bill, drawn and accepted by persons not parties to the original bill; and afterwards sued the drawer and acceptor upon the original bill:—Held, that it was sufficient for him to prove presentment of the substituted bill to the acceptor for payment, and that it was dishonoured, without proving that he gave notice of the dishonour to the drawer of the substituted bill. Bishop v. Rowe, and Sams v. Bayley, 3 M. & S. 362.

In an action against indorser of a note, payable at twelve months after date, a parol agreement entered into between him and the maker when it was drawn, that it was not to be demanded until estates of the maker had been sold, and that the defendant indorsed such note as a surety only, cannot be received in evidence as a waiver of the notice of its dishonour. Free v. Hawkins, 1 Moore, 535.

Want of notice to a bankrupt drawer of the dishonour of a bill, may be supplied by evidence of his acknowledgement after the act of bankruptcy, that it would not be paid. Brett v. Levett, 13 East, 213; 1 Rose, 102.

to assist him in so doing; and the drawer received the money and promised to take up the bill accordingly:—Held, that in an action by the indorsee against the drawer, the latter might nevertheless set up as a defence that the bill was not duly presented for payment, and that he had not had regular notice of its dishonour. Kaler v. Birch, 3 Camp. 107—Ellenborough: & P. Foster v. Jurdison, 16 East, 105.

But that the sum paid him by the acceptor was money had and received to the plaintiff's use. Id.

A declaration by the payees against the drawers of a bill averred presentment to, and non-payment by the drawees, neither of which averments were proved:—Held, that the notice to the drawers was waived, by proof of an order given by the latter to the drawees not to pay the bill if presented; but as to the fact of presentment, though the payees were informed of such order before the bill became due. Hill v. Hoop, D. & R. N. P. C. 57—Abbott.

In an action against the drawer, the court of C. P. left it to the jury to presume from circumstances (such as the payment of a part of a bill without any objection to want of notice,) &c. that due notice had been regularly given. Hawford v. Wilson, 1 Taunt. 12.

If in an action against an indorser, who is discharged by laches, the holder relies upon a new promise, he must prove he has demanded payment from the acceptor, before the commencement of the action. Brown v. McDermott, 5 Esp. 265—Ellenborough.

But it has since been held, that it is sufficient evidence of presentment for payment and notice of dishonour, that the defendant absolutely promised to pay the note or bill after it was due. Taylor v. Jones, 2 Camp. 165—Bayley: & P. Lundie v. Robertson, 6 East, 231.

Any admission by a defendant as indorser of his liability, made when he was arrested and ignorant of the facts, and whether he was bound by law to pay, is not binding. Roscoe v. Redwood, 1 Esp. 155—Kenyon.

Proof that the drawer of a bill knew two days after its maturity that it was unpaid, and in the hands of a particular indorsee, and objected to pay it on the ground of fraud in the obtaining of it, is evidence to go to a jury that he had received regular notice of dishonour. Wilkins v. John, 2 B. & Adol. 188; 1 M. & Rob. 41.

XI. PROTEST FOR NON-PAYMENT.

1. When necessary.

By 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 98, bills expressed to be paid in any other place than the place therein mentioned as the residence of the drawee, if not accepted, may be protested for non-payment in that place without further presentment to the drawee, unless the amount be paid on the day of payment.

By 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 17, inland bills for 5*l.* or upwards, payable after date, may be protested.

The provisions of 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 17, respecting protests of inland bills, do not apply to such bills as are made payable after sight. Leftley v. Mills, 4 T. R. 170.

Therefore an acceptor of such a bill, who refuses payment on the third day of grace, is not liable to any charge for the noting of the bill. Id.

To entitle the indorsee of an inland bill to recover interest from the drawer, it is not necessary to protest the same for non-payment. Windle v. Andrews, 2 B. & A. 696; 2 Stark. 425.

It is not necessary to set out the protest of an inland bill, unless the party goes for the interest and cost; but if it be set out, it must be proved. Boulager v. Talleyrand; 2 Esp. 550—Kenyon.

After a bill has been protested for non-acceptance, a second protest is gratuitous and unnecessary. De La Torre v. Barclay, 1 Stark. 7—Ellenborough.

A protest is necessary in the case of the acceptors of a foreign bill for honour. Hoare v. Cazenove, 16 East, 391.

A party to a bill is not liable for money paid to his use by a person who takes up the bill for his honour, unless a formal protest of payment to his honour be made before payment of the bill, that being the usual custom of merchants. Vandewall v. Tyrrell, M. & M. 87—Tenterden.

A person who pays a bill for the honour of any of the parties, becomes, on payment, a holder upon the transfer of the person for whom he made the payment, and not of the person he has paid, and may not only sue the latter but the other parties to the bill. Mertens v. Winnington, 1 Esp. 112—Kenyon.

In an action on a bill by a plaintiff, who had paid it under protest for the honour of one of several indorsors:—Held sufficient, on special demurrer to a declaration against the drawer, to state that the plaintiff had paid the bill under protest, according to the usage and custom of merchants, without stating that he had paid it to the last indorsee, or that the plaintiff had any title to the bill. Cox v. Earle, 3 B. & A. 430.

Bills were drawn by A. in England, on B. in the East Indies, payable sixty days after sight, and a bond was entered into, conditioned to be void, if the bills should be duly paid in India, or come back to England duly protested for non-payment, and the amount of them paid by the obligor within a certain time after they should be so returned protested for non-payment. The bills were sent to India, but, before they arrived, B., the drawee had left the country, and his agents there refused to accept them; they were then protested in India for non-acceptance, sent back to England so protested, and being presented to the drawer here for payment, were protested for non-payment: this was holden to be a substantial performance of the condition of the bond. French v. Campbell, 2 H. Black. 163.

But the court of K. B. upon error brought in that court in this case reversed the judgment of the court of C. P. Campbell v. French (in error,) 6 T. R. 200.

In declaring against the indorsor of a foreign bill, the omission of the averment of protest is only matter of form, and cannot be taken advantage of under a general demurrer. Salomens v. Slavelly, 3 Dougl. 298.

2. How made and proved.

Semble, if a foreign bill be regularly protested and noted, the protest may be drawn up in form at any time afterwards. Chaters v. Bell, 4 Esp. 48—Kenyon. And see Selw. N. P. 379.

It is not necessary that notice of non-acceptance or non-payment of a bill should be accompanied with a copy of the protest. Cromwell v. Hynson, 2 Esp. 511—Kenyon.

Where the drawer of a foreign bill, at the time of drawing, was in a foreign country, but returned home before it became due, at which time it was dishonoured and protested, but notice of the dishonour only, and not of the protest, was left at the drawer's house:—Held, that this was sufficient. Robins v. Gibson, 1 M. & S. 288; 3 Camp. 334.

A promise of payment by the defendant (the drawer) after a bill was due, is sufficient evidence of a protest for non-payment, and notice of the dishonour of the bill. Gibbon v. Coggon, 2 Camp. 188—Ellenborough. And see Greenway v. Hindley, 4 Camp. 52.

A foreign bill was drawn by A. upon C. & Co., who resided at Liverpool, in favour of L. R. & Co., and by A. indorsed to the plaintiffs. The bill was drawn "sixty days after sight, pay to L. R. & Co., in London," &c. It was refused acceptance by the drawees, but accepted under protest for the honour of the drawer by the defendants, as follows:—"Accepted, under protest, for honour of R. L. & Co., and will be paid for their account if regularly protested, and refused when due." This bill was presented for payment at the residence of the drawees in Liverpool, and protested at Liverpool, for non-payment; but it was not presented for payment or protested in London where the drawees had not any house of business:—Held, that the holders were entitled to recover against the acceptors for honour; and that, under these circumstances, a presentment in London, and protest there, were not necessary. Mitchell v. Baring, 4 C. & P. 35; M. & M. 381—Tenterden. New trial refused.

In an action by the payee against the drawer of a bill, the declaration stated, that the latter drew it at "St. Helena, to wit, at Westminster," and did not aver a protest either for non-acceptance or non-payment: on the production of the bill, it was dated at St. Helena, and not stamped: on an objection, that it was inadmissible as an inland bill, for want of such stamp, and that the plaintiff had given no evidence of a protest for non-acceptance or non-payment:—Held, that as there was evidence of a subsequent promise by the defendant to pay the amount of the bill, coupled with a letter written by his attorney, offering terms for payment, it was a waiver of these objections, although such attorney swore that such offer was made without prejudice. Patterson v. Becker, 6 Moore, 319.

XII. ACCEPTOR AND MAKER.

1. To what Amount liable.

The acceptor is liable to the full amount of the bill, as between himself and third persons, but only to the sum for which the acceptance was given as between himself and the drawer. Darnell v. Williams, 2 Stark. 166.—Ellenborough.

Therefore, in an action brought against him, he may show that he accepted it for value as to part, and as an accommodation as to the rest. Id.

And a party who takes a bill from the drawer and knew that it was an accommodation bill, cannot recover from the acceptor more than the amount of the balance as between him and the drawer. Jones v. Hibbert, 2 Stark. 304.—Bayley. And see Solomon v. Turner, 1 Stark. 51.

The indorsee of an accommodation bill, who takes it knowing it to be such, and advances on it but part of the amount, can only recover as much as he really paid; aliter, where the bill has been regularly drawn, on a fair account, in the course of trade, in such case the indorsee may recover the whole. Wiffen v. Roberts, 1 Esp. 261.—Kenyon.

The indorsee of a bill, having received part of the contents from the drawer, cannot recover more than the residue from the acceptor. Bacon v. Searles, 1 H. Black. 88; And see Beck v. Robley, 1 H. Black. 89, n.; Bayl. Bills. 125.

If a bill be given in consideration of the defendant entering into partnership with the plaintiff, and the treaty be afterwards broken off, the plaintiff is entitled to recover a verdict on the bill to the amount of the damages he has sustained, and not to the full amount of the bill. Ledger v. Ewer, Peake, 216.—Kenyon.

Where the indorser paid part of the amount of a bill to the holder, it was held he might recover the same against the acceptor as money paid to his use. Pownall v. Ferrand, 6 B. & C. 439; 9 D. & R. 603.

2. When for Accommodation.

A bill, accepted for the accommodation of the drawer, becoming due, a third person, expecting to have funds in his hands belonging to the son of the drawer, took it up, in order to prevent proceedings against the drawer, on condition that he should be allowed to stand in the place of the holder (the first indorsee,) and sue in his name: this does not discharge the acceptor from an action afterwards brought by such third person in the name of the indorsee, even although the former had declared that he would not trouble the acceptor. Adams v. Gregg, 2 Stark. 531.—Abbott.

Although the holder of a bill had notice when he took it, that the acceptor had only accepted it for the accommodation of the drawer, yet the acceptor is bound to pay it, and nothing can discharge him but payment or a release. Ireland (Bank) v. Beresford, 6 Dow, 237.

The acceptor of an accommodation bill having delivered it to A. for a special purpose, and the latter, without performing his trust, having quitted the country after committing an act of bankruptcy, was pursued by a creditor, who obtained the bill from him in ignorance of his bankruptcy, and of the circumstances under which the bill was accepted:—Held, that the acceptor was not liable upon the bill at the suit of the creditor who had so possessed himself of it. Smith v. De Witts, 6 D. & R. 120.

Where a party accepts bills drawn by one partner on a firm for his private accommodation, upon the understanding that the drawer will provide for the bills when due, no action on the bills lies against the acceptor either by the drawer alone or by his firm jointly. Sparrow v. Chisman, 4 M. & R. 206.

Where A. gave an accommodation acceptance to B., which B. gave to C. as a security for some acceptances of his, and these acceptances, when they became due, were paid by B. out of the produce of other acceptances given by C., but A.'s acceptance was not given up, though C. was desired not to present it, and A. informed that it would not be presented:—Held, that the original transaction was continued; and A., not calling for the delivery of the bill, must be presumed to have allowed it to remain as a security in the hands of C. for such of his acceptances as were subsequent to those for which it was at first given. Woodroffe v. Hayne, 1 C. & P. 600.—Best.

A. having accepted bills for B.'s accommodation, B., by way of collateral security, lodged in his hands a bill of lading of certain goods deliverable to C., who had no interest in them. A. paid his acceptances, and B., being indebted to him to that amount, became bankrupt. D. got possession of the goods and sold them:—Held, that A. might maintain an action for money had and received against D. to recover the proceeds. Favenc v. Hullett, 1 Camp. 554.

If A. is under acceptance to B., he may retain money of B.'s in his hands to discharge it, until the bill is delivered up, or he receives sufficient indemnity. Madden v. Kempster, 1 Camp. 12.—Ellenborough; S. P. Morse v. Williams, 3 Camp. 418.

The acceptor of several bills received a power of attorney from the drawer to receive some money and hold it as a security:—Held, that he could not retain the money after the bankruptcy of the drawer. Hovill v. Lethwaite, 5 Esp. 158.—Ellenborough.

A person taking up a bill for the honour of the drawer, has no right against the acceptor without effects. Ex parte Lambert, 13 Ves. jun. 179.

A. & Co., bankers in the country, being pressed by B. & Co., bankers in town, to whom they were indebted, to send up any bills they could procure, transmitted for account an accommodation bill, accepted by D.; when the bill became due, the balance was in favour of B. & Co., but the bills were not withdrawn, and afterwards the balance between the houses turned considerably in favour of A. & Co., and was so when B. & Co. became bankrupts:—Held, that A. & Co. were entitled to recover against the acceptor. Atwood v. Crowdie, 1 Stark. 483—Ellenborough.

A. accepts a bill for the accommodation of B., which B. delivers to C., his creditor, to provide for a bill about to become due; C. before A.'s bill becomes due, returns it to B., as useless, in order that it may be forwarded to A., and abandons all claim upon the bill; C. cannot, by subsequently obtaining possession of the bill, acquire a right of action against A. Cartwright v. Williams, 2 Stark. 340—Ellenborough.

A. sold goods to B. in America, to be shipped for a European port, and paid for by bills in different sets, and at different dates, drawn by B. in favour of A. upon C. & Co., a mercantile house in London; D. was appointed supercargo and joint trustee by A. and B. for securing remittances to the house in London, for the honour of the bills. The goods being shipped for Europe, B. and D. respectively advised C. & Co. of the transaction, who effected an insurance upon the cargo, by B.'s direction and at his expense. The ship in her voyage was captured; and B. abandoned the cargo to the underwriters as for a total loss; the amount of which was paid to C. & Co. in London, who placed it to the credit of B.; and honoured the first set of bills before any fruits were received from the policy, and advised A. of that fact; they subsequently advised him of the payment of a second set, stating that they did not know what would be the fate of the third, which had not then appeared for acceptance, but that they would do all they could to prevent loss to the parties. Part of the remaining set was subsequently paid, but the rest was refused payment by C. & Co. B. became bankrupt, and C. & Co. accounted with him prior to, and with his assignees subsequent to his bankruptcy, for all the money ever received by them on his account. A. received under B.'s commission a dividend upon the bills remaining unpaid; and his administrator brought an action for money had and received against C. & Co. for the balance:—Held, that the action was not maintainable. Neale v. Reid, 3 D. & R. 158; 1 B. & C. 657.

Where the indorsee of a bill having notice that it was accepted without consideration, receives part payment from the drawer, and gives him time to pay the residue, he thereby discharges the acceptor. Laxton v. Peat, 2 Camp. 185—Ellenborough. Overruled in Fentum v. Pocock, 1 Marsh. 14; 5 Taunt. 192.

If the holder of an accommodation bill take a cognovit from the drawer, for payment by instalments, he does not thereby discharge the acceptor, whether at the time of taking it he knew that it was an accommodation bill or not. Fentum v. Pocock, 5 Taunt. 192; 1 Marsh. 14.

The acceptor of a bill for the accommodation of the drawer is not discharged by time given to the drawer. Raggett v. Armare, 4 Taunt. 730.

In another case it was held, that where the holder of a bill, known by him to be for accommodation, gave time to the drawer, without the consent of the acceptor, the latter was not discharged, Kerrison v. Coake, 3 Camp. 362—Gibbs.

One W. drew a bill upon the defendant, to whom he was in the habit of consigning goods for sale; the bill was accepted, but neither party at the time knew the state of the account between them. It afterwards appeared that the balance of the account was considerably in favour of the defendant at the time he accepted the bill:—Held, that, nevertheless, it was not an accommodation bill. Bagnall v. Andrewes, 4 M. & P. 839; 7 Bing. 217.

The plaintiff accepted a bill for the accommodation of one H., who deposited it with the defendant as a security for goods bought of him. H. afterwards paid for the goods; but, he being further indebted to the defendant, the latter refused to restore the bill, and subsequently indorsed it for value to a third person, who sued the plaintiff thereon, and compelled him to pay the amount, with costs:—Held, that the plaintiff might recover from the defendant the amount of the bill on account for money paid; and semble, that he might also have recovered the costs of the action brought against him by the holder, had they been mentioned in the particulars of demand. Bleaden v. Charles, 5 M. & P. 14.

Bills were accepted by A. for the accommodation of B., who being one of the executors of C., and having considerable sums of money in his hands belonging to C.'s estate, which were deposited in a box in B.'s possession, discounted such bills with the monies belonging to C.'s estate, by taking out of the box the requisite amount, deducting the discount, and at the same time placing the bills in the box:—Held, that B. could not sever his character of an accommodation holder of the said bills, from his character of executor, so as to enable him and his co-executors to sue as indorsees of the bills of exchange for a valuable consideration. — v. Adams, 1 Younge, 117.

Semble, that an indorsee for value, who receives part payment from the drawer of an accommodation bill, and takes a new bill to give time for the payment of the remainder, does not thereby discharge the acceptor, unless he was aware that the acceptance had been given for the drawer's accommodation. Rolfe v. Wyatt, 5 C. & P. 181—Tindal.

Whether, if he knew that fact, it would make any difference, quere? Id.

3. Discharge by Payment or Release.

Nothing but payment or a release will discharge the acceptor of a bill of exchange. Fentum v. Pocock, 1 Marsh. 14; 5 Taunt. 192.

Or an express declaration by the holder. Dingwall v. Dunster, 1 Dougl. 247.

And it must be for consideration. Parker v. Leigh, 2 Stark. 228—Ellenborough.

And unconditional. Whitley v. Tricker, 1 Camp. 35—Ellenborough.

Though the payee receives part of the money from the drawer when the bill becomes due, and takes an undertaking from him indorsed on the bill, by which he promises to pay the remainder at a future time, it does not discharge the acceptor. Ellis v. Galindo, 1 Dougl. 250, n; Bayl. Bills, 166.

If the drawer of a bill payable to his own order, before it is indorsed, give the acceptor a general release; this is no defence to an action by the indorsee against the acceptor unless there be proof that the indorsee knew of the release. Dod v. Edwards, 2 C. & P. 609—Tenterden.

Plaintiff declared against the defendant as acceptor of a bill, payable to certain persons using the firm of Messrs. M'Brair, Watson, & Co.; defendant pleaded that the said Messrs. M'Brair, Watson, & Co. had accepted satisfaction; plaintiff replied, that the said persons so as aforesaid using the firm of Messrs. M'Brair & Co. (leaving out the name of Watson) did not accept satisfaction, and concluded to the country. Seemingly that this variance could only be taken advantage of on special demurrer. Bell v. De Costa, 2 B. & P. 446.

An arrangement between drawer and drawee which discharges the latter's acceptance as regards the drawer, has not that effect as regards an indorsee for valuable consideration. Clerke v. Cock, 4 East, 57.

Where defendant was acceptor of two bills of exchange drawn by C., and by him indorsed to his bankers; payment after they become due by the defendant to C. is not alone sufficient to discharge defendant, as the holders of the bill are entitled to the amount. Field v. Carr, 5 Bing. 13; 2 M. & P. 46.

In an action by the payee of a bill, accepted by the defendant for a valuable consideration: evidence that the plaintiff had been discharged as an insolvent debtor, after the bill became due, and had given in a blank schedule, is not sufficient to show that the bill had been satisfied. Hurt v. Newman, 3 Camp. 13—Ellenborough.

Where the holder of a bill, which was a security for a debt due from A., B., C., and D., indorsed it over and put it into the hands of B., C., and D., who settled their accounts with A., saying that the bill had been satisfied by them, but the bill itself was not produced to nor seen by A. at the time of such settlement:—Held, that this was no defence to A. in an action by the holder against A., B., C., and D., the bill not having been in fact satisfied by the persons to whom it had been indorsed and handed over. Featherstone v. Hunt, 1 B. & C. 113, 2 D. & R. 233. See also Brown v. Leonard, 2 Chit. 120. Wright v. Puliam, 2 Chit. 121.

H. accepted a bill for the accommodation of B., the drawer, who indorsed it over as a security for a debt, and afterwards became bankrupt. The estate; and he afterwards gave them a release of all demands, no mention being made, during this transaction, of the bill which had been discounted. He knew at the time of the agreement, but not when he took the bill, that it was accepted for accommodation:—Held, that notwithstanding the above release, the acceptor was still liable at the suit of the indorsee. Harrison v. Countess, 3 B. & Adol. 36.

A general receipt on the bank of a bill is prima facie evidence of its having been paid by the acceptor, and will not of itself be evidence of a payment by the drawer, though it is produced by him. Scholey v. Walsby, Poake, 25—Ken.

The production of a bill from the custody of an acceptor is not prima facie evidence of his having paid it, without proof that it was once in circulation after it had been accepted. Pfaff v. Vanhalsberg, 2 Camp. 439—Ellenborough.

And payment is not to be presumed from a receipt indorsed on the bill, unless the receipt is shown to be in the handwriting of the plaintiff, or some other person entitled to demand payment. Id.

4. Discharge by Non-presentment.

An acceptor of a bill is not discharged by the bill not being presented for payment for three or four years after it becomes due: he is only discharged by payment of the bill, or by a direct and direct agreement by the holder to discharge him. Ferguson v. Smethley, 2 C. & P. 497: B. & M. 14—Littledale.

And where the indorsee neglected to present bills for payment for several years, and in the mean time charged the drawer with interest, but not with the amount of the bills; and where they did not appropriate balances which they had in their hands, as bankers to the acceptor, to pay the bills, or indeed give the acceptors notice they held the bills: it was held, that the only point to be left to the jury was, whether, from the transactions of the parties, the indorsee had expressly discharged the acceptors, or expressly released their liability. Id.

The acceptor of a bill payable at a banker's is not discharged from his liability, by the neglect of the holder to present the bill for payment at the time it becomes due, even though the banker failed before the bill was actually presented, which was not until some weeks after it was due, and the acceptor had always, up to the period of their failure, a balance in their hands sufficient to cover the acceptance. Turner v. Hayden, 6 D. & R. 5; 4 B. & C. 1; R. & M. 215; S. P. Blades v. Gent, 5 B. & A. 244.

Where a bill, payable at a banker's in London, which, by reason of being mislaid, was not presented for payment, and the acceptor was some months afterwards informed of its being mislaid, he was held not to be discharged, and the drawer might set off the amount in an action brought against him by the acceptor, although the banker at whose house the bill was payable failed in the interval; and the acceptor had at all times, up to the failure of the bankers, a balance in their hands sufficient to cover the acceptance. Sebag v. Abitbol, 4 M. & S. 462; 1 Stark. 79.

5. Discharge by other means.

The acceptor or maker always remains liable, notwithstanding any change in the circumstances of other parties. Anderson v. Cleveland, 13 East, 430, n.

The acceptor is liable to the holder, though the latter has given a discharge to a party on it, which will not discharge one liable prior to himself. Smith v. Knox, 3 Esp. 46—Eldon.

If there be a virtual acceptance in consideration that goods shall be consigned to the acceptor to answer the bills, together with a policy of insurance upon them, the holder of the bill, by taking to the goods and selling them, discharges the acceptor. Mason v. Hunt, 1 Dougl. 297.

Where the drawer of a bill payable to his own order, and indorsed by him to T., and by T. to B., upon the bill being dishonoured, paid the amount to B., who struck out his own and T.'s indorsement, and returned it to the drawer, and the drawer afterwards passed it to the plaintiff:—Held, that the plaintiff might recover against the acceptor. Callow v. Lawrence, 3 M. & S. 95; S. P. Hubbard v. Jackson, 4 Bing. 390; 1 M. & P. 11; 3 C. & P. 134.

The holder of a bill sued the acceptor, and charged him in execution: the latter having obtained his discharge under the Lord's Act, the holder then sued the drawer, who, after paying the bill, sued the acceptor, and charged him in execution: this was held to be regular, for the defendant's having been charged in execution, at the suit of the holder, was not a satisfaction, as between the drawer and acceptor. Macdonald v. Bovington, 4 T. R. 825.

A bill drawn on a factor, and payable out of the produce of goods in his hands, after discharging prior acceptances, and accepted by him generally, is chargeable on him, notwithstanding any balance then due to him in a running account with his principal. Maber v. Massias, 2 W. Black. 1072.

Where the payee and holder of a note appoints the maker his executor, the debt is discharged, and no action can be maintained on the note even by a person to whom the executor had indorsed it. Freakley v. Fox, 9 B. & C. 130; 4 M. & R. 18.

A plea of tender after the day of payment of a bill of exchange, and before action brought, is not good though the defendant aver that he was always ready to pay from the time of the tender, and that the sum tendered was the whole money then due, owing, or payable to the plaintiff in respect of the bill, with interest from the time of the default, for the damages sustained by the plaintiff by reason of the non-performance of the promise. Hume v. Peploe, 8 East, 168.

Where the maker of a note paid money into the hands of an agent to retire it, and the agent tendered the money to the holder of the note, on condition of having it delivered up; the note being mislaid, this condition was not complied with; and the agent afterwards became bankrupt with the money in his hands:—Held, that the maker was still responsible on the note; but that interest was not recoverable after the time of the tender. Dent v. Dunn, 3 Camp. 296—Ellenb.

The defendant accepted two bills, drawn on him by T. C., which the latter indorsed and paid into his bankers' (the plaintiffs,) who entered the amount as cash to the credit side of T. C.'s account in their books. The bills having been dishonoured, the plaintiffs entered their amount to the debit side of T. C.'s account; and shortly afterwards the defendant paid the amount of both bills to T. C., but did not require them to be delivered up. T. C. continued his banking account with the plaintiffs for three years after the bills became due, and paid in several sums to his credit, sufficient to cover all the items to his debit prior to the date, and including the amount of the bills. T. C. afterwards became bankrupt, and the plaintiffs proved their debt under his commission without noticing the bills, and a year afterwards sued the defendant as acceptor, having made no previous demand on him in respect of them:—Held, that he was not liable. Field v. Carr, 2 M. & P. 46; 5 Bing. 13. And see Clayton's case, 1 Mer. 572; Bodenham v. Purchas, 2 B. & A. 39; Simson v. Ingham, 2 B. & C. 65; 3 D. & R. 249.

XIII. DRAWER AND INDORSOR.

1. Liability.

On Non-acceptance.—The drawer of a foreign bill was held liable immediately upon the refusal of the drawee to accept, before the time for payment had expired. Bright v. Purrier, Bull. N. P. 269; S. P. Milford v. Mayor, 1 Dougl. 55.

If a person, to whom a bill is directed generally, accepts it payable at a particular place, the holder may resort to the drawer as for non-acceptance. Gammon v. Schmoll, 5 Taunt. 344; 1 Marsh. 80.

The acceptance or non-acceptance does not vary the responsibility of an indorsor, whose duty it is to pay the bill when due, if the prior parties do not. Tanner v. Bean, 6 D. & R. 338; 4 B. & C. 312.

In an action by the indorsee against the indorsor of a bill alleged in the declaration to have been accepted, the plaintiff is not bound to prove the acceptance in order to entitle him to recover. Id.

But the indorsee must endeavour to receive the money from the drawer before he can resort to the indorsor. Hull v. Pitfield, 1 Wils. 47; Bayl. Bills, 263.

An indorsor is liable upon a bill which is returned for non-acceptance before the expiration of the time limited for payment. Ballingalls v. Gloster, 3 East, 481; 4 Esp. 268.

The payee of a bill, having presented it for acceptance, which was refused, without giving notice to the drawer or indorsor, indorsed over the bill, and acceptance was again refused to the indorsee:—Held, that he might still recover on the bill against the drawer, notwithstanding the laches of the payee. O'Keefe v. Dunn, 6 Taunt. 305; 1 Marsh. 613. And see Dunn v. O'Keefe (in error,) 5 M. & S. 282.

In an action against the drawer or indorsor of a bill dishonoured by non-payment after being accepted, although it be unnecessary to state the acceptance in the declaration, if it is stated it must be proved; but a promise to pay after the bill was due, is a sufficient admission of the acceptance, as well as of the handwriting of the defendant himself and of the other parties to the bill. Jones v. Morgan, 2 Camp. 474—Ellenb.

On Dishonour.—The drawer is only bound to pay within a reasonable time after receiving notice of the bill being dishonoured; therefore, where he received notice the day after the bill became due, a tender on the following day was held to be in time. Walker v. Barnes, 1 Marsh. 36; 7 Taunt. 240.

An indorsement by the drawer does not give him a new character as indorsor, or divest him of any liability to which as maker of the bill he would have been subject. Stratton v. Hill, 3 Price, 253.

Where by the custom of trade, bills are given before the money is received, if the payee's agent, who was to pay the money, becomes insolvent before the money is received, the drawer is not liable on the bill. Puget de Bras v. Forbes, 1 Esp. 117—Loughborough.

In actions upon inland bills, by indorsee against indorsor, the plaintiff must prove a demand from, or due diligence used to get the money from the acceptor; but need not prove any demand from, or inquiry after the drawer. Heylyn v. Adamson, 2 Burr. 669; 2 Ld. Ken. 379.

2. Discharge.

By Payment.—In an action by the indorsee against the drawer, though the indorsor has paid part of the money to the indorsee, he may recover the whole sum in the bill against the drawer. Johnson v. Kennion, 2 Wils. 262.

If the drawer of a note be sued by the indorsee, and the bail for the drawer pay the debt and costs, this absolutely discharges the indorsor as much as if the drawer himself had paid the note. Hull v. Pitfield, 1 Wils. 46; Bayl. Bills, 263.

If the indorsee receive a part of the money due upon a note from the drawer, the indorsor is discharged. Id.

If the holder receive part payment from the indorsor he may still recover the residue against the drawer, if not the whole. Walwyn v. St. Quintin, 1 B. & P. 652; 2 Esp. 515.

The holder may sue a subsequent indorsor, notwithstanding he has ineffectually taken in execution the body of a prior indorsor, and afterwards set him at liberty. Hayling v. Mullhall, 2 W. Black. 1235.

One of two drawers of a joint note, payable twelve months after date, who is surety for the other to the amount, is not discharged by the holder not having demanded payment from the surety when due, nor till after having entered into a deed of composition with the principal and his other creditors, and received the composition money. Perfect v. Musgrave, 6 Price, 111.

The indorsor of a bill is not discharged by reason of the holder having given the bill to the acceptor, and received his check for the amount, which check was returned for want of effects. Ridley v. Blackett, Peake's Add. Cas. 62—Kenyon.

Giving Time to Acceptor.—A mere delay by the holder to sue the acceptor, does not discharge the drawer or indorsors, the right to sue not being suspended. Philpot v. Bryant, 1 M. & P. 754; 4 Bing. 717; 3 C. & P. 346.

Therefore, where the executrix of a deceased acceptor verbally promised the holder to pay the bill out of her own private income, and the latter agreed to give her time, provided interest were paid, and accordingly forbore to sue:—Held, that the drawer was not thereby discharged. Id.

If the holder, after protest for non-payment, and notice to the drawer, forbear to sue the acceptor, the drawer is not thereby discharged. Walwyn v. St. Quintin, 1 B. & P. 652; 2 Esp. 515.

So, after protest only, if the drawer be not entitled to notice. Id.

Secus, before protest, or if the holder take security from the acceptor after protest. Id.

If the holder give time to the acceptor of a bill or drawer of a note, after it has been dishonoured, the indorsor is discharged. Tindal v. Brown, 1 T. R. 167; 2 T. R. 186.

So, if the holder receive a composition from the acceptor, he discharges the drawer. Ex parte Wilson, 11 Ves. jun. 410.

If the holder of a bill when due, after taking part payment from the acceptor, agree to take a new acceptance from him for the remainder, payable at a future date, and that in the mean time the holder shall keep the original bill in his hands as a security; such agreement amounts to giving time and a new credit to the acceptor, and discharges the indorsor, who was no party to such agreement; though the drawer might have had no effects in the hands of the acceptor. Gould v. Robson, 8 East, 576.

So, if the indorsee having sued the acceptor, receive of him a part payment, and take a security for the remainder, with the exception of a nominal sum only, he is precluded from suing the indorsor. English v. Darley, 2 B. & P. 61; 3 Esp. 49; Bayl. Bills, 275.

If, after a bill has been dishonoured, and notice of dishonour duly given, the holder take part of the amount of the acceptor, and offer to take a warrant of attorney to secure the payment of the residue by instalments, which offer is not accepted: this is not such a giving of time to the acceptor as will discharge the drawer. Hewitt v. Goodrick, 2 C. & P. 468—Abbott.

But if the holder had disabled himself from suing on the bill, it is otherwise. Id.

Giving time to the acceptor of an accommodation bill, drawn for his own benefit, discharges the drawer in an action by the indorsee; but it is otherwise, where the action is brought against the person for whom the bill is drawn. Hill v. Read, D. & R. N. P. C. 26—Abbott. And see Collett v. Haigh, 3 Camp. 281.

A., the payee of a bill for 87l., having indorsed it to B. for a valuable consideration, and the bill being dishonoured, C., the acceptor, sent another bill for 126l. (which had some time to run) to A., who took up the first bill by means of the second, received the difference in discount, and indorsed the first bill again to D., who sued the drawer before C.'s second bill became due:—Held, that taking the second bill did not amount to giving time and a new credit to the acceptor of the first, so as to discharge the drawer who was no party to the transaction, unless there was evidence of an express consent on the part of A. the payee, to give time, and not to sue upon the first bill until the second was at maturity. Pring v. Clarkson, 2 D. & R. 78; 1 B. & C. 14.

Quære, whether, after the indorsee of a dishonoured bill has brought actions against the indorsor and acceptor, his taking a cognovit of the acceptor for payment by instalments, is such a giving of time as discharges the other parties to the bill? Lee v. Levy, 6 D. & R. 475; 4 B. & C. 399; 1 C. & P. 553, 675.

Quære, whether taking a warrant of attorney from the acceptor, was, under particular circumstances, a giving of time so as to discharge the other parties to the bill? Id.

Semble, that taking a cognovit from the acceptor after an action brought against him, and by that giving him three weeks time before entering up judgment, is not such a giving of time as will discharge the other parties to the bill. Jay v. Warren, 1 C. & P. 532—Abbott.

The drawer is not discharged, although a fi. fa. has been sued out against the acceptor on the same bill. Pole v. Ford, 2 Chit. 125.

An agreement between the holder and the acceptor of a bill dishonoured for non-payment, that the acceptor shall pay to the holder the amount of the bill and no more, discharges the drawer, although his assignees (he being then a bankrupt) are parties to such agreement. De La Torre v. Barclay, 1 Stark. 7—Ellenborough.

Where the holder allowed the acceptor to renew the bill without consulting the indorsor; but he afterwards told the acceptor that it was the best thing that could be done:—Held, that it was not a recognition of the terms granted to the acceptor, and that he was therefore discharged. Withall v. Masterman, 2 Camp. 179—Ellenb.

If the holder of a bill of which payment has been refused, inform the drawer of his intention to take security from the acceptor, and the drawer answer, that he might do as he liked, for that he (the drawer) was discharged for want of notice, and it appear that due notice had been given; the holder may sue the drawer, notwithstanding that he has taken security from the acceptor; for the drawer under such circumstances must be considered as having assented to the security being taken. Clark v. Devlin, 3 B. & P. 363. And see Gould v. Robson, 8 East, 576.

The drawer, knowing that time had been given by the holder to the acceptor, but apprehending that he was still liable upon the bill in default of the acceptor, three months after it was due, said, "that he knew he was liable, and if the acceptor did not pay it, he would:"—Held, that he was bound by such promise. Stevens v. Lynch, 12 East, 38; 2 Camp. 332.

Giving time to Drawer or prior Indorsor.—Discharging any of the indorsors will be a discharge of all subsequent, though not of prior indorsors. Smith v. Knox, 3 Esp. 46—Eldon.

Time given by an indorsee to the payee does not discharge the drawer. Claridge v. Dalton, 4 M. & S. 226.

Where all parties have had due notice of dishonour, a subsequent indorsor is not discharged by a treaty between the attorney of the holder, the drawer, (who was also prior indorsor,) and the acceptor, that the holder should wait a given time for the payment of the balance, in consideration of receiving from the acceptor and prior indorsor, by a certain time, a stipulated proportion of the amount, a part only of which proportion was afterwards paid; although the subsequent indorsor has had no notice of such treaty, or the result, nor was informed of the payment of any part of the money due on the bill, or of the ultimate non-payment of the balance, till some months after the original dishonour of the bill. Badnall v. Samuel, 3 Price, 521.

A letter written by the holders of a promissory note to the defendant, the indorsor, saying, "the maker is not ready to pay, but will be in a week, which is time enough for us," is not giving time so as to discharge the indorsor. Margesson v. Goble, 2 Chit. 364.

An accommodation note in favour of A. was indorsed to B., with notice of the want of consideration; and upon the insolvency of A., B. accepted a dividend, and covenanted not to sue him:—Held, that, nevertheless, he might sue the maker, although in the event of his recovering the amount from him, A. would again become liable to be sued by the maker. Mallett v. Thompson, 5 Esp. 178—Ellenborough.

Where a creditor signed an agreement to accept a composition of so much in the pound in full of his demand, on having a joint note from the debtor and his father, and accordingly received a joint note for the composition on his debt:—Held, first, that this was an accord and satisfaction of the original debt, and that the indorsee of a promissory note, by which the debt was originally secured, could not be sued for the residue of the plaintiff's demand; and second, that

Where an action was brought by several partners as indorsees of a note, against the defendant as indorser:—Held, that a deed of composition, by which one of the partners had discharged a prior indorser operated as a release to the defendant. Ellison v. Dezell, 1 Selw. N. P. 372.

If a defendant has entered into a deed of composition with his creditors containing the usual clause of release, and the plaintiff has executed the deed as a creditor for a certain sum, that is a good defence to an action by the plaintiff as indorsee of a bill to a larger amount, of which the defendant was indorser, and which then lay dishonoured in the plaintiff's hands. But it is no defence as to two similar bills, also of larger amount, which the plaintiff had paid away, and which were then in the hands of third parties. Margetson v. Astin, 3 C. & P. 338—Tentorden.

Waiver of laches.—A letter written by the indorser of a bill who had been applied to for payment, after several days' laches, telling the plaintiff that he would not remit till he received the bill, and desiring the plaintiff, if he considered the defendant as unsafe, to return the bill to Trevor & Co. (who were prior indorsers on the bill, and also bankers at the defendant's place of residence,) was held not to be a waiver of such laches and promise to pay, but that the defendant, on discovering that in law he was discharged, might refuse payment. Borradale v. Lowe, 4 Taunt. 93.

The holder of a bill before it was due, having tendered it for acceptance, which was refused, kept it till due, when it was tendered for payment and refused, and then immediately returned it to the second indorser, who, not knowing of the laches, took up the bill:—Held, that his ignorance when he paid the bill, of the laches of the former holder, did not entitle him to recover against the first indorser who set up such defence. Racoon v. Hardy 12 East, 434; 2 Camp. 458.

XIV. ACTIONS ON.

1. Form and Parties.

Form of Action.—Debt lies by the payee against the maker of a note expressed to be for value received. Bishop v. Young, 2 B. & P. 78.

So, it lies by the drawer against the acceptor of a bill, expressed to be for value received in goods. Priddy v. Henbry, 3 D. & R. 165; 1 B. & C. 674.

So, on a bill payable to the drawer's own order, at the suit of the first indorsee against such drawer. Stratton v. Hill, 3 Price, 253; 2 Chit. 126.

Parties.—If a bill be indorsed in blank, any number of persons may join in suing upon it, drawn in their own right, and it appeared that the bill had been indorsed to them in blank, before the death of one of the firm, who was a partner with the plaintiffs as bankers:—Held, that the action was well brought, without their describing themselves as surviving partners in the declaration, as they were not bound to prove the partnership, or that the bill was indorsed or delivered to them jointly with their deceased partner. Secus, if the bill had been specially indorsed. Attwood v. Rattenbury, 6 Moore, 579.

The delivery of a bill indorsed in blank by the direction of the payee to A., B., & Co., who were bankers, on the account of an insolvent's estate vested in trustees for the benefit of creditors, will not enable A. and B., jointly with a third trustee, to maintain an action against the indorser. Macell v. Kinnear, 1 Stark. 499—Ellenborough.

The drawer of a bill accepted generally, and protested by the payee for non-payment, and afterwards by himself, may in his own name, and without any previous assignment or indorsement from the payee, maintain an action against the acceptor. Perminster v. Symons (in error,) 2 Bro. P. C. 43; 1 Wilm. 185.

Where a bill was indorsed to three partners, in respect of a debt due from the drawer and indorser, and was accepted by the defendant at the request of one of the partners who engaged to provide for it when it became due:—Held, that the assignees of both could not recover against the acceptor, although the one partner was not privy to the engagement of the other. Jackson v. Peck, 3 Stark. 66—Holroyd.

If several persons, not partners in business, separately indorse, for the accommodation of the drawer, a bill which has been previously indorsed by another person; and, on the bill being dishonoured, pay the party who discounted it in equal proportions, they may strike out their own indorsements, and bring a joint action against such previous indorser, to recover the amount of the bill. Low v. Cepstake, 3 C. & P. 300—Bent.

Assumpsit by A., B., and C. against D., as one of the indorsers of a note drawn by E. in favour of C., D. and (himself) E., then in partnership, and by them indorsed to A., B. and C.; a plea in bar, that C., one of the plaintiffs, was liable as an indorser, together with D., was held good on special demurrer. Mainwaring v. Newman, 2 B. & P. 120.

2. At what Time.

An action cannot be brought against the drawer of a bill, till notice of the refusal, insolvency, or absconding of the acceptor. Dagglish v. Weatherby, 2 W. Black. 647.

An action of debt will not lie on a note payable by instalments, till the last day of payment be passed. Rudder v. Price, 1 H. Black. 547.

If a bill be not accepted, an action will lie upon it against the drawer before the time when it is made payable. Milford v. Mayor, 1 Dougl. 55: S. P. Bright v. Purrier, Bull. N. P. 369.

So, an action lies by the indorsee against the indorser of a bill immediately on the non-acceptance of the drawee, though the time for which the bill was drawn be not elapsed. Ballingalls v. Gloster, 3 East, 481; 4 Esp. 268.

In an action by the drawee against the acceptor of a bill for the freight of a chartered ship, which the plaintiff had agreed to renew for three months, if the charterer did not return before the bill was due:—Held, that where no application appeared to have been made for such renewal, the holder might sue before the expiration of the three months. Gibbon v. Scott, 2 Stark. 286—Ellenborough.

3. When lost or destroyed.

By 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 17, s. 3, if any inland bill be lost or miscarried within the time limited for payment, the drawee shall give another of the same tenor to the holder, who, if required, shall give security to indemnify him in case the bill shall be found.

Payment of a bill cannot be enforced without producing it. Davis v. Dodd, 4 Taunt. 608.

The holder of a bill cannot, by the custom of merchants, insist upon payment by the acceptor, without producing and offering to deliver up the bill; and therefore it was held, that the indorsee of a bill, having lost it after he had shown it to the acceptor, who had promised to pay it, could not recover the amount from the acceptor, although the loss was after the bill became due, and the indorsee offered an indemnity. Hansard v. Robinson, 7 B. & C. 90; 9 D. & R. 860; R. & M. 404, n.

In another case it was held, that an action might be maintained on a lost bill of exchange, if the loss did not happen till after the bill became due. Glover v. Thompson, R. & M. 403—Abbott. This was an undefended cause.

An action at law cannot be maintained against the acceptor of a bill which was lost after being indorsed, and which does not appear to have been destroyed, although a bond of indemnity has been tendered to the defendant. Pierson v. Hutchinson, 2 Camp. 211; 6 Esp. 126—Ellenborough.

Nor where one half a bank note was stolen, and the other received. Mayor v. Johnson, 3 Camp. 324—Ellenborough.

In an action by indorsee against acceptor, it appeared that, after action brought and notice of trial, the bill which had been indorsed in blank had been lost:—Held, that although the bill had been drawn more than six years, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover without producing it at the trial. Poole v. Smith, Holt, 144—Gibbs.

Where an unindorsed bill has been lost by the drawer, he may recover against the acceptor, in respect of consideration. Rolt v. Watson, 12 Moore, 510; 4 Bing. 273.

The bearer of a bill, which was lost, may maintain an action against the drawer. Grant v. Vaughan, 3 Burr. 1516; 1 W. Black. 485.

The defendant, being indebted to the plaintiff for goods sold, gave him a bill, not due, drawn and accepted by two other persons, to a greater amount than the price of the goods; and the plaintiff gave the defendant the difference in money, who indorsed the bill in blank, the plaintiff having lost the bill before it was paid:—Held, that he could not sue the defendant on it, or recover the price of the goods, as the defendant had given full value for the bill, and might still be compelled to pay its amount to a bona fide holder. Champion v. Terry, 7 Moore, 130; 3 B. & B. 295.

A check given for stock sold is lost by the vender in going home; the purchaser is immediately informed of this fact, but refuses to pay without an indemnity. Four months after, the bankers on whom the check was drawn stop payment with sufficient money of the drawer's in their hands to answer it:—Held, that under these circumstances an action would not lie for the price of the stock. Bevan v. Hill, 2 Camp. 384—Ellenborough.

It is a good defence to an action on a bill, that it was not produced, or shown to be lost or destroyed, though the party promised to pay it. Powell v. Roach, 6 Esp. 76—Ellenborough.

An express promise to pay the contents of a lost bill, if given without some new consideration, is void. Davis v. Dodd, 4 Taunt. 602.

An averment that the defendant was indebted on a bill, and that the plaintiff having lost the bill, had at his request given him a bond acknowledging payment, and conditioned to indemnify him against the bill, states a good consideration for a promise by the defendant to pay the contents of the bill. Williamson v. Clements, 1 Taunt. 523.

A bill in equity will lie by the last indorsee of a lost bill to recover the amount from the acceptor; and prior indorsees need not be made parties to the suit. Macartney v. Graham, 2 Sim. 285.

A bill for payment of a note which had been cut in two parts, one being produced and the other alleged to be lost, and offering an indemnity, was dismissed, as, on proving the loss, an action might be maintained. Mossop v. Eadon, 16 Ves. jun. 430.

4. Amount recoverable.

(a) Interest.

Interest on a bill or note is to be considered as damages for the detention of the principal money, and forms no part of the original debt: where, therefore, a promissory note was made abroad, and the payee did not sue upon it until thirty years afterwards, and the jury refused to give interest:—Held, after verdict, that the court could not increase the amount of the verdict, by adding such interest. Du Belloix v. Waterpark (Lord,) 1 D. & R. 16; Bayl. Bills, 281.

A jury is not bound to give interest upon a bill or note; and where the instrument has lain dormant for many years, without any claim being made upon it, they may properly refuse it. Id.

Interest ought not to be allowed on a bill or note for any time that it has been in the hands of an alien enemy. Id.

on failure of payment of any instalments, the whole is to become due, the interest is to be calculated on the whole sum remaining unpaid on default of any instalment, and not on the respective times when they would become payable. Blake v. Lawrence, 4 Esp. 148—Ellenborough.

The maker of a promissory note paid money into the hands of an agent to retire it; the agent tendered the money to the holder of the note, on condition of having it delivered up; the note being mislaid, this condition was not complied with; and the agent afterwards became bankrupt with the money in his hands:—Held, that the maker was still responsible on the note, but that interest was not recoverable after the time of the tender. Dent v. Dena, 3 Camp. 286—Ellenb.

In order to entitle the plaintiff to interest against the acceptor, upon a bill specially accepted, it was necessary to prove a presentment at the particular place. Phillips v. Franklin, Gow, 196—Holroyd. But see 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 78.

In an action against the drawer of a foreign bill dishonoured here for non-acceptance, where the plaintiff is allowed a per-centage in the name of damages, he is only entitled to interest from the day when the bill ought to have been paid. Guntz v. Mackenzie, 2 Camp. 51—Ellenb.

But where there is no allowance for damages, the plaintiff is entitled to interest from the day the bill was dishonoured for non-acceptance. Harrison v. Dickson, 3 Camp. 32, n.—Ellenborough.

Interest is given on a note of hand from the time of its becoming payable. Lithgow v. Lyon, Coop. C. C. 29.

When a bill is made payable with interest, it is to be calculated from the date. Daman v. Didden, R. & M. 381—Abbott: S. P. Kennerley v. Nash, 1 Stark. 452—Ellenborough. And see Hopper v. Richmond, 1 Stark. 507.

A bill or note payable on a day certain, carries interest from that day, unless the non-payment has been occasioned by the negligence of the holder. Leung v. Stone, 2 M. & R. 561: S. P. Upton v. Ferrers, (Lord,) 5 Ves. jun. 801.

The drawer of a bill which is dishonoured by the acceptor, is not liable to pay interest for the time which elapses between the day whereon the bill becomes due, and the day when the drawer receives notice of the dishonour. Walker v. Barnes, 5 Taunt. 240; 1 Marsh. 36.

Where an agent having money in his hands belonging to his principal, purchased bills of exchange, which he indorsed specially to the latter, who at the time of the indorsement was dead, but the agent did not know it:—Held, that the administrator of the principal was only entitled to recover interest on bills accepted after the death of the intestate, from the time of the demand of payment made by the administrator, and not from the time the bills became due. Murray v. East India Company, 5 B. & A. 204.

Interest accruing before the act of bankruptcy,

Merou v. Smith, 2 B. & A. 305.

Interest is not recoverable on a bill of exchange, unless it be produced. Fryer v. Brown, R. & M. 145—Abbott.

The defendant being under agreement to pay the plaintiffs the value of certain billets issued by the Peruvian government, on a recommendation by the British government, as a compensation for injury done to the plaintiffs:—Held, that the prothonotary was to estimate the value, as the value of a bill of exchange for the same number of dollars on a house of respectability at Lima, although the billets were at a great discount. Delagat v. Naylor, 5 M. & P. 443; 7 Bing. 400.

(b) Re-exchange.

The acceptor of a foreign bill is not liable for re-exchange, nor for more than the principal sum, together with interest, according to legal rate of interest where the bill is payable. Walsey v. Crawford, 2 Camp. 445—Ellenborough.

Upon a motion to refer it to the master to compute principal, interest, and costs, upon a bill drawn in Scotland, upon and accepted by the defendant in England, the court will not direct the master to allow re-exchange. Nepier v. Schneider, 12 East, 420. And see Goldman v. Tate, 2 B. & P. 55.

A. deposited a sum of money at the banking house of B. in Paris, for which B. gave him his note, "payable in Paris, or at the choice of the bearer of the Union Bank in Dover, or at my usual residence in London, according to the course of exchange upon Paris;" after the note was given, the direct course of exchange between London and Paris ceased altogether, having been previous to its total cessation, extremely low: the note was at a subsequent period presented for acceptance and payment at the residence of B. in London, at which time there was a circuitous course of exchange upon Paris by way of Hamburg:—Held, that A. was entitled to recover upon the note, according to such circuitous course of exchange upon Paris at the time when the note was presented. Hollard v. Barron, 3 B. & P. 325.

A., in England, drew a bill on B. in a foreign country, which, after having been negotiated through another foreign country, was presented to B., who refused to pay it on account of the law of the country in which he resided having prohibited such payment:—Held, that the drawer was liable for the whole amount of the re-exchange between the different countries. Melhuish v. Blinson, 3 H. Black. 378.

A verdict having passed for the defendant, in an action to recover the amount of the re-exchange upon the dishonour of a bill drawn from London on Lisbon, upon evidence that the country were in possession of Portugal when the bill became due, and Lisbon was then blockaded by a British squadron, and there was in fact no direct exchange between Lisbon and London, though bills had in some few instances been negotiated between them through Hamburg and America about that period; the court refused to grant a new trial, on the presumption that the jury had founded their verdict upon the fact that no re-exchange was proved to their satisfaction to have existed between Lisbon and London at the time; the question having been properly left to them, to allow damages in the name of re-exchange, if the plaintiff, who had indorsed the dishonoured bill to the holder, had either paid or were liable to pay re-exchange; and saving the question of law, whether any exchange or re-exchange could be allowed between this and an enemy's country. De Tastet v. Baring, 11 East, 265; 2 Camp. 65.

(c) Costs and Expenses.

Expenses of noting and postage incurred on the return of an inland bill of exchange, are not recoverable by the holder, unless specially laid as damages, and proved accordingly. Kendrick v. Lomax, 2 Tyr. 438; 2 C. & J. 405.

Quære, if a charge for noting is in any case recoverable on an inland bill not protested? Id.

The accommodation acceptor of a bill, who takes it up and pays it to a bona fide holder after action brought by him, cannot recover the costs of such action against the parties liable to him for the sum paid on the bill. Roach v. Thompson, M. & M. 487—Tenterden.

In an action by payee against acceptor of a bill of exchange drawn by a third person, the defendant paid 10*l.* into court on the money counts. Nothing more was due on the bill, and there had been no other account or transaction between the plaintiff and defendant:—Held, that the payment on the account stated was an answer to the whole action, and that the plaintiff could not recover nominal damages on the special counts. Early v. Bowman, 1 B. & Adol. 889.

An indorser of a bill having had an action brought against him by the indorsee, is not entitled to recover from the acceptor the costs incurred in such action. Dawson v. Morgan, 9 B. & C. 618.

Where a bill indorsed over is not duly paid, the indorsee may charge the indorser with interest, exchange, and other incidental expenses beyond the amount of 5*l.* per cent., if such charges are reasonable, warranted by usage, and not made a colour for usury. Auriol v. Thomas, 2 T. R. 52.

The charge of 10*s.* per pagoda on a bill returned protested from India, is not excessive, though it was taken in payment here at the rate of 6*s.* 6*d.* per pagoda. Id.

There being a law in Pennsylvania, that bills drawn or indorsed there on persons in England, and protested, should be paid to the holder, with 20*l.* per cent. for damage: bills drawn on a merchant in England were accepted by him, he then becoming bankrupt before they were due, they were protested for non-payment; the drawee having paid the money due on the bills and the 20*l.* per cent. to the holder, was permitted to prove both under the commission. Francis v. Rucker Amb. 672.

5. Staying Proceedings.

If separate actions be brought against the acceptor and indorsors of a bill, the court will stay proceedings against any of the indorsors, on payment of the bill and the costs of that action; but not against the acceptor, without payment of costs in all the actions. Smith v. Woodcock, and Same v. Dudley, 4 T. R. 691.

Where the plaintiff sued the defendant jointly with his partners, as the drawers of a bill, and afterwards sued the defendant alone, as acceptor thereof, the court of Exchequer refused to stay the proceedings in the last action as being vexatious and oppressive; but held that the different character in which the defendant was sued in each action, justified the plaintiff in resorting to both remedies against him. Wise v. Prowse, 9 Price, 393.

So, where the original payee of five promissory notes had another demand against the maker, for which he held his acceptance of a bill, brought an action on the notes against the defendant, by serving him with process, but did not declare nor discontinue, the court of Exchequer refused an application on the part of the defendant to stay the proceedings in another action, brought at the suit of the indorsee, till the two actions brought by the payee, and alleged to be for the same cause of action, should be discontinued. M'Cure v. Pringle, 13 Price, 8; M'Clel. 2.

Where the payee indorsed on a note, that if the interest was paid on stipulated days during her life, the note should be given up; and upon a payment of the interest being omitted, an action was commenced on the note:—Held, that the court of C. P. had no power to stay proceedings on payment of the interest and costs. Steal v. Bradfield, 4 Taunt. 227.

Where, after the acceptor of a bill had offered to pay the debt and costs of the action commenced against himself, the plaintiff, who was an attorney and indorsee of the bill, brought another action against the drawer, who was his client, the court staid the proceedings, upon payment of the debt and costs of one action only. Hodson v. Gunn, 2 D. & R. 57.

The plaintiff in an action against the acceptor of a bill, being called on by rule to deliver up the bill on payment of debt and costs, was, by delivery of the instrument, holden to have complied with the rule, although he had rendered it a nullity by considerable erasures; for if the defendant had sustained an injury by the erasures, he had his remedy by action. Tomlins v. Lawrence, 4 M. & P. 54; 6 Bing. 376.

It is no ground for staying the trial of an action on a note, given for the amount of a penalty levied under the revenue laws, that the party on whose evidence the conviction proceeded has been indicted for perjury, and a true bill found. Aysheford v. Charlott, 4 Dougl. 210.

A defendant charged as indorser of a note may obtain a rule to inspect it, on affidavit that he never indorsed, nor had in possession any such note. Cæsar v. —, 4 Dougl. 11.

6. For Consideration under common Counts.

The indorsee of a note may maintain an action for money had and received against the maker. Dimsdale v. Lanchester, 4 Esp. 201—Ellenborough. And see Bolton v. Richard, 6 T. R. 139; 1 Esp. 106, and Brown v. Kewley, 2 B. & P. 518.

A promissory note is not evidence under the money counts in an action by the indorsee against the maker. Bently v. Northouse, M. & M. 66—Tenterden.

Semble, that in an action by payee against acceptor, the bill would not be evidence of an account stated. Early v. Bowman, 1 B. & Adol. 889.

Where a plaintiff cannot recover on a count on a promissory note for want of a stamp, he may recover on the common count for money lent, by proving an acknowledgment on a demand made. Tyte v. Jones, 1 East, 58, n. And see Alves v. Hodgson, 7 T. R. 241; 2 Esp. 528.

Quære, if a promissory note be misdescribed in the declaration in an action of assumpsit, it can be received in evidence, so as to entitle the plaintiff to recover under the common money counts? Wells v. Girling, 3 Moore, 79; Gow, 22. And see Gibson v. Minet, 1 H. Black. 569; 3 T. R. 481; 2 Bro. P. & C. 48.

But, if a defendant have signed a joint and several note payable by instalments, as a surety for the other maker, the plaintiff cannot, in an action against the former, resort to the common counts. Id.

Where the plaintiff declares on a note which has been given for a debt, the party may go into evidence of the debt for which the note is given, if the note has not the proper stamp, so that it cannot be given in evidence itself. Wilson v. Kennedy, 1 Esp. 245—Kenyon.

Where a note has been given for money due by the defendant to the plaintiff, who declares on it, together with the money counts, he must prove the note lost, or destroyed, before he can have recourse to the money counts, if it appears that the money so claimed was that for which the note was given. Dangerfield v. Wilby, 4 Esp. 159—Ellenborough.

A note is evidence under the money counts, only as between the original parties to it. Waynam v. Bend, 1 Camp. 175—Ellenborough.

A bill payable to the order of the drawer, in an action by him against the acceptor, is good evidence under the money counts. Thompson v. Morgan, 3 Camp. 101—Ellenborough.

Where a bill is given in payment for goods sold, which upon presentment to the drawee, is refused acceptance:—Held, that the holder having declared against the drawer on the bill, and joined counts for goods sold, may treat such bill as a nullity, and recover his demand on the latter count, although the credit on the bill be not expired. Hickling v. Hardey, 1 Moore, 61; 7 Taunt. 312.

A bill payable to a fictitious person or order, is completely void; but if money paid by the holder as a consideration for the indorsement, finds its way to the acceptor, it may be recovered as money had and received. Bennett v. Farnell, 1 Camp. 130—Ellenborough.

The payment of interest is evidence to show that a principal sum corresponding with and bearing such interest, was due, and a note may be looked at to see the terms on which the deposit was made. Sutton v. Toomer, 1 M. & R. 125; 7 B. & C. 416.

An indorsee cannot recover on the money counts from an acceptor, who is discharged by a material alteration in the bill. Long v. Moore, 3 Esp. 155, n.—Kenyon.

In an action by the indorsee against the indorser of a bill of exchange, evidence of an acknowledgment of an existing debt, and of a promise to pay by the defendant, is admissible, and sufficient to support a count upon an account stated. Waggstaffe v. Boardman, 9 D. & R. 248.

A count for money lent, is supported by evidence of a note of hand, acknowledging the receipt of the money on behalf of the defendant's grandson, and promising to be accountable for it on demand; and a count for money laid out and expended, at the defendant's request, is supported by the evidence of a note of hand, requesting the plaintiff to pay it to a gardener, for the workmen's use. Harris v. Huntack, 1 Barr. 371; 2 Ld. Ken. 28.

Two unstamped slips of paper, with "I. O. U. 400l." and "I. O. U. 250l." written thereupon, are neither promissory notes nor receipts, and may be therefore received in evidence for money lent. Childers v. Bulnois, D. & R. N. P. C. 8—Abbott.

Where there is a promise to pay a bill within a fixed time, if during that time no proof be brought of its being already paid, though the promise be broken (no proof being brought within the time,) and the plaintiff in an action on the bill, with an account stated, gives evidence under it of the special promise; yet the defendant may also prove under that count, that the debt for which the bill was originally given was paid; and thereby avoid the promise by showing it was without consideration. Elmes v. Wills, 1 H. Black. 64.

Assumpsit by the plaintiff as indorsee of a bill for 57l. 10s., and upon an account stated against the defendant as acceptor. The bill was upon an insufficient stamp; and the plaintiff, in order to recover upon the account stated, produced two letters written by the defendant after the dishonour of the bill. In the first, which was dated on the day the bill became due, and which was addressed "To the gentleman who calls with the bill," the defendant expressed his regret that it was not in his power to take up the bill for 57l. 10s. In the second letter, which was in answer to one from the plaintiff's attorney, requiring payment of the defendant's acceptance in favour of Tilbury for 57l. 10s., the defendant said, if he had had the money, he should not have let his acceptance be dishonoured; and he proposed that Tilbury should draw upon him in a month:—Held, that these letters did not amount to an acknowledgment that the sum of 57l. 10s. was due to the plaintiff, but merely that it was due to the person legally entitled to the bill; that it was necessary, therefore, for the plaintiff to prove an indorsement of the bill; and that the bill not being on a sufficient stamp, could not be looked at by the jury for the purpose of ascertaining this fact. Jardine v. Payne, 1 B. & Adol. 663.

"Received of A. B. 150l., which I promise to pay on demand with interest," is a promissory note, and requires to be stamped as such: where, therefore, an instrument in these words, on being produced in evidence, was stamped with a receipt stamp:—Held, that an acknowledgment by the defendant that he owed the party to whom it was given the sum mentioned in the note, was held sufficient to entitle the executors of the latter to recover on an account stated, although the consideration for which the note was given was goods sold and delivered, for which there was no count in the declaration. Ashby v. Ashby, 3 M. & P. 186.

In an action on a note, and also for goods sold and delivered, if the plaintiff prove the delivery of the goods before the note was given, and do not show the consideration of the note to have been distinct from them, the defendant must have a verdict on one of the counts: the plaintiff cannot take a verdict on one, and have the jury discharged from giving a verdict on the other. Matric v. Harris, M. & M. 322—Best.

In an action by the indorsee against the acceptor, the bill is not admissible as evidence of money had and received. Eales v. Dicker, M. & M. 324—Littledale.

Rule for new trial made absolute. Id.

7. Pleadings.

It is not necessary to set out the date of a bill; its delivery is its date; and it is a sufficient averment of non-payment of a bill accepted by the defendant, payable at a particular place, to state that it was presented at his house without showing that it was presented to him. Giles v. Bourne, 6 M. & S. 73; 2 Chit. 300.

Therefore, where plaintiff declared that J. T., on the 22d of Feb. 1816, made his bill, and thereby required defendant, four months after date, to pay at Messrs. V. & Co. Lombard-street, &c.; it was held sufficient on demurrer, assigning for cause that although the bill was payable after date, no date was stated, and that the non-payment by Messrs. V., as well as by defendant, was not negatived: for it shall be intended that it was dated on the day when it was made, and the bill did not purport that Messrs. V. would pay. Id.

If plaintiff declares that on such a day the defendant drew a bill, without alleging that it bore date on that day, the day in the declaration is immaterial, though not laid under a videlicet. Coron v. Lyon, 2 Camp. 307, n.—Thompson.

But where the plaintiff declared upon the bill as bearing date on that day, the variance was held fatal. Anon. 2 Camp. 308, n.—Ellenborough.

A first count stated, that the defendant heretofore, to wit, on such a day, drew a bill bearing date the day and year aforesaid; and a second count stated, that afterwards, to wit, on the day and year aforesaid, the defendant drew a certain other bill, without mentioning any express date in either count:—Held, that both counts were good. Hague v. French (in error,) 3 B. & P. 173.

Quære, where the declaration stated that the defendants made the bill, "their own proper hands being thereunto subscribed:" when, in fact, the bill bore the subscription of A. & Co., whether the variance was fatal or not? Jones v. Mars, 2 Camp. 305—Ellenborough.

And a bill which expressed on the face of it to be for value delivered, may be stated to be for value received. Id.

In an action on a note alleged to have been made by the defendant, "his own proper hand being thereunto subscribed," if it appear that defendant's name was written by another person under his authority, it is sufficient, and the allegation of the defendant's hand-writing may be rejected as surplusage. Booth v. Grove, M. & M. 182: S. C. nom. Booth v. Grover, 3 C. & P. 335—Tenterden.

It is not necessary in a declaration on a bill, to aver that the maker delivered it; it is sufficient to state that he made it. Churchill v. Gardner, 7 T. R. 596.

A bill payable to the order of A. is payable to A., without alleging any order made; and it is sufficient to declare that A. delivered the bill to the defendant, which he accepted, and, by reason thereof, became liable to pay the contents to A., without alleging a redelivery of the bill by the defendant: for if a redelivery, or something tantamount, to show the assent of the drawee to charge himself, be necessary to an acceptance, the demurrer, by admitting the acceptance, impliedly admits the redelivery, &c. Smith v. McClure, 5 East, 476; 2 Smith, 43: S. P. Sheldon v. Occarsen, Bayl. Bills, 329.

An averment, that when the bill became due, according to the tenor, to wit, on the 31st of March, 1822, it was duly presented for payment:—Held, sufficient on a special demurrer, assigning for cause, that the 31st of March was on a Sunday, as it was enough to state that the bill was presented when it became payable according to its tenor, without mentioning any particular day. Bynner v. Russell, 7 Moore, 267; 1 Bing. 23.

In an action against the indorsee of a bill of exchange, if the plaintiff do not allege a demand on, and refusal by the acceptor, on the day when the note was payable, it is error, and not cured by verdict. Rushton v. Aspinall, 2 Dougl. 679.

In like manner it is error, and not cured by verdict, if he do not allege notice to the defendant of the refusal by the acceptor. Id.

The day upon which a promise to pay a bill of exchange is alleged, is matter of form only; and no objection can be raised on error, that the day stated is more than six years before the action is brought. Hawkey v. Borwick (in error,) 1 Y. & J. 376; 4 Bing. 135.

person deceased, is mere surplage, and does not require proof. Agutter v. Moss, 2 Stark. 439—Abbott.

If a bill drawn by John Crouch be declared upon as drawn by John Crouch, the variance is fatal. Whitwell v. Bennett, 3 B. & P. 559.

It seems that an averment in a declaration on a bill, drawn in Ireland, and made payable in England, treating the sum mentioned in the bill as Irish currency, and stating it to be of the value of 232l. 4s. of lawful money of Great Britain, is material, and will prevent the plaintiff from recovering more than that sum; although without such an averment he would be entitled to treat the bill as of English currency. Taylor v. Benth, 1 C. & P. 286—Best.

In an action by indorsee against indorser, the special facts rendering valid a deferred notice of dishonour, need not be specially averred, the common averment of notice will be sufficient. Firth v. Thrush, 2 M. & R. 359; 8 B.C. 387.

A declaration on a note stated that the defendant thereby promised to pay to the plaintiff 10l., on account of W. H. D., fourteen days after the date thereof, which period had elapsed; and then averred that the defendant, in consideration of the premises, "then and there promised to pay the amount of the note to the plaintiff, according to the tenor and effect thereof."—Held, sufficient on special demurrer. Banks v. Camp, 2 M. & S. 734; 9 Bing. 604.

A similar promise in a special declaration was held in K. B. to be bad on special demurrer. Price v. Easton, 4 B. & Adol. 433; 1 Nev. & M. 303.

If a conditional acceptance is declared upon, it must be set forth specially, with an averment that the condition has been performed. Ralli v. Survell, D. & R. N. P. C. 33—Abbott.

Where a promise has been given to pay a bill presented for acceptance conditionally, it cannot be declared upon as an absolute acceptance, even though the condition has been complied with. Langston v. Carney, 4 Camp. 176—Gibbs.

If the holder consents to take a bill payable at a particular place, the plaintiff must aver performance of this, like other conditions precedent, by showing a presentment to the acceptor at the place specified; whether the action be against the drawer or acceptor. Gannon v. Schmall, 5 Taunt. 344; 1 Marsh. 80.

In a count against the acceptor of a bill, stated to be "accepted payable at S. & Co.'s," it is sufficient to allege "generally" a request by the plaintiff to the defendant to pay the bill, without alleging that it was presented for payment "at the particular place." Fenton v. Gundry, 13 East, 459; 2 Camp. 656. And see Exon v. Russell, 4 M. & S. 505.

And no objection can be taken on demurrer, not assigning at least the cause specially, that after stating the day on which the bill was drawn, which was made payable at a future day, the count alleged that "afterwards, to wit, on the be accepted payable at the house of certain persons at a particular place, it must also aver that the bill was presented for payment at that place, and not to those persons generally. Andrew v. Hopwood, 2 Taunt. 61.

In a declaration against the acceptor of a bill, accepted payable at a particular place:—Held, not necessary to aver a presentment at such place. Young v. Rowe, 5 M. & S. 291.

But this judgment was reversed, and it was held that such averment must be made and proved. Rowe v. Young (in error,) 2 B. & R. 165; 2 Bligh, 391.

In an action by indorsee against acceptor, the declaration stated in the first count, that payment was demanded at the place where the bill was made payable, without averring that payment was there refused; and, after other counts, the declaration stated in conclusion, that the acceptor had not paid any of the sums in the declaration mentioned. Judgment was entered up generally on the whole declaration, and error brought for want of an averment in the first count of a refusal to pay at the place where the bill was made payable:—Held, to be no error. Benson v. Waite, 4 Dow, 334.

In an action against the drawer of a bill payable to certain persons, accepted at a particular place, so as to make a presentment there essential, an averment of a presentment to those persons generally, without saying "at that place," is insufficient; but an allegation that it was presented to them "according to the tenor and effect of the bill, and the acceptance thereof," was held sufficient. Hufem v. Ellis, Bayl. Bils, 301.

A declaration against the maker of a bill payable at a particular place, which avers a presentment at the place, need not aver a refusal at the particular place. Butterworth v. Le Dapser (Lord,) 3 M. & S. 150.

In declaring on a note payable by instalments, if any one of the days on which an instalment is made payable be incorrectly stated, the variance is fatal. Wells v. Gurling, 3 Moore, 79; 60, 11.

Where in an action of assumpsit on a bill of exchange with the usual money counts, the defendant pleads nil debet to the count on the bill, but does not plead at all to the other counts, after a verdict for the plaintiff, the defendant shall not take advantage of his own mispleading in arrest of judgment. Harvey v. Rickard, 1 H. Black. 644.

Where the four first counts of a declaration in assumpsit were on bills of exchange, and then were a demurrer and joinder to the first and second, and plea of the general issue to the rest, and a venire, tam ad triandum quam ad inquirendum, et unica taxatio, &c.:—Held, that the plaintiff having produced two bills only, they were not necessarily to be applied to the counts demurred to; but that the plaintiff was entitled to nominal damages on those counts (the defendant having admitted the existence of the bills &c.

tion from the principal debtor. Hall v. Wilcox, 1 M. & Rob. 58—Tenterden.

An indorsee of a bill or note, taking it under an agreement not to sue the indorser, cannot sue such indorser, though the indorsement be unqualified. Pike v. Street, M. & M. 226—Tenterden.

If A. and B., being partners, dissolve their partnership, and in the deed of dissolution it is stipulated that A. shall receive all debts due to the firm, and afterwards C., a debtor of the firm, accept a bill drawn by B. for the amount of the debt due to the firm:—Held, that this stipulation in the deed of dissolution is no defence to an action by B. against C. on this bill of exchange. Kag v. Smith, 4 C. & P. 106—Tenterden.

(c) Declarations and Admissions.

What is said by a third party at the time of the signing of a promissory note as to the consideration for which it is given, is not evidence against the payee, if he was not present. Hesley v. Jacobs, 2 C. & P. 616—Garrow.

The declarations of a holder of a bill made whilst it is current, are not admissible against a subsequent holder under an indorsement made before the bill became due. Smith v. Di Wrants, R. & M. 212—Abbott.

In an action by indorsee against acceptor, the declarations of a former holder are evidence, if it can be shown that he was the holder at the time, and was making such declarations against his own interest; but it is otherwise, if he made them after he had given up the possession of the bill. Pecock v. Billing, 2 Bing. 269; 9 Moore, 499; 1 C. & P. 230; R. & M. 129.

The declarations of a former holder of a note, payable on demand, made while he was the holder, are not evidence for the defendant in an action by a subsequent holder, unless the note had been presented for payment before such declarations were made. Borough v. White, 2 C. & P. 8—Abbott.

In an action by first indorsee against acceptor, the declarations of the drawer made before indorsement, showing that the acceptor received no value for his acceptance, cannot be admitted in evidence, if the drawer be living at the time of the trial, because in such case he might be called as a witness. Hedger v. Horton, 3 C. & P. 179—Gaselee.

The declarations of the drawer are admissible in evidence to show that a bill was obtained by fraud: the plaintiff must, however, be shown to be in some way privy to the fraud. Peckham v. Potter, 1 C. & P. 232—Gifford.

Where, in an action by the indorsee of a bill, the defence is that the defendant had settled it in account with the holder when due, and that the plaintiff took it after it became due, what was said

The admission by an indorser of his handwriting, is evidence against the maker. Medecks v. Henkey, 2 Esp. 647—Kenyon.

In an action against the payee of a note, who was likewise the indorser.—Held, that his indorsement was an admission of the handwriting of the maker. Free v. Hawkins, Holt, 550—Gibbs.

The declarations of an indorser of a bill, made whilst he was holder, are evidence to go to the jury against a holder under an indorsement made before the bill was due: if there be evidence which satisfies the judge that the indorsee is merely an agent to sue for the indorser; and the jury are afterwards to judge, first, of the agency, and then of the effect of the declaration. Walsland v. Levy, 1 M. & Rob. 138—Parke.

In an action against the maker of a note, letters of an indorser are not admissible evidence to impeach the indorsee's title, though the indorsement was made after the note was payable. Clapson v. O'Brien, 1 Esp. 10—Kenyon.

In an action on a note, a declaration made by the plaintiff, before he became the holder, is evidence to invalidate the note. Williams v. —, 5 M. & R. 121.

In an action by the indorsee against the maker of a note, declarations of the payee (not uttered at the time of making the note) are not evidence to prove that the consideration for the note was money lost at play, unless it be previously shown that the indorsee is identified in interest with the payee, as by having taken the note after it was due, or without any consideration. Bouchamp v. Perry, 1 B. & Adol. 89.

(d) Proof of Consideration.

Indorsement being prima facie evidence of a good consideration, the acceptor, (except in the cases of usury and gaming,) is not entitled to call upon a remote indorser to prove the consideration, unless he is implicated and privy to the transaction. Wynt v. Bulmer, 2 Esp. 538—Eyre.

Seemly, that, as between immediate parties, there is no necessity to give notice of disputing the consideration. Green v. Deakin, 2 Stark. 247—Ellenborough.

In an action on a bill, the plaintiff cannot be compelled to prove what consideration he gave for it, by a mere notice that he will be required so to do. Reynolds v. Chettle, 2 Camp. 36—Ellenborough.

Where notice has been given, the plaintiff must make the proof of consideration part of his case, and not reserve it for the reply. Whitaker v. Underwood, 3 D. & R. 356; 2 B. & C. 151; & P. Delauney v. Mitchell, 1 Stark. 439.

Where notice of an intention to dispute the consideration has been given, and the plaintiff's witnesses have been cross-examined to that point, the plaintiff must give such evidence as he may to produce in proof of the consideration, in the first instance; and cannot reserve it for the reply. Spooner v. Gardiner, R. & M. 86—Best.

In an action by indorser against indorsee, where the defendant proves usury in a previous transfer of the bill, the plaintiff must prove himself a bona fide holder, though he has received no notice of disputing the consideration, (see 58 G. 3, c. 33.) Wyatt v. Campbell, M. & M. 80—Tent.

In an action by the indorsee of a bill of exchange, if it appear that a prior party was defrauded out of it, the plaintiff is bound to prove what consideration he gave for it. Rees v. Headfort, (Marquis,) 2 Camp. 574—Ellenborough.

A letter written by the indorser is evidence for the defendant, in an action by indorsee against acceptor. Coster v. Symons, 1 C. & P. 148—Abbott.

Therefore, where the acceptor had given the holder notice to prove the consideration, letters of the drawer to show that the transaction between him and the holder was fraudulent, were properly received in evidence. Id.

Quære, whether, in such case, it was incumbent on the holder to prove the consideration? Coster v. Merest, 7 Moore, 87; 3 B. & B. 272.

Quære, whether even if the acceptor proves a total failure of consideration as between him and the drawer, it is incumbent on the indorsee, even after notice, to prove that he gave consideration for a bill? Mann v. Lent, 10 B. & C. 877; M. & M. 149.

In an action by holder against one who had indorsed a bill for the accommodation of the drawer, the drawer proved that he had applied to J., stepfather of plaintiff, to get the bill discounted; that J. took the bill away, and returned with 32l. less than the amount of the bill, the discount being 1l. 19s.:—Held, not sufficient, without proof that J. was plaintiff's agent, to cast it on plaintiff to prove the consideration he gave for the bill. Bassett v. Dodgin, 10 Bing. 40.

S., being indebted to a firm in which he was a partner, gave a note in the name of another firm to which he also belonged, in discharge of his individual debt. The payees indorsed it over, and the indorsee sued the parties who appeared to be makers:—Held, that this note was made in fraud of S.'s partner in the second firm, and could not be enforced against him by the payees: and that, at least under these circumstances of suspicion, the indorsee could not recover without proving that he took the note for value, though no notice had been given him to prove the consideration:—Held also,—Parke, J., dissentiente,—that in all cases, where, from defect of the consideration, the original payees cannot recover on the note or bill, the indorsee, to maintain an action against the maker or acceptor, must prove consideration given by himself or a prior indorsee, though he may have had no notice that such proof will be called for. Heath v. Sansom, 2 B. & Adol. 291.

(c) Proof of Payment.

Where a note of twenty years' date is unaccounted for, it is a presumption of payment. Duffield v. Creed, 5 Esp. 52—Ellenborough.

Where a promissory note made abroad was overdue more than twenty years, quære, whether a jury is bound to presume payment, notwithstanding the payee resided abroad during all that time? Du Belloix v. Waterpark (Lord,) 1 D. & R. 16; Bayl. Bills, 281.

If in an action on a bill given for goods sold, it be proved that the bill was fetched away by the plaintiff's servant from the house of a third person after the commencement of the action, and only a short time before the trial, such evidence will not make it necessary for the plaintiff to prove that he, at the time of action brought, was the holder of the bill, and entitled to sue upon it. Burdon v. Halton, 4 Bing. 454; 1 M. & P. 223; 3 C. & P. 174.

A bill of exchange was drawn by A. on B., and indorsed to C. The bill was not satisfied when due, but part payments were afterwards made by the drawer and acceptor. Two years after it had become due, D. paid the balance to C., the holder, and the latter indorsed the bill, and wrote a receipt on it in general terms:—Held, that the receipt was not conclusive evidence that the bill had been satisfied either by the acceptor or drawer, but that parol testimony was admissible to explain it. Graves v. Key, 3 B. & Adol. 313.

9. Witnesses.

One joint maker of a promissory note is a good witness to prove the signature of the other. York v. Blott, 5 M. & S. 71. And see Mant v. Mainwaring, 2 Moore, 9.

In an action on a bill against the acceptor, the drawer who has obtained his certificate is a competent witness for the defendant, to prove that the bill had been usuriously discounted. Ashton v. Longes, M. & M. 127—Tenterden.

In an action on a note by the indorsee against the indorser, the maker is a competent witness for the plaintiff, on the ground of equal interest, both ways. Venning v. Shuttleworth, Bayl. Bills, 422.

In an action against the acceptor of a bill accepted for the accommodation of the drawer, the latter is not a competent witness to prove that the holder discounted the bill on usurious terms. Hurdwicke v. Blanchard, Gow, 113—Dallas.

Nor to prove that the holder came by the bill on usurious consideration; because he does not stand indifferently liable to the holder and the acceptor; for the holder can recover against him only the contents of the bill; the acceptor is entitled to recover against him both the amount of the bill, and also all damages he may have sustained, including the costs of the action against himself. Jones v. Brooke, 4 Taunt. 464.

In an action by indorsee against acceptor, the latter may call the payee as a witness to prove that the bill was void in its creation. Jordaine v. Lashbroke, 7 T. R. 601. And see Walton v. Shelly, 1 T. R. 296, and Hart v. McIntosh, 1 Esp. 298.

tor to prove it paid. Hampdrey v. Mason, Peake, 82—Kenyon.

But quære, whether the drawer can be a witness if he has had regular notice of the bill having been dishonoured. Id.

In an action by indorsee against acceptor of a bill misrecited in the declaration, the plaintiff may call the drawer to prove money paid to him by the plaintiff on the bill, and that is good evidence against the acceptor on a count for money had and received. Le Sage v. Johnson, Forrest, 83.

In an action by indorsee against acceptor, the latter cannot call the indorser as a witness, to prove that the plaintiff had no right to recover upon the bill, having merely received it from the indorser in trust to obtain payment of it from the acceptor on account of the indorser himself. Duckland v. Tankard, 5 T. R. 578; 1 Esp. 85.

An indorser of a note, who has received money from the drawer to take it up, is a competent witness for the drawer, in an action against him by the indorsee, to prove that he had satisfied the note; being either liable to the plaintiff on the note if the action were defeated, or to the defendant for money had and received if the action succeeded; and his being also liable in the latter case to compensate the defendant for the costs incurred in the action by such non-payment, makes no difference. Birt v. Kershaw, 2 East, 458; S. P. Charrington v. Milner, Peake, 6.

In an action on a note by indorsee against the drawer, the payee was admitted to be a good witness. Cooper v. Davies, 1 Esp. 463—Kenyon.

The indorsee of a bill, in an action against the acceptor, having called a witness to prove the indorsement, who disproved it, was afterwards allowed to call the indorser himself to prove his own indorsement, as, by his proving the handwriting to be his own, he would make himself liable. Richardson v. Allen, 2 Stark. 334.

In an action by indorsee against drawer, a prior indorser is a competent witness to prove that the defendant promised to pay the bill after it had become due. Stevens v. Lynch, 12 East, 36; 2 Camp. 382.

In an action by the indorsee against the drawer of a bill drawn without consideration, the payee who indorsed it to the plaintiff, in payment of goods, is a competent witness to prove the consideration for the indorsement. Shuttleworth v. Stephens, 1 Camp. 408—Ellenborough.

The acceptor of a bill is a good witness to prove that he had no effects in his hands of the drawer's when the bill was drawn. Staples v. Oakes, 1 Esp. 332—Kenyon.

But a joint acceptor of a bill is not competent to prove a set-off in an action by the holder against the drawer. Munimaring v. Mytton, 1 Stark. 83—Dampier.

C. to get discounted; B., instead of discounting it, holds the bill as a security for the debt of A., contending that A. gave it to him by way of payment of his debt; in an action upon this bill, brought by B. against C., A. is not a competent witness to prove, on the part of the defendant, that he delivered the bill to B. merely to get it discounted, and not as payment, without a release. Herman v. Leebrey, Holt, 390—Gibbs.

In an action by the indorsee against the drawer of a bill, it appeared by the plaintiff's case that he had received it from the acceptor in discharge of a debt due from him. For the defendant, it was stated that the bill was accepted in discharge of a part of a debt due from the acceptor to the drawer; that it was indorsed and delivered to the acceptor, in order that he might get it discounted, and that he delivered it to the plaintiff, upon condition, that if he procured cash for it, he might retain out of it the amount of the debt due to him from the acceptor, but that he never did get cash for the bill:—Held, that the acceptor could not be examined to prove these facts; for, although he was uninterested as to the amount sought to be recovered on the bill, he was interested as to the costs against which he would have to indemnify the defendant if the plaintiff obtained a verdict. Edmonds v. Lowe, 8 B. & C. 407; 2 M. & R. 427.

Action by the indorsee against the acceptor of a bill of exchange; the defendant had taken the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors' Act, and had set down the drawer as a creditor in his schedule:—Held, that the drawer, notwithstanding this, was a competent witness for the plaintiff. Copley v. Corner, 4 C. & P. 21—Tentorden.

XV. DEFENCE TO ACTIONS ON.

1. Indulgence, or Bargain for Renewal.

If one be sued on a bill, and it appear that the plaintiff has agreed with a third person, that if he will advance part of the sum for the defendant, the plaintiff will take that in discharge of the whole debt, and such third person so advances it, it is a good defence to the action. Walby v. Drake, 1 C. & P. 557—Abbott.

But in an action against the acceptor, an indorsee for value, who had transferred the bill, which was returned to him after it had become due, may recover, although his indorser before the retransfer received satisfaction from the drawer. Bussard v. Fleckner, 1 Stark. 333—Ellenborough.

Bills, in lieu of which other bills are given, if permitted to remain with the holder, and the latter bills are not paid, may be enforced. Ex parte Barclay, 7 Ves. jun. 597.

An action being brought against the acceptor, it was agreed between the parties, that the defen-dent should pay the costs, renew the bill, and give a warrant of attorney to secure the debt. The defendant gave the warrant of attorney, and renewed the bill, but did not pay the costs:—Held that the plaintiff might bring a fresh action on the first bill, while the second was outstanding in the hands of the indorsor. Norris v. Aylett, 2 Camp. 329—Ellenborough.

But where the defendant being indebted to the plaintiffs on a bill which was dishonoured, gave another bill, at a longer date, and also a warrant of attorney to confess judgment, in case the second bill should not be paid when due, and agreed to pay the expenses of executing the warrant of attorney; and the second bill was duly honoured, but these expenses were not paid, and the first bill was retained by the plaintiffs:—Held, that they could not sue the defendant on such original bill. Dillon v. Rimmer, 7 Moore, 427; 1 Bing. 100.

The defendant being indebted to the plaintiff, gave him a promissory note for 45*l.*, which was dishonoured; the latter afterwards agreed to accept 5*s.* in the pound, to be secured by the acceptance of a bill for 11*l.* 5*s.* by the defendant's brother which was accordingly given, but the original note remained in the plaintiff's possession, and was to revive if the acceptance were not honoured. The bill was not paid the day it became due, but on the following morning the defendant tendered 12*l.* to the plaintiff, including its amount and expenses thereon, which the latter refused to accept, and brought an action on the original note:—Held, that he was not entitled to recover. Soward v. Palmier, 2 Moore, 274.

An indorsee of a bill, without notice that a prior action is depending thereon, may, notwithstanding the pendency of such action, commence an action against the same defendant. Columbies v. Slim, 2 Chit. 637.

If a bill given for a supposed balance of accounts to be thereafter settled on an appointed day, be dishonoured by the acceptor (the defendant,) and afterwards be duly indorsed by the drawer to the plaintiff, the relative situation of debtor and creditor is not created between the drawer and acceptor, and the plaintiff cannot maintain an action on it as indorsee. Verley v. Saunders, 2 Chit. 127.

In an action on a note or bill, the defendant cannot give in evidence a parol agreement entered into when it was drawn, that it should be renewed, and payment not demanded when it became due. Hoare v. Graham, 3 Camp. 57—Ellenborough.

A. being indebted to C., A. and B. gave their joint and several note for the amount to C.: A. becoming further indebted, and pressed for further security, by a bill of sale (reciting that C. having demanded payment of the debt, A. had requested him to accept a further security,) assigned his household effects to C. as a further security, with a proviso that he should not be turned out of possession of the effects till after three days' notice:—Held, that C.'s remedy on the note was neither suspended nor extinguished by the bill of sale, but that he might sue A. on the note at any time, notwithstanding the bill of sale. Twoopenry v. Young, 5 D. & R. 259; 3 B. & C. 208.

Defendant drew bills as surety for C. H., who accepted them, and it was provided by a deed to which the plaintiff, the holder as well as the defendant was a party, that he should not sue defendant on the bills till C. H.'s effects should have been sold, and the proceeds applied in discharge of the bills. C. H.'s effects were seized, and sold under a commission of bankruptcy, the trustee, to whom they had been conveyed by the deed in question, having with the knowledge and assent of the defendant, omitted to take possession of them in time:—Held, that the plaintiff was not barred from suing the defendant on the bills. Lancaster v. Harrison, 6 Bing. 726; 4 M. & P. 561.

A., by taking and renewing the acceptance of C., the agent of his debtor B., does not discharge B.; unless A. has elected between the acceptance and cash, or B. is misled or prejudiced by the arrangement. Robinson v. Read, 4 M. & R. 349.

Where, on a bill becoming due, the holder agrees to receive another bill in renewal of it, his remedy on the first is suspended till the second is dishonoured, as well for expenses incurred by non-payment of the first as for its amount. Kendrick v. Lomax, 2 Tyr. 438; 2 C. & J. 405.

2. Want, or Insufficiency of Consideration.

When a Defence.—The want of consideration in toto or in part cannot be set up as a defence, if the plaintiff or any intermediate party between him and the defendant took the bill or note bona fide and upon a valid consideration. Morris v. Lee, Bayl. Bills, 397.

It is not of itself a defence to an action by the indorsor of a bill, to plead that it was accepted for the accommodation of the drawer, without consideration, and was indorsed over after it became due. Charles v. Marsden, 1 Taunt, 224.

Even if that fact appear to have been known to the plaintiff. Smith v. Knox, 3 Esp. 46—Eldon.

Although no consideration passes between the payee and drawer, it is not to be considered an accommodation bill as to the latter, if there was a valuable consideration as between the payee and acceptor. Scott v. Lifford, 1 Camp. 246; 9 East, 347.

The right of an innocent indorsee for value, to recover upon a note made payable to the payee "or order, with interest, on demand," cannot be impeached, by evidence of declarations made by the payee whilst the note was in his hands, and before indorsement, that it was given to him by the maker without consideration; nor can such a note be treated as over due at the time of indorsement, without proof of actual presentment and dishonour. Barrough v. White, 6 D. & R. 379; 4 B. & C. 325.

Nor by evidence of a declaration that the bill had been given for the accommodation of the drawer. Shaw v. Broom, 4 D. & R. 780.

In an action by indorsee against the acceptor, the defendant may show that the bill was originally given without consideration, though he has given no notice of disputing the consideration. Mann v. Lent, 10 B. & C. 877; M. & M. 240.

A receiver of the rents of an estate, to a share of which a married woman was entitled, having in his hands money due to her, by the direction of the husband accepted a bill on the faith of that fund, drawn by a creditor of the husband for money lent to him. Before the bill became due, the husband and wife gave a joint direction to the receiver to pay over the money to a third person, which he did before the commencement of the action. When the bill became due, the acceptor refused to pay it unless the drawer would indemnify him against the claims of the husband and wife to have the money paid according to their order. An indemnity was given, but the acceptor still refused to pay:—Held, that the drawer could not maintain an action on the bill, as it would only lead to circuity of action, as the acceptor being bound to pay the money according to the order of the husband and wife, might recover it back by suing on the agreement to indemnify. Carr v. Stephens, 9 B. & C. 758; 4 M. & R. 590.

What is a Consideration.]—A partial failure of consideration for a promissory note, constitutes no ground of defence, if the quantum to be deducted on that account is matter not of definite computation, but of unliquidated damages; as where a note was given for the plaintiff's disclosing to the defendant an improvement in certain machinery, which turned out to be less beneficial than was anticipated by the parties. Day v. Nix, 9 Moore, 159.

It is no defence to an action by the drawer and payee of a bill against the acceptor, that the consideration has partially failed on account of the badness of the quality, and improper package of goods delivered. Tye v. Gwynne, 2 Camp. 346—Ellenborough: S. P. Morgan v. Richardson, 1 Camp. 40, n.; 7 East, 482; 3 Smith, 487.

Unless it arise from fraud on the part of the plaintiff in the first instance. Fleming v. Simpson, 1 Camp. 40, n.—Ellenborough.

In an action on a bill given for the price of goods sold under a warranty, a breach of the warranty is an answer to the plaintiff's demand, if the defendant has tendered back the goods, although the plaintiff did not accept them. Lewis v. Cosgrave, 2 Taunt. 2.

But a defendant who has given his note as the stipulated price of a picture, was not allowed to give in evidence the inadequacy of the consideration, with a view to diminish the damages; although he might have done so for the purpose of showing fraud in order to defeat the contract altogether. Solemon v. Turner, 1 Stark. 51—Ellenborough.

Where a note expressed to be for value received, was made in favour of an infant aged nine years; and in an action against the executors of the maker, no evidence of consideration being given, the judge told the jury, that the note being for value received, imported that a good consideration existed, and that gratitude to the infant's father, or affection to the child, would suffice:—Held, that although the jury might have presumed that a good consideration was given, yet that those pointed out were insufficient. Holliday v. Atkinson, 8 D. & R. 163; 5 B. & C. 501.

Semble, that an intention to evade the legacy duty would not have been a good consideration. Id.

Where a note payable on demand, with interest until paid, was given in part consideration for the share of a ship bought by the maker from the payee, without observance of the Ships' Registry Acts, and indorsed by the payee first to J. L., who, on presentment and non-payment, struck out his name and returned it, and afterwards to J. G. P. who indorsed it, upwards of two years after its date, with the name obliterated, to the plaintiff, for a full and valuable consideration, without notice:—Held, although the note was originally void for want of consideration, as the sale of the ship was void, yet as the maker had subsequently recognised it, by paying one year's interest, and otherwise, and as there was a presumption that he had received the share of the subsequent earnings of the ship, and that therefore there was a consideration pro tanto, that the plaintiff, notwithstanding he had taken the note without inquiry, was entitled to recover its amount in an action against the maker. Gecoyne v. Smith, M'Clel. & Y. 338.

In an action by the payee against the acceptor of a bill drawn for the balance of purchase money of articles bought at a sale, it is no defence, that two months after delivery of the goods to the vendee, the vendor forcibly retook possession of them; for the vendee cannot treat that act as a rescinding of the contract, but must bring trespass. Stephens v. Wilkinson, 2 B. & Adol. 320.

A. procured a banking company to advance 100*l.* on a bill for 300*l.*, A. giving the company his guarantie for the amount so advanced, but having no other interest in the bill:—Held, that A. might recover the whole amount of the bill in an action against the acceptor, and not merely the amount for which he gave his guarantie. Reid v. Furnival, 5 C. & P. 499—Lyndhurst. A rule for new trial refused.

A note cannot be considered as made without consideration, if the maker has received a cross acceptance from the payee, and there has been an exchange of securities. Kent v. Louca, 1 Camp. 179, n.—Ellenborough.

In an action by the drawer against the acceptor of bills given for goods supplied, which were to be "of good quality and moderate price," and were estimated at about 400*l.*, and the bills given for that amount, it is no defence that the goods turned out to be worth much less than the estimated price, and that the acceptor has paid more than the real value of the goods on the bills. Obbard v. Betham, M. & M. 483—Tenterden.

If A. gives B. without consideration, a note to be negotiated by B. as a security for money, and the indorsee for a valuable consideration, without notice, releases B. from the note and all claim and demand touching the matters in respect of which the maker's promises were made, this does not so extinguish the consideration of the note, but that the indorsee may still recover against the maker. Carstairs v. Rolleston, 5 Taunt. 551; 1 Marsh. 207.

Quære, whether notice that the maker made it as surety only, would have varied the case? Id.

Defendant's partner gave plaintiff his note for 2000*l.* as a security for being allowed to overdraw the partnership account. Defendant thereupon gave his partner his note for 1000*l.* payable to order, as a security for his share; the partner indorsed the note to plaintiff, who had advanced 1300*l.* to the partnership; and two years afterwards plaintiff sued defendant on it. It did not appear that plaintiff had given any consideration for the 1000*l.* note; but he had notice of the circumstances under which defendant gave it to his partner:—Held, that there was a sufficient consideration to entitle plaintiff to recover. Heywood v. Watson, 4 Bing. 496; 1 M. & P. 268.

A. agreed to execute a lease of premises to B., who was to pay a certain sum for it; B., who was let into possession, accepted a bill for the consideration money drawn on him by A.: it is no defence to an action on the bill by A. against B. that the former refused to execute the lease: but his remedy is on the agreement. Moggridge v. Jones, 14 East, 486; 3 Camp. 38.

A warrant was directed to an officer of excise, by the commissioners, commanding him to apprehend a person convicted in several penalties, and take him to prison, to keep him there until the amount of the penalties was paid; the officer, having arrested the party, discharged him on a promissory note for the amount of the penalties, payable at a future day; and the commissioners afterwards approved of his conduct:—Held, that the discharge was a good consideration for the note, and that an action might be maintained thereon. Pilkington v. Green, 2 B. P. 151.

Where the plaintiff distrained for rent on premises let to B.; and the defendant, who had purchased the goods distrained from B., accepted a bill of exchange, payable to the landlord, in consideration of his withdrawing the distress:—Held, the plaintiff, knowing that no rent was due at the time of the distress, and having procured acceptance by misrepresenting the fact, could not recover on the bill. Grew v. Bevan, 3 Stark. Best.

Where the drawer and payee of a bill for 50*l.*, bound to provide for a bill of 70*l.*, indorsed the bill to the holder of the 70*l.* bill, to enable him to take it up:—Held, that it was an illegal security in his hands, in reduction of a bill which he had on the drawer, and that he could not recover upon it against the acceptor. Tyler, 2 Stark. 288—Ellenborough.

An action by payee against makers of a bill appeared that it had been given on an account by one of them to buy crops &c., from an outgoing tenant. The note, when made, was handed to a third person to be attested by him, and paid over to the plaintiff, on condition that possession of the premises should be given up to one of the defendants the next morning, but that the plaintiff was to hold the house for three or four weeks, paying one shilling a week rent. There was evidence of a verbal refusal by plaintiff on the next morning to give up possession, but the defendant's cattle were seen on the land on that day, and remained there. Possession of the house was not obtained till three weeks after. The note, when produced, did not appear to have been attested, and there was no evidence how the plaintiff got possession of it:—Held, that as no act was shown to have been done by the plaintiff to keep possession of the land, the jury might rightly conclude that possession had been delivered up according to the condition; and that the misconduct of the bailee of the note in withholding his attestation to it, or not delivering it to the plaintiff, was no defence to the action thereon. Evans v. Morgan, 2 Tyr. 396.

3. Forgery.

The acceptor is liable, even though the bill be forged. Smith v. Chester, 1 T. R. 654.

If a party to a bill, on being asked if it is his handwriting, answer that it is, and will be duly paid, he cannot afterwards set up a defence of forgery, for he has accredited the bill, and induced others to take it. Leach v. Buchanan, 4 Esp. 226—Ellenborough.

So, if he have at any time paid other forged bills of the same party, under similar circumstances. Barber v. Gingell, 3 Esp. 60—Ken.

If A., the indorsee for value of a bill to which B. the indorser, had forged the acceptance of C., deliver it up to B., on his solicitation, and receive from him, in lieu thereof, a bill accepted by D., without consideration, A. may maintain an action on this bill against D., unless there was an agreement between him and B. to stifle a prosecution for forgery. Wallace v. Hardacre, 1 Camp. 45—Ellenborough.

In an action against an acceptor who defends himself on the ground of his acceptance having been forged by A., evidence that A. forged his acceptance to another bill, and absconded on that account is not admissible. Ballcetti v. Serani, Peake, 142—Buller: S. P. Viney v. Barss, 1 Esp. 293.

In an action on a bill which the defendant contends is a forgery, other bills of the defendant may be produced to the jury to compare the hand writing. Allesbrook v. Reach, Peake, Add. Cas. 27—Kenyon.

The acceptor who pays under a forged indorsement by a person who had found a lost bill is liable to the real payee. Cheap v. Harley, 3 T. R. 127—Buller.

If a forged bill be accepted and paid by the drawee, he cannot recover the money back from the indorsee, to whom he paid it. Price v. Neal, 3 Burr. 1354; 1 W. Black. 390.

In an action on a bill against the acceptor, withstanding, a good witness to prove the defendant's handwriting to the acceptance. Dickinson v. Prentice, 4 Esp. 32—Kenyon.

If the holder of a bill agree not to sue the acceptor, provided the latter will make an affidavit that the acceptance is a forgery, and such affidavit be accordingly made and sworn, he cannot afterwards bring an action on the bill, though the affidavit be false. Stevens v. Thacker, Peake, 187—Kenyon.

4. Illegality of Consideration.

(a) When available.

A bill was drawn by a person who was an entire stranger to the acceptor, and to the person for whose benefit it was afterwards accepted: it was made payable to the drawer, and after being indorsed generally by him, was delivered over, before acceptance, to the person who had prevailed on him to draw it; and by that person given to the party for whose benefit it was ultimately accepted. The bill was afterwards accepted by the drawer, and delivered by him to a person to whom he (the acceptor) had lost money at play, and for that consideration. It then got into the hands of other persons who were partners in trade, and was by them indorsed and paid over to the plaintiffs for a valuable consideration, without notice:—Held, to be within the statute 9 Anne, c. 14, s. 1, on the ground of the acceptance being the act which gives to the bill its validity as a negotiable instrument, and completes its perfection; and that the statute includes acceptances (although the words of the statute are "given, granted, drawn, or entered into") of bills drawn without any consideration; and that therefore the plaintiffs could not recover against the acceptor. Henderson v. Benson, 8 Price, 381.

Defendant may set up an illegal consideration against an action on a note of hand. Grinchard v. Roberts, 1 W. Black. 445.

Where the consideration of a note was the engraving plates upon which assignats were to be forged:—Held, that if the party did not know that they were made with a fraudulent intention, and supposed them to be issued with the authority of government, he might recover on the note. Strongtherm v. Lukyn, 1 Esp. 389—Ken.

If part of the consideration only be illegal, the bill is void for the whole. Robinson v. Bland, 2 Burr, 1082.

If a bill or note is given, in part upon a legal, and in part upon an illegal consideration, and several bills or notes are afterwards substituted in lieu thereof, the effect of the illegality may be confined to some only of the substituted bills or notes, and the other stand exempt. As where a bill or note is given, as to half, for a gaming debt, and as to the residue for money lent, and two bills or notes of equal amount are afterwards substituted for it, if the giver does any thing which may be considered an election to ascribe the gaming debt to the one, he will be liable an election to ascribe the gaming debt to the other. Habner v. Richardson, Bayl. Bills, 400.

In an action by the indorsee of a note against the maker, it was ruled that the defendant should not be allowed to go into evidence to show that the original consideration was illegal, unless he could likewise show that the plaintiff was a party to that illegality. Newby v. Smith, 2 Esp. 535, n.—Kenyon.

In an action by second indorsee against the acceptor of a bill of exchange, if the person who indorsed it to the plaintiff could himself have maintained an action upon it, the defendant cannot give in evidence that it was accepted for a debt contracted in smuggling, although it was indorsed to the plaintiff after it had become due. Chalmers v. Lamson, 1 Camp. 383.

But it is no defence in an action by the indorsee against the acceptor, that the latter has been imposed on, in respect of a contract by the drawer on account of which the acceptance was given, and that the plaintiff was privy to such imposition, where the acceptor did not wholly repudiate the contract on discovering the imposition, but still retained possession of premises under such contract, as the consideration had not altogether failed, so as to render the bill utterly void. Archer v. Bamford, 3 Stark. 173; 1 C. & P. 64—Abbott.

An indorsee of a note, who, at the request of the holder, has put his name upon it, and thereby been obliged to pay the contents to a bona fide holder, may recover the money paid from any person whose name is on the note, although he knew it was given on an illegal consideration. Seddens v. Stratford, Peake, 215—Kenyon.

To justify the jury in giving a verdict for the plaintiff, in an action against an insolvent debtor by the indorsee of a bill, accepted by such debtor as a security for a debt due to the indorsee, and from which he had been discharged under the Insolvent Debtors' Act, they must be satisfied not only that the plaintiff gave value for the bill, but that he took it bona fide for his own purpose, without any concert with the indorsee, and without any knowledge of the defect in the indorsee's title. Northern v. Latouche, 4 C. & P. 140—Tindal.

A bill which is void at its creation cannot be revived by a subsequent promise. Cashell v. Bennett, 5 T. R. 765.

But otherwise, if only voidable. Id. 708.

Where a note, not void, but voidable—as given for what is malum prohibitum—is given up in consideration of another note given at a distant day, the illegality of the former note will be no defence to an action on the latter. William v. Lee, 4 Esp. 264—Ellenborough.

1. NATURE AND VALIDITY.

All bonds are writings obligatory, although the converse of that proposition will not always hold good. Rex v. Dunnett, 2 East, P. C. 985; 2 Leach, C. C. 581.

In debt on bond, conditioned for the performance of several things, if one of them be void at common law, yet the bond may be good for the others; as where it was conditioned to pay money, and to do an act which was perhaps simony: Held, that admitting part of the condition to be simoniacal, yet the bond was good for the payment of the money. Newman v. Newman, 4 M. & S. 66.

Where the condition of a bond is entire, and the whole unlawful, it is in most cases void; but where it consists of different parts, some of which are lawful, and others not; it is good for so much as is lawful, and void for the rest. Yale v. Rex (in error,) 6 Bro. P. C. 31.

Where there is a condition to do one of two things, and one becomes impossible, it is no reason for not performing the other. Da Costa v. Davis, 1 B. & P. 242.

A bond conditioned to take possession of the effects of persons dying intestate in a settlement on the coast of Africa, and sell the same, and remit the produce to the African Company in Europe, to be by them delivered to the lawful administrator, was a legal bond. African Company v. Torrine, 6 T. R. 588.

A bond is good, with a condition to be forfeited if defendant shall hire C. so as to give him a parish settlement. Whiting v. Punchard, 3 Wils. 50.

A bond given to doctor, canon, master, fellows, &c. of Sidney and Sussex College, with a solvendum to the master, &c. is a bond taken in their corporate capacity. Sidney College v. Davenport, 1 Wils. 184.

A post obit bond is a security of a doubtful nature. Lushington v. Waller, 1 H. Black. 94.

The illegality of the condition of the bond may be shown by the plaintiff in stating the bond itself, with the condition in his declaration; or if he omit to state the condition, it may be shown by the defendant in his plea, and the court will equally take notice of the illegality in either case. Duvergier v. Fellowes, 1 Clark. & Fin. 39; 10 B. & C. 826.

II. CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION.

1. Effect of Recitals.

The extent of the condition of an indemnity bond may be restrained by the recitals, though the words of the condition import a larger liability than the recitals contemplate. Pearce v. Summersett, 4 Taunt. 593.

The recital in the condition of an indemnity bond, professing to state the agreement between the parties does not confine the responsibility of the sureties to the limits therein specified. Sansom v. Bell, 2 Camp. 39—Ellenborough.

his employment, and for so long as he should continue to be employed," he would justly account and obey orders, &c.:—Held, that the obligation was confined to the period of twelve months mentioned in the recital. Liverpool Water-works v. Atkinson, and Sams v. Herpley, 6 East, 507; 2 Smith, 654.

A bond taken in the penal sum of 1000*l.* cannot be reduced to 500*l.* by a recital in the condition that the parties had agreed to execute a bond in the sum of 500*l.* Jagley v. Swift, 10 Bing. 84.

The omission of the word "pounds" may be supplied in a bond acknowledged "in the sum of 7700 of lawful money of Great Britain," conditioned for the payment of several sums, denominated as pounds, shillings and pence, although the sums secured amount to more than the half of 7700*l.* Coles v. Hulme, 3 M. & R. 86; 8 B. & C. 56*l.*

Bond by defendant as surety for W. and H., with a condition, reciting that the obligees were bankers, and W. and H. paper manufacturers, and had overdrawn their account with the obligees 4822*l.*, and, in order to enable them to carry on their business, had applied to the obligees to allow them for a time to overdraw such further sums as they should require, so as that the same, together with the 4822*l.*, should not exceed in the whole, at any one time, 5000*l.*; which they had agreed to do; and the condition was for the payment by W. and H. and defendant, or any of them, of the sum of 4822*l.*, and also such further sums as the obligees should or might thereafter advance to W. and H. in the course of their business, not exceeding in the whole 5000*l.*:—Held, not to be avoided by the obligees having allowed W. and H. to overdraw to an amount, together with the 4822*l.*, exceeding 5000*l.*, and, therefore, defendant's plea to that effect was ill-pleaded; for the restrictive words in the recital were not to be construed as conditional, that, if the obligees exceeded the amount, the bond should be void. Parker v. Wise, 6 M. & R. 239.

An obligor, sued on a bond reciting a certain consideration, is stopped from pleading that the consideration was different, unless he can make it appear by his plea that the real transaction was fraudulent or unlawful. Hill v. Manchester and Salford Waterworks, 2 B. & Adol. 545.

If a bond in its recital refers to a bill of exchange as the principal security, the bond may be construed to be only a collateral security, although it is a specialty, and of a higher nature than the bill, which is only a simple contract debt. Ireland (Bank) v. Beresford, 6 Dow, 234.

A bond is given from A., B. and C. to D., reciting, that "A., having received from D. a certain sum of money in the East Indies, and drawn bills of exchange there, payable to D. on a house in England, and that the obligors had agreed with D., if the bills should not be accepted being to the East Indies. Or had payment of the bills, D. is entitled to recover no more than the amount of them, with interest from the time of their becoming due. Ord v. Churchill, 1 H. Black. 217.

A mortgagor, with two covenants, entered into a bond to the mortgagee, the condition of which, after reciting that the mortgagor was seised in tail of premises of which he had covenanted to suffer a recovery, to enure to the use of the mortgagor in fee, subject to the proviso for redemption, was that the bond should be void if the recovery should be suffered, so and in such manner, as that under and by virtue thereof, and of the mortgage deed, the premises should be vested in the plaintiff in fee "according to the true intent and meaning" of the mortgage deed, subject only to the proviso for redemption. The recitals on the mortgage deed stated a seisin in fee by the mortgagor's maternal grandfather in 1795. A deed of settlement and fine in 1793, by his daughter and devisee and her husband to themselves for their lives with power of appointment by the former, which she, in 1809, executed by a devise to her son, the mortgagor, for life, and his sons in tail; and also a conveyance after the wife's death of the husband's life estate to the mortgagor, were proved. In an action on the bond against a surety:—Held, first, that these recitals were sufficient evidence that the maternal grandfather of the mortgagor had seisin, and that the possession had followed the limitations and power of the deed of 1795. Also, that the meaning of the condition was, that such a recovery should be suffered as would vest an absolute estate in fee in the mortgagor. Edwards v. Brown, 1 Tyr. 182; 1 C. & J. 307; 3 Y. & J. 423.

2. Effect of Memoranda.

A bond was conditioned that the obligor should indemnify the obligee from all sums the latter should pay, or be liable to pay, on the obligor's account; and, before the execution of the bond, a memorandum was thereon indorsed, that the obligee "hath given an undertaking not to sue upon the bond till after the obligor's death":—Held, that this memorandum was to be taken as part of the condition; and made the bond in effect payable only by the representatives of the obligor after his death. Burgh v. Preston, 8 T. R. 421.

A covenant not to sue upon a bond during the life of the obligor; and that if any person to whom the obligee should assign the bond, should recover the principal, the obligee would pay the obligor during his life interest on the amount recovered:—Held, no bar to an action by the assignee of the bond in the name of the obligee. Morley v. Freer, 6 Bing. 547; 4 M. & P. 306.

The plaintiff declared in debt on a bond, conditioned for the payment of 1000*l.* The defendant, in his plea, set out a deed poll, which, after reciting that the plaintiff would become entitled on the decease of the defendant, to 750*l.* in right of the plaintiff's wife, by virtue of a deed of settlement on her marriage, and that she had given a bond to the plaintiff for 1000*l.*, (the bond declared on,) the plaintiff and his wife released the sum of 750*l.*, and the plaintiff covenanted that he would not require payment of the 1000*l.* secured by the bond, nor claim interest for the same during the life of the defendant; and that in case the bond should be assigned by the plaintiff, and the defendant should be required by the assignee to pay the principal, the plaintiff would pay the defendant interest for the same during defendant's life:—Held, that the deed poll did not operate as a defeasance of the bond, and, consequently, that it was no answer to an action by the assignee in the name of the obligee. Id.

At the time of executing a bond to secure a sum of money, the obligors procured a letter from the obligee, stating his intention not to call in the money within a specified period, if the interest was regularly paid: the letter was held to be a binding undertaking. Norton v. Wood, 1 Russ. & Mylne, 178.

Payments of interest made one or even two days after they became due, are no defeasance of the undertaking, if the grantor accepts them without objection. Id.

3. Effect of Penalty.

If an instalment secured by bond be not paid on the day, the bond is forfeited, and the penalty is the debt in law. Judd v. Evans, 6 T. R. 399; S. P. Coates v. Hewit, 1 Wils. 80; Talbot v. Hodson, 2 Marsh. 527; 7 Taunt. 251.

Where there is a bond for payment of rent, the bond is only a security to the amount of the penalty. White v. Sealey, 1 Dougl. 49.

Although generally the debt is the substance and real demand, and the penalty only the security and form; yet, in a bond given to the trustees of a charity to lend money, the penalty is substance. Anon. Lofft. 555.

A bond, whereby the obligor bound himself "in the sum of 20*l.* to be paid yearly," is not like a bond with a penalty which can be forfeited, and so become a debt in law. Morant v. Gough, 7 B. & C. 206; 1 M. & R. 41.

In debt on a bond, conditioned for payment of the same sum as the penalty, with interest:—Held, that the jury might give interest by way of damages for the detention of the debt. Francis v. Wilson, R. & M. 105—Littledale.

In an action of debt on bond to secure the repayment of money with interest, the plaintiff can only recover to the amount of the penalty, with 1*s.* for the detention of the debt. Heller v. Ardley, 3 C. & P. 12—Tenterden.

In an action on a judgment recovered on a bond, interest may be recovered in damages beyond the penalty of the bond. McClure v. Dunkin, 1 East, 436.

Interest was given in equity beyond the penalty of a bond, upon a mortgage for the same debt, though by a surety. Clarke v. Abingdon (Lord), 17 Ves. jun. 106.

No interest will, however, be allowed, beyond the penalty of a bond, except, under special circumstances. Clarke v. Seton, 6 Ves. jun. 411.

A mortgagee had also a bond, on which the interest due exceeded the penalty, the mortgagor conveyed the equity of redemption for the use of his creditors, paying this bond first; nothing beyond the penalty can be claimed. Lloyd v. Hatchett, 2 Anst. 525.

Interest on an old bond cannot be allowed in the master's office beyond the penalty. Tew v. Winterton (Earl), 3 Bro. C. C. 489.

The whole penalty shall not be levied on an annuity bond and judgment, but only the arrears then due; and the judgment shall stand as a security for future arrears. Ogilvey v. Foley, 2 W. Black. 1111.

Arrears of annuity, secured by bond, are not allowed beyond the penalty. Mackworth v. Thomas, 5 Ves. jun. 329.

On a bond to pay interest half-yearly, and the principal in three years, judgment shall be entered on failure of paying interest, but with a stay of execution on discharging it. Masfon v. Touchet, 2 W. Black. 706.

When defendant is charged in execution with the penalty of a bond, it may be reduced to the principal and interest. And interest due on a note of hand, for which no damages were given by the verdict, shall not be covered by the penalty. Amery v. Smalridge, 2 W. Black. 763.

In debt on bond, with a condition to account for money to be received, the court will not stay proceedings upon paying the penalty into court, because damages may be recovered beyond that amount. Lonsdale v. Church, 2 T. R. 388.

But the court will order satisfaction to be entered on the record in an action on a bond of indemnity, on the defendant's paying the penalty of the bond and the costs of the action. Wilde v. Clarkson, 6 T. R. 303. And see Shutt, v. Procter, 2 Marsh. 226.

Proceedings were stayed in an action on a bond conditioned for the performance of mortgage covenants, on payment of the principal and interest, and costs to be computed and taxed by the master, on stat. 5 & 6 Anne. Skinner v. Stacey, 1 Wils. 80.

The defendant may refer it to the prothonotary before judgment, to ascertain what is due for principal and interest on a common money bond. Bosworth v. Bosworth, 3 Moore, 590.

The court of Exchequer will not refer it to the master to take an account of what is actually due on a bond, for principal and interest, and costs, after a verdict for the plaintiff, on the bond having been put in suit. Eastmond v. Holl, 3 Price, 219.

It was referred to the prothonotary in C. P. in an action of debt on bond, after judgment by default, to tax interest by way of damages, it being optional with the plaintiff to have interest so taxed, or a writ of inquiry. Holdipp v. Otway, 7 T. R. 447.

Judgment by default having been suffered in an action on a bond, the plaintiff entered up judgment for the penalty, together with 9*l.* 10*s.* for damages and costs. A writ of inquiry having been executed, damages were assessed at 11*l.* 5*s.* 4*d.*, and costs 40*s.*; and the plaintiff entered up another judgment for those damages, together with 31*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* for costs; but afterwards entered a remittitur on the roll for costs:—Held, that the second judgment was erroneous. Hankin v. Broomhead (in error,) 3 B. & P. 607.

Where an obligor has, by vexatious proceedings, delayed the obligee from recovering on his bond, a court of equity will decree payment of the full amount of principal and interest, although it exceeds the penalty of the bond. Grant v. Grant, 3 Sim. 341; 3 Russ. 598.

Obligees in a bond held entitled to be paid out of the assets of a deceased obligor a sum exceeding the penalty of the bond. Jendwine v. Agate, 3 Sim. 129.

If a man agree not to do an act, and enter into a bond, with a penalty to be forfeited on his doing it, the penalty is never to be considered as the price for doing such an act; but the court will relieve by injunction, until the actual damage sustained shall be ascertained by an issue. Hardy v. Martin, 1 Cox, 26.

4. When joint or several.

A. executed a bond as the joint and several bond of himself and B., and signed it "A. and B.," having no authority from B. so to do:—Held, that the bond was good, as the several bond of A. Elliott v. Davis, 2 B. & P. 338.

A surety bond by three obligors, for the payment of 1000*l.*, worded, "for which payment to be well and faithfully paid, we bind ourselves, and each of us for himself, for the whole and entire sum of 1000*l.* each," is a several, and not a joint and several bond, and may be enforced against the obligors severally; and the tearing off the seal of one of the obligors of such a bond by the obligees, does not avoid it as against the others; and if the obligor, against whom it is enforced, is entitled to contribution, it seems his remedy is in equity only. Collins v. Prosser, 3 D. & R. 112; 1 B. & C. 682. And see Same v. Everett, 3 D. & R. 122.

If the obligee in a joint and several bond make one of two obligors his executor, with others, the action on the bond is discharged as to both obligors. Cheetham v. Ward, 2 B. & P. 630.

Though the obligee of a bond covenant not to sue one of two joint and several obligors, and if he do, that the deed may be pleaded in bar, he may still sue the other obligor. Dean v. Newhall, 8 T. R. 168.

If the plaintiff show on his declaration in debt on bond against two, that the bond is executed by three it is good matter of plea in abatement, or in arrest of judgment, but is no ground of nonsuit on the plea of non est factum. South v. Turner, 2 Taunt. 254.

If in an action on a bond against one, it be declared on as the joint bond of him and two others, it is no variance that the bond is likewise the separate bond of each of the obligors. Middleton v. Sandford, 4 Camp. 34—Dampier.

And if the defendant pleads that it is not his deed at the trial, it is only necessary to prove that the bond was executed by the defendant. Id.

Where a man executes a bond, meaning it to be the joint bond of himself and another, who does not execute, it is the several bond of the former, but he may have it delivered up as contrary to intention. Underhill v. Horwood, 10 Ves. jun. 225.

5. Day of Payment.

A bond, dated on a day certain, in a penal sum, conditioned for payment of a lesser sum generally, without naming any day of payment, is payable on the day of the date; and upon any action brought upon it, the court will refer it to the master, to compute principal, interest, and costs thereon; and on payment of the same, stay the proceedings, by virtue of the 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 13. Farquhar v. Morris, 7 T. R. 124.

A bond conditioned to pay money by instalments, is forfeited by making any one default. Coates v. Hewit, 1 Wils. 80: S. P. Judd v. Evans, 6 T. R. 399.

Bond, conditioned for the payment of a principal sum in the year 1820, with interest in the meantime half-yearly: an action having been brought for the penalty upon a breach of the condition in non-payment of half a year's interest on the 29th of September, 1817, the court refused to stay the proceedings before judgment on payment of the interest due, and costs, although the non-payment of the interest was owing to a slip. Van Sunden v. —, 1 B. & A. 214.

Proceedings on bond for payment of money by instalments, and on default to stand in force for the whole sum due shall not be staid upon payment of the instalments in arrear. Gouldett v. Hariforth, 2 W. Black. 958.

If default be made in payment of the interest on a bond, the principal whereof is not yet due, the court of C. P. will not stay the proceedings on payment of the interest and costs: but semble, that they would restrain the execution to the interest and costs. Tighe v. Crafster, 2 Taunt. 387.

A bond conditioned to pay costs on the 29th of November, in Cumberland, when taxed by the Master of K. B., is forfeited by non-payment, though in fact the costs were only taxed on the 25th of November, of which the defendant had no notice on or before the 29th; for the defendant might have had them taxed before, and thus have known their amount in time. Bigland v. Skelton, 12 East, 436.

An apportionment of interest upon a bond, according to the general rule, as accruing de die in diem, is not prevented by the condition, reserving it by equal half-yearly payments. Banner v. Lower, 13 Ves. jun. 135.

2. What a Forfeiture generally.

A bond conditioned for the payment of a sum of money to such person as A. B. shall by will

Where a bill of exchange was drawn by A. in England on B. at Bombay, payable sixty days after sight, and a bond given to C. (the indorsee) with condition to be void if the bill should be paid at Bombay, or paid here by the obligor within thirty days after the bill should be produced to him after being sent back here protested for non-payment; and before the bill arrived at Bombay, the drawee had left that place, and his agent refused to accept it when it did arrive: it was held, that the bond was not forfeited by the obligor refusing to accept the bill thirty days after it was returned to England protested for non-acceptance. Campbell v. French (in error,) 6 T. R. 200; 2 H. Black. 163.

The condition of a bond being "to render a fair, just, and perfect account, in writing, of all sums received:" if the obligor neglect to pay over such sums, he is guilty of a breach of the condition. Bache v. Procter, 1 Dougl. 382.

It is not a breach of the bond of a broker in the city of London, to act as a broker concurrently with another. London (Mayor, &c.) v. Brandon, 2 Stark. 14; Holt, 438—Ellenborough.

Where a man bound himself in a bond, to leave his children 200*l.* jointly, and left four children, and gave the eldest an estate in land, and the other three 50*l.* apiece at 21:—Held, not a performance of the condition. Taylor v. Bird, 1 Wils. 280.

Where, in the condition of a bond, it was recited, that the plaintiffs were shareholders in a public water company, on which shares 30*l.* per cent. had been paid by instalments, and that the plaintiffs had agreed to pay up the remaining instalments forthwith; that three persons therein named had agreed to purchase these shares at a certain sum, to be secured by the joint bond of one of such persons and the defendant; and the condition of the bond was, that he and the defendant should, on a given day, pay the plaintiffs the amount of the shares, together with interest hereon from the time of the advance or payment hereof by the plaintiffs: the latter being also shareholders and treasurers of a stone-pipe company, which was indebted to them in 12,000*l.*, revailed on the water company to purchase the shares of their company; and to effect payment for them, the plaintiffs, without any calls having been made, entered up in their books as paid, the remaining 70*l.* per cent. due on the water company's shares; and having made this entry, paid the stone-pipe company, deducting, and transferring to their own account, a sufficient sum to discharge the debts due from the pipe company to themselves: in an action of debt against the defendant the sum claimed in respect of the sale of the shares of the water company, the jury having found a verdict for the plaintiffs:—Held, that they had advanced or paid the money for the shares, within the terms of the condition of the bond. Everett v. Eyre, 2 Bing. 166; 9 Moore, 396.

sum of one pounds be paid," the word hundred having been omitted in the second place where it occurred in the condition:—Held, that the insertion of it by a stranger was an immaterial alteration, and did not avoid the instrument. Wagh v. Russell, 1 Marsh. 214, 311; 5 Taunt. 707.

Though this alteration did not avoid the instrument, yet it made such a variance between the aver and the condition, as precluded the plaintiff from recovering. Id.

In debt, on a joint and several bond, the obligees declared against one of three obligors, and set out the condition in the declaration to be for payment by the defendant, C. and D., any or either of them. Plea: non est factum. On the production of the bond it was conditioned for payment by the defendant, C. and E.; and it appeared, that, after its execution by the defendant, the name of E. was substituted for that of D., at the request of the party to whom the money for which the bond was given was advanced, and with the assent of the plaintiffs (the obligees) but without the knowledge or assent of the defendant:—Held, that this was a fatal variance, and avoided the bond as against the defendant, although he afterwards assented to the alteration, and paid some instalments due on the bond. Adams v. Bateson, 3 M. & P. 339; 6 Bing. 110.

8. Stamp.

By 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, sched. 1, tit. "Bond," bonds given as a security for the payment of any definite and certain sums of money are to have the following stamps:—

	£	s.	d.
If not exceeding 50 l. . . . . .	1	0	0
If above 50 and not exceeding 100 . . . . .	1	10	0
100 . . . . .	2	0	0
200 . . . . .	3	0	0
300 . . . . .	4	0	0
500 . . . . .	5	0	0
1000 . . . . .	6	0	0
2000 . . . . .	7	0	0
3000 . . . . .	8	0	0
4000 . . . . .	9	0	0
5000 . . . . .	10	0	0
10,000 . . . . .	15	0	0
20,000 . . . . .	25	0	0

Bonds given as a security for the repayment of money to be thereafter lent, advanced, or paid, or which may become due upon an account current, together with any sum already advanced or due, or without, where the money secured, or to be ultimately recoverable, shall be uncertain and without any limit. 25 0 0

Bonds not otherwise charged, . . . . . 1 15 0

Any bond for securing money already advanced, and to be in future advanced on account current, (although the obligation be under a penalty in a sum certain, however less than 20,000*l.*) could not be received in evidence, unless it bore a 20*l.* stamp, being held, notwithstanding the penalty, to be a bond for the security of money which may become due and payable on an account current, together with sums already advanced, where the total amount of the money secured, or to be ultimately recoverable thereupon, was uncertain and without limit in the words of the 48 Geo. 3, c. 149. Those words are to be construed as applying to the effect of the condition of the bond, without regard to the amount of the penalty, which is not to be considered as limiting the extent of a security where such bond is given to secure the payment of a final balance on account current. Scott v. Allcop, 2 Price, 20.

A bond to secure the damages to be recovered upon a new trial, and the costs of the action, in the event of the result of a second action proving similar to that of the first action, was properly stamped with a 35*s.* stamp. Lopes v. De Tastet, 8 Taunt. 712.

A bond for securing certain conditions to be performed by the vendor of a house required a 20*s.* stamp only. Hughes v. King, 1 Stark. 118—Ellenborough.

A bond conditioned for the payment, by quarterly payments, of an annual rent, was within the 48 Geo. 3, c. 149, sched. part 1, which imposed a duty on bonds given as a security for the payment of any definite and certain sum of money, and required a stamp accordingly. Attree v. Anscomb, 2 M. & S. 88. Aud see Mounsey v. Stephenson, 7 B. & C. 403.

A bond conditioned for the production of a box, containing the subscriptions of a friendly society, was within the exemption in 33 Geo. 3, c. 54, s. 4, and need not be stamped. Carter v. Bond, 4 Esp. 253—Ellenborough.

A bond conditioned for the payment of money and interest, and also for the performance of collateral acts, requires only the ad valorem stamp appropriated to the principal sum, where that stamp exceeds the 1*l.* 15*s.* which the collateral matter would require if it stood alone. Dearden v. Binns, 1 M. & R. 130.

A bond was conditioned for the payment, on a certain day, being a year from the date, of a certain sum, with interest thereon, at the rate of 5*l.* per cent.:—Held, that a stamp covering the amount of the principal was sufficient. Dixon v. Robinson, 1 M. & R. 115; 5 C. & P. 96.

A bond, conditioned to pay 1000*l.* on a day five years from the date, and to pay interest, half-yearly, in the meantime, only requires a stamp for the amount of the principal sum of 1000*l.* Foreman v. Jeyes, 5 C. & P. 419—Parke.

A bond was given for 2000*l.*, the condition of which, after reciting that A. B. had opened an account with D., E., F. and G., as bankers, and that the bankers had agreed to discount bills, and pay in advance for A. B. any sum not exceeding 1000*l.* in the whole, was that A. B. and C. should satisfy and pay the bankers all such sums as they should advance on account of the discount or paying any bills, &c. together with such lawful charges and allowances for advancing and paying such bills as are usually charged by bankers in such cases, and interest:—Held, that this being a bond to secure not only 1000*l.*, but a further sum for the bankers' charges for commission, &c., the stamp of 5*l.* required by the 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, sched. part 1, tit. "Bond given to secure a sum exceeding 500*l.* but not exceeding 1000*l.*," was not sufficient. Dickson v. Cass, 1 B. & Adol. 343.

A bond was given, conditioned to secure a London banker from the balance arising from paying bills, &c. for a country banker; a stipulation was inserted in the condition, that the whole amount of moneys to be ultimately recoverable should not exceed the sum of 1000*l.*:—Held, that the bond did not require a 25*l.* stamp. Lloyd v. Heathcote, 1 C. & M. 336.

A bond conditioned to secure plaintiffs to the extent of 5000*l.*, which was held to guarantee a running account which plaintiffs had with a third person, and not to be discharged by the first payment of 5000*l.*, only requires a 9*l.* stamp and not a 25*l.*, as a security of an unlimited extent, under stat. 55 Geo. 3, c. 184. Williams v. Rawlinson, 3 Bing. 71; R. & M. 233. And see Thompson v. Cooke, 8 Moore, 588.

An agreement stamp is not necessary to an arbitration bond, containing, besides the usual covenants, an agreement as to the payment of costs. Wansborough v. Dyer, 2 Chit. 40.

Where, by a bond, A., as principal, and B., as surety, were jointly and severally bound to pay to the creditors of C., 14*s.* in the pound on the amount of their debts; and by the same bond A. was bound to indemnify B. against all loss by reason of his becoming surety:—Held, that a stamp of 1*l.* 15*s.* was sufficient in amount for this instrument, and that it did not require a second stamp on account of its obligation to indemnify B., the whole being one transaction. Annan-dale v. Pattison, 9 B. & C. 919.

A bond and a mortgage executed on the same day, for securing the same sum of money, but bearing different dates, require an ad valorem stamp on each instrument. Wood v. Norton, 4 M. & R. 673; 9 B. & C. 885.

III. LIABILITY OF OBLIGOR.

1. Collector's Bonds.

Taxes.]—Where a collector of revenue has given a bond to the crown, the penalty is a security against all the expenses of process and execution against him. Rex v. Dean, 2 Anst. 369.

A bond with one surety only, taken by commissioners of taxes, under the 43 Geo. 3, c. 99, s. 13, is not therefore void. Peppin v. Cooper, 2 B. & A. 431.

The office of collector under that act of parliament is an annual office; and therefore, where a bond, after reciting the appointment of H. W. to be collector under the act, was conditioned for the due collection by H. W. of the rates and duties at all times thereafter:—It was held that the due collection of the rates for one year was a compliance with the condition of the bond. And although it appeared from the condition of the bond that H. W. and G. P. were both appointed collectors, it was held that such bond, being for the due collection by H. W. only, might be put in suit against the surety without first selling the goods of G. P. Id.

A bond, whereby the obligor became bound as collector of certain duties assessed under stat. 43 Geo. 3, c. 122, may be put in force against one of the sureties, though he were not apprised of the default of the principal collector in not paying over duties collected by him, nor called upon for an indemnity by the commissioners till after the dismissal from office of such collector. Nares v. Rowles, 14 East, 510.

If in an action on a bond given by the sureties of a collector of taxes, there be breaches assigned, that the collector did not pay over money received, and that he did not duly demand and enforce payment of the taxes, it is not necessary on the part of the plaintiff to prove exactly what money he received; for if it be proved that he was to collect a certain sum, and that he paid over a smaller sum, and did not take proper steps to exonerate himself from the residue, the plaintiff will be entitled to recover. Loveland v. Knight, 1 M. & R. 597; 3 C. & P. 106.

A bond made by defendant's testator as surety for E., with a condition reciting that E. had been and still was collector of the land tax, and all other taxes and duties imposed by several acts of parliament on the inhabitants of the parish of C., by means whereof he received from the inhabitants divers sums of money, and conditioned for the due payment by E., from time to time, and at all times thereafter, to the receiver-general of taxes, &c., of all and every sum which he (E.) should from time to time collect and receive from the inhabitants of the parish, for or on account of any tax or taxes then imposed, or which should or might thereafter be imposed on them by any act of parliament, was held to be confined to the current year for which E. was collector at the date of the bond, although it did not appear on the condition that he was only appointed for a year, it being shown by the defendant's plea, that the said office of collector was an annual office, and held as such by E. at the date of the bond, although by the replication it appeared that E. held the office not only for that year, but from thence to the time of exhibiting plaintiff's bill. Hassell v. Long, 2 M. & S. 363. And see Curling v. Chalkden, 3 M. & S. 502.

The 43 Geo. 3, c. 99, s. 13, enacts, that the collectors shall give security to the commissioners for duly paying such monies as shall come to their hands, and for duly demanding the sums assessed, and for duly enforcing the act against defaulters; and by the land tax act, 38 Geo. 3, c. 5, s. 21, the collectors are required to give security to the commissioners for duly paying to the receiver-general the sums collected by them. The defendant was sued on a bond which contained those conditions, and also a condition for accounting and paying to the commissioners:—Held, that this latter condition might be rejected as surplusage, and did not avoid the bond. Collins v. Gwynne, 7 Bing. 423; 5 M. & P. 276.

By s. 13, the district collectors of assessed taxes are required to give security to the commissioners in a sum "equal to the amount of the whole duty assessed and to be collected in each district;" and by the general stamp act, 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, sched. part 1, title "Bond," bonds given by collectors of assessed taxes and their sureties, for the due payment of monies collected by them, are exempted from stamp duties:—Held, that the direction of the 43 Geo. 3, c. 99, s. 13, was virtually complied with by a security given in such sum as was large enough to include, though it exceeded, the exact amount of duties to be collected for the district; and therefore that such bond was within the above exemption in the stamp act;—Held, also, that such bond was properly given "to the commissioners;" and need not be "to his majesty, his heirs, and successors." Collins v. Gwynne, 2 M. & Scott, 640; 9 Bing. 544.

The 30th section of the 43 Geo. 3, c. 99, empowers and requires the commissioners of assessed taxes to call before them the collector, and to examine him upon oath, and assure themselves of the sums paid to him as such collector, and to make such order therein for the payment of the same to the receiver-general, as they shall judge necessary:—Held, that an omission on the part of the commissioners to comply with this direction of the statute, affords no answer to an action against a surety on the collector's bond. Id.

The 13th section of the 43 Geo. 3, c. 99, contains a proviso, "that no such bond shall be put in suit against any surety or sureties for any deficiency other than what shall remain unsatisfied after sale of the lands, tenements, goods, and chattels of such collector or collectors, in pursuance and by virtue of the directions and powers given to the respective commissioners by the act:—Held, that the sale of the collector's lands and goods can only form a condition precedent to the right to put the bond in suit against a surety, where the existence of such property of the collector is known to the commissioners at the time of commencing the action. Id.

Payment by the collector to the receiver-general of monies received by him to the account of a different year from that, for the service of which they were collected, in order to make up deficiencies in a preceding year's account, is a breach of the condition of the bond for duly paying over the sums collected. Id.

To a declaration upon a bond given by a collector of assessed taxes and his sureties, the defendant, a surety, pleaded pleas, showing that the commissioners and receiver-general had not taken steps to enforce payment from the collector, as directed by the acts relating to the assessed taxes:—Held, on general demurrer, that these pleas were bad. Wilks v. Heeley, 1 C. & M. 249.

A plea that the commissioners have not seized the lands, &c. of the collector, must show that there were lands, &c. of the collector, which might have been seized and sold to supply the deficiency. Id.

Rates.]—The condition of a bond given to commissioners of sewers by a collector of rates, was, that the collector should at all times render a faithful account to the commissioners for the time being of all such sums of money as had already been collected or received, or which thereafter should be collected or received by him, by virtue of any rates for and on account of such commissioners, and should pay to the commissioners for the time being all monies already received, or which should thereafter be received by him:—Held, that the collector was bound to account for and pay to the commissioners for the time being, sums of money collected and received by him, by virtue of a rate made by commissioners acting under a commission, which expired before the execution of the bond. Saunders v. Taylor, 9 B. & C. 35.

Where a bond was conditioned that a collector of church and poor's rates should produce a faithful account to the obligees or their successors, for monies which might be received by him, or come to his hands, pursuant to, and in execution of, his said office of collector:—Held, that the obligor was not answerable for monies received by him on account of any year subsequently to that in which the obligees were in office. Leadley v. Evans, 2 Bing. 32; 9 Moore, 102.

A, B, and C. entered into a bond as sureties for D. and E., the condition of which bond recited that D. was on such a day appointed collector of the church rate of the parish of St. S. S., by virtue of which office he was empowered to collect and receive all such monies as were rated and assessed on the inhabitants by virtue of the said rate, and for which he was accountable to the wardens of the grand account, and bound the sureties for D.'s duly accounting for all monies collected or received by him on account of the above rate, as also on all and every other rate or rates thereafter to be made and collected by him the said D.:—Held, that the sureties were only answerable for D. in that single appointment, and not on his appointment in the ensuing year. St. Saviour's, Southwark v. Bostock, 2 N. R. 175.

Debt on bond made by C. and his sureties, with a condition reciting statute 27 Geo. 2, c. 38, and that C. (four years before the date of the bond) was appointed by the churchwardens and parishioners of D., in pursuance of the statute, collector of the poor rates to be levied and raised in the parish, and conditioned that C. should account as often as required, for all monies so collected and received by him, by virtue of the act, &c. Breach, for not accounting for monies collected and received since the making of the bond, &c.: plea, that C. accounted for all the monies collected and received by him before the making of the bond; secondly, that the office of collector is an annual office, and that C. accounted for all the monies collected and received by him within the current year of office in which the bond was made: upon demurrer, held, that both pleas were ill, for, by the words of the statute, the appointment is prospective, to collect future rates and not retrospective only, and the condition is in the words of the statute without any restraining words; and it is not pleaded that the office was an annual office at the time of making the bond, and if it had been, yet it appears by the statute not to be an annual office, though concerning rates which are raised in the course of a year. Curling v. Chalkden, 3 M. & S. 502.

The bond given by the county treasurer to the clerk of the peace, under the 12 Geo. 2, c. 29, extends to duties imposed on county treasurers by subsequent statutes. Farr v. Hollis, 4 M. & R. 230.

A breach of the bond given by county treasurers to the clerk of the peace, may be assigned that the defendant, as treasurer, received a certain sum of money, and omitted to account for it upon being required by the justices at sessions so to do, without adding that he was required to account by an order of justices. Id.

2. Bonds respecting Marriage.

A bond, conditioned for the payment of money after the obligor's death, made to a woman in contemplation of the obligor's marrying her, and intended for her benefit if she should survive, is not released by their marriage. And if the marriage be pleaded in bar to an action of debt on the bond against the heir of the obligor, a replication stating the purposes for which the bond was made will be good, for they are consistent with the bond and condition. Milbourn v. Ewert, 5 T. R. 381.

A bond given by a father on the marriage of his daughter, was conditioned for payment of interest of a certain sum to the husband or his executors, during the obligor's life; and also for payment of the principal to the husband or his executors, within a limited time after the obligor's death, if any of the issue of the marriage should be living at that time; there were children of the marriage who all died before the obligor, leaving grandchildren; the grandchildren were deemed to be issue of the marriage within the meaning of the condition, and consequently the husband's executors were entitled to recover on the bond. Haydon v. Wilshere, 3 T. R. 372.

If, in a bond made in contemplation of marriage, the obligor agree to settle all lands and hereditaments of which he should be seised during his life upon his intended wife and the issue of the marriage, in such parts and proportions, and to such use and uses as should be thought requisite, the better to make a provision for his intended wife in case she should survive him:—Held, that such obligor having survived his wife, by whom he had issue, and married another by whom he had also issue, would not commit a breach of the condition, if he did not make a settlement of property acquired during the second marriage upon the issue of the first. Prebble v. Boghurst, 1 Moore, 258; 7 Taunt. 538.

A woman on her marriage with a copyholder of a manor, where the widows of husbands dying seised are entitled to their free-bench, gave a bond that the son of her intended husband, by a former wife, should have possession of part of the copyhold estate after the death of the husband, on condition of his repairing the part of the house reserved for her:—Held, to be a valid bond. Rex v. Lopen, 2 T. R. 580.

3. Bonds given by Members of Parliament.

Where a member of parliament had given a bond with two sureties, pursuant to 4 Geo. 3, c. 33, and before trial became bankrupt, the court of King's Bench would not order such bond to be cancelled. Hunter v. Campbell, 3 B. & A. 273; 1 Chit. 731.

Where a bond was given under 4 Geo. 3, c. 33, s. 1, by a member of parliament, being a trader; and after his bankruptcy, but before his certificate, judgment was obtained in the suit in which the bond was given:—Held, that the bankruptcy and certificate were no discharge to the bond. Campbell v. Jameson (in error,) 8 Moore, 281; 1 Bing. 320; 5 B. & A. 250; 12 Price, 341.

Such a bond must be taken as being intended to stand instead of, and be considered as analogous with, the ordinary bail-bond to the action in common cases of arrest for debt. Id.

4. Indemnity Bond.

In case of an ordinary money bond, there is no distinction, upon the face of it, between principal and surety. Secus, in the case of an indemnity bond, where the surety expressly stipulates for the act of his principal. Antrobus v. Davidson, 3 Mer. 578.

The obligee of an indemnity bond, upon being damaged, has an immediate right to be reimbursed. Challoner v. Walker, 1 Burr. 574.

For, one who agrees to indemnify and save others harmless against a certain engagement, is bound to secure them from incurring any expense, as it runs on at the time, which falls upon them by virtue of that engagement. Sparkes v. Martindale, 8 East, 593.

Under a bond of indemnity given by A., that B., who was appointed the general agent of C., the receiver of his rents, and the manager of his estates, should pay over to C. all rents which he should receive, as also the increase and improvements thereof upon any new contracts or renewals of leases; A. is answerable for all fines received by B. on renewing the leases, which were not paid over by him. Irish Society v. Needham, 1 T. R. 482.

The condition of a bond, which recited a purchase from W. by the plaintiffs of lands, was to save them and the lands harmless from all manner of mortgages, judgments, extents, executions, and other incumbrances, had and obtained, or thereafter to be had and obtained, by T. T., or any other person; and it was held to bind the obligor against the wrongful entry of T. T., being particular against the acts of a particular person. Nash v. Palmer, 5 M. & S. 374.

X. became bound as a surety with Y. to A. on the 10th August 1778, in a bond conditioned for payment in six months: on the 1st March, 1780, he became bound with Y. to B. conditioned for payment in six months: on the 4th March, 1780, Y. became bound to X. conditioned for payment of the two former bonds, and also to indemnify X. against those two bonds: the money secured by the second bond not being paid on the day when it became due: it was held that the last bond was thereby forfeited, though X. was not called on to pay the money in the second bond until afterwards. Hodgson v. Bell, 7 T. R. 97.

A. binds himself under a penalty to indemnify B. against his obligation to C., if the money be not paid before a certain day. B., in an action on the bond for not indemnifying, is entitled to recover the amount of the penalty of the bond. Wood v. Wade, 2 Stark. 167—Ellenborough.

A. engages to indemnify B. against a debt due from A. and B. to C. of 50*l.*; they, in fact, owe 74*l.*, for which B. is arrested. A. is liable to B. on his engagement to indemnify him. Hancock v. Clay, 2 Stark. 100—Ellenborough.

A bond conditioned to save A. harmless from all actions, legal proceedings, and costs, &c., which might be the consequence of A.'s delivering over to the defendant a bill of exchange, part of the proceeds of which a third person was entitled to, is forfeited by a payment over by A. to such third person of his share of the proceeds upon his demanding the same, without his bringing any action: although A. gave no notice of the payment to the defendant. Ker v. Mitchell, 2 Chit. 487.

Where there are several names composing a firm, but part are nominal only and not interested in the profits, and in a declaration on a bond of indemnity to secure money advanced to a third person, the breach states the money to be paid by the partners only who are interested in the profits, it is good, though the money was paid on bills drawn on the firm composed of all the partners. Harrison v. Fitzhenry, 3 Esp. 238—Le Blanc.

Several owners of different ships having entered into a bond to a trustee, binding themselves and their assigns to indemnify each other to a certain amount, if any of their ships should be lost; and one of them having sold his ship, and she being afterwards lost, the others are not liable under the bond, unless the vendor has sold (together with the ship) his interest in the agreement of indemnity. Ayres v. Wilson, 1 Dougl. 385.

B. being hired as a clerk to A. & Co., but not for any definite period, C. and D. joined in a bond to secure his duly accounting for his assets. C. died, and his executrix gave a written notice to A. & Co., that she would no longer remain surety; A. & Co. communicated this notice to B., and required and obtained from him the notice of another surety; D. died, and also the new surety, and, four years and a half after the death of C., B. died, when deficiencies were found in his accounts, subsequent to the notice:—Held, that the executrix of C. had no equity to restrain A. & Co. from proceeding at law on the bond. Gov- to C., A. gave B. a bond conditioned to pay the annuity to C., and to indemnify B. from any claims of C.:—Held, that this was not a mere indemnity bond, and that B. therefore might put it in suit, as soon as A. made default in payment of the annuity, without proving that he had actually been damaged. Perriag v. Foy, 2 M. & R. 181.

Two ladies entrusted much of the management of their affairs to A., who was not a professional person. In the course of business A. became bound with them in a bond for 10,000*l.* given on their account; on the same day they executed a bond to A. for 12,000*l.* The survivor of the two ladies afterwards, by her will, left a legacy of 2000*l.* to A. The bond for 12,000*l.* was on the face of it a simple money bond:—Held, that it must be taken to be a simple money bond, unless impeached by evidence which showed that it was partly for indemnity; and that the burden of proving it be an indemnity bond lay upon the party impeaching the bond. Nicol v. Vaughan, 1 Clark & Fin. 49.

5. Bonds to the Crown.

The statute 33 Hen. 8, c. 39, says that all obligations and specialties made to the king, or his heirs, shall be made payable by these words: Solvend. eidem domino Regi hinc. vel executoribus. But a bond taken to the king, his heirs and successors, was held to be good; these words in the statute being only directory. Yale v. Rex (in error) 6 Bro. P. C. 30.

The bonds given by masters of vessels, under 26 Geo. 3, c. 40, are continuing bonds, and remain in force as long as the same person is master of the same ship, but not when he becomes master of any other vessel. Rex v. McLeod, 3 Price, 203.

It is not necessary, therefore, that a fresh bond should be given on every voyage made by the vessel. Id.

A bond to the crown, though not forfeited, is sufficient to entitle the obligor to an extent in aid. Rex v. Manswaring, 1 Price, 202.

If an auctioneer's bond to the crown under 19 Geo. 3, c. 56, s. 7, be forfeited, the penalty is due, and is not merely a security to compel an account. Rex v. Christie, 2 Anst. 586.

Plea to scire facias for breach of the condition of the usual bond given not to reband, where the merchant claims drawbacks on goods intended for exportation, that defendant was prevented from shipping and exporting accordingly, in consequence of a seizure of part of the goods by revenue officers: replication, that the goods had not been regularly so shipped, nor intended so to be, nor agreed in quantity with the notice given; imputing also a charge of fraud in attempting to obtain allowance of the drawbacks for a larger quantity than was actually shipped, and alleging that the goods were lawfully seized for having a certain quantity of earthenware

6. On Change or Death of Parties.

A surety bond for the faithful service of J. & A. to a sole trader, does not extend to a subsequent partnership. Wright v. Russell, 2 W. Black. 934; 3 Wils. 530.

A bond with condition that a clerk shall serve faithfully and account for all money, &c. to the obligee and his executors, does not make the obligor liable for money received by the clerk in the service of the executors of such obligee, who continue the business and retain him in the same employment. Barker v. Parker, 1 T. R. 987.

If A. become bound to B. under condition that C. shall truly account to B. for all sums of money received by C. for B.'s use, and C. afterwards with B.'s knowledge, takes D. as his partner; the guarantee does not extend to sums of money received by C. for B.'s use, after the formation of the partnership. Bellairs v. Elsworth, 3 Camp. 53—Ellenborough.

A bond given to trustees to secure the faithful services of a clerk to the Globe Insurance Company, who were no corporation, may be put in suit by the trustees for a breach of faithful service by the clerk, committed at any time during his continuance in the service of the actual existing body of persons carrying on the same business under the same name, notwithstanding any intermediate change of the original holders of the shares by death or transfer; the intention of the parties to the instrument being apparent to contract for such service to be performed to the company as a fluctuating body; and the intervention of the trustees removing all legal and technical difficulties to such a contract made with or suit instituted by the company themselves as a natural body. Metcalf v. Bruin, 12 East, 484; 2 Camp. 422.

A surety who is bound for a clerk in the employment of the obligors, is not discharged from the obligation of his bond, by the obligor's having taken into the firm a new partner. Barclay v. Lucas, 1 T. R. 292, n.; 3 Dougl. 321.

Where a bond by A., reciting that B. intended to open a banking account with C., D., and E. as his bankers, was conditioned for payment to them of all sums from time to time advanced to B. at the banking house of C., D., and E.:—Held, that on C.'s death such obligation ceased, and did not cover future advances made after another partner was taken in; and that B., who was indebted to the house at C.'s death, having afterwards paid off the balance, which was applied at the time to the old debt incurred in C.'s life, A. was wholly discharged from his obligation. Strong v. Lee, 3 East, 484.

Where C. became surety for such sums as should be advanced to meet bills drawn by A. and B. as partners, or either of them:—Held, that it did not extend to bills drawn by B. after the death of A. Simpson v. Coats, 8 Mees. 589; 1 Bing. 452.

Therefore, where the defendant, as surety, entered into a bond, which, after reciting that his principals, A. B. and C. D., were bankers at Sunderland, was conditioned for securing such sum or sums as should be advanced to meet bills of exchange drawn by A. B. and C. D., or either of them, on the plaintiffs, (the obligees, who were bankers in London :) it was held, that the bond did not extend beyond the continuance of the partnership between A. B. and C. D.; and consequently that the surety was not liable for the amount of bills drawn by C. D. after the death of A. B.; and also that remittances, made by the survivor after the death, must be appropriated, in the first place, in liquidation of the partnership balance then due, there being no balance struck, or rest made, in the accounts in the books of the obligees, and such remittances having been made on the general account, without any specific mode of application. Id.

An action may be maintained upon a bond expressed to be payable to a mercantile firm, by the persons who actually constituted the firm when the bond was executed. Moller v. Lambert, 2 Camp. 548—Mansfield.

A bond, conditioned to repay to five persons all sums advanced by them, or any of them, in their capacity of bankers, will not extend to sums advanced, after the decease of one of the five, by the four survivors, the four then acting as bankers. Weston v. Barton, 4 Taunt. 673.

A bond was given to the several persons constituting the firm of a banking-house, conditioned for the repayment of the balance of an account, and of such further sums as the bankers might advance to the obligor: one of the partners dies, and a new partner is taken into the firm; at that time a considerable balance is due from the obligor to the firm: advances are afterwards made by the bankers, and payments made to them on account by the obligor; the latter is credited by the new firm with the several payments, and charged with the original debt and subsequent advances, as constituting items in one entire account, and the balance due at the time of the partner's death is considerably reduced; and that reduced balance, by order of the obligor, is transferred by the bankers to the account of another customer, who, with his assent, is charged with the then debt of the obligor. The person so charged having become insolvent, the surviving partners of the original firm brought their action upon the bond:—Held, that as they had not originally treated it as a distinct account, but had blended it in the general account with other transactions, they were not at liberty so to treat it at a subsequent period; and that having received in different payments a sum more than sufficient to discharge the debt due upon the bond at the time of the death of the deceased partner, the bond was to be considered as paid. Bodenham v. Purchas, 2 B. & A. 39.

Quære, whether the transfer of the balance due from the obligor to the account of another, with his assent, did not, in point of law, operate as payment. Id.

A bond was given to A., B., C., &c. payable to them and their successors, as the governors of the society of musicians, conditioned to secure J. H.'s faithfully accounting with them and their successors, governors, &c. as their collector; afterwards the society was incorporated by letters-patent, at which time J. H. had duly accounted for all monies collected by him; but after the incorporation received money for which he did not account:—Held, that the obligor of the bond was not liable for such default of J. H. in an action on the bond. Dance v. Girdler, 1 N. R. 34.

The condition of a bond, after reciting that A., B. & C. had filed a bill in equity against D. and E., was, that the obligee would pay all such costs as the court of Chancery should award to the defendants on the hearing of the cause:—Held, that the death of E., before any costs were awarded, could not be pleaded in discharge of the bond. Kipling v. Turner, 5 B. & A. 261.

7. Discharge by Payment.

Where the obligee of a bond receives the whole principal after it is payable, he cannot recover interest in an action on the bond, as solvit post diem is a good plea. Dixon v. Parkes, 1 Esp. 110—Kenyon. S. P. sed quære, Hellier v. Franklin, 1 Stark. 291—Ellenborough.

A payment by the obligor of a bond to the obligee, to whom the obligor is also otherwise indebted, cannot, without some circumstances to show that it was intended to be made in discharge of the bond, be so applied in favour of a surety of the obligor, in an action upon the bond, under the plea of payment. Plomer v. Long, 1 Stark. 153—Ellenborough.

A. gave B. a bond to secure an annuity, and before any payment became due, A. lent B. a sum of money, on which it was agreed that B. should retain the payments of the annuity as they became due, till that sum was discharged: the agreement to retain was held a good plea to an action on the bond, such agreement and retainer being equivalent to a plea of solvit ad diem. Sturdy v. Arnaud, 3 T. R. 599.

A specialty security is not waived by a promissory note, taken for the balance of the account of interest. Curtis v. Rush, 2 Ves. & B. 416.

8. Limitation and Presumption of Payment.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3, all actions on bonds are to be brought within ten years after the end of the session of 1833, or within twenty years after the cause of action accrued: provided, that infants, married women, lunatics, and persons beyond the seas, may bring actions beyond that time, so that they proceed within the same time after the disability is removed.

By s. 7, no part of the United Kingdom is to be considered as beyond seas.

By s. 5, an acknowledgment in writing, signed by the party liable or his agent, a part payment or satisfaction on account of principal or interest, extends the term for a further period of like limitation.

Before the statute, twenty years without any demand was of itself a presumption that a bond

But there must be a lapse of the full period of twenty years from its becoming forfeited, unless there be some additional circumstance, as an intermediate settlement of accounts between the parties. Calsell v. Budd, 1 Camp. 27—Ellenb.

Payment of money secured by a bond is not to be presumed, although more than twenty years have elapsed since an acknowledgment that any sum was due upon it, if the obligee ever since that acknowledgment has resided abroad. Newman v. Newman, 1 Stark. 101—Ellenborough.

Indorsements on a bond, acknowledging the receipt of interest or payment of part of the principal, are not evidence against the obligor, to prove that the bond was on foot, without showing that they were on the bond recently after their dates, and at a time when their purport was contrary to the interest of the obligee. Russ v. Bryant, 2 Camp. 321—Ellenborough.

In the case of an annuity bond, a payment after a considerable time had elapsed, was held to be evidence for a jury to presume payment of the consideration money, although the attesting witness could not speak to the fact, and there was no receipt indorsed. Haslam v. Diggle, 1 C. & P. 398—Best.

The producing a receipt for interest within twenty years, indorsed on a bond by the obligee, is sufficient to take off the presumption of payment, though no proof be given when such receipt was written and signed. Barrington (Lord) v. Beale (in error), 3 Bro. P. C. 593.

A receipt for the payment of interest within twenty years, accruing due before twenty years, indorsed on a bond, is an acknowledgment that the principal was then due, sufficient to negative a plea of solvit post diem. Saunders v. Meredith, 3 M. & R. 116.

Payment of a bond is not to be presumed after more than twenty years, if the money was lent to enable the obligee to go abroad, where he died shortly after, and there is evidence that his administrator never received any assets. Elliott v. Elliott, 1 M. & Rob. 44—Tenterden.

Where in debt on a bond more than twenty years old, to rebut the presumption of payment, the obligee gave evidence of payment of interest by the obligor to A. B., equal in amount to the interest that would become due on the bond:—Held, that an indorsement on the bond in the handwriting of the obligee, and which appeared to have been made at or about the time when the bond was executed, but which was not proved to have been ever seen by the obligor, stating that the bond was given to the obligor in trust for A. B., was admissible in evidence to connect the payment of interest with the bond. Glendon v. Atkin, 1 C. & M. 410.

To a bond of upwards of twenty years standing was pleaded—inter alia—payment and a release. To rebut the presumption of payment, an affidavit made by defendant before a master in Chancery was produced, in which he (being the son-of the obligor, and an illegitimate son) produced what he had, as he should never call upon him for it. Although the presumption of payment was thereby rebutted, it was nevertheless evidence also of the bond having been cancelled or otherwise legally discharged. Washington v. Brymer, Peake's Add. Cas. 201—Grise.

The presumption of payment of a bond after twenty years may be repelled by evidence that the obligor had no opportunity or means of paying. Pladong v. Winter, 19 Ves. jun. 196.

Upon objections to the presumption of payment of a bond, the fluctuation of credit and the fact of the security remaining with the obligor, are circumstances of great weight. Id.

VI. PROCEEDINGS ON BONDS.

1. What within 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11.

By 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, s. 8, in all actions in courts of record upon bonds, or on any penal sum for non-performance of any covenants or agreements in any indenture, deed, or writing contained, the plaintiff may assign as many breaches as he may think fit, and the jury upon the trial may assess not only the usual damages and costs, but also damages for such of the breaches assigned as shall be proved to have been broken, and the ordinary judgment on verdict is to be entered; and if judgment shall be given for the plaintiff on demurrer, by confession, or nil dict, he may suggest breaches on the roll, and, upon a writ of inquiry, prove the breaches, and recover damages upon the defendant's paying, either upon execution or into court, the damages assessed with costs, further execution upon the judgment is to be stayed, but the judgment is to remain as a security to answer further breaches, which may again be suggested on scire facias; and similar proceedings are to take place.

A bond given to the Lord Chancellor in bankruptcy under statute 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 23, was, it seems, not within the stat. 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, s. 8, by which a jury is to assess damages; because by the stat. 5 Geo. 2, the damages were to be ascertained by the Lord Chancellor, although he might assist his conscience by directing an inquiry before a master, or an issue at law. Smith v. Edmondson, 3 East, 22.

In debt for a penalty in articles, the jury ought to assess damages upon the breach, according to the stat. 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, and shall not find the debt; or a venire facias de novo shall be awarded. Drage v. Brand, 9 Will. 377.

Leave was given to the plaintiff in debt on bond conditioned to perform an award, after judgment for him upon a plea of judgment recovered, to execute a writ of inquiry upon the stat. 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, s. 8, after a writ of error allowed, and to sign a new judgment, on the terms of paying costs, and putting the defendant in statu quo, &c. Hambury v. Guest, 14 East, 401.

Bail bonds are not within the statute. Abbey v. Lowe, 1 Tidd's Prae. 633.

In debt on bond conditioned to perform an award, the plaintiff must assign a breach under the statute, and cannot have judgment for the penalty, and take out execution for the single sum awarded, though the measure of damages be ascertained by the award. Welch v. Ireland, 6 East, 613; 2 Smith, 666.

To debt on bond, the defendant craved oyer; and, after reciting a mortgage deed, which showed the condition to be for payment of a sum of money on a day specified, according to the tenor of the proviso contained in the indenture, and for the performance of the covenants contained therein, pleaded, that there were no negative or disjunctive covenants in the indenture, and that he paid the money mentioned in the condition on the day therein specified, according to the effect thereof, and performed all the covenants and provisos in the indenture on his part to be performed. The plaintiff, in his replication, took issue generally on the non-payment of the money, and concluded to the country. On special demurrer, assigning for causes, that it should have concluded with a verification, and that no breach of the condition was assigned according to the statute:—Held, that such replication was good, as the only point in issue was the payment of the money, and as the plaintiff had therein denied the whole substance of the defendant's plea. Darbishire v. Butler, 5 Moore, 198.

To a declaration on a judgment in debt on bond, the defendant cannot plead that the bond was conditioned for the performance of covenants, and that no breaches of covenant were suggested or assigned in the original action as the statute requires. Anon. M. & M. 496, n.

Breaches need not be assigned under the 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, on non-payment of an annuity secured by a warrant to confess judgment on a mutuatus. Shaw v. Worcester (Marquis), 6 Bing. 385; 4 M. & P. 21.

A post-obit bond, upon which a forfeiture has taken place, is not within the statute, and therefore it is not necessary to suggest breaches; but it seems that such an instrument is within 4 & 5 Anne, c. 15. Murray v. Stair (Earl), 3 D. & R. 278; 2 B. & C. 82.

But a bond conditioned for the payment of a certain sum by instalments, is within the statute 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, s. 8; and after judgment obtained upon default of payment of one of the instalments, if a subsequent instalment be in arrear, the plaintiff cannot sue out execution for it, though within a year after such judgment, without first suing out a scire facias to revive it. Willoughby v. Swinton, 6 East, 550; 2 Smith, 663.

A bond upon the face of it appeared to be conditioned for the payment of a sum certain, but by an indenture of the same date, declaring the purposes for which the bond was executed, it was agreed that it should be lawful for the obligees in the bond to commence an action, and to proceed to judgment whenever they should think fit, and upon judgment being obtained, to issue execution, and that the judgment should be a security for the payment to the obligees, on demand, of all sums of money which then were or might thereafter become due to them. A judgment having been entered up by virtue of this deed, the obligees issued execution without assigning breaches or executing a writ of inquiry:—Held, first, that this was a bond substantially conditioned for the performance of an agreement within the statute, and that the obligees ought to have assigned breaches. Hurst v. Jennings, 5 B. & C. 560.

The 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, s. 8, enabling and requiring the plaintiff in actions on bonds to assign breaches, extends to a liability created by the breach of an indemnity bond, whereby the obligee is so far damnified as that he may be required to pay money in consequence of a forfeiture, although the matter of the liability should be in some sort collateral to the direct breach, and actual damnification has not ensued. Thus, where a party indemnified by bond is sued for damages in respect of the matter of the indemnity, and the plaintiff recovers, if the defendant in that action recover over against the indemnifier, he must assign as a breach, not only the damages and costs recovered against him, but also his own costs sustained in defending the suit, although he have as yet in fact paid nothing in respect or on account of such costs, or if he do not assign, he will be estopped by the statute from recovering by scire facias on the judgment obtained on the bond what he may afterwards be compelled to pay on that account. Harrop v. Armitage, 12 Price, 441.

Demurrer to a plea in sci. fa., that the plaintiff might have suggested and assigned the damages as further breach of a bond already recovered on under the judgment obtained in the action on which the sci. fa. was founded, overruled. Id.

2. When lost.

Though a court of law will permit a plaintiff to declare upon a lost bond, that does not oust the jurisdiction of the court of Chancery. Atkinson v. Leonard, 3 Bro. C. C. 218.

The jurisdiction of Equity upon lost bonds is very ancient, and is founded upon the want of a remedy at law without profert, till that jurisdiction was lately assumed. East India Comp. v. Boddam, 9 Ves. jun. 466.

Relief was given upon a lost bond against sureties, the principal being out of the jurisdiction, upon giving an indemnity against the demands of the plaintiffs or persons claiming under them by virtue of the bond, and such costs, damages, and expenses as they may be put to by the loss of the bond. Id. 464.

3. Pleadings.

Declaration.—If a person enter into a bond by a wrong Christian name, and be sued on such bond, he should be sued by such name. A declaration against him by his right name, stating that he by the wrong name executed the bond, is bad. Gould v. Barnes, 3 Taunt. 504.

In debt upon bond for the penalty, where there are alternative parts of the condition, the plaintiff must confine himself to a particular breach. Cornwallis v. Savery, 2 Burr. 772; 2 Ld. Ken. 492.

by or for, and in case of its failure, the plaintiff is to recover thereof, upon due proof of his having so failed, the obligation to be void: plea, that J. T. was still alive, and that the estate had not been recovered by him according to the tenor of the condition: replication, that the plaintiff had not at any time due proof made to him that J. T. had failed in the recovery: demurrer, that an immaterial fact was put in issue:—Held, that the obligee was entitled to judgment. Price v. Hemy, 1 D. & R. 451.

To debt on bond conditioned for the payment of a sum of money, which the condition stated to have been taken up, borrowed, and received by the defendants of the plaintiffs at respondentia interest, secured by a cargo of goods shipped from Calcutta to Ostend, it is competent to the defendant to plead that the bond was given to secure the price of goods sold by the plaintiffs to the defendants in the East Indies, and illegally prepared by the plaintiffs for shipment from thence to the Cape of Good Hope, without the license of the East India Company: without proceeding to state formally, that the condition was colourable to conceal the illegality of the transaction, and to negative that the bond was given for money taken up, borrowed, and received, &c.: for the statement in the plea is rather explanatory of, than absolutely inconsistent with, the transaction stated in the condition of the bond: but if it were inconsistent with it, the plea would still be good in this form. Paxton v. Popham, 9 East, 408. And see Dowling (Lady) v. Chapman, 9 East, 414, n.

If the condition of the bond is, "that A. shall not embezzle any money that shall come to his hands on account of his master, it is necessary, in an action against the obligor, to state in the breach, what particular sum of money was embezzled, and how or from whom it was received. Jones v. Williams, 1 Dougl. 214.

Where the obligor of a post-obit bond craved oyer, and set out the condition:—Held, that it was not necessary for the obligee to aver the death of the person, at whose decease the money secured by the bond was to become payable. Murray v. Stair (Earl), 3 D. & R. 278; 2 B. & C. 82.

The breach of the condition of a bond, otherwise well assigned, is not vitiated by the superaddition of immaterial allegations. Stothert v. Goodfellow, 1 Nev. & M. 202.

Fless.)—The defendant cannot take advantage of a void condition in a bond, without praying oyer and pleading it. Cotton v. Goodridge, 3 W. Black. 1108.

A plea of payment before the day is bad to debt on bond. Anon. 2 Wils. 150.

But where to debt on a bond, conditioned to pay money on or before a certain day, the defendant pleaded that he did pay it before the day, to wit, on such a day, it was held good. Anon. 2 Wils. 172.

on bond, conditioned for the payment of a sum of money at a certain day, though it appeared by the condition that the bond was given by way of indemnity. Holmes v. Rhodes, 1 B. & P. 638.

So, a plea, that it was given as an indemnity to the plaintiff's testator against another bond, and not damaged, was held bad. Mason v. Mason, Cowp. 47.

Solvit ante diem is not an immaterial plea in debt on bond. Fletcher v. Huntington, 1 W. Black. 210; 2 Buz. 944; 8 P. Giddings v. Giddings, 1 Ld. Ken. 335.

To debt brought by husband and wife on a bond conditioned for the payment of a certain sum at a certain day, defendant pleaded, that by articles of agreement between the wife, her sister and the defendant, the interest of the money was to be paid to one of the sisters upon an event which had happened; but as the plea did not allege the payment of the interest accordingly, it was helden bad. Baldes v. Elers, 5 T. R. 258.

The condition of a bond, after reciting that the defendant and J. S. had delivered and indorsed to the plaintiff a bill of exchange, drawn by J. S. and accepted by A. B., was, that the defendant and J. S., or either of them, their heirs, &c. should pay, or cause to be paid to the plaintiff, his executors, &c. the sum secured by the bill within one month after it should become due and payable, in case it should not be then paid by the acceptor to the plaintiff, his executors, &c. according to the tenor of the said bill, together with interest from the time the bill became due:—Held, in an action on a bond, that it was not a good plea, that the bill, when due, had not been presented for payment to the acceptor, or that due notice of its dishonour had not been given to the defendant and J. S., or either of them. Murray v. King, 5 B. & A. 165.

A tender and refusal of principal and interest due on a bond after the day mentioned in the condition, and before action brought, cannot be pleaded. Underhill v. Matthews, Bull. N. P. 171.

To an action on a bond, conditioned for the performance of several matters, it is requisite to set forth in the plea, with particularity, the manner in which the terms of the condition were complied with. Reynold v. Reynold, 1 Ld. Ken. 357.

So, to debt on bond, a special demurrer was held good to a plea, because performance of articles of agreement mentioned in the condition was pleaded generally to the agreement, which appeared to be only partially set forth, and that for ought appearing the agreement might contain negative or disjunctive covenants, to which general performance could not be pleaded. Kerr (Earl) v. Baxter, 4 East, 340. And see Flower v. Reins, 4 East, 344, n.

Debt on bond, conditioned for the performance by R. G. of all the covenants on his part mentioned in a certain indenture, bearing even date with the bond, made or expressed to be made between the plaintiff and the said R. G.:—Plea, that before the execution of the bond it was agreed that the plaintiff should grant to R. G. a lease under certain covenants, and that the defendant should enter into a bond as surety for the performance of those covenants; that the defendant did accordingly enter into the bond on which the action was brought, and that the indenture mentioned in the condition thereof was the lease so agreed upon, and no other, but that the said lease never was executed:—Held, on demurrer, that the defendant was estopped by the condition of the bond from pleading this plea. Hosier v. Searle, 2 B. & P. 299.

In a declaration on an indemnity bond to "save harmless and keep indemnified W., his heirs, &c., and also certain closes, &c. from and against all actions, suits, claims, and demands whatsoever, both in law and equity, which should or might be had, made, commenced, or prosecuted by any person or persons claiming any right, title, or demand, in, to, or upon the said closes, &c., as heir-at-law of H. P. and others, and of and from all costs, charges, and expenses which the said W., &c., should sustain or be put to, for or by reason or means of such actions, suits, claims, and demands, or otherwise howsoever:" to which the breaches assigned were—first, that on, &c. H. W. P. "made claim and demand, and claimed to have a right and title of, in, to, and upon the said closes, &c., and entered into and upon the same, and cut down grass, and felled trees there growing, and converted them to his own use;" and secondly, that he "caused and procured, and suffered and permitted one H. B., who then held and enjoyed the said closes, to attorn to him, and to withhold the payment of the rents, issues, and profits;" and thirdly, "that certain title-deeds relating to the said closes, &c. were kept, detained, and withholden, by one A. W., at the instance and through the means, and by and through the claim and demand of T. B., W. P.," &c.:—Held, after the defendant had pleaded over, that those breaches were well assigned on the covenant declared upon. Fowl v. Welch, 2 D. & R. 133: S. C. not S. P. 1 B. & C. 29. And see Nash v. Palmer, 5 M. & S. 374.

Where, to debt on bond to save harmless from expenses by reason of naming one to a curacy, or from suits by reason thereof, the defendant pleaded non damnificatus, and the plaintiff replied, and assigned for breach, that he was obliged to pay such a sum by reason of such nomination, but did not say how he was obliged:—Held, well enough. Simmons v. Langhorne, 2 Wils. 11.

Debt on a common money bond, by executor of obligee against executor of an obligor: plea, that the money mentioned in the condition was part of the personal estate of A. B. deceased, by whom it had been bequeathed to the testator of the plaintiff and the testator of the defendant, and the survivor of them, and the executors and administrators of such survivor, upon trust to put and place the same out at interest, upon such real or other sufficient security as they might approve of, and to pay the interest, &c.; that the testator of plaintiff died, leaving the testator of the defendant surviving; whereupon the said estate of A. B. vested in the defendant's testator, to be by him applied according to the trusts of the will of A. B.:—Held, on general demurrer, that the plea was bad. Gleadow v. Atkin, 2 C. & J. 548.

In an action on a bond given by defendant as surety for W. and W., with a condition reciting that obligees were bankers, and W. and W. manufacturers, who had overdrawn their account, and that obligees had agreed to allow W. and W. to overdraw such further sum as they should require, so as that the same, together with the amount already overdrawn, should not exceed in the whole 5000*l.*, conditioned for the payment of the amount already overdrawn, and such further advances as might be made not exceeding 5000*l.*:—Plea, that after the making of the bond the partnership of the obligees was dissolved, and a new partnership formed, by the retiring of one of the old partners and admitting a new partner, with which new partnership W. and W., with the privity of the retired partner, kept an account; and that, at the time of the dissolution of partnership, a balance of 5000*l.* was due from W. and W. to the partnership for such overdrawing, but the partnership did not at any time demand payment of it; but, on the contrary, at and after the dissolution, discharged W. and W. from making such payment, and consented that the balance should be, and it was transferred to the account between W. and W. and the new partnership, and became incorporated in their account:—Held, that the plea was ill, for an assignment of a chose in action is no discharge of an obligation. Parker v. Wise, 6 M. & S. 239.

Subsequent Pleadings.]—A replication to a plea of duress, "that the defendant was at liberty, and made the bond of his own free will, and not for fear of imprisonment," which concluded to the country, although informal, was held good after verdict. Tomlin v. Burlace, 1 Wils. 6.

If to a plea of performance generally to an action on a sheriff's bond, the plaintiff reply a particular warrant, and that the defendant ought to have made due return, &c., but neglected, &c., he ought to conclude with a verification. Sayre v. Minns, Cowp. 575.

A plea to a declaration on a bond, conditioned amongst other things for the payment of 3000*l.*, that all the sums of money which became due on the bond were paid, may be replied to generally by a general denial of the words of the plea, without assigning any specific breach. Turner v. McNamara, 2 Chit. 697.

Declaration upon a bond, conditioned for the payment of all monies which J. S. should receive on account of the revenue; the defendant pleaded general performance; the attorney-general replied that J. S. or some other person or persons by his order received, &c.:—Held, that the averment of the receipt was only the introduction to the breach, the real assignment of the breach being the non-payment of the money; but however this would have been on demurrer, it was cured by the defendant's rejoining that he had paid the money, which was an admission of his ance of covenants, if the defendant craves oyer, and pleads performance of each covenant specially, and also general performance, the plaintiff must assign specific breaches in his replication, if he has not done it in his declaration; and if he merely takes issue on the general performance, and enters a separate assignment of breaches on the record, no damages can be assessed on them, and the court of C. P. will award a replender. Plumer v. Rose, 5 Taunt. 386; 1 Marsh. 85.

Debt on a bond to prosecute error in the hustings, and to pay damages and costs if judgment be affirmed: plea, that the writ was prosecuted with effect, and that the judgment was not yet affirmed: replication that the writ was nonprosecuted in the hustings: demurrer, and objected, first, that it did not appear before whom the hustings were holden; and secondly that it was not shown that the writ was returnable: but overruled, and judgment given for the plaintiff. Lowfield v. Setchwell, 1 Wils. 123.

To debt on bond, conditioned that one B. R. should account for and pay over to the plaintiffs as treasurers of a charity, such voluntary contributions as he should collect for the use of the charity: the defendants pleaded general performance: the plaintiffs replied that B. R. had received divers sums amounting to a large sum, viz. 100*l.* from divers persons for divers voluntary contributions for the use of the said charity, which he had not accounted for or paid over, &c.:—Held, on special demurrer, that the replication was sufficiently certain. Barton v. Webb, 8 T. R. 459.

To debt on bond, the condition of which was, that A. B. should deliver a true account of all monies received by him in pursuance of his office, the defendant pleaded performance generally. The plaintiff, in his replication, assigned for breach, that A. B. was requested to deliver a true account of all monies received by him in pursuance of his office, but refused so to do:—Held, on special demurrer, that this assignment of the breach was bad, in not alleging that A. B. had received any monies by virtue of his office. Serra v. Fyffe, 1 Marsh. 441; S. C. nom. Serra v. Wright, 6 Taunt. 45.

To an action of debt on bond, against one of two obligors, the defendant pleaded that the plaintiff, by a deed of release under seal, released his co-obligor. The plaintiff replied, that the release was executed by him with the consent and at the request of the defendant, and on an express promise and undertaking by him that the release should not operate to discharge the defendant from, or in any way prejudice the plaintiff's rights or remedies against the defendant in respect of the bond:—Held, that the replication was bad, as the plaintiff could not by parol averment vary the terms of an instrument under seal:—Held, also, that the plaintiff, having admitted in his replication, that he executed the release to the co-obligor, thereby admitted that the Debt on bond; plea, after craving oyer of the bond and condition, which was that A. B. should faithfully account for all monies received by him as collecting clerk, that A. B. did account, replication, that A. B. received divers sums amounting to 2000*l.*, for which he did not account; rejoinder, that the sums mentioned in the replication were three sums of 1000*l.*, 500*l.*, and 500*l.*, received by A. B., of C. D. and F. and G., and that A. B. accounted for those sums; sur-rejoinder, that the sums mentioned in the replication were other and different sums than those alleged in the rejoinder to have been received and accounted for by A. B., and concluding to the country:—Held, upon special demurrer, that the sur-rejoinder was good. Calvert v. Gordon, 7 B. & C. 809; 1 M. & R. 497. And see S. C. nom. Gordon v. Calvert, 4 Ross. 581; 1 Sm. 253.

Debt on bond conditioned for J. S. rendering account to the plaintiffs of all monies which he should receive as their agent. Defendant pleads performance in the words of the condition; plaintiffs reply, that J. S. received divers sums of money amounting to 2000*l.*, belonging to, and relating to the plaintiffs' business, as their agent, and hath not rendered to the plaintiffs an account of the said 2000*l.* or any part thereof; this replication being specially demurred to for generality, was held sufficient. Skarn v. Farrington, 1 B. & P. 640.

In debt upon an obligation without any condition, satisfaction must be pleaded to have been by deed. Preston v. Christmas, 2 Wils. 86.

Where to debt on bond, which contained a condition, that the defendant should not open a shop within a certain distance of premises demised in a lease, the defendant pleaded that he opened a shop by the license of the plaintiff:—Held that such plea was bad, on general demurrer, on the ground that a license, after breach, was not good, unless by deed. Sellers v. Rickford, 1 Moore, 460.

Debt on bond, conditioned for the payment of 5000*l.* at certain times, and performance of covenants in an indenture; plea, stating the payment of the money at the times, and performance of the covenants; replication, that the defendant did not pay the money modo et forma, and concluded to the country; special demurrer, on the ground that the replication ought to have concluded with a verification:—Held, that the conclusion to the country was good. Buck v. Leake, 3 Dougl. 255.

Declaration on a bond to indemnify plaintiff for what beer, &c., he should deliver to I. S.; plea that the plaintiff delivered no beer to I. S. after the making of the bond, and replication, that he did deliver to such an amount: upon general demurrer that the replication did not show that the beer was delivered before the filing of the bill, it was held good, as the objection was only matter of form. Thrale v. Vaughan, 1 Wils. 5.

4. Proceedings on 8 & 9 Will. 3.

The stat. 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, s. 8, which enacts, "that in actions on any penal sum for non-performance of covenants, &c., the plaintiff may assign as many breaches, &c.; and if judgment shall be given for the plaintiff on nil dicit, the plaintiff may suggest on the roll as many breaches, &c., as he shall think fit, upon which shall issue a writ to the sheriff to summon a jury before the justice of assize, &c., to inquire, &c., and to assess the damages, &c.," is compulsory on the plaintiff, and he cannot enter up judgment for the whole penalty on a judgment by default, as he might have done at common law. Roles v. Rosewell, 5 T. R. 538; S. P. Hardy v. Bern, 5 T. R. 636.

Assignment of breaches in debt on bond to perform an award, in the words of the award generally, held sufficient; although the plaintiff did not show that the defendant had become enabled to carry it into effect, by the circumstances having taken place on which it was to have been performed, the award having assumed that they had; and the fact of such circumstances not having taken place, as it lay properly within the defendant's knowledge, should be pleaded and set out by him. Wilcocks v. Nicholls, 1 Price, 109.

The plaintiff may suggest breaches under the statute, at the conclusion of his replication. Humphrey v. Rigby, 2 Chit. 298; 5 M. & S. 60.

After a plea of non est factum, and that the bond was obtained by fraud and covin, where breaches are not assigned in the declaration, the plaintiff may suggest them under stat. 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, in making up the issue. Id.

A suggestion of breaches cannot be introduced on the record, except in the three cases of judgment upon demurrer, by confession, or nil dicit. De la Rue v. Stewart, 2 N. R. 362.

In action of debt on bond, with a penalty for performance of covenants, breaches may be assigned in the replication, under the statute; and on demurrer, an interlocutory judgment may be given, and final judgment stayed till after award and execution of the writ of inquiry. Johnes v. Johnes, 3 Dow, 1.

And where the interlocutory judgment was in Easter term, and then, as the inquisition could not be taken pursuant to the statute till after Trinity term, a day was given in Michaelmas term, passing over Trinity term, without continuance:—Held, that as, in the due execution of the object of the statute, the giving a day in Trinity term would have been nugatory, the reason for the continuance failed, and the omission was no error. Id.

After judgment for the plaintiff on demurrer in debt on bond conditioned to pay an annuity, the plaintiff cannot take out an execution for the arrears due, but must assign breaches on the record under the statute. Walcot v. Goulding, 8 T. R. 126.

A plea, (to a declaration on bond, conditioned, amongst other things, for the payment of 3000*l.*.)

that all the sums of money which became due on the bond were paid, may be replied to generally, by a general denial of the words of the plea, without assigning any particular breach. Turner v. M'Namara, 2 Chit. 697.

In debt on bond, conditioned not to assault, molest, or injure the person of the plaintiff, the replication alleging that the defendant assaulted, molested and injured the person of the plaintiff by then and there beating and otherwise ill-treating him, was held a sufficient assignment of a breach of the condition for which the jury were to assess damages on the statute, although such breach was not alleged in formal terms, according to the statute. Tombs v. Painter, 13 East, 1.

Where one gives a counter-security to another, containing a covenant to pay an annuity and indemnify him, and also a warrant of attorney by way of collateral security, and it is agreed, that, in default of any one payment of the annuity, judgment shall be entered up, and execution issue for the whole sum specifically, being the price of the annuity, it is not necessary to assign breaches under the statute, but execution may issue for the whole sum. Howell v. Stratton, 2 Smith, 65.

An action of debt was commenced in Michaelmas term, against executors on a bond of their testator, conditioned for making it void on payment of a certain sum at a future day, or within one month after his decease, whichever should first happen, and a rule to plead was given as of that term. The defendants, in the following vacation, obtained a judge's order for time to plead, which they neglected to do, and final judgment was signed for want of a plea, which was set aside in the next Hilary term, on the defendants' undertaking to plead within a week, when they pleaded a judgment recovered against them as executors; which not being signed by a serjeant, the plaintiff again signed final judgment:—Held, that it was unnecessary to suggest breaches under the statute. Cardozo v. Hardy, 2 Moore, 220.

Where non est factum is pleaded to a declaration on a bond in which breaches are assigned, the jury who try the issue may assess the damages under the common venire. Parkins v. Hawkshaw, 2 Stark. 381—Abbott.

After oyer of the condition, and non est factum pleaded to debt on bond, on which issue is joined and notice of trial given, the plaintiff may enter a suggestion on the roll, and assign breaches pursuant to the 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11. But it is irregular to deliver such second issue without a summons and a judge's order. Ethersey v. Jackson, 8 T. R. 255.

In a judgment on bond for the payment of an annuity, if a fi. fa. be sued out, and marked for only part of the penalty, a new fi. fa. for subsequent arrears cannot be taken out, without a sci. fa. under stat. 8 & 9 Will. 3. Howell v. Hanforth, 2 W. Black. 843.

Judgment being entered on a bond to secure the quarterly payment of an annuity, and a fi. fa.

having issued for the arrears of the last half year, a second fi. fa. may be taken out for the past quarter, without reviving the judgment. Scott v. Whalley, 1 H. Black. 297.

In debt for a penalty, for non-performance of covenants, a judgment on demurrer may be entered up for the penalty, in like manner as before the stat. 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11; but it can stand only as a security for the damages sustained. Goodwin v. Crowle, Cowp. 357.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 16, all writs of inquiry under the 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, are now, unless the court or a judge shall otherwise order, to be tried before the sheriff instead of the judge of assize or nisi prius.

5. Evidence.

If issue be joined on non est factum, the only proof required on the part of the plaintiff is proof of the execution of the bond by the defendant. Hutchinson v. Keams, 1 Selw. N. P. 589—Mansf.

A bond was executed by a person who could not write:—Held, that if there was no other plea besides non est factum, the defendant's counsel could not ask whether the bond was read over to the defendant before he signed it, nor what was the transaction respecting which it was given. Cranbrook v. Dadd, 5 C. & P. 402—Bolland.

The defendant cannot, under the plea of non est factum to a declaration upon a bond, go into evidence to show that the consideration was an illegal one at common law. Harmer v. Wright, 2 Stark. 35—Ellenborough.

A defendant cannot give in evidence illegality in the consideration of a bond, unless he pleads specially. Harmer v. Rowe, 2 Chit. 334; 6 M. & S. 146.

Where to debt on bond conditioned for the payment of a sum of money on demand, there is an issue on the demand, the plaintiff must prove an express demand before action brought. Carter v. Ring, 3 Camp. 459—Ellenborough.

A person who has given a bond which is the subject of an action, is not a competent witness to impeach its validity, though he is not interested in the event of the suit. Walton v. Shelley, 1 T. R. 296. But see Jordaine v. Lashbrooke, 2 T. R. 601.

In an action upon a bond given to bankers, conditioned for the fidelity of a clerk, entries of the receipt of sums of money made by the clerk in books kept by him in the discharge of his duty as clerk, are, after his death, evidence against his sureties of the fact of the receipt of money. Whitnash v. George, 8 B. & C. 556.

Where a party who executes a bond is at the time competent to execute it, he cannot, under the plea of non est factum, show that he was misled as to the legal effect of the bond. Edwards v. Brown, 1 C. & J. 307; 1 Tyr. 182; 3 Y. & J. 423.

A., with B. and C. his sureties, entered into a bond to D., the condition of which, after reciting that A. was seised in tail of an estate of which he had covenanted to suffer a recovery at a future day, to enure to the use of D. in fee, was, that the bond should be void if the recovery should be suffered, "so and in such manner as that, under and by virtue thereof, the estate should be vested in D. for ever:" the recovery was duly suffered; but A. being seised for life only, D. brought an action upon the bond, to which one of the sureties pleaded, that if A. had been seised in tail, the recovery was suffered so as to vest the estate in D. in fee:—Held, that this plea was bad, because the recital in the condition did not stop D. from disputing that A. was seised in tail, nor release the surety from his obligation, it being the intention of the parties that D. should have an estate in fee. Id.

6. Practice.

If default be made in payment of the interest on a bond, the principal whereof is not yet due, the court of C. P. will not stay proceedings, on payment of the interest and costs. Tighe v. Crafter, 2 Taunt. 387.

But that court will stay proceedings in an action on a bastardy bond, on payment of the penalty and costs. Shutt v. Procter, 2 Marsh. 226.

Proceedings were stayed in an action on a bond for performance of mortgage covenants, on payment of principal and interest, and costs to be computed and taxed by the master on the statute 5 & 6 Anne. Skinner v. Stacey, 1 Wils. 80.

If the obligor of a bond, after notice of its being assigned, take a release from the obligee, and plead it to an action brought by the assignee in the name of the obligee, the court of C. P. will set the plea aside. Legh v. Legh, 1 B. & P. 447. And see Payler v. Homerham, 4 M. & S. 423.

And they would not, under the circumstances, allow the obligor to plead payment of the bond. Id.

BOUNDARIES.

A bill will not lie for one parish against another to ascertain boundaries. St. Luke's v. St. Leonard's, 1 Bro. C. C. 40.

Nor for the mere purpose of settling the boundaries of two manors. Wake v. Conyers, 2 Cox, 360; 1 Eden, 331.

A bill to ascertain the boundaries of two manors was dismissed, there being no dispute as to the soil. Id.

Expired leases and counterparts of expired leases, though cancelled, are admissible in evidence upon a question of boundary. Plaxton v. Dare, 5 M. & R. 1.

Old assessments to church rates are evidence upon a question of boundary, though the parish officers do not charge themselves with the receipt of the rate, otherwise than by crosses set against the names of the parties rated. Id.

BREAD.

[See stat. 3 Geo. 4, c. 106, respecting the sale of bread in London, &c.; and stat. 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 50, repealing 59 Geo. 3, c. 36, regulating the assize of bread.]

It was an offence within the statute 40 Geo. 3, to sell, by wholesale, bread before it has been baked twenty-four hours, even though the seller give directions to the person to whom he sells, not to sell it by retail until the expiration of the twenty-four hours. Rex v. Smith, 8 T. R. 588.

BREWER.

A retail brewer of strong beer, under the stat. 5 Geo. 4, c. 54, whose brewery was situated in a city or market town, could retail from his brewery such strong beer only as was brewed by him upon his brewery premises. Att. Gen. v. Overington, 3 Y. & J. 440.

A retail brewer of strong beer, whose brewery was situate out of a city or market town, and who obtained a license to retail strong beer in a city or market town next adjoining his brewery premises, under the stat. 5 Geo. 4, c. 54, s. 7, could retail at that place only the strong beer brewed by him at his country brewery. Id.

Where a brewer of strong beer, who had two breweries, the one situate out of a city or market town, and the other situate in a city, obtained a license to retail the beer brewed at the former in the next adjoining city, and another license to retail that brewed at the latter at the place where it was brewed, he could not retail at both places the beer brewed at his country brewery. Id.

By stat. 5 Geo. 4, c. 54, s. 6, a retail brewer of strong beer, whose brewery premises were situate in a city or market town, could only retail there the strong beer there brewed by him: where, therefore, the license of a retail brewer empowered him to retail at C. strong beer which he should have brewed, and be charged with duty thereon;—Held, that the license should be construed with reference to the act of parliament, and did not empower him to retail at C. strong beer brewed by him elsewhere. Id.

Where the plaintiff, a druggist, after the 42 Geo. 3, c. 38, but before the 51 Geo. 3, c. 87, sold and delivered drugs to the defendant, a brewer, knowing that they were to be used in the brewery; the court held, that in an action of assumpsit he could not recover the price of them. Langton v. Hughes, 1 M. & S. 593.

Where a brewer delivers beer to be used in a particular public-house, he can not make any person except the licensed keeper of the house primarily liable, so as to maintain an action for goods sold, as it would be a fraud upon the licensing system. Meux v. Humphries, M. & M. 132; 3 C. & P. 79—Tenterden.

BUILDING ACT.

1. Statute, 545.
2. Who is Owner of the improved Rent, 545.
3. Accounts, Demand, and Notice, 546.
4. Other Things, 547.

1. Statute.

The 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, is intituled, "An Act for the further and better regulation of Buildings and Party-walls, and for the more effectually preventing mischiefs by Fire within the cities of London and Westminster, and the liberties thereof, and other the parishes, precincts, and places within the weekly bills of mortality, the parishes of St. Mary-le-bone, Paddington, St. Pancras, and St. Luke, at Chelsea, in the county of Middlesex, and for indemnifying, under certain conditions, builders and other persons against the penalties to which they are or may be liable, for erecting buildings within the limits thereof, contrary to law.

By s. 41, the persons at whose expense any party-wall or party-arch shall be built, shall be reimbursed, by the owners entitled to the improved rent of the adjoining building or ground, who shall at any time make use of it, a part of the expense of building the same, in the proportion of one moiety of the actual expense, where the class of buildings is the same, or of one moiety of the estimated expense, according to the quantity of wall made use of, where the class of the building last erected is inferior to the former.

The rate of expense is to be estimated at 7l. 15s. per rod of new brick work.

Ten days after a party-wall is finished, an account is to be left with the owner of the adjoining building of what he is liable to pay; and if the plaintiff, before action, gives three months' notice, and recovers, he is to have double costs.

By s. 43, party fence walls may be raised by the owner of one side, or be taken down and rebuilt.

The directions of the act are extremely minute and numerous: it must therefore be referred to for further information on the subject.

2. Who is Owner of the improved Rent.

The owner of the improved rent, not of the ground rent, is liable to pay the expenses of a party-wall. Peck v. Wood, 5 T. R. 130.

A lessee for twenty-one years, at a pepper-corn rent for the first half year, and a rack rent for the rest of the term, who by agreement was to put the premises in repair, and covenanted to pay the land tax, and all other taxes, rates, assessments, and impositions, having assigned his term for a small sum in gross, was held not to be liable to pay the expense of a party-wall, either by the provisions of the statute, or by the covenant; but that charge must in such case be borne by the original landlord. Southall v. Ledbetter, 3 T. R. 458.

The statute was intended to throw that burden on persons to whom long leases had been granted, with a view to an improvement of the estate, and who afterwards underlet at a considerable increase of rent. Id.

Semble, a lessee of such a term, who afterwards sold the lease for a sum in gross, would also be liable within the act. Id.

The lessor of a house at rack rent (there being no other person entitled to any kind of rent,) is liable to contribute to the expenses of a party-wall, under the statute, though the lessee has improved the house demised. Beardmore v. Fox, 8 T. R. 214.

The assignee of the lessee of premises, at a fixed rent, which he considerably improved, and thereby rendered of greater annual value, is not the owner of the improved rent within the statute. Lambe v. Hemans, 2 B. & A. 467.

If the lessee of a house at a rack rent underlet it at an advanced rent, he is liable to contribute to the expenses of a party-wall built under the statute; nor is the operation of the statute at all varied by any covenants to repair, entered into between the landlord and his tenant. Sangster v. Birkhead, 1 B. & P. 303.

A tenant who rebuilds a house in London, without a lease or agreement for a lease, and therein makes use of the party-wall of the adjoining house, cannot be sued for half the cost as owner of the improved rent, though he afterwards obtains, in consideration of the rebuilding a beneficial lease at a low ground-rent, habendum from a day before the rebuilding. Taylor v. Reed, 6 Taunt. 249.

Defendant, who had a lease of land from N., entered into an agreement with G., who was to build houses and pay defendant 20*l.* a year, and G. then employed the defendant to build the houses:—Held, that he was liable to contribute to a party-wall to which the houses were attached. Collins v. Wilson, 4 Bing. 551; 1 M. & P. 454.

Where there is no adjoining house when the party-wall is built, the owner is not confined to ten days to give his notice; he has a reasonable time after the adjoining houses are attached. Id.

The tenant of a house covenanted in his lease to pay a reasonable share and proportion of supporting, repairing, and amending all party-walls, &c., and to pay all taxes, duties assessments, and impositions, parliamentary and parochial, "it being the intention of the parties that the landlord should receive the clear yearly rent of 60*l.* in net money, without any deduction whatever." During the lease, the proprietor of the adjoining house built a party-wall between that house and the house demised, under the statute:—Held, that the tenant (not the landlord) was bound to pay the moiety of the expense of the party-wall. Barrett v. Bedford, (Duke.) 8 T. R. 602.

A., a builder, proposed to B., the occupier of the adjoining house, to build a party-wall, and stated the expense; B. answered, "Very well, I expect to pay what is right and fair," and the wall was built:—Held, that A. was entitled to recover from B. his share of the expense, without reference to the statute. Semble, that B. having asked 300*l.* for his lease, he was to be considered as owner of the improved rent, within that act. Stuart v. Smith, 2 Marsh. 435; 7 Taunt. 158; Holt, 321.

A tenant under covenant to repair cannot maintain an action on the statute, against his landlord, for a moiety of the expense of rebuilding a party-wall, which, being out of repair, the tenant pulled down and rebuilt at the joint expense of himself and the occupier of the adjoining house, to whom he had given the notice required by the statute, in his landlord's name, but without his authority. Pizey v. Rogers, R. & M. 357—Abbott.

A tenant of premises, having built a party-wall thereon, let a portion of them upon a building agreement for 50*l.* a year. The sub-tenant built a house on his part of the ground, and in so doing made use of the party-wall: the agreement contained no stipulation in case of this being done. The sub-tenant underlet the house, when finished, at a rent exceeding 50*l.*:—Held, that the original tenant was not entitled to compensation from his lessee, under the statute, for the use of the party wall, since he himself, and not the sub-tenant, was the owner of the improved rent, within that clause. Williams v. Pocklington, 2 B. & Adol. 886.

Semble, that the clause does not apply, where the land adjacent to the party-wall is held under an agreement with the builder of it. Id.

3. Accounts, Demand, and Notice.

Before an action can be brought to recover a proportion of the expenses of building a party-wall, the accounts prescribed by the 41st section must be delivered, whether the house be occupied by the owner or by a tenant, and a formal demand of the money must be made twenty-one days before action brought. Philp v. Donati, 9 Taunt. 62.

Where the account delivered contained a correct statement of the quantity of work done, and the materials allowed for it, it was held a sufficient account, though it also contained a statement of the prices paid for the brick work, which exceeded the prices fixed by the statute. Reading v. Barnard, M. & M. 71—Tenterden.

And the demand for payment referring to that account, and consequently of a greater sum than was recoverable, is a good demand. Id.

And where the party-wall was built more on the defendant's ground than on plaintiff's, contrary to s. 14:—Held, that the plaintiff might recover the expenses of building, the jury finding there was no intention of encroaching, and the defendant having made no objection while the work was in progress. Id.

The three months' notice required by s. 38 is only necessary, where the person who at the time when it is necessary to build, &c. is liable to pay, cannot agree with the owner of the adjoining house. Peck v. Wood, 5 T. R. 130.

4. Other Things.

The stat. 11 Geo. 1, c. 28, does not extend to party-walls between stables. Rex v. Pratt, 4 Burr. 2298.

An offence against the Building Act, 12 Geo. 3, is committed as soon as the wall, or at least the shell, contrary to the act, is pitched, and nothing done to the inside can make any alteration. Payne v. Hill, Loft, 330.

The stat. 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 96, (Building Act,) does not enable the district surveyor who lodges a complaint before two justices, on account of a projection made in front of a house, contrary to the provisions of that act, to appeal to the quarter sessions against the admission of the complaint by the two justices. Rex v. Middlesex (Justices), 16 East, 310.

The builder of a house on a new foundation may not erect half his flank or side wall on his neighbour's vacant ground. Barlow v. Norman, 2 W. Black. 959.

If two persons have a party-wall, one half of the thickness of which stands on the land of each, they are not therefore tenants in common of the wall, or of the land on which it stands, although the wall was erected at the joint expense of the two proprietors. Matts v. Hawkins, 5 Taunt. 20.

The stat. 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, does not make party-walls common property; and if one proprietor adds to the height of such a party-wall, and the other pulls down the addition, the first may maintain trespass for pulling down so much of it as stood on the half of the wall which was erected on the plaintiff's soil: the property in a wall, erected at a joint expense, follows the property of the land whereon it stands. Id.

If a person, bonâ fide intending to pursue the authority given by the Building Act, 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, erects a party-wall, without, in fact, pursuing the directions of the statute, and thereby injures his neighbour, he is liable to an action; but the action must be brought after twenty-one day's notice, and within three months after the injury done. Pratt v. Hillman, 6 D. & R. 360; 4 B. & C. 269.

Where, in trespass for an act done in pursuance of the act 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, a verdict was found for the plaintiff, subject to a reference, and the arbitrator awarded a verdict for the defendant:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to treble costs under s. 100 of the statute, the same as if the plaintiff had been nonsuited, or a verdict had been found for the defendant at the trial Pratt v. Hillman, 6 D. & R. 481; 4 B. & C. 269.

So, also, he is entitled to notice of action. Id.

In trespass against the owner of a house, adjoining to the plaintiff's in the metropolis, for taking down his party-wall and building on it, the defendant showing at the trial that he was authorized in doing the thing complained of, under 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, is entitled to treble costs under the 100th section, upon a nonsuit. Collins v. Poney, 9 East, 322.

The Building Act has not destroyed the right to lateral windows, which existed before that act. Titterton v. Conyers, 5 Taunt. 465; 1 Marsh. 140.

The owner of windows in an edifice, carried up above a party-wall, contrary to the provisions of the Building Act, may nevertheless recover against the owner of the adjoining land who contributed to the wall, for darkening the lights. Id.

An edifice built not conformably to the Building Act, in respect whereof no conviction is had within three months under s. 60, is nevertheless not rendered legal by the lapse of that time, but may afterwards be proceeded against under the act. Id.

The penalty given by the stat. 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 67, is recoverable against the master builder within the regulations of the statute, and not against the proprietor of the premises. Meymot v. Southgate, 3 Esp. 223—Kenyon.

To a declaration with special counts for a contribution to the repairs of a party-wall, (the defendant being owner of the improved rent of an adjoining house,) and common money counts: plea to the whole declaration, that R. N. in his lifetime was the owner of the improved rent, and that the defendant is only entitled as his executor; that there were bonds outstanding, and plene administravit præter a sum insufficient to pay the demand in the first count:—Held bad on demurrer. Wilcox v. Newman, 1 Chit. 132.

If the plaintiff declare on a general covenant to repair a messuage, and assign a breach, per quod he was put to expense, it is sufficient for a tenant to plead performance of all, except as to the repairs of a party-wall, and that those repairs were rendered necessary, and were done under the stat. 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, and did not become necessary by the defendant's default, and that the defendant was not the owner of the improved rent; and if the plaintiff is possessed of any facts to charge the defendant with a proportion of the repairs, he ought to reply them. Moore v. Clark, 5 Taunt. 90.

Where notice of pulling down and rebuilding a party-wall was given under the Building Act, 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, and the tenant of the adjoining house, who was under covenant to repair, finding it necessary, in consequence, to shore up his house, and to pull down and replace the wainscot and partitions of it, instead of leaving such expenses to be incurred and paid by the owner of the house, giving notice in the manner prescribed by the act, and afterwards paying the same to him upon demand, employed workmen of his own to do those necessary works, and paid them for the same:—Held, that he could not recover over against his landlord such expenses incurred by his own orders, and paid for by him in the first instance; all the powers and authorities given by the act in respect to any works to be done, being given to the owner of the house intended to be pulled down and rebuilt, and the landlord of the adjoining house being only liable by the act to reimburse his tenant money paid by him to the other owner, for such works as are authorized to be done by such other owner in respect of such adjoining house. Robinson v. Lewis, 10 East, 227.

Limitations of action on the Building Act. See Pratt v. Hillman, 4 B. & C. 269; 6 D. & R. 481.

The Building Act, s. 100, limits actions to be brought within three months. A. had begun to build a party-wall, partly on the soil of B., more than three months before the action, but had not completed it till within that time:—Held, that B. might recover for such part of the trespass as was committed within the time limited; but that, if nothing had been done within the three months, he must bring ejectment. Trotter v. Simpson, 5 C. & P. 51—Parke.

I. WHEN PARTNERS.

By 1. Will. 4, c. 69, s. 5, any one or more of mail contractors, stage-coach proprietors, or common carriers, may be sued by his, her, or their name or names only; and no action or suit for damages for loss or injury to any parcel, package, or person, shall abate for the want of joining any co-proprietor or co-partner.

Before the statute, it was held, in an action on the case against the proprietor of a coach as a common carrier, for not safely conveying a passenger, that he could not plead in abatement the non-joinder of a co-proprietor. Ansell v. Waterhouse, 2 Chit. 1; 6 M. & S. 385. And see Beale v. Bird, 2 D. & R. 419; contra, S. P. Buddle, v. Willson, 6 T. R. 369.

To an action on the case in the form of tort against one of several joint owners of a ship, for not safely conveying goods which had been delivered to him by the plaintiff for that purpose, the defendant might plead in abatement, that the goods were delivered to him and his partners jointly, and that his partners were not sued. Powell v. Layton, 2 N. R. 365.

To an action on the case against several partners for negligence in their servant, whereby the plaintiff's goods were lost, it could not be pleaded in abatement that there were other partners not named. Mitchell v. Tarbutt, 5 T. R. 649.

A. and B. are partners in the business of public carriers; by contract between them, A. finds horses and drivers for certain stages, and B. supplies them for the remaining stages. They are, notwithstanding this division of the concern between them, responsible for the misconduct and negligence of their drivers and servants throughout the whole distance, and it is no defence to B. that the servant by whom an injury is committed was the special servant of A., and hired and paid by A. alone. Weyland v. Elkins, Holt, 227; S. C. nom. Waland v. Elkins, 1 Stark. 272—Gibbs.

If several persons horse, with horses their several property, the several stages of a coach, in the general profits of which they are partners, they are not all jointly liable for goods furnished to one partner for the use of the horses drawing the coach along his part of the road. Barton v. Hanson, 2 Taunt. 49; 2 Camp. 97.

Where two persons contracted to assist the defendant with their respective horses, but to give in their accounts separately:—Held to be separate contracts. Smith v. Taylor, 2 Chit. 142.

Where the plaintiff and defendant ran a stage-coach from Bath to London, the former providing horses for one part of the road, and the latter for another, and the profits of each party were calculated according to the number of miles his horses went: and the plaintiff received the fares of the passengers, and gave a weekly account thereof to the defendant:—Held, that the plaintiff and defendant were partners. Fromont v. Coupland, 9 Moore, 319; 2 Bing. 170; 1 C. & P. 275.

A special contract made by one of several joint coach proprietors for the carriage of parcels, is binding upon them all, though some of them became proprietors after the contract was made. Helsby v. Mears, 8 D. & R. 289; 5 B. & C. 504.

Where A., the keeper of a coach office, and a part owner in several coaches, made a contract with B. for the carriage of parcels which he was in the habit of sending from that office to various places:—Held, that this bound the owners of all the coaches in which A. was a part owner, and as well those who became partners after the making of the contract, as those who were so before. Id.

A., B., &c. were common carriers from L. to F., a separate portion of the road being allotted to each, and it having been stipulated also that no partnership should exist between them. A., for himself and the other parties, agrees with the Mint to carry coin from L. to F., and afterwards makes another agreement with the Mint to carry other coin to places on the road:—Held, that the parties were entitled to share in the profits of this agreement. Russell v. Anstwick, 1 Sim. 54.

If a party recover damages in case against one of two joint proprietors for an injury sustained by the negligence of their servants, such proprietor may maintain an action against his co-proprietor for contribution, if he prove at the trial that he was not personally present when the accident happened. Wooley v. Batte, 2 C. & P. 417—Park. But see Merryweather v. Nixon, 8 T. R. 186.

Two persons having agreed to work a coach from Bristol to London, one providing horses for a part of the road, and the other for the remainder, and in consequence of the horses of one having been taken in execution, the other having provided horses for that part which had been undertaken by the first, claimed the whole profits of the journey: the court refused an injunction against continuing to provide horses. Smith v. Fromont, 2 Swanst. 330.

II. LIABILITY FOR SERVANTS.

A promise made by the book-keeper of a carrier, at the office, to make compensation for the loss of a parcel, is not binding upon the carrier, unless the book-keeper be shown to be his general agent. Olive v. Eames, 2 Stark. 181—Ellenb.

A parcel delivered to the guard of a mail-coach, and by him to the porter of the inn where the mail stops, whose business is to carry out the parcels brought by the coach, receiving for such duty a portion of the sum demanded for carriage, does not make such porter personally responsible for its loss. Cavenagh v. Such, 1 Price, 328.

Where a parcel is delivered to a driver of a stage coach to be carried, the master, and not the servant, is responsible. Williams v. Cranston, 2 Stark. 82—Ellenborough.

If a parcel be given to a wagoner for hire to carry for his own gain, and not for the profit of his master, the master is not liable in case the parcel be lost. Butler v. Basing, 2 C. & P. 613—Garrow.

Semble, that in an action against stage-coach proprietors for an injury done by mismanagement of the coach, whereby a person was struck by the luggage on the coach, the proprietors and the coachman may be sued jointly. Whitmore v. Waterhouse, 4 C. & P. 383—Parke.

III. CONVEYANCE OF PERSONS.

The 2 & 3 Will. 4. c. 120, is the act by which the duties, licenses, number of passengers, luggage, &c. as regard stage carriages, are now regulated.

Every stage-coach proprietor impliedly undertakes that his coach shall be sufficiently secure to perform the journeys it undertakes; and he ought to examine its sufficiency previous to each journey; and if he does not, and by the insecurity of the coach a passenger is injured, an action is maintainable against the coach proprietor for negligence, though the coach had been examined previous to the second journey before the accident, and though it had been repaired at the coachmaker's only three or four days before. Bremner v. Williams, 1 C. & P. 414—Best.

And if an accident happen from a defect in the original construction, the proprietor is liable, although the defect be ought of sight, and not discoverable upon ordinary examination. Sharp v. Gray, 9 Bing. 457; 2 M. & Scott, 621.

In an action by a passenger in a coach, against the owner, for an injury done to him by the coach overturning, if the declaration states that the servants of the defendants negligently "drove, conducted, and managed the coach," the plaintiff cannot recover, if the negligence was in sending out an insufficient coach. Mayor v. Humphries, 1 C. & P. 251—Littledale.

In an action against the proprietor of a stage coach for negligence, whereby the coach broke down, and the plaintiff, travelling by it as a passenger, was hurt, to prove negligence, it is prima facie enough to give evidence of the coach having broke down; from which negligence will be presumed. Christie v. Griggs, 2 Camp. 79—Mansfield.

But proof that at the time of the accident there were more passengers than the statute al-

The proprietors of a mail coach are answerable for any injury happening to a passenger through the misconduct of their driver. White v. Boulton, Peake, 81—Kenyon. And see Brucker v. Fremont, 6 T. R. 659.

Coach owners are not liable for injuries happening to passengers from accident or misfortune, where there has been no negligence or default in the driver. Aston v. Horrocks, 2 Esp. 533—Eyre: S. P. Christie v. Griggs, 2 Camp. 79; Crofts v. Waterhouse, 11 Moore, 133; 3 Bing. 319.

Where there is no other carriage on the road the driver may keep in the middle of the road, and is not bound to keep on the left hand side of the road, even though the accident might have proceeded from the coach not being on the proper side. Id.

The proprietor of a stage coach is answerable for the negligence of the driver, from the usual place of taking passengers, not only till the coach arrives at its destination, but till the passengers are safely set down. Dudley v. Smith, 1 Camp. 163—Ellenborough.

And the driver of a stage coach before passing through any place that is dangerous, is bound to inform the passengers of the full extent of the danger; and if he proceeds without giving them this information, the proprietor is liable for any injury they may thereby suffer, which they might have escaped by alighting. Id.

If, through the default of a coach proprietor in neglecting to provide proper means of conveyance, a passenger be placed in so perilous a situation as to render it prudent for him to leap from the coach whereby his leg is broken the proprietor will be responsible in damages, although the coach was not actually overturned. Jones v. Boyce, 1 Stark. 493—Ellenborough.

If, when dangers occur the driver of a stage coach does not take the safest course, the owner is responsible for the mischief which ensues. Jackson v. Tillet, 2 Stark. 37—Ellenborough.

So, under similar circumstances, the driver would be liable, and he cannot in such case insist upon the fact that he kept to his own side of the road. Mykew v. Boyce, 1 Stark. 493—Ellenborough.

If the declaration, in an action on the case, against coach proprietors, for an injury received by the overturning of a coach, state that it was their duty to carry the plaintiff safely, for a certain hire, it does not mean to carry safely at all events, but will be sufficiently supported by proof of the want of due care. Harris v. Costar, 1 C. P. 636—Bent.

The driver of a stage coach gathered a bank, and upset the coach. He had passed the spot where the accident happened twelve hours before, but in the interval a landmark had been removed. In an action for an injury sustained by this accident, the judge told the jury, that as there was no obstruction in the road, the driver and a verdict having been returned accordingly, the court granted a new trial on the ground that the jury should have been directed to consider whether or not the deviation was the effect of negligence. Crofts v. Waterhouse, 3 Bing. 319; 11 Moore, 133.

In an action against a coach proprietor for negligence, it appeared that the coach travelled from the county of O. to the county of W.; that plaintiff became an outside passenger for hire; that there was luggage on the roof of the coach, and no iron railing between the luggage and the passengers; and that the plaintiff, being seated with her back to the luggage, was by a sudden jolt thrown from the coach, and her leg was thereby broken in the county of O., where she remained some time to be cured: but before she was fully recovered she removed to the county of W., where further medical attendance became necessary, and expense was consequently incurred. The learned judge directed the jury to find for the plaintiff, if they were of opinion that the injury sustained was occasioned by the negligence of the defendant. The jury found for the plaintiff, and stated that they so found on account of the improper construction of the coach, and of the luggage being on the roof:—Held, that the case was properly submitted to the jury, and that the facts found specially by them amounted to negligence in the defendant:—Held, also, that the inconvenience suffered and expense incurred by the plaintiff in the county of W. was material evidence of a matter in issue arising there, within the meaning of the undertaking given by the plaintiff, in answer to a motion to change the venue. Curtis v. Drinkwater, 2 B. & Adol. 162.

If the declaration state, that the defendant, being the owner of a stage coach, undertook to carry "the plaintiff, her children, and servants, together, in and by a certain stage-coach," evidence that the whole inside of the coach was taken for the plaintiff and her three daughters, and two outside places for her servants, will support the declaration: and the defendant having sent a double-bodied coach, and refusing to take them, unless one of them would travel in one body and the others in the other body is a breach of this agreement. The stat. 50 Geo. 3. c. 48, enacting, that double-bodied coaches shall only carry eight outside passengers, it is also a breach of the agreement that there were eight other outside passengers permitted to go by the coach, if the plaintiff's servants refused to go by it on that account. Long v. Horne, 1 C. & P. 610—Abbott.

A person paying the whole fare of a stage coach may take his place at any stage of the journey: aliter if he pays only a deposit. See v. Monahan, 1 Esp. 27—Kenyon.

Though a postmaster cannot be compelled to let a chaise, if he do so, and the passenger take his seat in it, the postmaster must proceed if his fare is tendered. Mosser v. Cooper, 4 Esp. 266—Ellenborough.

IV. CONVEYANCE OF GOODS.

1. General Extent of Liability.

By 1 Will. 4, c. 68, s. 1, no mail contractor, stage coach proprietor, or other common carrier by land for hire, shall be liable for the loss of or injury to any article of property of the following description, viz. gold and silver coin of the realm or of any foreign state; gold or silver in a manufactured or unmanufactured state; precious stones, jewellery, watches, clocks, or time pieces of any description; trinkets, bills, notes of any bank in England, Scotland, or Ireland; orders, notes, or securities for payment of money; English or foreign stamps; maps, writings, title deeds, paintings, engravings, pictures, gold or silver plate, or plated articles; glass, china, silks in a manufactured or unmanufactured state, and whether wrought up or not with other materials; furs, lace, or any of them; contained in any packages delivered either to be carried for hire, or to accompany the person of any passenger, if the value exceed 10*l.*, unless, at the time of delivery, the value and nature be declared, and an increased charge or engagement to pay the same be accepted.

By s. 2, the rate of such increased charge is to be notified by a public notice affixed in some conspicuous part of the office, warehouse, or receiving house, which shall bind the parties sending without further proof of its having come to their knowledge.

By s. 3, carriers are to give (if required) receipts for packages, acknowledging the same to be insured; and if not given when required, or the notice be not affixed, they are not to have the benefit of the act.

By s. 6, nothing in the act is to extend or be construed to annul or in anywise affect any special contract between parties for the conveyance of goods.

By s. 8, nothing is to be deemed to protect carriers from liability to answer for loss or injury arising from the felonious acts of servants; nor to protect servants from liability for loss or injury occasioned by their own personal neglect or misconduct.

Before the statute a carrier was held to be an insurer of the goods which he carried; he was obliged for a reasonable reward to carry any goods to the place to which he professed to carry goods, which were offered him, if his carriage would hold them, and he was informed of their quality and value; he was not obliged to take a package, the owner of which would not inform him what where its contents, and of what value they were; if he did not ask for this information, or if, when he asked, and was not answered, he took the goods, he was answerable for their amount, whatsoever that might be; he might limit his responsibility as an insurer by notice, but that notice would not protect him against the consequences of a loss by gross negligence. Macklin v. Waterhouse, 2 M. & P. 319; 5 Bing. 212: S. P. Riley v. Horne, 5 Bing. 217, 224; 2 M. & P. 331.

A greyhound was delivered to a carrier, who gave a receipt for it, the greyhound being afterwards lost:—Held, that the carrier could not set up as a defence that the dog was not properly secured when delivered to him. Stuart v. Crawley, 2 Stark. 323—Ellenborough.

If a box of clothes, packed by the party's own hand, be sent by a carrier and lost, the judge will recommend the jury to give the fair value of it in damages, although what particular articles the box contained cannot be proved. Butler v. Basing, 2 C. & P. 613—Garrow.

A common travelling trunk of a large size, containing apparel and jewels, having been lost by the defendant, a carrier, either through his having omitted to place it on his coach, or having fastened it there insecurely:—Held, that he was liable to make compensation to the owner, a gentleman travelling by his coach, though no disclosure was made of the value of the contents of the trunk, and though there was a notice in the carrier's office limiting his responsibility to five pounds, in the absence of such disclosure, which notice the owner of the trunk, having been in the office, had an opportunity of seeing. Brooke v. Pickwick, 4 Bing. 218; 12 Moore, 447.

And, under the above circumstances, the jury were properly directed to consider generally, whether the carrier had been guilty of gross negligence, without reference to the nature of the article conveyed. Id.

A common carrier must make good a loss though not in fault, as if he be robbed. Gibbon v. Paynton, 4 Burr. 2298.

A carrier who undertakes for hire to carry goods, is bound to deliver them at all events, except damaged or destroyed by the act of God or the king's enemies; even though the jury expressly find that they were destroyed without any actual negligence in the defendant. Forward v. Pittard, 1 T. R. 27: S. P. Hyde v. Trent and Mersey Navigation Company, 5 T. R. 389; 1 Esp. 36.

A carrier is in the nature of an insurer. Id.

A hoyman who undertakes to carry goods must deliver them safe at all events, except damaged by the act of God or by the King's enemies. Dale v. Hall, 1 Wils. 281.

Where a declaration stated an undertaking to carry safely certain goods by water with an exception of all accidents arising from the act of God, the king's enemies, fire, pirates, and all other dangers and accidents of seas, rivers, and navigation of what nature and kind soever:—Held, that this exception being beyond the common law exception must be specially proved. Richardson v. Sewell, 2 Smith, 205.

How far a carrier is liable for an unavoidable accident, not coming within the description of accidents happening from the act of God or the king's enemies. See Trent Navigation v. Wood, 3 Esp. 127; Abb. Ship. 256. 4 Dougl. 287.

The carrier of goods by water is liable for damage occasioned by running against an anchor to which no buoy appeared to be fastened. Id.

Where there is an exception in a charter party of "perils of the sea," a loss from the ship's running foul of another by misfortune, is within the exception, and is a loss by perils of the sea. Buller v. Fisher, 3 Esp. 67—Kenyon.

Where a carrier received a parcel of bank notes, to be carried from London to Dover, under a contract to deliver them the next day (fire and robbery excepted,) and the parcel, having been deposited by one of the defendants in a desk at their office in London, was missing a short time after he left the office:—Held, not to be a loss within the exception in the contract, as it could not be considered to be a loss by robbery. Latham v. Stanbury, 3 Stark. 143—Abbott.

The plaintiffs declared against the defendants on their common law liability as carriers, for the loss of a parcel, which the declaration stated that the defendants for certain hire and reward, undertook to carry from London, and deliver safely at Dover: and it appearing that the course of dealing between the parties was, for the plaintiffs to pay the defendants an annual sum for the carriage of parcels between London and Dover, and, on the receipt of each parcel, the defendants were in the habit of delivering to the plaintiffs a written acknowledgment, stating that they undertook to carry and deliver the same safely, ("fire and robbery excepted;") and the jury having found that this was the contract between the parties, though the loss was occasioned by negligence only:—Held, a fatal variance. Latham v. Rutley, 3 D. & R. 211; 2 B. & C. 20; S. C. not S. P. R. & M. 13; 3 Stark. 143.

On a declaration against a lighterman in the common form for negligence, the plaintiff cannot recover if it appear that the loss was not occasioned by a neglect of the common and ordinary duty of the defendant. Whalley v. Wray, 3 Esp. 74—Eldon.

A stage coachman is responsible for the loss of a parcel which he insures to carry without reward, if it is lost through gross negligence on his part. Beauchamp v. Powley, 1 M. & Rob. 38—Tenterden.

When an order is given to a carrier, antecedently to the delivery of goods, who assents to deal with them when delivered in a particular manner, a duty is imposed on him on the receipt of the goods to deal with them according to the order previously given; and the law implies a promise by him to perform such duty. Streeter v. Horlock, 7 Moore, 283; 1 Bing. 34.

If A. send goods by B., who says, "I will warrant they shall go safe;" B. is liable for any damage sustained by the goods, notwithstanding A. send one of his own servants in B.'s cart to look after them. Robinson v. Dunmore, 2 B. & P. 416.

The liability of a wharfinger who undertakes to convey goods from his wharf to the vessel in his own lighters, is similar to that of a carrier. Maving v. Todd, 1 Stark. 72—Ellenborough.

2. What is gross Negligence.

Carriers by Land.—A carrier was liable for gross negligence, although the goods were above the value mentioned in his public notice, and although they were not specially entered and insured. Birkett v. Willan, 2 B. & A. 356; S. C. not S. P. 1 Chit. 633; S. P. Beck v. Evans, 16 East, 244; 3 Camp. 267.

Gross negligence is a question for the jury. Duff v. Budd, 6 Moore, 469; 2 B. & B. 177; S. P. Batson v. Donovan, 4 B. & A. 21.

Where a valuable bank parcel sent by a stage coach was lost, and it was proved that on the arrival of the coach the driver was in liquor, and that the book-keeper, who saw the entry of it in the way-bill, thinking that the coachman (as was the custom) had the parcel about his person, did not ask him about it or look into the coach for it:—Held, to be a loss arising from gross negligence, and that the proprietors were liable for the value, notwithstanding they had put up the usual notice. Bodenham v. Bennett, 4 Price, 31.

To render a carrier liable for the loss of a valuable parcel of plate, in a case where the defendant relied on the usual defence of notice, it was necessary to establish a case of gross negligence. Lowe v. Booth, 13 Price, 329.

A parcel was sent by the defendant's coach from Worcester to London, directed to be delivered at the latter place: it arrived in London, and was taken from the coach office of the defendants in a cart, under the direction of one person only, for the purpose of delivery, and lost:—Held, that the defendants were liable for such loss, as it amounted to gross negligence, and defeated the usual notice. Smith v. Horne, 2 Moore, 18; 8 Taunt. 144; Holt, 643.

A parcel, containing property exceeding 5*l.* in value, was delivered to A. and B. to be carried by their mail coach, and was accepted by them to be so carried, and was put into the mail, and carried therein a short distance; and was then taken out of the mail by a servant of the carriers, and left to be forwarded by another coach, of which A. was one of the proprietors, but B. was not, and the parcel was lost:—Held, that notwithstanding a notice by A. and B., they were responsible for the loss of the parcel in question, in consequence of their servant having delivered it to be carried by another coach, of which one of them only was a proprietor. Garnett v. Willan, 5 B. & A. 53.

Where one delivered goods of above 5*l.* value to common carriers to carry by the mail, paying no extra price; and, by a public notice which had before reached the owner, the carriers had declared they would not be accountable for any package above the value of 5*l.*, unless insured and paid for accordingly:—Held, that the goods having been sent by a different carriage and lost, the owner could not recover the value against the carriers; for the loss happened by no tortious conversion, nor by a renunciation of their character as common carriers, but only by a negligent discharge of their duty as such. Nor could he recover even the 5*l.*, as by the terms of the notice the carriers stipulated not to be answerable at all for goods above 5*l.* value, unless paid for accordingly. Nicholson v. Willan, 5 East, 507; 2 Smith, 107.

But where a paper parcel, containing notes of country bankers to the amount of 1300*l.*, and addressed to their clerk, in order to conceal the nature of its contents, was delivered to a carrier without any notice of its value, and booked to be carried by the mail; and was accepted by him to be so carried, but was sent by a different coach, and stolen or lost; and the carrier had previously given notice that he would not be answerable for

B. & A. 349. And see Wright v. Basil, 5 B. & A. 350.

Quere, whether the entrusting valuable property to a servant, of whose character the carrier gave no account at the trial, was sufficient to authorize the jury to find that the carrier had been guilty of that degree of negligence which would deprive him of the protection of a proper notice? Macklin v. Waterhouse, 2 M. & P. 319; 5 Bing. 212.

The plaintiffs sent goods packed in a box by the defendant's wagon. The box was placed with its lid outwards at the tail of the wagon, which was left during several hours in the night standing in the road opposite an inn where the waggoner stopped, without any person to watch it. The box was forced open, and its contents abstracted. A notice was proved limiting the carrier's responsibility to 5*l*.—Held, that the carrier was guilty of gross negligence in leaving the wagon so exposed, and consequently liable for the loss. Langley v. Brown, 1 M. & P. 583.

In an action against a carrier for the loss of a painting, it appeared that the stage wagon in which it was sent had seven horses, but that there was only one waggoner. The L. C. J. left it to the jury to say, whether the sending but one waggoner was gross negligence; and they found that it was so. Beckford v. Crutwell, 5 C. & P. 343; 1 M. & Rob. 187—Tenterden.

Plaintiff received a parcel from G. to book for London at the office of the defendants, common carriers. Plaintiff instead of obeying his instruction, put the parcel into his bag, intending to take it to London himself. The defendants having lost the bag:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover damages from them in respect of the parcel. Miles v. Cattle, 6 Bing. 743; 4 M. & P. 630.

Where, in an action against a carrier for the loss of a parcel, it had been properly left to the jury, whether, under the circumstances, the carrier had been guilty of gross negligence; and they having found that he had, the court of C. P. refused to grant a new trial, which was moved for on the grounds, first, that the plaintiffs had corresponded by letters with the defendant, after the loss, requesting him to apprehend the person to whom the parcel had been delivered as a swindler; secondly, that the intimation of the value of the parcel was not given to the defendant at the time it was delivered at his office, according to a notice which was there affixed, limiting his responsibility to 5*l*, except the value of the parcel was specified when delivered; and lastly, that the property in the goods contained in such parcel had passed from the plaintiffs to the consignee. Duff v. Budd, 6 Moore, 409; 3 B. & R. 177.

Carriers by Water.—The owner of a ship was not liable beyond the value of the ship and freight, under 7 Geo. 2, c. 15, s. 1, in the case of a robbery, in which one of the mariners was concerned, by giving intelligence and afterwards of a steam boiler, in consequence of the pipe having been cracked by frost:—Held, that this was not an act of God, but negligence in the captain in filling his boiler before the time for heating it, although it was the practice to fill overnight when the vessel started in the morning. Sierdet v. Hall, 4 Bing. 607; 1 M. & P. 561.

The owners of vessels on the navigation between A. and C., having given public notice that they would not be answerable for losses in any case except the loss were occasioned by the want of care in the master, nor even in such case beyond 10*l*. per cent., unless extra freight were paid, the master of one of the ships took on board the plaintiff's goods to be carried from A. to B. (an intermediate place between A. and C.) and delivered at B.: the vessel passed by B. without delivering the plaintiff's goods there, and sunk before her arrival at C., without any want of care in the master:—Held, that the owner of the vessel was responsible to the plaintiff for the whole loss in an action on the contract. Ellis v. Turner, 8 T. R. 631.

Where a man undertook to carry goods from London to Amsterdam, and they were accidentally damaged in their being let down into the hold of the ship, it was held that he was liable for such damage. Goff v. Clinkard, 1 Wils. 262.

The defendant received on board his barge certain lime to be conveyed for the plaintiff from Bowly Cliff to London. The master deviated from the usual and customary voyage, without any justifiable cause, and whilst the barge was so out of her course she encountered a storm, and the sea communicating with the lime caused it to ignite, whereby the barge and cargo were lost. In an action on the case for the loss of the lime, the declaration alleged that "it was the duty of the defendant to have carried and conveyed the lime by and according to the direct, usual, and customary way, course, and passage, without any voluntary and unnecessary deviation or departure from, or delay, or hindrance in the same," and averred the loss to be by reason of the deviation and departure, and delay and deviation out of such usual and customary course and passage:—Held, first, that the damage sustained by the plaintiff was sufficiently proximate to the wrongful act of the defendant, to form the subject of an action; secondly, that the declaration was sufficient to support a judgment for the plaintiff. Davis v. Garrett, 4 M. & P. 540.

3. Delivery of Goods.

A carrier is bound to deliver the goods, if it be the general course of his trade so to do. Golden v. Manning, 2 W. Black. 916; 3 Wils. 429.

So, he is bound to deliver a parcel at the place to which it is directed. Where, therefore, a parcel of goods was directed to "Mr. James Parker, High Street, Oxford," who, on being applied to, said that he expected no such parcel, and it was afterwards delivered to a person who called at the defendant's office, claiming it as his, and who paid the carriage for it:—Held, that the carrier was responsible. Duff v. Budd, 6 Moore, 469; 3 B. & B. 177.

A carrier is bound to deliver goods entrusted to him, at the place to which they are addressed; and if he deliver them elsewhere, trover lies against him. Stephenson v. Hart, 1 M. & P. 357; 4 Bing. 476.

Goods are sent by a carrier who cannot hear of the consignee at the place where they are directed, but receives letters ordering them to be sent elsewhere, which he does. The transaction turns out to be a fraud on the consignor by some person unknown:—Held, that the consignor might recover against the carrier, he having been guilty of negligence in so delivering the goods. Id.

On a motion for a new trial it was held rightly left to the jury to say whether the defendant had delivered the parcel according to the due course of business, and that it was not requisite to be left to the jury, whether it was delivered to the person to whom it was consigned. Id.

Common carriers receive goods of S., at L., on an undertaking to carry them to W., and deliver them there to S. for his use, on payment of the hire. The goods are carried to W., and sent from the warehouse, nearly half a mile, to the house of S., but, the hire not being ready to be paid, are taken back to the warehouse. Applications to send the goods again to the house are refused, not on the ground that the contract had been performed by the proffer, but until satisfaction of a lien set up on one side, and resisted on the other, and which proved to have been unfounded in fact:—Held, under these circumstances, that the carriers had waived the benefit which would probably have resulted to them from insisting on the proffer as an execution of their undertaking; that both parties had treated the contract as one continuing contract from the commencement of the transaction till an actual delivery should have taken place; and that the carriers, not having performed their part of the agreement, the consignee was entitled to recover the value of the goods in an action of assumpsit. It seems that common carriers are ordinarily bound to carry goods entrusted to their conveyance to the residence of the consignee. Stoer v. Crowley, M'Clel. & Y. 129.

Semble, that a carrier is not discharged by delivering the goods to a wharfinger, whose wharf he uses, but continues to be liable until they are received by the party. Wardell v. Mourillyan, 2 Esp. 693—Kenyon.

A., B., C., and D., being in partnership as carriers, entered into an agreement with S. & Co. to carry goods for them from London to Frome, where they should be deposited in the warehouse of A., the resident partner, till S. & Co. should be ready to receive them into their own. The goods, having been forwarded, were, after they had been deposited in A.'s warehouse, destroyed there by fire:—Held, that the liability of A., B., C. and D., as carriers, ceased on the arrival of the goods at Frome, and that when they were deposited in A.'s warehouse, they could only be considered as warehousemen;—Held also, that A., having paid over the amount of the loss to S. & Co., could not recover a proportion from B., C. and D. In re Webb, 2 Moore, 500; 8 Taunt. 443.

A common carrier between A. and B. (employed to carry goods from A. to B. to be forwarded to C.) carried them to B., and there put them in his warehouse, in which they were destroyed by an accidental fire, before he had an opportunity of forwarding them:—Held, that he was not answerable for the loss. Garside v. Trent Navigation, 4 T. R. 581.

If common carriers from A. to B. charge and receive for cartage of goods to the consignee's house at B. from a warehouse there, where they usually unload, but which does not belong to them, they must answer for the goods if destroyed in the warehouse by an accidental fire, though they allow all the profits of the carriage to another person, and that circumstance was known to the consignee. Hyde v. Trent and Mersey Navigation, 5 T. R. 389; 1 Esp. 36.

Guardians of a female under age, who had eloped, are justified in detaining her clothes; and a carrier to whom they had been delivered for the purpose of conveyance is justified in delivering them over to the guardians. Barker v. Taylor, 1 C. & P. 101—Park.

If a carrier, by mistake, deliver to B. goods consigned and sold to C., and B. appropriate the goods, and the carrier on demand, without action, pays C. their value, the carrier may recover it against B. as money paid to B.'s use; but not as the price of goods sold and delivered to B. Brown v. Hodgson, 4 Taunt. 189.

Where, in an action for the loss of a parcel, the shopman of the consignee proved that he did not know of the delivery of the parcel, and believed that it could not have been delivered without his knowledge:—Held, to be prima facie evidence of non-delivery, or it is, at all events, sufficient to call on the plaintiff to prove a delivery to the carrier. Griffiths v. Lee, 1 C. & P. 110—Hullock.

4. To whom liable.

An action lies against a carrier in the name of the consignor, who agreed with him and was to pay him. Davis v. James, 5 Burr. 2680.

Where the plaintiff's consigned goods, according to an order received, to a person they did not know, and who afterwards appeared to be a swindler, but who got possession of them by the carrier's negligence:—Held, that they might maintain an action against the carrier, as the property had not passed to the consignee. Duff v. Budd, 6 Moore, 469; 3 B. & B. 177. And see Stephenson v. Hart, 4 Bing. 476; 1 M. & P. 357.

If the consignor of goods deliver them to a particular carrier by order of the consignee, and they be afterwards lost, the consignor cannot maintain an action against the carrier for the loss, although he paid for booking the goods; the action can only be brought by the consignee. Daves v. Peck, 8 T. R. 330; 3 Esp. 12.

common law of carriers, in respect of any articles to be conveyed by them, unless such as are mentioned in the act, and to which it extends.

*To what extent available before the statute.]—*Before the statute, it was held that a carrier might not only limit, but exclude all responsibility by notice. Maving v. Todd, 1 Stark. 72; 4 Camp. 225—Ellenborough. And see Hill v. Trent and Mersey Navigation, 5 T. R. 389; 1 Esp. 36.

A keeper of a booking house could not set up a notice, that he would not be answerable for goods, if above a certain value, as a defence against the effect of negligence in himself or his servants. Newborn v. Just, 2 C. & P. 76—Best.

Where a carrier gave notice that he would not be liable for goods lost, beyond the value of 5*l.*, that extended to the property of passengers going by the coach or other carriage, and not to goods sent to be carried only. Clarke v. Gray, 6 East, 564; 2 Smith, 622; 4 Esp. 177.

A notice that the proprietor of a general coach office would not be responsible for the carriage of parcels of more than 5*l.* value, unless entered as such, would not avail the proprietor of a coach, who took a parcel from the office, unless it be otherwise shown that he was connected with the office. Macklin v. Waterhouse, 5 Bing. 212; 2 M. & P. 319.

A notice by carriers that they would not be accountable for the loss or damage of goods, unless the terms of the notice were complied with, protected them as well against a loss by robbery, as against an accidental loss. Corington v. Willan, Gow, 115—Dallas.

A carrier, who gave two notices limiting his responsibility, was bound by that which was least beneficial to himself. Munn v. Baker, 2 Stark. 255—Ellenborough.

A carrier placed a board in his office, giving notice that he would not be answerable for jewels, however small their value, unless entered as such; but circulated handbills, stating generally, that he would not be answerable for any article above the value of 5*l.* unless entered as such:—Held, that he was answerable for the loss of jewels not entered as such, if under the value of 5*l.* Cobden v. Bolton, 2 Camp. 108—Ellenb.

In an action against a carrier for not taking care of, and safely conveying goods according to his promise, it appeared that he had limited his responsibility as such, by means of a notice of which the plaintiff was cognizant:—Held, that he having declared against the defendant as a carrier in the usual form, could not insist that the goods were lost from the defendant's warehouse, before the actual carriage of the goods commenced. Roskell v. Waterhouse, 2 Stark. 461—Abbott.

Semble, that when carriers run a coach from A. to B. and back, notice that they limit their responsibility on the carriage of parcels from A. to B., was notice that they limited it likewise from B. to A. Riley v. Horne, 5 Bing. 217; 2 M. & P. 331.

A carrier by water contracting to carry goods for hire, impliedly promises that the vessel shall be tight and fit for the purpose, and is answerable for damage arising from leakage; and this though he had given notice "that he would not be answerable for any damage, unless occasioned by want of ordinary care in the master or crew of the vessel, in which case he would pay 10*l.* per cent. upon such damage, so as the whole did not exceed the value of the vessel and freight:" for a loss happening by the personal default of the carrier himself (such as the not providing a sufficient vessel) is not within the scope of such notice, which was meant to exempt the carrier from losses by accident or chance, &c.; even if it were competent to a common carrier to exempt himself by a special acceptance from the responsibility cast upon him by the common law, for a reasonable reward to make good all losses not arising from the act of God, or the King's enemies. Lyon v. Mells, 5 East, 428; 1 Smith, 418.

In an action against a coach-owner for losing a trunk, the defendant was allowed to pay into court the amount of the sum to which he had by notice limited his responsibility. Hutton v. Bolton, 3 Dougl. 59.

*To whom to be given.]—*A carrier's notice limiting his liability, was not available, if it appeared that it did not come to the knowledge of the customer. Kerr v. Willan, 6 M. & S. 150; 2 Stark. 53.

A notice given to the vendor, was equivalent to notice to the vendee who directed the goods to be sent. Maving v. Todd, 1 Stark. 72—Ellenb.

Notice to the principal is, in law, notice to all agents: therefore, if stage-coach proprietors have given the usual 5*l.* notice to principals in London, in the month of January, and their traveller, who proves that he was ignorant of such notice, sends them from Downham, a parcel, containing 8*l.* he has received for them in the month of February, by a coach belonging to these coach proprietors, and it is lost; the coach proprietors will not be responsible; the notice given to the principal being considered in law as notice to all their agents. Mayhew v. Eames, 4 D. & R. 484; 3 B. & C. 601; 1 C. & P. 550.

The carrier's agent telling the female servant of the owner of a parcel above the value of 5*l.*, that it ought to be insured, is not a sufficient notice of the limitation of the carrier's responsibility. Macklin v. Waterhouse, 5 Bing. 212; 2 M. & P. 319.

Where it was agreed between the plaintiff and one of the defendants, proprietors of a stage coach, to carry certain parcels for the plaintiff free of expense, which were accordingly carried for two years, but there was no evidence of any knowledge of this agreement by the other defendants; and the defendants had given notice that they would not be accountable for parcels above the value of 5*l.* unless entered and paid for, &c.:—Held, that the defendants were not liable for the loss of a parcel of above the value of 5*l.* sent by the plaintiff under this agreement, of the value of which no notice had been given to the defendants. Bigbold v. Waterhouse, 1 M. & S. 255.

Where a parcel was delivered by the plaintiff's agent at W., to the defendant, to be carried to the plaintiff, who resided in London: it is sufficient for the defendant to prove that the plaintiff had received notice in London, that the defendant would not be responsible for goods exceeding 5*l.* in value, unless entered and paid for, without proving any notice to the agent in the country, especially if the terms of the notice extended to deliveries to agents in the country as well as in London; and the mere circumstance that the defendant's agent received the parcel, after notice that its value was considerable, does not amount to a waiver of such notice. Alfred v. Horne, 3 Stark. 136—Abbott.

Sticking up in Office.—A notice stuck up in the office, to be of any avail, must be in such large characters that a person delivering goods at the office cannot fail to read without gross negligence. Clayton v. Hunt, 3 Camp. 27—Ellenb.

If a carrier receive goods at a distance from his office, he must prove that the special terms on which he deals were communicated to the owner of the goods through some other medium than a notice stuck up in the office. Id.

It is not sufficient notice to paste upon the door of the office a bill blazoning the advantages of his conveyances, and stating in small characters, at the bottom of it, that he will not be answerable for goods above the value of 5*l.* unless entered as such, and paid for accordingly. Butler v. Heane, 2 Camp. 415—Ellenborough.

It is not sufficient to show that a printed notice was exhibited in the carrier's office, where the goods were delivered by a porter, although the porter could read, and had seen the notice, if in fact he had never read it. Kerr v. Willan, 2 Stark. 53; 6 M. & S. 150: S. P. Davis v. Willan, 2 Stark. 279.

A notice of certain limitations on a general liability, suspended at the termini of the journey, will not attach upon the delivery of goods at intermediate places, where no such notice is given. Gouger v. Jolly, Holt, 317—Gibbs.

By Advertisement.—In an action against a carrier for negligence, the defendant cannot read in evidence the advertisement in a newspaper, by which he limits his responsibility, unless he first prove that the plaintiff was in the habit of reading that paper. Leeson v. Holt, 1 Stark. 186—Ellenborough.

But semble, that an advertisement in the Gazette may be read without such preparatory proof, but without it the evidence is weak. Id.

To fix a plaintiff with knowledge of a general notice by which a coach proprietor had limited his responsibility, it was proved that the plaintiff had taken in for three years a newspaper in which the notice had been advertised once a week; the jury having nevertheless found a verdict against the proprietor, the court refused a new trial. Rowley v. Horne, 3 Bing. 2; 10 Moore, 247.

Knowledge of Value.—The usual notice given by carriers exempted them from their liability for the loss of goods above the value of 5*l.*, unless the appearance of the goods necessarily indicated that they were above that value. Down v. Fremont, 4 Camp. 40—Ellenborough.

A public notice given by carriers that they will not be answerable for certain specified articles, or any other goods of what nature or kind soever above the value of 5*l.*, if lost, stolen or damaged, unless a special agreement is made, and a premium paid, such value to be extended at the time of delivery, seems not to extend to goods which do not fall within any of the specified articles, and which from their bulk and quality communicated to the carriers at the time of delivery, must be known to them to exceed the value of 5*l.*: and therefore it seems they will be liable for any damage to the goods arising from the carriage, although no especial agreement be made, nor any premium paid; but at all events they will be liable for damage arising from gross negligence notwithstanding such notice. Beck v. Evans, 16 East, 244: 3 Camp. 267.

A notice by carriers that they will not be answerable for any goods above the value of 5*l.* unless entered as such and paid for accordingly, applies to goods which from their bulk may be supposed to exceed the specified value. Thoroughgood v. Marsh, Gow, 105—Dallas.

Notwithstanding a notice by carriers that they will not be accountable for goods of a particular description above the value of 5*l.* "unless specified and paid for as such when delivered," it was held, that they were liable for damage done to an article of this description, much above the value of 5*l.*, although not paid for as such when delivered, their book-keeper having been then informed of its value, and desired to charge for it what he pleased, which should be paid provided it was taken care of. Wilson v. Freeman, 3 Camp. 527—Ellenborough.

Notice is not defeated by proof that the book-keeper who received the goods was conscious of or might have inferred their value. Levi v. Waterhouse, 1 Price, 280.

If a carrier gives notice that he will not be accountable for goods above the value of 20*l.* unless entered, and an insurance paid, over and above the price charged for carriage, according to their value: a person who enters silk exceeding the value of 20*l.* and does not pay the insurance, cannot recover any part of the value of the goods, if lost. Harris v. Packwood, 3 Taunt. 264.

Although the price he agrees to pay for the carriage of the silk is, on account of its superior value, higher than the ordinary price charged even for the carriage of bulky articles. Id.

And although the carrier does not prove that the loss happened by any of those accidents against which the law makes him an insurer. Id.

Semble, a carrier is entitled to make a higher charge for the superior risk attending the carriage of valuable goods, but the charge must be reasonable. Id.

A common carrier gave public notice that he would not hold himself accountable for any parcel above the value of 5*l.* if lost or damaged, unless the same were entered as such, and paid for accordingly, when delivered. A person who knew that the carrier had given this notice, delivered to him a parcel containing goods (much exceeding the value of 5*l.*) to be carried from L. to B., and the carrier accepted them for that purpose. The price of the carriage was not then paid. The carrier knew the parcel contained goods much exceeding 5*l.* The parcel was lost;—Held, that the carrier was not responsible. Marsh v. Horne, 5 B. & C. 322; 8 D. & R. 223.

V. LIEN AND REMUNERATION.

The lien of a common carrier for his general balance—however it may arise in point of law from an implied agreement—to be inferred from a general usage of trade, must be proved by clear and satisfactory instances, sufficiently numerous and general to warrant so extensive a conclusion affecting the custom of the realm; yet is not to be favoured, nor can it be supported by a few recent instances of detention of goods by four or five carriers for their general balance. But such a lien may be inferred from evidence of the particular mode of dealing between the respective parties. Rushforth v. Hadfield, 6 East, 519; 2 Smith, 624. And see Whitehead v. Vaughan, 6 East, 523, n. Holderness v. Collison, 7 B. & C. 212.

And a jury having negatived such a general usage, though proved to have been frequently exercised by the defendant and various other common carriers throughout the north for ten or twelve years before, and in one instance so far back as thirty years, though not opposed by other evidence, the court refused to grant a new trial. Rushforth v. Hadfield, 7 East, 224; 3 Smith, 221.

A carrier who, by the usage of a particular trade, is to be paid for the carriage of goods by the consignor, has no right to retain them, against the consignee, for a general balance due to him for the carriage of other goods of the same sort sent by the consignor. Butler v. Woolcott, 2 N. R. 64.

Where a carrier had given notice that all goods would be subject to a lien, not only for the freight of the particular articles, but also for any general balance due from their respective owners; and goods were sent by the carrier addressed to the order of J. S. who was merely a factor:—Held, that the carrier had not any lien as against the real owner, for a balance due from J. S. Wright v. Snell, 5 B. & A. 350.

Quere, whether if he had given notice that all good to whomsoever belonging, should be subject to a lien for any general balance that might be due from the persons to whom they were addressed, he would have any right to retain goods for a balance due from J. S.? Id.

Where goods are taken by the owner from the wagon, the carrier or warehouseman has no claim for booking or warehouse room, there being in such case no lien. Lambert v. Robinson, 1 Esp. 119—Eyre.

If a person go to a coach office, and direct that a place be booked for him by a particular coach, and that be done, and he leave his portmanteau, the coach proprietor will have a lien on the portmanteau for something, but not for the full amount of the coach fare; but if the party merely leave the portmanteau while he goes to inquire if there be an earlier coach, and no place be actually booked, the coach proprietor has no lien at all. Higgins v. Bretherton, 5 C. & P. 2—Tent.

If a carrier receive goods to be carried, he cannot retain the goods, and put the consignor of the goods upon proof of his title to them. Ann. cited 3 Esp. 115—Gould.

If, before sending goods by a carrier, the sender applies at his wharf to know at what price certain goods will be carried, and he is told by a clerk, who is transacting the business there, 2*s.* 6*d.* per cwt., and on the faith of this he sends the goods, the carrier cannot charge more, although it be proved that the carrier had previously ordered his clerks to charge all goods according to a printed book of rates, in which 3*s.* 6*d.* per cwt. was set down for goods of the sort in question. Winkfield v. Packington, 2 C. & P. 599—Tenterden.

VI. BOOKING-OFFICE KEEPERS.

A booking-office keeper, who also keeps a wine vault, is guilty of negligence, if he allows goods to remain in front of the bar, exposed to persons coming in for liquor, even though they are of two large a size to be conveniently taken into the bar behind the counter. Dover v. Mills, 5 C. & P. 175—Park.

Evidence, that, at the door of a booking-office, there is a board on which is painted "conveyances to all parts of the world," and a list of names of places, is not sufficient proof that the owner of the office is a common carrier, so as to charge him for the loss of a box that was booked there. Upston v. Slark, 2 C. & P. 598—Tent.

If a common carrier demand a certain sum for booking, and refuse to take charge of goods unless such sum be paid, he is not liable to an action if they be left without being paid for and are lost. — v. Jackson, Peake's Add. Cas. 185—Kenyon.

If a carrier direct goods to be sent to a particular booking office, he is answerable for the negligence of the booking-office keeper. Colepepper v. Good, 5 C. & P. 380—Gaselee.

VII. ACTIONS.

By 1 Will. 4, c. 69, s. 7, where any parcel or package which has been delivered, and, the value being declared, the increased rate of charges paid, has been lost or damaged, the party entitled to recover damages in respect of such loss or damage, shall also be entitled to recover back the increased charges so paid, in addition to the value.

By s. 9, carriers are not to be concluded by the declared value, but are only to be liable to such damages as are proved, not exceeding the declared value, together with the increased charges.

By s. 10, money may be paid into court in all actions for loss or injury.

Proof of contract is not necessary to support an action against common carriers: they may be sued in an action on the case for the injury arising ex delicto, and such an action is not necessarily to be considered quasi ex contractu, or founded on contract. Brotherton v. Wood (in error,) 6 Moore, 141; 9 Price, 408; 3 B. & B. 54.

The inscription on a stage coach of the name of the party licensed to use it, is evidence against him of ownership, as well in an action as on summary proceedings. Barford v. Nelson, 1 B. & Adol. 571.

In an action against a carrier for the loss of a box, the person at the booking-office who delivered the goods to the carrier, is a competent witness to prove the state in which they were delivered. Colepepper v. Good, 5 C. & P. 380—Gaselee.

A declaration in assumpsit, stating that goods had been delivered to the defendants, as carriers, to be conveyed by them for a reasonable reward, and that they undertook to carry them safely and securely, and deliver them accordingly, and assigning for breach that they had lost the same, is sufficient to admit proof that they had been guilty of gross negligence. Smith v. Horne, 2 Moore, 18; 8 Taunt. 144; Holt, 643.

In an action by the consignor of goods against a carrier for non-delivery, where the plaintiff averred that the defendant undertook to deliver, &c. in consideration of the hire to be paid by the plaintiff; proof that the hire was to be paid by the consignee, was held to be no variance, the consignor being by law liable. Moore v. Wilson, 1 T. R. 659.

An averment of an undertaking to carry goods to R., to be delivered to C. B., to be paid for on delivery, shows with sufficient certainty that the price of the goods was to be paid by C. B., the consignee, to the carrier. Jacobs v. Nelson, 3 Taunt. 423.

Assumpsit may be maintained in the common form of declaring, against a carrier for the loss of goods which were of above 5*l.* value, and were not in fact paid for accordingly, although it were part of the contract proved by a general notice, fixed up in the carrier's office, and presumed to be known and assented to by the plaintiff, that the "carrier would not be accountable for more than 5*l.* for goods, unless entered as such and paid for accordingly." Clarke v. Gray, 6 East, 564; 2 Smith, 622; 4 Esp. 177.

A misdescription of the termini is fatal in assumpsit against a carrier for the loss of goods. Tucker v. Cracklin, 2 Stark. 385—Abbott.

In an action of case against a carrier for the loss of a trunk:—Held, that the terminus a quo was immaterial, as the gist of the action was the non-delivery at the place it ought to have gone to. Woodward v. Booth, 7 B. & C. 303.

A declaration in case stated, that plaintiff delivered a trunk to defendant, to be put in a coach at Chester, in the county of Chester, to wit, at &c. Proof that it was delivered at Chester, in the county of the city of Chester:—Held, no variance, there being no other place of the same name. Id.

Where a count in a declaration against a carrier by water, alleged, that in consideration that the plaintiff, at the request of the defendant, had caused to be shipped on board the defendant's vessel a quantity of wheat, to be carried to a certain place for freight, to be therefore paid to the defendant, he undertook to carry the wheat safely, and deliver it for the plaintiff on a given day; but it appeared that the defendant's undertaking to carry was made before the whole of the wheat had been shipped on board of the vessel:—Held, that the count might be supported, although it was objected that the consideration for the promise was executory. Streeter v. Horlock, 7 Moore, 283; 1 Bing. 34.

In an action on the case against the proprietor of a stage coach, for an injury sustained by a passenger, the declaration alleged that the defendant was the owner of a stage coach for the conveyance of passengers from London to Blackheath, and that the plaintiff had agreed to become a passenger, and the defendant to receive him as such passenger, to be carried from London to Blackheath; and the evidence was that the words "London and Blackheath" were painted on the coach door; that the coach was licensed to run from Charing Cross only, and that the plaintiff was taken up at the Elephant and Castle, in St. George's Fields:—Held, that as Charing Cross and St. George's Fields are both, in common parlance, styled "London," the variance was immaterial, and the allegation sufficiently proved. Ditcham v. Chivis, 1 M. & P. 735; 4 Bing. 706.

An averment of a contract to carry goods from London to Bath, is supported by evidence of a contract to carry from Westminster to Bath; London must be taken in the enlarged and popular sense of a collective name, and not in a limited sense, applicable to the city only. Beckford v. Crutwell, 1 M. & Rob. 187; 5 C. & P. 242—Tenterden.

I. MALICIOUS ARREST.

1. Malice.

Malice must be proved in an action for a malicious arrest. George v. Radford, 3 C. & P. 464—Tenterden.

An action will not lie against a party suing out a writ, if he neglect to countermand it after payment of the debt, at least, unless malice be averred. Scheibel v. Fairbairn, 1 B. & P. 388.

And if the costs were paid as well as the debt. Page v. Wiple, 3 East, 314.

And in an action for maliciously holding to bail, it is not sufficient to prove that the writ was sued out after payment of the debt, if the circumstances afford no inference of malice; but in such case evidence of actual malice must be given. Gibson v. Chaters, 2 B. & P. 129. And see Silversides v. Bowley, 1 Moore, 92.

A. arrested B., for money paid to his use, on the 10th of December, and was ruled to declare on the 17th; filed a declaration on the 24th; and discontinued the action, upon payment of costs, on the 31st:—Held, in case for a malicious arrest, that this was a sufficient prima facie evidence of malice, and want of probable cause. Nicholson v. Coghill, 6 D. & R. 12; 4 B. & C. 21.

A plaintiff, who, acting under what he conceives sound advice, takes the defendant in execution, after he has taken the defendant's bail in execution, is not liable to an action for maliciously arresting the defendant, although previous to the arrest, he had notice from the defendant that his proceedings were illegal. Snow v. Allen, 1 Stark. 502—Ellenborough.

Where A. arrested B. upon the advice of his special pleader that he had a good cause of action, but afterwards, upon being ruled to declare, discontinued proceedings, and B. brought an action for a malicious arrest without any reasonable or probable cause:—Held, that the reasonableness or probability of the cause was a mixed question of law and fact for the jury to decide; and that they were rightly told by the judge at Nisi Prius, that if they believed the defendant to have acted bonâ fide upon the advice he had received, he was entitled to a verdict; but if otherwise, they ought to find for the plaintiff. Ravenga v. Macintosh, 4 D. & R. 107; 2 B. & C. 693; 1 C. & P. 204.

In an action for maliciously holding the plaintiff to bail, which was founded on the single fact of her having been arrested on meane process, at the suit of the defendant, for money due from her as administratrix of her husband, to the defendant as indorsee of two notes made by the husband; no proof having been offered on the trial of malice express or implied, the jury gave a verdict for the plaintiff, with 5s. damages: on a motion to set aside the verdict, and enter a nonsuit on the assumed defect in the plaintiff's case of the absence of evidence of malice, the court were inclined to hold that such a case of implied malice had been made out, as would support the verdict against that objection: the damages being very small, however, they held it to be a case in which they ought not to interfere, and refused a rule to show cause. Fletcher v. Webb, 11 Price, 381.

A. having by his laches lost all right of action on a note indorsed by B., arrests B., and afterwards discontinues the action; these circumstances do not of themselves so exclude all probable cause as to afford a presumption of malice. Bristow v. Heywood, 1 Stark. 48; 4 Camp. 213—Ellenborough.

The first action being non-prossed, is not of itself evidence of malice. Sinclair v. Eldred, 4 Taunt. 7.

An action for maliciously holding to bail, when less than 10*l.* was due, cannot be sustained, unless it is in proof that the plaintiff knew the fact to be so. It is not sufficient that, in the action, less than 10*l.* was paid into court, which the plaintiff took out, and proceeded no further in the action. Jackson v. Burleigh, 3 Esp. 34—Kenyon.

If the declaration avers that B. the defendant had no cause of action against A. the plaintiff, to the amount of 10*l.*, and it appears that A. was indebted to him above that sum, although not nearly to the amount sworn to in the affidavit to hold to bail, the action cannot be supported, as A. should have declared against B. for maliciously holding him to bail for a greater sum than was really due; but if, in fact, B. was largely indebted to A. on a balance of accounts, and had only a cross demand upon him, for a different cause from that mentioned in the affidavit to hold to bail, then the above averment is not falsified, as in that case A. did not owe B. 10*l.*, and B. had no cause of action for which he could lawfully hold A. to bail. Wetherden v. Embden, 1 Camp. 295—Mansfield.

Where the declaration averred that defendant had no cause of action against the plaintiff for which the latter was liable to be held to bail, and at the trial it was proved that the plaintiff owed the defendant at the time of the arrest 12*l.*: after verdict for plaintiff, the court of K. B. set it aside, on the ground that plaintiff had not proved the injury complained of in his declaration. Wilkinson v. Mawbey, 1 Camp. 297—Gould.

An action cannot be maintained for a malicious arrest by A. against B., if A. owed B. the sum for which he was held to bail, although B. was indebted to A. to a larger amount. Brown v. Pigeon, 2 Camp. 594—Ellenborough.

Where A. arrested B. for 20*l.*, knowing that upon the balance of their mutual dealings there was but 5*l.* due to him:—Held, that the arrest was malicious, and without any probable cause. Austin v. Debnam, 4 D. & R. 653; 3 B. & C. 139.

The plaintiff was arrested by the indorsee of a bill purporting to be drawn on, and accepted by him, but the acceptance was not his:—Held, that this was not sufficient in an action for a malicious arrest, the defendant having acted under mistake, and without malice. Spencer v. Jacob, M. & M. 180—Tenterden.

Where a cause (in which the defendant has been arrested) is referred to arbitration, and the award is given in favour of the defendant, he cannot on that ground maintain an action against the plaintiff for a malicious arrest. Habershon v. Troby, Peake, Add. Cases, 181; 3 Esp. 33—Kenyon. And see Thomson v. Atkinson, 6 B. & C. 193.

In an action for maliciously arresting the plaintiff, and taking him in execution at the defendant's suit, it seems that the latter is liable, although the plaintiff was taken in execution at the instance of defendant's attorney, and without the knowledge or assent of the defendant. Jones v. Nicholls, 3 M. & P. 12.

By a cognovit, A. confessed the action, and that B. had sustained damage to the amount of 3000*l.*; and agreed, that, in case A. should make default in payment of 259*l.* on the 7th of May, B. should be at liberty to enter up judgment for 3000*l.*, and sue out execution for 259*l.* and costs, which would have left a principal sum of 1650*l.* due to B. A. not having paid the 259*l.* on the 7th of May, B. entered up judgment, and sued out execution for 3011*l.*, indorsed with a direction to the sheriff, requiring him to levy 1967*l.* and A. was arrested and detained in prison for that sum;—Held, that A. might maintain an action against B. for having caused him to be arrested for a larger sum than he ought. Wentworth v. Bullen, 9 B. & C. 840.

2. Process and Arrest.

In an action for a malicious arrest, it is necessary to state the writ. Gadd v. Bennett, 5 Price, 540.

The declaration in an action for maliciously causing a writ to be sued out, whereon the plaintiff was imprisoned, stating the process with the ac etiam clause as sued out for 50*l.* (instead of 30*l.* according to the fact) and an indorsement of 15*l.*, the warrant being for 30*l.*, is a fatal variance. Id.

In an action for a malicious arrest, the plaintiff must prove the sheriff's warrant on the writ against him. Lloyd v. Harris, Peake, 174—Kenyon.

Aailable writ is not necessarily a special writ within the 51 Geo. 3, c. 124, and, therefore, a plea stating that plaintiff commenced his action by aailable writ indorsed for bail for 60*l.*, by virtue of which defendant was arrested; and that plaintiff's then cause of action did not amount to 15*l.*, or to any sum for which defendant was liable to be arrested, was held bad on general demurrer for not showing the writ to be a special writ. Ball v. Swan, 1 B. & A. 393.

An officer, who had a writ against a man, sent to him to say so, and asked him to appoint a time to come to his office and execute a bail bond, which he did:—Held, not to constitute an arrest, so as to support an action for a malicious arrest, although the original plaintiff had no cause of action. Berry v. Adamson, 6 B. & C. 528; 9 D. & R. 558; 2 C. & P. 503.

An allegation that the defendant maliciously caused the plaintiff to be arrested, and to be detained in prison, until, in order to procure his release, he was forced to procure bail, is not a divisible allegation; and if there was a giving of bail proved, but no evidence of any arrest, it is not sufficient. Id.

In one case at nisi prius, it was held that an action lies for maliciously holding a party to bail, although he is never arrested, but is told that there is a writ out against him, and he goes to the sheriff's officer and gives bail. Small v. Gray, 2 C. & P. 605—Tenterden.

A. by mistake sues out aailable writ against B., and gives it to C. an officer, to be executed; C. says to B. he has a writ against him; but, B. denying that he owed the money, C. does not take him into actual custody. On inquiry, the mistake is discovered, and B. is told he need give himself no further trouble in the matter; arrest. Smith v. Burridge, 3 Camp. 269—Ellenborough.

Averment in an action for a malicious arrest, that the defendant detained the plaintiff until he found bail; if some detention be proved, it is sufficient to support the action, although no bail be put in. Bristow v. Heywood, 1 Stark. 48; 4 Camp. 213—Ellenborough.

An allegation that the plaintiff gave bail to the sheriff for his appearance at the return of the writ, is not supported by evidence that he paid the debt and 10*l.* for costs into the hands of the sheriff; but he may still maintain the action, although he cannot recover for the consequential damage. Id.

3. Termination of Suit.

An action for a malicious arrest cannot be maintained where the former cause was terminated by a stet process, by the consent of the parties. Wilkinson v. Howel, M. & M. 495—Tenterden.

Rule to set aside nonsuit afterwards refused. Id.

An action may be brought to recover damages for a malicious arrest, where the suit is terminated by a rule of court; and that rule is evidence of the termination of the suit. Break v. Carpenter, 3 Bing. 297; 11 Moore, 59.

Although it was objected that it was obtained merely on the oath of the plaintiff, who would, by its admission, be in effect giving evidence in her own cause. Id.

A judge's order to stay proceedings in the first suit, on payment of costs, and proof of such payment, is not sufficient evidence that the first suit is at an end. Kirk v. French, 1 Esp. 80—Kenyon. And see Harvey v. Morgan, 2 Stark. 19.

Proof that no declaration was filed or delivered within a year after the return of the writ, is sufficient to show a termination of that suit. Pierce v. Street, 3 B. & Adol. 397.

An averment that the suit is wholly ended and determined, is evidenced by proof of the rule to discontinue upon payment of costs, and that the costs were taxed and paid. Bristow v. Heywood, 1 Stark. 48; 4 Camp. 213—Ellenborough.

The allegation that the defendants "did not prosecute the suit complained of, but therein made default, and their pledges were in mercy, &c." is not supported by a proof of a rule to discontinue on payment of costs, and proof of payment of such costs:—Held, also that the court could not reject the allegation of the judgment of nonpro, as, without that, it would not be shown how the suit was terminated. Webb v. Hill, 3 C. & P. 485; M. & M. 253—Tenterden.

The plaintiff, on the 6th of February, took out a rule to discontinue his action upon payment of costs, to be taxed by the master; and on the 7th an appointment was made by the master, but the costs were not taxed and paid until the 11th of April, and the rule was set aside; and it being alleged that the latter action was brought before the first was discontinued:—Held, that it was not; and that when the judgment of discontinuance was entered, it had relation back to the day when the original rule to discontinue was taken out. Break v. Pescocoe, 3 D. & R. 2; 1 B. & C. 649.

Where the declaration in setting out a judgment by default in the former action, stated that "it was thereupon considered that the then plaintiffs should take nothing by their said writ, but that they and their pledges to prosecute should be in mercy, &c.;" it is no material variance, if the record produced in evidence have not the words "and their pledges to prosecute," but only have an " &c.;" for these words may be rejected as surplusage, the substance of the allegation being the discontinuance of the former suit. Judge v. Morgan, 13 East, 547. And see Reed v. Taylor, 4 Taunt. 616.

4. In Inferior Courts.

An action was held to lie for holding to bail in an inferior court, when no more than 30*s.* was due. Smith v. Cattel, 2 Wils. 376.

So when the inferior court had no jurisdiction over the cause. Goslin v. Walcock, 2 Wils. 308.

In an action for maliciously arresting and imprisoning the plaintiff upon a plaint for debt in the Sheriff's Court in London, without reasonable or probable cause, it is sufficient to allege and prove that the plaint was made "at the Sheriff's Court in London, before J. A., one of the sheriffs," &c. Arundell v. White, 14 East, 216.

The usual course of that court, upon the abandonment of a suit by the plaintiff, being to make an entry in the minute book of "withdrawn" by the plaintiff's order, opposite to the entry of the plaint:—Held, that proof of such entry in the minute-book was sufficient to prove an allegation that the former suit was "wholly ended and determined." Id.

And a general allegation that the plaintiff was arrested "under and by virtue of the plaint," is proved by showing the plaint entered, and the subsequent arrest; though it also appeared that the officer making the arrest first received a paper in the nature of a warrant, (but which was no warrant, but only the parol direction of the sheriff, which is good by the custom, reduced into writing to avoid mistake,) directing him to make the arrest; and though the stat. 12 Geo. 1, c. 29, requires a previous affidavit of the debt, which had not been made in this case. Id.

5. Evidence and Damages.

In an action for arresting a party and holding him to bail, without a reasonable or probable cause, whatever was admissible in evidence to defeat the action on which the arrest took place, is also admissible, on the question of the right of the party arrested to recover for the injury sustained. Hadden v. Mills, 4 C. & P. 496—Tindal.

Where the declaration stated that the defendant had sued out the writ, which he had caused to be indorsed for bail, by virtue of an affidavit for that purpose filed:—Held, that a copy of the affidavit was admissible in support of this allegation. Crook v. Dowling, 3 Dougl. 75.

In case against a judgment creditor for maliciously suing out an alias fi. fa., after a sufficient execution levied upon the plaintiff's goods under the first fi. fa.:—Held, that the sheriff's returns indorsed upon the two writs (which writs had been produced in evidence by the plaintiff as part of his case) wherein the sheriff stated that he had forborne to sell under the first, and had sold under the second writ, by the request and with the consent of the now plaintiff, were prima facie evidence of the facts so returned; credence being due to the official acts of the sheriff between third persons. Gyfford v. Woodgate, 11 East, 297; 2 Camp. 117.

In the calculation of damages, in an action for maliciously holding to bail, the plaintiff is entitled to recover not merely the taxed costs, but the costs as between attorney and client. Sandbuck v. Thomas, 1 Stark. 306—Ellenborough.

The plaintiff can recover no damages for extra costs, nor any damages, unless malice be proved. Sinclair v. Eldred, 4 Taunt. 7: S. P. Webber v. Nicolas, R. & M. 419.

II. MALICIOUS CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS.

1. Malice and Want of probable Cause.

An action for a malicious prosecution cannot be maintained, though the accusation turns out to be unfounded, if the prosecutor can show probable cause for the prosecution. Arbuckle v. Taylor, 3 Dow, 160.

Malice and the want of probable cause must both concur. Farmer v. Darling, 4 Burr. 1971.

The question of a probable cause is a mixed proposition of law and fact: whether the circumstances alleged are true or not, is a question of fact for the jury; whether they amount to probable cause, is a question of law. Johnstone v. Sutton, 1 T. R. 545. And see Caudell v. London, 1 T. R. 520, n.

In an action for maliciously indicting A. for perjury, it appeared that the defendant B., in 1824, preferred the indictment, and gave evidence before the grand jury; that the bill was found, removed into K. B., and tried in 1827; and that B., who was then in custody, was brought into court under a habeas corpus obtained by his attorney, on the ground that he was a material witness; but he did not give evidence, and A. was acquitted. The judge, in his direction, told the jury, that if the defendant did not appear at the trial as a witness, from a consciousness that he had no evidence to give which would support the indictment, then there was a want of probable cause, and they should find for the plaintiff; but if his non-appearance did not proceed on that ground, then there was no proof of want of probable cause, and they should find for the defendant. The defendant offered no evidence, and the jury found for the plaintiff:—Held, upon error, and a bill of exceptions, whereby the objection stated to the summing up was, that the judge himself ought to have determined, upon the facts, whether there was probable cause, without leaving any question to the jury; that, under the circumstances, the motive which induced the defendant not to appear as a witness, was a question of fact for the jury, and they might be directed to conclude that there was no probable cause, and to find for or against the defendant, according to their opinion of the motive. Taylor v. Williams, 2 B. & Adol. 845: S. C. nom. Willans v. Taylor, 6 Bing. 183; 3 M. & P. 350.

The plaintiff is to give prima facie evidence of want of probable cause, which the defendant may rebut, if he can, by showing the existence of probable cause. Defendant presented two bills for perjury against the plaintiff, but did not appear himself before the grand jury, and the bills were ignored. He presented a third, and on his own testimony the bill was found. This prosecution he kept suspended for three years, till the plaintiff taking the record down to trial, the defendant declining to appear as a witness, although in court, and called on, plaintiff was acquitted:—Held sufficient prima facie evidence of want of probable cause. Id.

A. being taken before a justice of peace to be bailed, the defendant's attorney objected that the justice had no power to bail him. A letter, proved to have been written by a judge's clerk, purporting to be by authority of the judge, but without proof of such authority, was given in evidence for the purpose of showing that the justice was induced, by such letter to bail A.:—Held, that the letter was admissible for that purpose. Id.

An affidavit made by an attorney's clerk was put in, as showing, that those who conducted the prosecution had taken means to prevent a person becoming bail for A. This was held to be admissible, without calling the clerk to prove an authority from his master to make the affidavit. Id.

Upon the trial of an action for maliciously indicting the plaintiff, the plaintiff proved a case, which in the opinion of the judge showed that there was no reasonable or probable cause for preferring the indictment. The defendant then called a witness to prove an additional fact, and that being proved, the judge was of opinion that there was:—Held, that there being no contradictory testimony as to that fact, and there being nothing in the demeanour of the witness who proved it to impeach his credit, the judge was not bound to leave it to the jury to find the fact, but that he might act upon it as a fact proved, and nonsuit the plaintiff. Davis v. Hardy, 6 B. & C. 225; 9 D. & R. 380.

In an action by an attorney for maliciously, and without probable cause, indicting him for sending a threatening letter, it appeared that his clients having inquired of the defendants as to the truth of a representation made by a person who had offered to buy goods of them, the de-defendants replied, that they would not be responsible for the price of the goods, but believed the person had the employment he represented. The goods were then supplied to him. His representation turned out to be false, and the plaintiff, by direction of his clients, wrote a letter to defendants, demanding payment of them for the price of the goods obtained from his client through the defendants' representation, and stating that the circumstances made it incumbent on his clients to bring the matter under the notice of the public, if the defendants did not immediately discharge the amount; and that he had instructions to adopt proceedings, if the matter were not arranged in the course of the morrow; and that, as those measures would be of serious consequence to the defendants, he hoped they would prevent them by attention to his letter. The defendants were then summoned before a magistrate to answer a charge of obtaining goods under false pretences. The plaintiff served the summons, and attended for his clients, and the complaint was dismissed. The defendants afterwards indicted the plaintiff for sending a threatening letter, contrary to the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 8, and he was acquitted. On the trial in this action, the judge, without leaving any question to the jury, decided that there was reasonable and probable cause for preferring the indictment:—Held, that the decision was correct, and that the evidence did not raise a question of fact for the jury, whether the defendants bona fide believed that they had a reasonable cause for indicting; but a pure question of law for the judges, whether the defendants had such reasonable cause. Blachford v. Dod, 2 B. & Adol. 179.

In an action for a malicious prosecution, it is no answer that the defendant was encouraged in what he did by the opinion of counsel, if the statement of facts was incorrect, or the opinion ill founded. Hewlett v. Cruchley, 5 Taunt. 277.

It lies on the plaintiff to give evidence of malice in the defendants, either express, or to be collected from circumstances, showing plainly the want of probable cause; and the malice is not to be implied from the mere proof of the plaintiff's acquittal for want of the prosecutor's appearing when called. Purcell v. Macnamara, 9 East, 361; 1 Camp. 199. And see Sykes v. Dunbar, 1 Camp. 202, n. Wallis v. Alpine, 1 Camp. 204, n.; and Parrot v. Fishwick, 9 East, 362, n.

In an action against a magistrate for a malicious conviction, it is not sufficient for the plaintiff to show that he was innocent of the offence of which he was convicted; but he must also prove, from what passed before the magistrate, that there was a want of probable cause. Burley v. Bethune, 1 Marsh. 220; 5 Taunt. 580.

An action, however, lies for a malicious prosecution, though the plaintiff be acquitted on a defect in the indictment. Wicks v. Fentham, 4 T. R. 247.

So, for the malicious prosecution of a bad indictment for perjury; therefore, where, in such action, the perjury was assigned upon evidence given before the sheriff's secondary on an inquisition of damages, where the writ of inquiry was directed to be returned into C. P. instead of K. B.:—Held, to be no objection in arrest of judgment. Pippet v. Hearn, 1 D. & R. 266; 5 B. & A. 634.

Where the bill has not been found, an action cannot be supported without evidence of express malice, as well as of the want of probable cause. Byne v. Moore, 1 Marsh. 12; 5 Taunt. 187.

The plaintiff must produce some evidence of want of probable cause, (although slight evidence would be sufficient,) as well as proof of express malice. Incedon v. Berry, 2 Selw. N. P. 4051, n.; 1 Camp. 203, n.—Le Blanc.

If a party is indicted for a felony, though he is acquitted without calling witnesses, he cannot maintain an action for a malicious prosecution, if his acquittal was the result of deliberation, and the evidence was sufficient to cause the jury to pause. Smith v. Macdonald, 3 Esp. 7—Kenyon.

If a plaintiff declares that the defendant maliciously and without probable cause preferred an indictment, setting it forth, the averment is proved, if some charges in the indictment were maliciously and without probable cause preferred, although there was good ground for others of the charges preferred. Reed v. Taylor, 4 Taunt. 616.

If A. strike B., and B. return the blow, on which A. indicts B. for an assault, the bare fact of A. having struck the first blow is not sufficient to support an action for a malicious prosecution. Fish v. Scott, Peake, 135—Kenyon.

Though it may be trespass in the magistrate to grant an illegal warrant, yet an action on the case may be supported against the person who causes and procures such warrant to issue, if it is done maliciously, and without reasonable or probable cause. Elsee v. Smith (in error), 1 D. & R. 97; 2 Chit. 304.

Where a person having lost a bill of exchange which he supposes to have been stolen, goes before a magistrate, and relates the circumstances of the loss, and the magistrate grants his warrant to apprehend A. B. on a charge of having "feloniously stolen, taken, and carried away" the bill of exchange, (language which the complainant did not use when he laid his information,) and upon subsequent investigation of the case, it turns out to be no felony:—Held, that case would not lie for maliciously procuring the magistrate to grant his warrant; to sustain the averment of malice, the charge must be wilfully false. Cohen v. Morgan, 6 D. & R. 8.

A declaration which alleges that the defendant charged the plaintiff with felony, is supported by evidence that the defendant stated to the magistrate that he had been robbed of specific articles, and that he suspected and believed, and had good reason to suspect and believe, that the plaintiff had stolen them. Davis v. Noake, 6 M. & S. 29; 1 Stark. 317—Diss. Bayley.

A., the servant of B., stated before a magistrate that C. came into the yard of his employer, and took from a stable there two geldings, the property of B. and rode them away, though he was told that he must not:—Held, that this information did not support a count in an action for malicious prosecution, which alleged that the information charged C. with having feloniously stolen and ridden away with two geldings. Milton v. Elmore, 4 C. & P. 456—Tindal.

If C. be intrusted to receive money for A., with a written direction for its application, and C. write a letter to A., stating that he has not received it, when in fact he has, this is sufficient evidence of probable cause to render a prosecution of C., under the statute 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 49, not malicious. Eager v. Dyott, 5 C. & P. 4—Tenterden.

Rule to set aside the nonsuit refused. Id.

2. Parties.

In an action for malicious prosecution against A. and B., if it appear that both A. and B. entered into a joint cognizance to prosecute and give evidence; but that A. only employed the attorney, and that B. attended before the magistrate and the grand jury at the request of the attorney, the judge will direct the acquittal of B. Eager v. Dyott, 5 C. & P. 4—Tenterden.

Rule to set aside the nonsuit refused. Id.

A rule for a criminal information obtained by the plaintiff in an action for the malicious prosecution of an indictment, and made absolute, is no bar to such action, although the indictment was against the plaintiff and another person. Caddy v. Barlow, 1 M. & R. 275. And see Rex v. Sparrow, 2 T. R. 198.

In an action by A., for the malicious prosecution by C. of an indictment against A. & B., evidence of the misconduct of C. towards B., after his apprehension, tending to show the bad motives of C., is admissible. Id.

In an action on the case against parish officers, for maliciously taking the plaintiff before a magistrate, and procuring him to be convicted of an act of vagrancy, and imprisoned and kept to hard labour, the conviction being afterwards quashed, it is not necessary that the convicting magistrate should be made a defendant under the 24th Geo. 2, c. 44. Simpkin v. French, 12 Price, 394.

3. Proceedings.

It is necessary to state in the declaration every allegation proper to support the action, namely, that the defendant falsely, maliciously, and without any reasonable or probable cause, caused the defendant to be indicted, and to state the trial and acquittal. Carman v. Trueman (in error), 1 Bro. P. C. 101.

A declaration for maliciously indicting at the general quarter sessions, instead of general sessions, was held good; the word "quarter" being only surplusage. Bushby v. Watson, 2 W. Black. 1050.

After verdict, in an action for a malicious prosecution for perjury, it is no objection to the description of the court in which the indictment was found, that the names of the justices before whom the session of oyer and terminer was held, are not set out; and it seems sufficient to allege, that at such a session the defendant maliciously indicted the plaintiff for wilful and corrupt perjury, without describing more particularly the circumstances under which the alleged perjury was supposed to have been committed. Pippet v. Hearn, 4 D. & R. 266; 5 B. & A. 634.

In an action on the case against parish officers, for maliciously taking the plaintiff before a magistrate, and procuring him to be convicted of an act of vagrancy, and imprisoned and kept to hard labour, the conviction being afterwards quashed, it was averred in the declaration in such a case, that the conviction was quashed on the 22d day of April, at the general quarter sessions of the peace held on that day; and the proof by the order for quashing the conviction showed that it was not a general but an adjourned sessions: the variance was held not to be such as to furnish ground for setting aside the verdict in this case—Dubit. Baron Hullock, regarding the point as matter of pleading. Simpkin v. French, 12 Price, 394.

An averment, in a declaration, of the day of a former trial, must exactly agree with the record to be produced in evidence to support it, though it be laid under a videlicet. Pope v. Foster, 4 T. & R. 590.

But it is not material for the plaintiff to prove the exact day of his acquittal as laid in the declaration, so that it appears to have been before the action brought; and, therefore, a variance in that respect, between the day laid, and the day stated in the record which was produced to prove the acquittal, is not material; the day not being laid in the declaration as part of the description of such record of acquittal. Purcell v. Macnamara, 9 East, 157; 1 Camp. 199.

Where, in an action for a malicious prosecution there is an allegation in the declaration, that the person prosecuted was "acquitted by a jury in the court of our lord the king, before the king himself, at Westminster, before the chief justice;" it is not supported by a record, from which it appears that the trial took place before the chief justice at Nisi Prius. Woodford v. Ashley, 11 East, 508; 2 Camp. 193.

The declaration averred that the defendant charged the plaintiff with violently assaulting him, and procured a warrant to apprehend him for the said offence; the charge made was for assaulting and striking: the warrant produced recited the charge to be for assaulting and beating:—Held, that this was no material variance. Byne v. Moore, 5 Taunt. 187; 1 Marsh. 12.

Where, in an action for a malicious prosecution, the record, in setting out the indictment, stated the words to be, "then and there did make an assault;" and in the indictment they were stated as "did then and there make an assault;" Held, to be no variance, and even if it was, that it might be altered before trial. Freeman v. Arkill, 3 D. & R. 669; 2 B. & C. 494; 1 C. & P. 137.

In an action for a malicious prosecution, in which the plaintiff charges the defendant with having imposed on him the crime of felony, by reason of which he was imprisoned; and on production of the information before the justice, there is no charge of felony, though the warrant was to arrest the plaintiff for felony; the evidence does not support the declaration, and the plaintiff shall be nonsuited. Leigh v. Webb, 3 Esp. 165—Eldon.

And it seems that no action lies against the complainant before the justice of the peace. Id.

4. Termination of Prosecution.

An action for malicious prosecution cannot be maintained till the prosecution is terminated, which must appear upon the declaration. Fisher v. Bristow, 1 Dougl. 215.

The declaration in an action for a malicious prosecution for felony, must state that the prosecution is at an end; and alleging that the plaintiff was discharged from his "imprisonment," is not sufficient. Morgan v. Hughes, 2 T. R. 225.

If it allege that the plaintiff was discharged by the grand jury's not finding the bill, it will show a legal end to the prosecution. Id.

5. Evidence and Damages.

A count for maliciously indicting the plaintiff for an assault, cannot be supported without proof of some consequential injury sustained by him. Freeman v. Arkill, 3 D. & R. 669: 2 B. & C. 494; 1 C. & P. 137.

And in such an action the plaintiff may call one of the grand jury to prove that the defendant was the prosecutor on the indictment. Id.

In an action for a malicious prosecution, where the defendant gives evidence of probable cause, a witness may be asked whether the plaintiff was not a man of notoriously bad character. Rodriguez v. Tadmir, 2 Esp. 721—Kenyon.

In an action for maliciously procuring the plaintiff to be arrested on a charge of larceny, the defendant cannot give evidence to show that the plaintiff's character was suspicious, and that his house had been searched on former occasions. Newsam v. Carr, 2 Stark. 69—Wood.

III. OTHER MALICIOUS PROCEDURE.

Bankruptcy.—An action lies for maliciously suing out a commission of bankruptcy, notwithstanding the specific remedy given by stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 23. Brown v. Chapman, 3 Burr. 1418; 1 W. Black. 427.

Although the commission was afterwards superseded. Chapman v. Pickersgill, 2 Wils. 145.

It must be averred and proved that the commission was superseded before the commencement of the action; and if this fact be not proved the plaintiff ought to be nonsuited, though it was not averred in the declaration, and though the defendant, who might have demurred for the omission, has not done so. Whitworth v. Hall, 2 B. & Adol. 695.

It is not sufficient to prove merely that the commission was superseded, as a supersedeas may proceed upon strict legal grounds, and does not, therefore, furnish evidence of the want of probable cause. Hay v. Weakley, 5 C. & P. 361—Tindal.

Evidence of facts upon which the act of bankruptcy was probably proved, but which facts do not amount to an act of bankruptcy, is sufficient to call upon the defendants to prove the affirmative of probable cause. Cotton v. James, 1 B. & Adol. 128.

The adjudication of the commissioners does not in itself negative the want of probable cause. Id.

Semble, that in an action for maliciously suing out a commission of bankruptcy, it is a fatal variance to allege that the defendant sued the commission out of the high court of Chancery. Poynter v. Forrester, 1 Rose, 222: S. C. nom. Poynton v. Forster, 3 Camp. 58.

In such action, the allegation that the commission was duly superseded, can only be sustained by the production of the writ of supersedeas, and not by the Chancellor's order directing it to issue. Id.

A commission recited that A. B. became bankrupt with intent to defraud C. and D., surviving partners of Edmund Darby, but the writ of supersedeas stated them to be surviving partners of Edward Darby:—Held, in an action for maliciously suing out the commission, that the variance was fatal. Matthews v. Dickinson, 1 Moore, 104; 7 Taunt. 399.

Other Matters.—An action on the case lies for maliciously obtaining or executing a warrant to search a house for smuggled goods though none are found. Boot v. Cooper, 1 T. R. 535.

So, for a conspiracy in issuing a commission of lunacy. Turner v. Turner, Gow, 50—Dallas.

To support such an action, malice and a want of probable cause must be proved; but on proof of a total want of probable cause, malice may be implied; and although express malice be proved, some slight evidence of a want of probable cause must be given. Id.

An action on the case to recover damages against the lessor of the plaintiff; in a variation ejectment, is not maintainable. Parton v. Hanor, 1 B. & P. 205.

Nor will an action lie for a malicious prosecution of a court-martial by a captain in the navy against his commander-in-chief. Sutton v. Johnston (in error,) 1 Bro. P. C. 76; 1 T. R. 483, 784.

An action lies against the master of a vessel for purposely firing a cannon at negroes, and thereby preventing them from trading with the plaintiff: and it is no answer to such action, that the plaintiff had not conformed to the law of the country in paying the duty due to the king for his license to trade. Tarleton v. McGawley, Peake, 205—Kenyon.

IV. NEGLIGENCE.

1. In driving Carriages.

Injury.]—An action on the case for negligence is only maintainable where the injury is consequential to an act before done by the defendant. Leame v. Bray, 3 East, 593; 5 Esp. 18.

A foot passenger, though he may be infirm from disease, has a right to walk in the carriage way, and is entitled to the exercise of reasonable care on the part of persons driving carriages along it. Boss v. Litton, 5 C. & P. 407—Denman.

In case for negligent driving, the law or usage of the road is no criterion of negligence. Therefore, where the defendant's carriage was on the wrong side of the road, and in attempting to pass on the near, instead of the off side, the plaintiff sustained damage:—Held, that it was for the jury to decide the question of negligence without regard to the law of the road. Wayde v. Carr, 2 D. & R. 255.

It is no justification to an action for negligently driving, that the plaintiff was on the wrong side of the road, if there was room sufficient for the defendant to pass without inconvenience. Clay v. Wood, 5 Esp. 44—Ellenb.

Although a person driving a carriage is not bound to keep on the regular side of the road, yet if he does not, he must use more care, and keep a better look out, to avoid concussion, than would be necessary, if he were on the proper side of the road. Pluckwell v. Wilson, 5 C. & P. 375—Alderson.

Though the rule of the road is not to be adhered to, if, by departing from it, an injury can be avoided, yet in cases where parties meet on the sudden, and an injury results, the party on the wrong side should be held answerable, unless it appear clearly that the party on the right had ample means and opportunity to prevent it. Chaplin v. Hawes, 3 C. & P. 554—Best.

It is matter of evidence whether sufficient room is left or not, in case any accident happens. Wordsworth v. Willan, 5 Esp. 273—Rook.

Act of Servants.]—The act of the servant will not bind the master in actions of case to the same extent as in actions on contracts. Harding v. Greening, Holt, 531; 1 Moore, 477.

A master is liable for an accident in consequence of the chain-stay of a cart breaking, when the horse, being frightened, ran away, and damage was done, as he is guilty of negligence in not having the tackle good. Welsh v. Lawrence, 2 Chit. 262.

In an action on the case, for the negligent driving of the defendant's servant, if it appear that the defendant holds himself out to the world as the owner of the cart, by suffering his name to remain painted on it, and over the door of the house of business to which he belongs, the action is maintainable against him, although it is proved that he had for some days ceased to be the owner of the cart and concerned in the business, having resigned both up to his former partner. Stables v. Eley, 1 C. & P. 614—Abbott.

A declaration which charges the defendant with having negligently driven his cart against plaintiff's horse, is supported by evidence that defendant's servant drove the cart. Brucher v. Fromont, 6 T. R. 659.

If one being the owner of a shop and goods, allow A. to be at this shop, and in his own name to sell and dispose of the goods as he pleases, and a portion of these goods be destroyed by the negligent driving of the coachman of B. while the servant of A. is carrying them: A. has such a qualified property in these goods as will entitle him to maintain an action on the case against B. Whittingham v. Bloxham, 4 C. & P. 597—Patterson.

Other Parties.]—Where the owner of a carriage hired of a stable-keeper a pair of horses to draw it for a day, and the owner of the horses provided a driver, through whose negligent driving an injury was done to a horse belonging to a third person:—Held, by Abbott, C. J., and Littledale, J., that the owner of the carriage was not liable to be sued for such injury—Bayley and Holroyd, Js. diss. Laugher v. Forister, 5 B. & C. 547.

Where the plaintiff had hired a chariot for the day, and appointed the coachman and furnished the horses:—Held, that he was properly described as the owner and proprietor thereof, in a declaration against the defendant for an accident which arose from his servant's negligence in driving against such chariot. Croft v. Alison, 4 B. & A. 590.

In an action against two for negligently driving a chaise, if the two defendants hired it jointly, and were jointly in the possession of it, both are liable for an accident. Davey v. Chamberlain, 4 Esp. 229—Ellenborough.

But it is otherwise if it belonged to one only, and the other was merely a passenger. Id.

A porter removing goods is not liable for damage, unless he has been guilty of negligence: he is not obliged to put a person at the head of his horse while he removes goods from his cart. Hayman v. Hewitt, Peake's Add. Cas. 170—Kenyon.

If a horse and cart are left standing in the street, without any person to watch them, the owner is liable for any damage done by them, though it be occasioned by the act of a passer-by, in striking the horse. Illidge v. Goodwin, 5 C. & P. 190—Tindal.

If the carriage of A. strike against the cart of B., and a person who sees it demands the address of the owner of the carriage, the address given by a person in the carriage is admissible in evidence; but a statement that any damage done

If a vessel at sea is going close hauled to the wind, and another meeting her is going free, the rule of the sea is for the latter vessel to go to leeward; and although such vessel may either go to leeward or windward as she best can, yet she ought, as a general rule, to suppose that the vessel going to windward will keep her position. Hendeyoyde v. Wilson, 3 C. & P. 528—Best.

Therefore, when in an action on the case for running down the plaintiff's brig, it was proved that the defendant's vessel was sailing in the channel before the wind, having her studding-sails set at night, and that the plaintiff's brig was sailing by the wind, and the jury found a verdict for the defendant, the court granted a new trial, on payment of costs, for the purpose of further investigating the facts, as there was some doubt as to the propriety of carrying studding-sails at such a time and in such a place, and also as to whether the defendant's captain had kept a proper look-out. Jameson v. Dentald, 12 Moore, 148.

In case for running down a ship, neither party can recover when both are in the wrong; but the plaintiff may recover, although he might have prevented the collision, provided that he was in no degree in fault in not endeavouring to prevent it. Vennell v. Garzer, 1 C. & M. 21.

The plaintiff cannot recover, unless the injury is attributable entirely to the fault of the defendants. If he were partly in fault, but the defendants might, with care, have prevented the accident, he cannot maintain his action. Vanderplank v. Miller, M. & M. 169—Tenterden.

If a vessel is damaged by another running foul of it, and the jury find a verdict for the plaintiff, the court will not send the case for a new trial, because there may be some ground to believe that the plaintiff was negligent in navigating his vessel, as well as the defendant. Collinson v. Larkins, 3 Taunt. 1.

If, in an action for the negligence of the defendant's servants in managing a barge, so that the plaintiff's barge was run down, it appears that the accident happened from circumstances which persons of competent skill could not guard against, the plaintiff will not be entitled to recover; nor will he, if his men had put his barge in such a place that persons using ordinary care would run against it; nor if the accident could have been avoided, but for the negligence of the plaintiff's own men, in not being aboard his barge at the time when it was lying in a dangerous place. Lack v. Seward, 4 C. & P. 106—Tenterden.

In an action against the captain of a steam-vessel, for swamping a loaded wherry on the river by a swell produced by a too rapid rate of passage, the jury, to find for the plaintiff, must be satisfied that the mischief was occasioned by the swell alone; and if they think it doubtful whether it was or not, or think that the plaintiff contributed to the injury he sustained by his own

The captain of a sloop of war is not answerable for damage done by her running down another vessel; the mischief appearing to have been done during the watch of the lieutenant, who was upon deck, and had the actual direction and management of the steering and navigating of the ship at the time, and when the captain was not upon deck, nor was called by his duty to be there. Nicholson v. Mowcey, 15 East, 384. And see Baggett v. Montgomery, 2 N. R. 446, and Row v. Miles, 4 M. & S. 101.

If a ship be chartered to the commissioners of the navy as an armed vessel, and an injury is done to another vessel by the misconduct of the persons on board the former, while a commander of the navy and a king's pilot are on board, an action for the injury may be sustained against the owners of the chartered ship. Fletcher v. Braddick, 2 N. R. 182.

In an action for negligently steering a ship, whereby she was wrecked, and the plaintiff lost his passage in her, no evidence can be given of a specific act of negligence, which is not the foundation of the action; but evidence may be given that the captain had often expressed his opinion that the officer to whom he gave charge of the ship was incompetent for that situation, and experienced nautical men may be called as witnesses, and asked whether, in their judgment, particular facts which had been proved amounted to gross negligence. Malton v. Nesbit, 1 C. & P. 70—Abbott.

And where, in an action for negligently running foul of the plaintiff's vessel, the defence was, that the defendant's vessel, being at the time on the point of entering Plymouth harbour, was under the management of a pilot, notwithstanding evidence was adduced to show that, in fact, a pilot had, shortly before the accident happened, come on board the defendant's ship; yet it is a question of fact for the jury to determine whether, at the time of the action, the defendant's vessel was under the direction of the pilot or not. Catto v. Herbert, 3 Stark. 19—Abbott.

The owner of a barge upon the Thames hires it to another, who navigates it with his own men, who are guilty of negligence, in consequence of which mischief is done; semble, that the owner is not liable. Scott v. Scott, 2 Stark. 438—Best.

Proof that defendant's boat ran down the plaintiff's in the Half-way Reach in the Thames will support an allegation that the boat was run down in the Thames, "near the Half-way Reach," in an action on the case for negligence. Druvy v. Twiss, 4 T. R. 558.

In an action on the case for running foul of posts fixed in the river supporting the plaintiff's wharf, it is not necessary to prove the posts or wharf to be at the place at which they are, under a videlicet, alleged to be situate. Hamer v. Raymond, 5 Taunt. 789; 1 Marsh. 363.

Held, that an action would lie, by the owner of goods in a ship, against the owners, for a loss, occasioned by the ship's striking against an anchor lying under water in the river Trent, without a buoy. Trent and Mersey Navigation v. Wood, Abb. Ship. 256; 3 Esp. 127; 4 Dougl. 287.

A declaration in case for negligently steering, managing, and directing a ship, by which another ship was injured, is not supported by evidence showing that it proceeded from unskillfully stowing the anchor, so that it caught hold of the other vessel, and broke into her side. Halman v. Bennett, 5 Esp. 226—Ellenborough.

3. In other Cases.

A., an engineer, being employed by B. to erect a steam boiler and other apparatus on premises adjoining to the manufactory of C.; and in consequence of the explosion of the boiler, from the insufficiency of the materials of which it was composed, the property of the latter was injured; and it being found as a fact by the jury, that A. was personally present, and that his servants had the management of the apparatus at the time of the accident:—Held, that C. might maintain an action on the case against A. for the injury he had sustained. Witte v. Hague, 2 D. & R. 33. And see Wilson v. Peto, 6 Moore, 47.

But it seems that if the jury had negatived the fact of A.'s management of the apparatus, though the accident arose from an imperfection in the materials of which it was composed, he would not have been primarily liable. Id.

In an action against the defendant for the negligence of his agent in pulling down the party-wall between the houses of the plaintiff and defendant, it is a good defence to show that the plaintiff appointed an agent to superintend the work jointly with the defendant's agent, and that both agents were to blame. Hill v. Warren, 2 Stark. 377—Ellenborough.

Whenever a party seeks to recover for a breach of duty arising from an employment, such employment must be stated truly in the declaration, and proved as laid, whether the action be framed in assumpsit or tort: therefore, where a count in a declaration, ex delicto, stated that "the plaintiff, as owner of a ship, had retained and employed the defendant as his agent, to cause her to proceed to Gottenburgh, in order that she might afterwards proceed to St. Petersburg, and that the defendant accepted the retainer;" and it was proved at the trial, that a written arrangement had been entered into between the plaintiff's clerk or agent, and the defendant, that the ship should touch at Gottenburgh, to know the state of things in Russia, and receive instructions:—Held, that this was a fatal variance, as the defendant had not undertaken to proceed to St. Petersburg absolutely and at all events. Lopes v. De Tastet, 4 Moore, 266: 1 B. & B. 538.

V. DECEIT.

1. Misrepresentation of Solvency.

By 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 6, no action shall be brought
VOL. I.

after 1st January, 1829, whereby to charge any person, upon or by reason of any representation or assurance made or given, concerning or relating to the character, conduct, credit, ability, trade, or dealings of any other person, to the intent or purpose that such other person may obtain credit, money, or goods, unless such representation or assurance be made in writing, signed by the party to be charged therewith.

By s. 8, such writing need not be stamped.

An action commenced before the 1st of January, 1829, for the false representation of the solvency of a party, made by parol before the statute, but tried after that day, is maintainable. Fellows v. Williamson, M. & M. 306—Tent.

When maintainable.]—In an action on the case for falsely representing the character of another, by reason of which false representation he obtained credit of the plaintiff, it is necessary to prove against the defendant both fraud and falsehood, viz. that the representation which he made was false, and that the defendant knew it to be false at the time he made it: falsehood without fraud is not sufficient. Ashlin v. White, Holt, 387—Gibbs.

To support an action for a false assertion as to the circumstances of a third person, it must appear that the defendant intended to impose on the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff relied on his information. Scott v. Lara, Peake, 225—Ken.

To an inquiry concerning the credit of another who was recommended to deal with the plaintiff, a representation by the defendant that the party might safely be credited, and that he spoke this from his own knowledge, and not from hearsay, will not sustain an action on the case for damages, on account of a loss sustained by the default of the party, who turned out to be a person of no credit, if it appear that such representation were made by the defendant bonâ fide, and with a belief of the truth of it; for the foundation of the action is fraud and deceit in the defendant, and damage to the plaintiff by means thereof. And taking the assertion of knowledge secundum subjectam materiam, viz. the credit of another, it meant no other than a strong belief, founded on what appeared to the defendant to be reasonable and certain grounds. Haycroft v. Cressy, 2 East, 92.

If a person employ an agent to take orders, and a representation is made to him of the solvency of a person whom he advises his employers to trust for goods, if he at the time knew that such a person was not solvent, though he did not communicate it to his employers, they cannot maintain an action against the person who made such false representations. Cowen v. Simpson, 1 Esp. 290—Kenyon.

In an action on the case for giving a false character to a tradesman, whereby he was induced to trust an insolvent person, the court held that fraud was necessary to support the action; but set aside a verdict for the plaintiff on payment of costs, though there were some circumstances in the case from which fraud might be inferred, on a suspicion that the inquiry was made of the defendant with a view to entrap him, and thereby obtain his guarantie for payment of the debt contracted by the insolvent. Tapp v. Lee, 3 B. & P. 367.

If A. fraudulently represent the circumstances of B. to be good, in order to induce C. to give him credit, and add, "if he does not pay for the goods, I will;" an action may be maintained against A. for the misrepresentation, notwithstanding the addition of the promise. Hamar v. Alexander, 2 N. R. 241.

A man by false representation induces another to supply goods on the credit of a third person, and enters into a collateral undertaking, not in writing, to pay for them, he is not liable for goods sold, but must be sued in an action of deceit. Thompson v. Bond, 1 Camp. 4—Ellenborough.

If A. makes an inquiry of B. as to the circumstances of C., with respect to opening an account, with him as a general customer, and B. fraudulently misrepresents them, in consequence of which A. sells C. goods from time to time, and is afterwards a loser by him, an action lies for the deceit, although the buyer pays for the first parcels of goods, on the purchase of which the reference is made; but the defendant is liable only within a reasonable time, and to a reasonable amount. Hutchinson v. Bell, 1 Taunt. 558.

If one who has sold goods on the representation of another concerning the buyer's circumstances, afterwards tells the buyer he will sell him no greater amount without further references, and after that intrusts him to a greater amount, the author of the misrepresentation is not liable beyond the sum due at the date of the plaintiff's declaration. Id.

If A. inquires generally of B. concerning the circumstances of C., A. cannot maintain an action against B. for a deceitful representation upon this subject, if C. pays A. for the goods which it was in contemplation to sell when the representation was made, although C. becomes insolvent, and is indebted to A. for other goods subsequently sold. De Graves v. Smith, 2 Camp. 533—Ellenb.

An action on the case for a fraudulent representation of the circumstances of J. S. was referred to arbitrators, who found that the defendant had omitted to state to the plaintiff certain debts which J. S. owed to him: wherefore the defendant did not give a fair representation of what he knew concerning the credit of J. S., but that in what he said he did not mean to hold out any inducement for the plaintiff to trust J. S., and acquitted the defendant of all collusion with J. S., and of all premeditated fraud, with a view to benefit himself at the plaintiff's expense, and of any intention, at the time of making the representation, of withdrawing his credit from J. S., and awarded in favour of the plaintiff—Held, that such award was bad, as the arbitrator had, in substance, acquitted the defendant of any fraud or intention to deceive the plaintiff; without which such action could not be supported. Ames v. Milward, 2 Moore, 713; 8 Taunt. 367.

In case for a false representation of the solvency of A. B., whereby the plaintiffs trusted him with goods; their declarations at the time that they trusted him with goods, in consequence of the representation, are admissible in evidence for them. Fellowes v. Williamson, M. & M. 306—Tenterden.

The defendant having had a credit lodged with him by a foreign house, in favour of one W. T., to a certain amount, upon an express stipulation that W. T. should previously lodge in his hands goods to treble the amount; and being applied to by the plaintiffs for information respecting the responsibility of W. T., answered that he knew nothing of W. T. himself but what he had learned from his correspondent; but that he had a credit lodged with him for so much, by a respectable house at H., which he held at W. T.'s disposal, (omitting the condition,) and that upon a view of all the circumstances which had come to his (the defendant's) knowledge, the plaintiffs might execute W. T.'s order with safety; (viz. an order for the sale and delivery of goods on credit.) In an action on the case to recover damages incurred by the plaintiffs in consequence of having trusted W. T. on this representation—Held, that there was a material suppression of the truth, and evidence sufficient for the jury to find fraud, which is the gist of the action; although the defendant had no immediate interest in making the false representation; and though, at the time when it was made, he added, that he gave the advice without prejudice to himself. Eyre v. Dunsford, 1 East, 318.

If a person on being asked by a tradesman respecting the circumstances, character, and credit of another, informs him that he has been paid a debt due to himself from such a person, and that he was ready to give him credit for any thing he wanted: such representation would not be sufficient to support an action for a deceitful misrepresentation of such person's circumstances, whereby the tradesman was induced to give him credit, although such person had been before that time discharged under an insolvent act, and the defendant knew it, but did not mention it; and such a colloquium will not support an innuendo that the defendant meant thereby that such person was in good circumstances and fit to be trusted generally with goods on credit. Grimford v. Blachford, 6 Price, 36; 7 Price, 544.

In an action on the case for giving a false character, it is not sufficient to charge the defendant with knowledge that the party recommended was in bad circumstances, that the defendant had himself arrested him; and the defendant may go into evidence to explain the circumstances. Wood v. Wain, 1 Esp. 442—Kenyon.

A tradesman can only recover against a person making a false representation of the means of one who referred to him, such damage as is justly and immediately referrible to the false representation. Therefore, if the tradesman gives an indiscreet and ill-judging credit, he cannot make the referee answerable for any loss occasioned by it. Corbett v. Brown, 8 Bing. 35; 1 M. & Scott, 85; 5 C. & P. 363; 1 M. & Rob. 108.

Plaintiffs being about to furnish defendant's son with goods on credit, inquired of the defen-answered that he had; the fact being that the defendant had lent his son 300*l.* on his promissory note, payable with interest on demand, and had received interest on the note. The son having afterwards become insolvent:—Held, that this was a misrepresentation, for which the defendant was liable in damages to the plaintiffs; and a jury having found for the defendant, the court granted a new trial. Id.

In an action for a deceitful representation of the credit of a third person, that person is a competent witness for the plaintiff. Richardson v. Smith, 1 Camp. 277—Ellenborough. S. P. Smith v. Harris, 2 Stark. 47.

In an action of deceit, an insolvent, to whom the plaintiff has furnished goods on the representation of the defendant, is a competent witness to prove that the defendant represented him as a person fit to be trusted. Brust v. Robinson, R. & M. 48—Abbott.

In case for giving a false character, it is evidence against the defendant that he recommended the person trusted to another person who was called as a witness. Beal v. Thatcher, 3 Esp. 194—Kenyon.

2. Other Deceit.

A false affirmation made by the defendant, with intent to defraud the plaintiff, whereby the plaintiff receives damage, is the ground of an action upon the case, in the nature of deceit. Pesley v. Freeman, 3 T. R. 51.

In such an action, it is not necessary that the defendant should be benefited by the deceit, or that he should collude with the person who is. Id.

Where a defendant recommended an agent to the plaintiffs with a knowledge that his representation of the character of the agent was false: Held, in an action on the case, to recover damages arising from the misconduct of the agent, the plaintiff is entitled to recover the damages he may incur, is a fraud in law. Pelkitt v. Walter, 3 B. & Adol. 114.

Therefore, where a bill was presented for acceptance at the office of the drawee when he was absent; and A., who lived in the same house with the drawee, being assured by one of the payees that the bill was perfectly regular, was induced to write on the bill an acceptance, as by the procuration of the drawee, believing that the acceptance would be sanctioned, and the bill paid by the latter. The bill was dishonoured when due, and the indorsee brought an action against the drawee, and on proof of the above facts was nonsuited. The indorsee then sued A. for falsely, fraudulently, and deceitfully representing that he was authorized to accept by procuration; and on the trial the jury negatived all fraud in fact: Held, notwithstanding, that A. was liable, because he must be considered as having intended to make such representation to all who received the bill in the course of its circulation. Id.

In an action on the case for a deceit, the plaintiff declared that he had employed the defendant to obtain a lease for him; that the defendant fraudulently represented to him that a premium of 150*l.* was to be paid for it, whereas only 100*l.* were to be paid; by means of which fraudulent representation, the defendant obtained from him the sum of 50*l.* and converted it to his own use: Held, that these allegations were sufficient, without further stating that the 50*l.* so obtained was over and above the 100*l.* to be paid for the lease. Pentress v. Austin, 2 Marsh. 217; 6 Taunt. 522.

A sheriff, upon the representation of the plaintiff in a suit, having seized goods under a fieri facias as belonging to the defendant, and damages having been recovered against the sheriff by a third person claiming the goods, an action upon the case lies at the suit of the sheriff for the false representation. Humphrys v. Pratt, 5 Bligh, N. S. 154.

person do not assume the name and character of the plaintiff. Cowham v. Jones, 9 Ves. & B. 218.

If A., a manufacturer, use the mark of B. for the purpose of giving to articles manufactured by A. the appearance of being of the manufacture of B.; B. may maintain an action against A., although A.'s articles are not inferior in quality to B.'s, and although it is not shown that B. has sustained actual damage. Hoford v. Payne, 1 Nev. & M. 353; 4 B. & Adol. 410.

A declaration stated that the plaintiff, being the inventor and manufacturer of metallic bones, used certain envelopes for the same, denoting them to be his; and that the defendants wrongfully made other bones, wrapped them in envelopes resembling the plaintiff's and sold them as his own, whereby the plaintiff was prevented from selling many of his bones, and they were depreciated in value and reputation, those of the defendants being inferior:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to some damages for the invasion of his right by the fraud of the defendants, though he did not prove that their bones were inferior, or that he had sustained any specific damage. Id.

Where plaintiff marked his goods, "Sykes Patent," to show that they were his own manufacture, and the defendant copied the mark on his goods to show that they were the plaintiff's manufacture, and sold them so marked, as and for his manufacture:—Held, that case would lie for the injury, though neither party had a valid patent, and both were named "Sykes." Sykes v. Sykes, 5 D. & R. 292; 3 B. & C. 541.

The declaration alleged that defendants sold the goods as and for goods manufactured by the plaintiff; the evidence was, that the persons to whom the defendant sold them knew that they were not manufactured by plaintiff, but that defendants copied plaintiff's mark, and sold the goods so marked, in order that the purchasers might recall them, as and for goods manufactured by plaintiff, and which they did:—Held, not a fatal variance. Id.

The plaintiff's father prepared and sold a medicine called "Dr. J.'s Yellow Ointment," for which no patent had been obtained. The plaintiff, after his father's death, continued to sell the same. The defendant sold a medicine under the same name and mark:—Held, that no action could be maintained against him by the plaintiff. Singleton v. Bolton, 3 Doug. 293.

A., the inventor of a medicine, employed B., a foreigner residing abroad, to manufacture it for him there, and sold it in England for his own sole profit. A label and seal, denoting that the medicine was manufactured by B. and sold by A., were affixed to each of the bottles in which it was sold. The defendants imitated the labels and seals. Demurrer allowed to a bill to restrain the imitation, and for an account of the sales of the spurious labels and seals, A. having no interest. Delandre v. Shon, 2 Him. 237.

By 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 18, s. 1, if any person shall set or place any spring-gun, man-trap, or other engine calculated to destroy human life, or inflict grievous bodily harm, with intent that the same, or whereby the same may destroy, or inflict grievous bodily harm upon a trespasser or other person coming in contact therewith, it shall be deemed murder.

Provided (sects. 2 & 4.) that it shall not be illegal to set guns or traps, such as may have been usually set to destroy vermin, or spring-guns, man-traps, or other engines, from sunset to sunrise, in dwelling-houses, for the protection thereof.

Before this statute, it was held, that a trespasser, having knowledge that there are spring-guns in a wood, although he may be ignorant of the particular spots where they are placed, may not maintain an action for an injury received in consequence of his accidentally treading on a latent wire communicating with a gun, and thereby letting it off. Holt v. Wilkes, 5 B. & A. 304.

The law requires of persons having in their custody instruments of danger, that they should keep them with the utmost care; therefore, when defendant, being possessed of a loaded gun, sent a young girl to fetch it, with directions to take the priming out, which was accordingly done, and damage accrued to the plaintiff's son, in consequence of the girl's presenting the gun at him, and drawing the trigger, when the gun went off:—Held, that the defendant was liable to damages in an action upon the case. Dimes v. Bell, 5 M. & B. 198; 1 Stark. 267.

If a man place dangerous traps baited with flesh in his own ground, so near to a highway, or to the premises of another, that dogs passing along the highway, or kept in his neighbour's premises, most probably be attracted by their instinct into the trap, and in consequence of such act his neighbour's dogs be so attracted and thereby injured, an action on the case lies. Townshend v. Wether, 9 East, 277.

Quere, whether a person is authorized in firing dog-spear in his woods, or whether he is answerable in an action on the case for an injury done to a dog? Deane v. Clayton, (Holt.) 2 Marsh. 577; 1 Moore, 203; 7 Taunt. 618. And see Stevens v. Lyon, 2 Stark. 317.

Where a defendant, for the protection of his property, some of which had been stolen, set a spring-gun, without notice, in a garden completely walled round, and at a distance from his house, and the plaintiff, who had climbed over the wall in pursuit of a strayed fowl, was shot:—Held, that an action was maintainable, and the defendant liable in damages. Bird v. Holbrook, 4 Bing. 696; 1 M. & P. 607; R. P. Jay, v. Whitfield, 3 B. & A. 306, c; 4 Bing. 644, c.

2. Dangerous Animals.

In an action for an injury by a vicious bull, the bull was attracted by a cow in a particular state, which the plaintiff was driving past the field in which the bull was, and that the plaintiff first struck the bull on the head to drive him away from the cow. Blackman v. Simmons, 3 C. & P. 138—Best.

Seemle, that the owner of a vicious animal, after notice of its having done an injury, is bound to secure it at all events, and is liable in damages to a party subsequently injured, if the mode he has adopted to secure it proves to be insufficient. Id.

No action lies for an injury arising from the defendant letting loose a dog in his own premises for their protection at night. Brock v. Copeland, 1 Esp. 203—Kenyon.

A party, who is bitten by a dog in consequence of being himself on the owner's land on which he is not entitled to go, can maintain no action for the injury. Sarch v. Blackburn, M. & M. 505; 4 C. & P. 297—Tindal.

Nor, if the injury arises from his own carelessness, with knowledge of the danger. Id.

But if he has no means of knowing the danger, and is not otherwise in fault, he may recover, although the owner has attempted to give notice; therefore, it is no answer to such action, that a printed notice was put up, if it appears that the plaintiff could not read. Id.

If no suspicion be thrown upon the plaintiff by the defendant in such a case, it may be taken that he had good cause for being on the defendant's premises, provided the dog is put in a place forming one entrance to the house of the defendant, although there may be other entrances to the house of a more public description, by which the plaintiff might have proceeded. Id.

or allows it to resort to his premises, that is sufficient. McKens v. Wood, 5 C. & P. 1—Tent.

An averment in a declaration that defendant's dogs were accustomed to worry and bite sheep and lambs, is not supported by proof that the dogs were of a ferocious and mischievous disposition, and that they had frequently attacked men. Hartley v. Harriman, 1 B. & A. 620; S. C. nom. Hartley v. Halliwell, 2 Stark. 212; Holt, 617.

Seemle, however, that an averment that the dogs were of a ferocious and mischievous disposition, would be sufficient in an action on the case brought for an injury to plaintiff's sheep without alleging specifically that they were accustomed to bite and worry sheep. Id.

The allegations in a plea to an action of trespass for shooting a dog, that he attacked the defendant, and was accustomed to attack and bite mankind, are both material, and must be proved. Clark v. Webster, 1 C. & P. 104—Park.

Where the defendants justified the shooting the plaintiff's dog, by pleading that he attacked them, and that "he was accustomed to attack and bite mankind," the plaintiff may call witnesses to prove the general quietness of the dog. Id.

A., a hawk, went to the house of B. to sell goods, and a dog of B. coming out of the house, A. knocked out one of its eyes, for which B.'s wife caused A. to be apprehended:—Held, that it was for the jury to say whether A., struck the dog for his own preservation and fairly to protect himself, or whether it was a wilful and malicious trespass on his part. Harway v. Boulbee, 4 C. & P. 350; 1 M. & Rob. 15—Tindal.

If defendant justify shooting a dog, because

3. Dangerous Openings and Non-repairs.

It is universally the duty of the occupier of a house, having an area fronting the public street, so to fence it as to make it safe to passengers; and it is no defence to an action against him, for neglecting to do so, whereby the plaintiff fell down into the area and was hurt, that when he took possession of the house, and as long back as could be remembered, the area was in the same open state as when the accident happened. Coup-land v. Hardingham, 3 Camp. 398—Ellenb.

A tradesman who has a flap-door in the foot pavement of the street opening into a cellar underneath his house, is bound, when he uses it, to conduct his business with such a degree of care as will prevent a reasonable person, acting himself with an ordinary degree of care, from receiving any injury by it. Proctor v. Harris, 4 C. & P. 337—Tindal.

He is also bound to take reasonable care that the flap is so placed and secured, as that under ordinary circumstances, it shall not fall down; but if the tradesman has so placed and secured it, and a wrongdoer throws it over, the tradesman will not be liable in damages for any injury occasioned by it. Daniels v. Potter, 4 C. & P. 262—Tindal.

In such an action, the declaration of one defendant, who has suffered judgment by default, cannot be used as evidence against the others. Id.

In an action for an injury resulting from falling down an unprotected area, the declaration stated that the defendant was possessed of the premises, and that they were adjoining "a certain public and common street and highway." It appeared that the defendant had agreed with the owner of the premises (two carcasses of houses) to finish one of them, for doing which he was to have the other; and that workmen employed by him were then actually at work upon them, but it did not appear that any conveyance had been made to him:—Held, that it was sufficient evidence to go to a jury of a possession in the defendant. Jarvis v. Dean, 11 Moore, 354.

If the owner of a house is bound to repair it, he, and not the occupier, is liable to an action on the case for an injury sustained by a stranger, from the want of repair. Payne v. Rogers, 2 H. Black. 349.

Case lies against the landlord of a house demised by lease, who, under his contract with his tenant, employs workmen to repair the house, for a nuisance in the house occasioned by the negligence of his workmen. Leslie v. Pounds, 4 Taunt. 649.

VIII. PRIVATE NUISANCES.

1. Building on adjoining Lands.

In 1803, the plaintiff's house was built against the pine end wall of the defendant's house, by permission. In 1829, the defendant made an excavation in a careless and unskilful manner, in his own land, near to his pine end wall, by which he weakened his pine end wall and consequently injured the house of the plaintiff:—Held, that an action on the case was maintainable for this injury. Brown v. Windsor, 1 C. & J. 20.

The declaration alleged, that the plaintiff was possessed of a messuage, &c., belonging to, and supporting which there were certain foundations, which the plaintiff had enjoyed, &c., and ought, &c. to enjoy. On evidence it appeared that the plaintiff was only entitled to an easement in the foundations which belonged to the defendant:—Held, no variance. Id.

The possessor of a house which is not ancient, cannot maintain an action against the owner of adjoining lands, for digging away that land, so that the house falls in; and, therefore, where a declaration stated that A. was lawfully possessed of a dwelling-house, adjoining to a dwelling-house of B., and that B. dug into the soil and foundation of the last mentioned house so negligently, and near to the house of A., that the wall of the latter house gave way; on demurrer to so much of the declaration as alleged the digging so near &c., the defendant had judgment. Wyatt v. Harrison, 3 B. & Adol. 871.

But if it had appeared that the plaintiff's house was ancient; or if the complaint had been that the digging occasioned a falling in of soil of the plaintiff, to which no artificial weight had been added, quære, whether an action would not have lain? Id.

If by negligence of A. on building his house adjoining that of B., the house of B. is thrown down, A. is liable only to such sum in damages, as was the value of the old house, and not the whole expense of building a new one. Lakin v. Godsall, Peake's Add. Cas. 15—Kenyon.

In an action for an injury to the plaintiff's premises, in consequence of the pulling down of the defendant's house adjoining, the plaintiff may recover damages for any injury actually caused by the negligence of the defendant, although he has not himself used those precautions which it was his duty to adopt against such injury. Walters v. Pfeil, M. & M. 362—Tenterden.

Where notice was given to the occupier of adjoining premises, of an intention to pull down and remove the foundations of a building, on part of the footing of one of the walls of which, one of the walls of such adjoining premises rested:—It was held, that the party giving notice was only bound to use reasonable and ordinary care in the work, and was not bound in any other way to secure the adjoining premises from injury although from the peculiar nature of the soil, he was compelled to lay the foundation of his new building several feet deeper than that of the old. Massey v. Goyder, 4 C. & P. 161—Tindal.

Upon a declaration for negligence in pulling down a house adjoining the plaintiff's house without shoring up the latter, whereby it fell, the plaintiff cannot recover without evidence, from which a grant of right to the support of the adjoining house can be inferred. Peyton v. St. Thomas's Hospital, 4 M. & R. 625: & C. non. Peyton v. London (Mayer, &c.) 9 B. & C. 725.

Quære, whether such a right ought not to have been stated? Id.

Nor upon such a declaration can the plaintiff insist that the defendant ought to have given notice of his intention to pull down. Id.

If A., by the direction of B., build a wall on the lands of C., C. cannot maintain an action on the case against B. for the continuance of the wall. And it seems that if A., in building a house on his own land, encroach on the adjoining land of C., and dispose of his interest in the house to B., C. cannot maintain an action on the case against B. for the continuance of the wall. Coventry v. Stone, 2 Stark. 534—Abbott.

In an action on the case for negligently pulling down a party-wall adjoining a wall of the plaintiff's cellar, whereby the roof of the latter fell in, and a quantity of wine was destroyed, it appeared that the proximate cause of the damage was by placing a quantity of bricks on the roof of the cellar:—Held, that this was no variance, and need not be set out in the declaration in order to support the action. King v. Williamson, D. & R. N. P. C. 35: S. C. not S. P. 3 Stark. 162—Abb.

2. Injuries to Reversioners.

Against Strangers.—There must be some injury to the land, to enable a reversioner to support an action on the case. Baxter v. Taylor, 1 Nev. & M. 14; 4 B. & Adol. 72.

A reversioner cannot maintain an action against a stranger, for merely entering upon his land held by a tenant on lease, though the entry be made in exercise of an alleged right of way; such an act during the tenancy not being necessarily injurious to the reversion. Id.

But an action lies by a reversioner for any injury done to the value of the inheritance. Jesser v. Gifford, 4 Burr. 2141.

If the plaintiff declare as a reversioner for an injury done to his reversion, the declaration must allege it to have been done to the damage of his reversion, or must state an injury of such a permanent nature as to be necessarily injurious to his reversion; otherwise the want of such allegation will be cause for arresting the judgment; therefore, where the plaintiff declared as reversioner of a yard and part of a wall, which W. F. occupied as tenant to him, and that the defendant, on &c., and on divers days, &c., wrongfully placed on the said part of the wall quantities of bricks and mortar, &c. and thereby raised it to a greater height than before, and placed pieces of timber, &c. on the said wall, overhanging the yard, per quod the plaintiff, during all the time, lost the use of the said part of the wall, and also by means of the timber, &c. overhanging the yard, quantities of rain and moisture flowed from the wall upon the yard, and thereby the yard and the said part of the wall have been injured, to the damage of the plaintiff, &c.; without stating that his reversion was prejudiced: the court arrested the judgment. Jackson v. Peaked, 1 M. & S. 234.

A reversioner may maintain an action for a nuisance, which produces no present injury beyond that to his reversionary right, and which may be removed before the reversion comes into possession. Shadwell v. Hutchinson, M. & M. 350; 4 C. & P. 333—Tenterden.

In case by a reversioner for an injury to the reversion, it is no answer that the injury complained of was caused by the wrongful act of the tenant, for which he might be liable to an action. Egremont v. Pulman, M. & M. 404—Tindal.

Against Tenants.—An action on the case for an injury to the inheritance, lies by the reversioner against the tenant pending the term, for inclosing and cultivating waste land included in the demise, and for continuing the grievance. Queen's College (Oxford) v. Hallett, 14 East, 489.

An action on the case in the nature of a writ of waste, lies at the suit of a landlord against his tenant, for acts done by the latter, while holding over after the expiration of a notice to quit. Burchell v. Hornsby, 1 Camp. 360—Ellenborough.

Where, in an action by the reversioner against the tenant of a house, for opening a door in a wall without the consent of the plaintiff, and thereby damaging the house, and prejudicing the plaintiff's reversionary interest; the opening of the door is proved, and all actual damage is disproved, the jury should be directed to inquire whether the reversionary interest of the plaintiff has or has not been injured. A nominal verdict entered for the plaintiff without such direction, or inquiry, on the ground that the defendant had no right to make the alteration, was set aside. Young v. Spencer, 5 M. & R. 47; 10 B. & C. 145.

The reversionary interest of the plaintiff might be injured, although the house itself was not. Id.

Proof of Tenancy.—In an action of case, an averment that the plaintiff's close, at the time of the injury, was in the occupation of J. V. and H. V., is sufficiently proved, if at the time of the injury it was in their occupation, though the tenant be since changed, before action brought. Vowles v. Miller, 3 Taunt. 137.

In an action on the case for an injury done to the plaintiff's reversion, they proved that they were tenants in common under a demise; and a witness stated that he occupied part of the premises under both the plaintiffs, and that he had at first an agreement in writing which he signed; and another witness said, that he occupied under one of the plaintiffs only, and that he did not know the other:—Held, that there was sufficient evidence to go to the jury of a tenancy by both the occupiers under both the plaintiffs. Strother v. Barr, 2 M. & P. 207; 5 Bing. 136.

But, quære, whether it was not incumbent on the plaintiffs to produce the agreement, in order to show the nature of their reversion? Id.

First count, in case for injuring plaintiff's reversion in lands, by cutting and carrying away branches from trees growing on it. Second count, in trover, for the branches. Proof that plaintiff demised the lands to a tenant, by a written agreement not produced, and that defendant carried away some branches, the value of which was not shown:—Held, that plaintiff could not support the first count without producing the written agreement; but that, on the second count, he was entitled to nominal damages. Cotteril v. Hobby, 6 D. & R. 551; 4 B. & C. 465.

In an action on the case for an alleged injury to the plaintiff's reversionary interest in a house, he averred in his declaration that the premises were in the occupation of one S. P., as tenant thereof to the plaintiff. It was proved that the house had been let to S. P. by a cestui que trust, to whom she had paid rent, the plaintiff being his trustee:—Held, to be no variance, as the legal estate was in the plaintiff, and the cestui que trust was to be considered as his agent or bailiff. Vallance v. Savage, 5 M. & P. 576; 7 Bing. 595.

3. Noxious or offensive Trades.

The erection of a tobacco-mill, near to the house of another:—Held, to be a nuisance, and actionable. Styan v. Hutchinson, 2 Selw. N. P. 1105—Kenyon.

In case for a nuisance, notice to remove the nuisance left at the premises, is evidence against a subsequent occupier. Johnson v. Bensley, R. & M. 189—Abbott.

A bond given by the defendant, acknowledging himself to be guilty of a nuisance, is good evidence on the trial of an indictment for a nuisance in carrying on the same business in another place. Rex v. Neville, Peake, 91—Kenyon.

In declaring for a nuisance, the immediate cause of the injury must be stated; and under an averment of the remote cause, and an allegation that by means of the premises the noxious matter annoyed the plaintiff's house, it is not competent to give evidence of the intermediate causes. Fitzsimons v. Inglis, 5 Taunt. 534.

The action upon the case for a nuisance is local in its nature, and the nuisance must be proved to have been committed in the county where the venue is laid; if no place and county are alleged where the nuisance is committed, the county in the margin shall be intended. Warren v. Webb, 1 Taunt. 379. But see Jeffries v. Duncomb, 11 East, 226; 2 Camp. 3.

In an action on the case for damaging the plaintiff's wharf, the declaration stated the wharf to be situate near the river Thames, to wit, "at Kingston, in the parish of St. Saviour, Southwark, in the county of Surrey;" though there was no such place as Kingston in that parish:—Held, that this allegation was to be referred to the venue, and not to the local situation of the wharf; and, therefore, that it was not necessary to prove it to be so situated. Hamer v. Raymond, 1 Marsh. 363; 5 Taunt. 789.

4. Other injuries to Lands and Houses.

One who comes into possession of land, on which he finds a block of stone belonging to another, is not justified in removing it to a distance. Forsdick v. Collins, 1 Stark. 173—Ellenborough.

And such removal supersedes the necessity of proving a formal demand in an action of trover. Id.

A. has immemorially had, for watering his lands, a channel through his own field, in a porous soil, through the banks of which channel, when filled, the water percolates, and thence passes through the contiguous soil of B., below the surface without producing visible injury. B. builds a new house in his land below the level of his soil, in the current of precolating water:—Held, that A. cannot justify filling his channel, if the precolating water thereby injures the house of B. Cooper v. Barber, 3 Taunt. 99.

The plaintiff, in 1822, had a remainder in fee in a wharf expectant on a tenancy for life of his father. The defendants, in that year, dug soil out of their dock, which was contiguous, and the water thereby undermined the wall of the wharf. In 1823, the plaintiff's father died; and, in 1824, the action of the water on the wall had undermined it so far that it fell:—Held, that the plaintiff had a right of action against the defendants, although they had done no act since the death of the plaintiff's father, by which the plaintiff came into possession of the freehold of the wharf. Gillon v. Boddington, 1 C. & P. 541; R. & M. 161—Abbott.

If a man in his own soil, do any thing which is a nuisance to another, as by stopping a rivulet, and so diminishing the water used by him for his cattle, the party injured may enter on the soil of the other and abate the nuisance, and justify the trespass; and this right of abatement is not confined merely to nuisances to a house, to a mill, or to land. Raikes v. Townshend, 2 Smith, 9.

The declaration stated that the defendant wrongfully placed and continued a heap of earth, whereby the refuse water was prevented from flowing away from his house down a ditch at the back thereof. The evidence was, that the heap was not originally placed so as to obstruct the water, but that in process of time, earth from the heap was trodden and fell into the ditch and obstructed it:—Held, that this was a fatal variance. Fitzsimons v. Inglis, 5 Taunt. 534.

In case by the tenant in possession against a wrong-doer, it is sufficient to declare generally, without disclosing any title. Grimstead v. Marlowe, 4 T. R. 717.

But if a defendant justify under a right, it must be formally set out in the plea. Id. And see Rider v. Smith, 3 T. R. 766.

IX. ACTION.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 2, executors and administrators may maintain actions on the case for any injury to the real estate of the deceased, committed in his life time, at any time within six calendar months before his death; provided the action be brought within one year: and actions on the case may be brought against them.

In an action in case against six, the plaintiff may recover a verdict against two. Cooper v. South, 4 Taunt. 802.

In an action on the case in the King's Bench against ten defendants, the plaintiff declared, that before and at the time of the grievances complained of, they were proprietors of a certain stage-coach, for the conveyance of passengers for hire from A. to B.; and that being so, they received the plaintiff as an outside passenger, to be safely conveyed thereon from A. to B. for hire to them in that behalf; and that by reason thereof they ought to have safely conveyed him accordingly; and assigned for breach, that they conducted themselves so carelessly in this behalf, that by and through the carelessness, unskillfulness, and default of themselves and their servants, the coach was upset, by means whereof the plaintiff was hurt, and sustained other injuries: a jury having found a verdict against eight of the defendants only, and in favour of the other two, and judgment being rendered accordingly:—Held, that as the action was founded on a breach of duty, imposed by the custom of the realm, which was a breach of the law; and as the declaration was framed on a misfeasance; such verdict and judgment were not erroneous, and they were therefore affirmed in the Exchequer Chamber in error. Bretherton v. Wood, (in error,) 6 Moore, 141; 3 B. & B. 54; 9 Price, 408.

I. WHEN IT LIES.

- 1. Generally and in Civil Cases.

Quære, whether the Vice-Chancellor has authority to order a writ of certiorari to issue? Edwards v. Bowen, 2 Russ. 153; 2 Sim. & Stu. 514.

A certiorari always lies to remove proceedings under penal statutes, unless it is expressly taken away; and an appeal never lies, unless it is expressly given by statute. Rex v. Cashbury, (Justices,) 3 D. & R. 35.

It does not lie to remove a recognisance. Anon. Loft, 321.

Nor for other than judicial acts. Rex v. Lloyd, Cald. 309.

A certiorari was ordered to be issued to the judge of an inferior jurisdiction to return and certify the practice of his court. Williams v. Bagot, (Lord,) (in error,) 4 D. & R. 315.

Where judgment is signed against a defendant in an inferior court of record, and he surrenders in discharge of his bail, but, before he is charged in execution, is removed to the Fleet by habeas corpus, the court of C. P. will grant a certiorari to remove the record in order to charge him in execution in the Fleet, by virtue of the statute, 19 Geo. 3, c. 70, s. 4. Jordan v. Cole, 1 H. Black. 532.

A certiorari lies to remove an ejectment from an inferior jurisdiction into K. B., and the cause need not be removed by habeas corpus cum causa. Goodright d. Sadler v. Dring, 2 D. & R. 407; S. C. nom. Doe d. Sadler v. Dring, 1 B. & C. 253; 1 Tidd's Prac. 403.

Even at the instance of the defendant, on an affidavit that he cannot have a fair and impartial trial below, although the lease on which the ejectment was founded was executed on the premises within the local jurisdiction. Patterson d. Gradridge v. Eades, 5 D. & R. 445; 3 B. & C. 550.

But it will not lie to remove the record of a judgment obtained against a defendant in the county palatine of Durham, for the purpose of enabling his bail to render him in K. B., though he be a prisoner for debt in the custody of the marshal. Paterson v. Reay, 2 D. & R. 177.

And a certiorari to remove proceedings from the courts of the counties palatine was not to be granted of course, and without special ground. Zinck v. Langton, 2 Dougl. 749.

A certiorari lies to remove a presentment in a court-leet; and when removed, the presentment is traversable in K. B. Rex v. Roupell, Cowp. 458.

The court will not grant a certiorari to remove the record and proceedings out of a court-leet, in order to inquire into the propriety of an amercement, where the fine has been estreated into the duchy chamber of Lancaster, and paid. Rex v. Ritson, 2 T. R. 184.

Nor to remove such proceedings in the courts of great sessions in Wales, without special cause. Williams v. Thomas, 2 Dougl. 751, n.

By 1 Geo. 4, c. 87, s. 5, no proceedings in ejectment by landlord under the statute could be removed from the courts of great sessions in Wales, unless upon special cause shown.

The court of K. B., in its discretion, would not allow the plaintiff to remove a replevin cause by certiorari, per saltum, from the sheriff's court of Carmarthen into K. B.; for a certiorari lies of course only to inferior courts of record, and the sheriff's court is not a court of record for the purposes of a plaint in replevin: the proper course rari. Edwards v. Bowen, 7 D. & R. 709; 5 B. & C. 206; 2 Russ. 153; 2 Sim. & Sta. 514. And see Perreux v. Benson, 5 B. & C. 284.

It was sufficient cause for granting a writ of certiorari to remove proceedings in replevin from a court of great sessions in Wales, that the title to the freehold was in question. Id.

Where a plaintiff had removed the proceedings in replevin from a county court in Wales to the court of Great Sessions, and then applied to the court of Chancery for a certiorari to remove them into K. B., the court granted the writ without requiring the plaintiff to show any special ground for it. Id.

Bail in a civil action, for a convict of felony, are too late to have a certiorari to bring up the principal, to surrender in their discharge, after the principal is actually on board for transportation. Fowler v. Dunn, 4 Burr. 2024.

No certiorari is allowed from the court of Requests at Westminster, except in replevin. 23 Geo. 3, c. 33, s. 4.

But it is otherwise in the Southwark court of Requests. 4 Geo. 4, c. 123, ss. 15 & 16.

on an indictment for a misdemeanour. Rex v. Seton, 7 T. R. 373.

A certiorari does not lie to remove an indictment for felony from the general sessions of oyer and terminer at Hicks's Hall, without the consent of the prosecutor. Rex v. Kingston (Duchess of), Cowp. 283.

But a certiorari was granted to remove an indictment from the Old Bailey, where the defendant was a public officer, and lived at Gloucester. Anon. 1 Chit. 571, n.

A certiorari lies to a Welsh quarter sessions of the peace, to remove an indictment into K. B. Rex v. Clece, 4 Burr. 2456.

But not unless special cause be shown. Rex v. Gwyer, 2 Ld. Ken. 441.

If a defendant who has been convicted on an indictment in an inferior jurisdiction, remove the record into K. B. by certiorari, between verdict and judgment, with a view of making objections to the indictment in arrest of judgment, the court will send the record back by procedendo, without going into the objections to the indictment. Rex v. Jackson, 6 T. R. 145.

The court would grant a certiorari to remove an indictment for a misdemeanour from the Great Sessions in Wales into K. B. Rex v. Griffith, 3 T. R. 658.

No certiorari lies on the statute 30 Geo. 2, c. 24, against obtaining goods or money under false pretences. Rex v. Smith, Cowp. 24: S. P. Rex v. Young, 2 T. R. 472.

A certiorari pro rege lies on statute 13 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 24, relative to highways, before traverse of the indictment or judgment thereupon. Rex v. Bodenham, Cowp. 78.

On what grounds granted.]—A certiorari is always granted, of course, upon the application of the crown. Rex v. Eaton, 2 T. R. 89.

But not so when a defendant applies, he must lay some ground for it before the court, supported by affidavit. Id.

And full and satisfactory grounds must be shown. Rex v. Plumbe, Lofft, 59.

The court will not grant a certiorari on behalf of the defendant to remove an indictment from the sessions, on an affidavit that difficult points of law might arise. But leave was given to renew the motion at chambers, if a better affidavit could be obtained. Rex v. Harrison, 1 Chit. 571.

It is no objection to a certiorari to remove a presentment of a road, made by a justice of the peace under the 24th section of statute 13 Geo. 3, c. 78, that it is prosecuted by another than the justice presenting; if it be by his consent. Rex v. Penderryn, 2 T. R. 260.

A certiorari to remove an indictment of an excise officer from the sessions, was granted on the motion of the attorney-general, without any affidavit. Rex v. Stannard, 4 T. R. 161.

A general prejudice existing against the defendant is not a sufficient ground, unless it exist in the court below. Rex v. Matthews, 1 Chit. 571, n.

The court refused to grant a certiorari to remove an indictment for murder from the county of York, in order to a trial at bar, or in another county, on the ground that the prisoners (who had pleaded the general issue to the indictment) could not have a fair and impartial trial in the former county, on account of certain statements having appeared in different newspapers and handbills, tending to excite a prejudice against them. Rex v. Mead, 3 D. & R. 301: S. C. not S. P. 2 B. & C. 605.

Where a defendant, indicted at the quarter sessions for a conspiracy, had entered into insufficient recognisances to take his trial:—Held, that the court of King's Bench, on a removal by certiorari, might discharge them on motion, and compel him to enter into better security. Rex v. Hooper, 1 Chit. 491.

The court will not grant a certiorari to remove an indictment against several defendants charged with a misdemeanour, unless they all concur in the application; and it seems that a consent by counsel is not sufficient, unless supported by an affidavit of such consent by the defendants themselves. Rex v. Hunt, 2 Chit. 130.

Where a conviction is removed by certiorari, no motion can be made in arrest of judgment, unless the defendant be personally present. Rex v. Spraggs, 1 W. Black. 209. And see Rex v. Cowle, 2 Burr. 834; 2 Ld. Ken. 519.

3. To remove Convictions.

It is discretionary in the court to grant or refuse a certiorari to remove a conviction before justices of the peace; and if the court see that the justices have drawn the proper conclusion from presumptive evidence, they will not grant a certiorari. Rex v. Bass, 5 T. R. 251; Nolan, 227.

A certiorari will not lie to remove a conviction by the commissioners of excise, for the double duties of beer. Rex v. Whitehead, 2 Dougl. 549.

But a certiorari will lie to remove a conviction under statute 11 Geo. 1, c. 30, s. 16, for harbouring teas and spirits, either by justices of the peace or commissioners of excise. Rex v. Abbott, 2 Dougl. 553, n.

But such certiorari will not be granted on an objection to the conviction founded on merits. Id.

And a certiorari lies to remove a conviction on 16 Geo. 3, c. 30, if the defendant has not appealed to the quarter sessions. Rex v. Eaton, 2 T. R. 89.

The court granted a certiorari to remove a conviction, where the magistrate rejected the vendee as a witness, to prove that the defendant used the Winchester bushel. Rex v. —, 2 Chit. 137.

The court of K. B. will not grant a certiorari to remove the assessments of the land tax; but if an information be moved for against the commissioners of the land tax, the court will admit the proceedings, and afterwards further powers for the punishment of the offender are given to the sessions, by another statute, which does not take away the certiorari: the clause for taking away the certiorari in the former act cannot be extended to the proceedings under the latter. Rex v. Terret, 2 T. R. 735.

Therefore, where there have been proceedings under both statutes, those under the former act cannot be removed, but those under the latter may. Id.

If a statute authorizing a summary conviction before a magistrate give an appeal to the sessions, who are directed to hear and finally determine the matter; this does not take away the certiorari even after such an appeal made and determined. Rex v. Jukes, 8 T. R. 542.

If jurisdiction be given to an inferior court of common law, to try a new offence created by statute, the proceedings may be removed by habeas corpus cum causa, or certiorari, unless expressly taken away; unless in cases where the statute creating the offence prescribes a special jurisdiction not known to the common law. Hartley q. t. v. Hooker, Cowp. 524.

Particular statutes.]—By 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 6, a summary remedy is given before two justices for the recovery of small tithes under the value of 40s., (increased to 10l. by 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, s. 4.) By the seventh section of the former statute, which gives an appeal to the sessions, the certiorari is taken away, "unless the title of the tithes should be in question." Rex v. Jefferey, 2 D. & R. 860: S. C. not S. P. 1 B. & C. 604.

An indictment for not repairing a county bridge was removed by certiorari, notwithstanding the stat. 1 Anne, c. 18, s. 5. Rex v. Cumberland, 3 B. & P. 354; 6 T. R. 194.

The general words of the stat. 25 Geo. 2, c. 36, s. 10, that no indictment for keeping a disorderly house shall be removed by certiorari, do not restrain the crown from removing the indictment by certiorari, there being nothing in the act to show that the legislature intended that the crown should be bound by it. Rex v. Davies, 5 T. R. 626.

No certiorari lies to remove an indictment on stat. 30 Geo. 2, c. 24, s. 1. Rex v. Young, 2 T. R. 472: S. P. Rex v. Smith, Cowp. 24.

The stat. 30 Geo. 2, c. 24, s. 20, takes away the writ of certiorari; but where counts on that statute were joined with counts for a conspiracy at common law, to obtain goods by false pretences:—Held, that the certiorari was not taken away. Rex v. Saunders, 5 D. & R. 611.

The statute 12 Geo. 1, c. 34, s. 3, makes it an offence for clothiers and other manufacturers to pay the wages of their workmen in goods instead of money; the statute 22 Geo. 2, c. 27, creates several new offences, and extends the provisions of the preceding statute to silk manufacturers; and the 17 Geo. 3, c. 56, s. 22, takes away the certiorari upon conviction under the 22 Geo. 2. A silk manufacturer having been convicted under 12 Geo. 1, c. 34, s. 3, and 22 Geo. 2, c. 27:—

Held, that he was not deprived of the certiorari by force of the 17 Geo. 3, c. 56. In re Kaye, 1 D. & R. 436: S. C. nom. Rex v. Rogers, 5 B. & A. 773.

The statute 13 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 80, prohibits the removal by certiorari into the court of K. B., of any proceedings had in pursuance of that act: where, therefore, an order was made by two justices, and confirmed by the sessions, for diverting a road, professedly under the authority of, but (as was alleged) without pursuing all the formalities required by the act:—Held, that the certiorari was still taken away; and after the proceedings had been in fact removed, the court quashed the certiorari, quia improvide emanavit, and refused to discuss the sufficiency or insufficiency of the order. Rex v. Casson (Justices), 3 D. & R. 36.

By 42 Geo. 3, c. 73, penalties were imposed on masters and mistresses working children in cotton mills more than a certain time during the day, and no certiorari was allowed. By 6 Geo. 4, c. 63, additional restrictions were imposed as to working on Saturdays and penalties (increased in amount) were extended to foremen; and it was further provided that all the powers, provisions, exemptions, penalties, forfeitures, payments, remedies, matters, and things contained in the former act, except as varied by the present statute, should be as effectual for carrying the same into execution as if re-enacted:—Held, on conviction of a foreman for employing children on Saturday contrary to the last mentioned statute, that the clause taking away certiorari was a provision of the former act, incorporated, by reference, in the new. Rex v. Fell, 1 B. & Adol. 380.

The stat. 48 Geo. 3, c. 74, s. 15, giving to the party grieved an appeal to the sessions, against a conviction by justices of the peace for penalties incurred in respect of the duties on malt, and empowering the sessions "to hear and finally determine of and concerning the truth of the facts and merits of the case in question between the parties to such conviction respectively;" and, after enabling the sessions to amend defects of form, enacting the same clause that no certiorari shall be allowed to set aside the determination of the sessions; and providing that upon such appeal the sessions shall rehear, re-examine, and reconsider the truth of the facts and merits of the case, &c. and re-examine the same witnesses as before, and no other, does not preclude the crown from removing the conviction, and the order of the sessions quashing the same, by certiorari. Rex v. Allen, 15 East, 333.

And the court will take cognizance of a case reserved by the sessions, accompanying the proceedings so removed. Id.

Where the appeal is against overseers' accounts by individuals paying rates within the parish, the certiorari is not taken away by 50 Geo. 3, c. 49, that Act only applying to appeals by the overseers against the disallowance of any items in their accounts by the magistrates. Rex v. Bird, 2 B. & A. 522.

The Bread Act, 50 Geo. 3, c. 73, after reciting of London, and by the fifth section of 50 Geo. 3, all powers given by the previous statutes upon the same subject, were incorporated, except those altered by that statute. The 31 Geo. 2, c. 29, ss. 36 & 37, respectively took away the writ of certiorari, and gave an appeal to the sessions:—Held, that the 50 Geo. 3, c. 73, s. 5, incorporated those sections, and that, on a conviction under the latter statute, the certiorari was taken away, and an appeal given. Rex v. Liverpool (Mayor), 3 D. & R. 275.

The Metropolitan Paving Act, 57 Geo. 3, c. 29, s. 135, prevents the removal into the superior courts, of “any rate, proceeding, conviction, order, matter, or thing:—Held, that a case grant-

And must be given before application for a rule to show cause why such certiorari should not be granted. Rex v. Glamorgenshire (Justices), 5 T. R. 279: Nolan, 249.

And though the justices move to enlarge the rule nisi, that is no waiver of the want of it. Six days' notice of such motion must be given to the justices, notwithstanding the order of sessions was made subject to the opinion of the court of K. B. on a case to be stated, which case was afterwards stated, and settled by the justices at the sessions. Rex v. Sussex (Justices), 1 M. & S. 631.

A certiorari to remove an indictment from the sessions may be sued out by the prosecutor.

and not within six months after settling the case. Rex v. Sussex, (Justices.) 1 M. & S. 734.

The statute 12 Geo. 1, c. 34, s. 3, makes it an offence for clothiers and other manufacturers to pay the wages of their workmen in goods instead of money; and the statute 22 Geo. 2, c. 27, creates several new offences, and extends the provisions of the preceding statute to silk manufacturers. The 17 Geo. 3, c. 56, c. 22, takes away the writ of certiorari upon convictions under the 22 Geo. 2. Where, therefore, a silk manufacturer was convicted under 12 Geo. 1, c. 34, s. 3; and 22 Geo. 2, c. 27:—Held, that the six months limited by the statute for bringing the certiorari, was to be computed from the time the conviction was affirmed by the sessions, and not from the time of the conviction by the justices below. In re Keye, 1 D. & R. 436: S. C. nom. Rex v. Rogers, 5 B. & A. 773.

The court refused a certiorari to remove an order of bastardy, because it was not applied for within six months. Rex v. Howlett, 1 Wils. 35.

Affidavits.—In moving for a rule nisi for a certiorari, it is irregular to intitule the affidavits on which such motion is founded in any cause; and if they are intituled, they cannot be read. Ex parte Nohro, 1 B. & C. 267.

Corroborating affidavits may be read after a rule has been granted; but not those containing new matter. Rex v. Berkley, 1 Ld. Ken. 81.

On the motion of the attorney-general for a certiorari to remove an indictment, the right of the crown having been mentioned by him to be in dispute, an affidavit is required from the defendant, according to 5 W. & M., that the freehold is in question. Rex v. Burgess, 1 Ld. Ken. 135.

The court will not look to any special statement of facts in the certiorari, to determine a conviction to be illegal. Rex v. Liston, 5 T. R. 338; Nolan, 259.

The court will not grant a certiorari to remove a conviction under 52 Geo. 3, c. 93, for using a dog and gun without a certificate, on the ground that jurisdiction does not appear on the face of the conviction, without an affidavit negating the jurisdiction. Rex v. Long, 1 M. & R. 139.

An affidavit, stating that the defendants controverted the title to certain tithes, and also that the title to the tithes was then, and at the time of making the said affidavit, really in question, does not sufficiently show the title to be in question, in order to remove an order of justices upon some quakers by certiorari, according to stat. 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 34, s. 4; and 1 Geo. 1, stat. 2, c. 62. Rex v. Wakefield, 1 Burr. 488; 2 Ld. Ken. 164.

Rule and Writ.—There must be a rule nisi in the first instance for a certiorari, to remove proceedings of the commissioners of sewers. Anon. 2 Chit. 137.

Third persons cannot object to the misdirection of a certiorari, to remove a cause from an inferior court, if the proper officers, in whose keeping the record was, waive the objection, and return the record upon such writ. Daniel v. Phillips, 4 T. R. 499.

The proceedings of certiorari on a private act of 8 Anne, c. 25, were quashed, because the foundation of the inferior jurisdiction was not set out therein. Rex v. Liverpool, 4 Burr. 2244.

Where a certiorari was granted on the application of two parties, and one of them died before the matter came on for argument, the court heard the case notwithstanding. Rex v. Yorkshire, N. R. (Justices.) 9 D. & R. 204.

By 43 Eliz. c. 5, s. 2, a certiorari to remove a suit from an inferior court must be delivered before the jury are sworn.

By 21 Jac. 1, c. 23, s. 2, before issue or demurrer joined.

III. RETURNS TO.

A return to a certiorari need not be under seal. Rex v. Pickersgill, Cald. 297.

The seals of justices of oyer and terminer are not essentially necessary for the removing and authenticating a record transmitted to the court of K. B. The return of justices to a certiorari is a mere ministerial act, which the court requires to be authenticated in a particular form; but as it is a form prescribed by no positive law of the land, the court which requires it may receive and adopt any other authentic certificate, that the record transmitted is the genuine record of the court below; and the omission of the particular form can only be objected to by the court itself. Atkinson v. Rex, (in error.) 3 Bro. P. C. 517.

A return to a certiorari was sent back to justices by the court to be amended, because they did not put their seals to it, or describe themselves as justices of L. Rex v. Kenyon, 6 B. & C. 640; 9 D. & R. 694.

Upon a certiorari to remove a conviction by a justice of the peace on the Deer Act, 16 Geo. 3, c. 30, a return that the record is returned to the sessions, and that a copy is annexed to the writ, is sufficient. Justices ought, in all cases, to return convictions to the sessions, whether an appeal lies or not. Rex v. Eaton, 2 T. R. 285.

The court refused a criminal information against a magistrate, for returning to a writ of certiorari, a conviction of a party in another and more formal shape than that in which it was first drawn up, and of which a copy had been delivered to the party convicted by the magistrate's clerk; the conviction returned being warranted by the facts. Rex v. Barker, 1 East, 186.

The defendants appealed to the sessions against a conviction on a penal statute, where the conviction was affirmed; afterwards the record was removed by certiorari, and the conviction was quashed for a defect in the information: then the prosecutor moved either that the certiorari should be sent back to the magistrates, in order that they might return the original information (which had not the defect,) or that a mandamus might issue to compel the magistrates to proceed on the original information; but the court cord itself, and not set it out according to its tenor. Askew v. Hayton, 1 Dowl. P. C. 510.

The return to a writ of certiorari, to remove proceedings from an inferior court into K. B., setting out a copy of the record, but not returning the record itself, is irregular, and the court quashed the writ on motion. Palmer v. Forsyth, 6 D. & R. 497; 4 B. & C. 401.

After a rule for a certiorari has been made absolute, and the return thereto filed, if the certiorari issued improvidently, the court will order it to be superseded, and the return taken off the file. Rea v. Wakefield, 1 Burr. 489; 2 Ld. Ken. 164.

I. CHARITABLE USES.

[See Grumbrell v. Roper, 3 B. & A. 711. And see Doe d. Tene v. Copstake, 6 East, 328; 2 Smith, 495.]

By 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, s. 1, no manors, lands, tenements, rents, advowsons, or other hereditaments, corporeal or incorporeal, nor any sum of money, goods, chattels, stock, securities for money, or any other personal estate whatsoever, to be laid out in the purchase of lands, tenements, or hereditaments, can be given for charitable uses, unless by deed indented and executed before two witnesses, twelve months before the death of the donor, and enrolled within six months after execution.

By s. 2, it is not to extend to purchases or transfers made for valuable considerations.

A grant by deed, executed and enrolled pursuant to the statute of mortmain, of lands to trustees and their heirs, to the use of one of them, his heirs and assigns, upon condition that he, his heirs and assigns, should, from time to time, repair a vault and tomb, standing upon part of the lands; and, if need be, rebuild it, and permit the same to be used as a family vault for the grantor and any of her family; and in default thereof, then over to the other trustee, his heirs and assigns, was held not to be within the words of the statute, which prohibit the granting of land, &c. &c. to charitable uses, unless the deed be without any condition or reservation for the benefit of the grantor, or any person claiming under him. Doe d. Thompson v. Pitcher, 3 M. & S. 407; 2 Marsh. 61; 6 Taunt. 359.

not within the act. Id.

Where there was a bequest to a man, and his heirs, to hold to the use of him and his heirs, with a desire that he would convey to some charitable uses, and the will afterwards contained a bequest to him of an estate for life:—Held, that the whole of the former devise, and not merely the trust, was void, because the stat. 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, makes void the legal estate given, as well as the trust. Doe d. Burdett v. Wright, 2 B. & A. 710.

The owner of land having, at his own expense, built a chapel, which was used for the purpose of public worship, and the congregation having subscribed a sum of money for the purpose of enlarging and improving the same, he, in consideration that the money so subscribed should be expended for that purpose, demised the premises by lease for twenty-three years, reserving a peppercorn rent during his life, and 10*l.* per annum after his death. A declaration of trust was afterwards executed by some of the lessors, declaring that they would hold the premises in trust for the congregation assembling at the chapel; and that in case the public worship should be there discontinued, then, that they would assign the premises to civil purposes:—Held, that this was a conveyance for the benefit of a charitable use, and therefore void within the 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, s. 1. Held, also, that neither the sum agreed to be expended on the premises, nor the rent reserved at the death of the lessor, could be considered a full consideration paid for the lease, so as to bring the case within the second section of that statute. Held, also, that the declaration of trust, although executed only by some out of the several lessors, was evidence against all of the purpose for which the lease was granted. Doe d. Wellard v. Hawthorn, 2 B. & A. 96.

A conveyance of copyhold lands to charitable uses in the life-time of the party, is equally within the operation of the statute 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, as freeholds, and must, therefore, be executed with the formalities required by that statute; and it seems that a bargain and sale and enrolment cannot be presumed to have been made, even after a long and undisturbed enjoyment. It is doubtful whether it would be sufficient, in the case of copyholds, to declare the uses by a deed, conformably to that statute, and to cause such deed to be enrolled in Chancery. Doe d. Houson v. Waterton, 3 B. & A. 149.

A grant by the crown of the right to lay chains in part of the Thames to moor ships, is an interest in land, and within the statute of mortmain. Negus v. Coulter, Amb. 367.

CLUB AND CLUB HOUSE.

If the rules of a club be contained in a book kept by the master of the club, and accessible to the members, every member of the club must be taken to be acquainted with them. Raggett v. Musgrave, 2 C. & P. 556—Abbott.

Every member of a club who either concurs in, or subsequently assents to, an order for goods, given by one of the members, is liable, unless it appear clearly that the tradesman meant to give credit to that member only; and making him a debtor in the tradesman's books, and sending the bill to him, does not sufficiently show such intention. Delauney v. Strickland, 2 Stark. 416—Abb.

The master of a club-house is the proper person to sue one of its members for the arrears of his subscriptions; and if by one of its rules every member is to be taken as continuing so, unless, he gives previous notice of his intention to discontinue being a member, he is liable to be sued for his arrears of subscription, unless he can prove that he gave such notice. Raggett v. Bishop, 2 C. & P. 343—Abbott.

A club book, kept regularly open in their room, was received as evidence of articles delivered to the members, though the servants who made the entries were not proved dead, or their absence accounted for. Wiltzie v. Adamson, 1 Phil. Evid. 258—Kenyon.

COALS.

The 2 Will. 4, c. 175, (Metropolitan Coal Act) directs, that with any quantity of coals exceeding five hundred and sixty pounds, a paper or ticket describing the quantity, and if any particular sort is ordered or contracted for, the sort of the coals sent by the seller, shall be delivered to the purchaser, or his agent, or servant, before any part of such coals shall be unloaded; that a weighing machine shall be carried with every waggon, cart, or other carriage, and the carman is required to weigh, gratuitously, any sack or sacks of coals which shall be chosen by the purchaser, or his agent, or servant, and if any carman refuses to weigh such sack or sacks of coals as aforesaid, or drives away the wagon, cart, or other carriage before the coals are weighed, or otherwise obstructs the weighing thereof, he is liable to a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds.

In March, 1802, the stat. 3 Geo. 2, c. 26, s. 13, giving a penalty against dealers in coals within the metropolis and ten miles round, for not justly measuring coals sold by the chaldron, according to the lawful bushel directed by the stat. 12 Anne, st. 2, c. 17, s. 11, was a subsisting law; and held, that evidence of such coals proving short upon remeasurement, was admissible to prove the charge of their not having been justly measured. Quære, whether the stat. 3 Geo. 2, c. 26, were a subsisting law after July, 1802, when the stat. 26 Geo. 2, c. 108, was revived by the stat. 42 Geo. 3, c. 89? Warren q. t. v. Windle, 3 East, 205.

A dealer in coals by the chaldron, who sold to another by the chaldron, a certain quantity as and for ten chaldrons of coal, pool measure, without justly measuring the same with the lawful bushel of Queen Anne, was liable to the penalty of 50*l.* imposed by the 13th section of the stat. 3 Geo. 2, c. 26, upon such defaulters who sell coals by the chaldron or lesser quantity without so measuring them. Parish v. Thompson, 3 East, 525.

The offence of selling coals of a different description than those contracted for, upon the stat. 3 Geo. 2, c. 26, s. 4, was complete in the county where the coals were delivered, and not where they were contracted for; the contract not being for any specific parcel of coals, but for a certain quantity of a certain description. But the not justly measuring such coals was a local omission of a local act, required by the 13th section of the act to be performed at the place where the coals were kept for sale, at which place the bushel of Queen Anne was required to be kept and used for the purpose of measuring the coals into sacks of a certain description, in which they were to be carried to the buyer: and, therefore, the offence was local, and must be laid in the county where the coals were put into the sacks without having been so justly measured. Butterfield q. t. v. Windle, 4 East, 385; 1 Smith, 66.

To found an action against the vendor of coals, not having obtained a coalmeter's ticket, for a penalty of 50*l.* on the 19 Geo. 2, c. 25, s. 11, the plaintiff need not proceed to convict the offender before a justice of the peace, though that clause of the act contained the words, "being thereof convicted by the oath of two credible witnesses before one or more justices," &c. For, by the 21st clause, which enacted that all penalties above 5*l.* should be recovered by action in the superior courts, those words must be taken to apply only to the case of the 5*l.* penalty upon the carter, imposed by the same 11th clause. Semble, a coal wagon was within the clause, though the act contained only the words cart or carts. Peto q. t. v. Hague, 1 Smith, 417.

No appeal lies to the sessions against a conviction and commitment in execution for three months of a collier, under the stat. 6 Geo. 3, c. 25, for absenting himself from his master's service; the clause of appeal in that statute excepting an order of commitment; and the order of commitment in question containing a conviction of the collier for an offence within the act. Rex v. Staffordshire (Justices), 12 East, 572.

The 47 Geo. 3, sess. 2, c. 68, recites that the several acts then in force for regulating the vend and delivery of coals, had been found insufficient to prevent the commission of frauds in the vend and delivery of such coals, and that it would tend greatly to facilitate the execution of the purposes intended by the said acts, if the same were repealed, and further and better provisions made for those purposes; and then by section 113 enacts, that the vendor of coals, sold and sent as and for wharf measures, from any ship, &c., or from any wharf, &c., and to be delivered to the purchaser thereof from any cart, &c., shall deliver a printed ticket, and the carman or driver shall deliver the same to the purchaser or his servants, before any part of the coals shall be delivered therefrom. It then gives the form of the vendor's ticket, which is to contain the number of sacks, the name of the coals sent, &c., the name of the vendor, and the name of the labouring meter; and it subjects any vendor of coals who shall not deliver such ticket to a penalty of 20*l.*

Section 29 provides, that all contracts for the sale of coals at the London coal market, shall be signed by the buyer and the factor; and the factor shall deliver a copy of the contract to the clerk of the market; and that the clerk shall enter it in a book. The 23d section makes such entries "evidence in all cases, suits and actions, touching any thing done in pursuance of the act."

Section 116 enacts, that if a purchaser be dissatisfied with the measure of his coals, he shall send a notice to the office of the principal land coal meters, whereupon a meter, within the space of two hours next after such notice left at the office, shall "attend from the office at the house of the purchaser," to remeasure the coals; and sect. 120 imposes a penalty upon the principal meter, if he shall neglect or refuse, within the space of two hours, after the receipt of the notice, to send a meter to the house of the purchaser.

These two sections must be read together, Loader v. Thomas, 3 Y. & J. 525.

Where a factor having coals consigned to him for sale by A., sold the same, and entered the contract in his book as having been made for C.,

(the master of the ship by which they were sent,) and such contract was not signed by the purchaser; but in the copy delivered to the clerk of the market, the purchaser's name, as well as that of the factor, were inserted; and the latter had no authority to insert the name of the master in his contract, but it was a common practice in the coal trade so to do. Quære, whether under these circumstances an action might be maintained, in the name of C. for the price of the coals? Hudson v. Granger, 5 B. & A. 27.

The production of an entry of a contract purporting to be signed by the buyer and factor, is not evidence of the sale in an action brought for the price of the coals, unless the buyer be proved aliunde to have signed the contract. Brown v. Capel, M. & M. 374—Tenterden.

The act makes it imperative on the vendor of coals to deliver a vendor's ticket signed by the meter, and the act having been passed to protect the buyer against the frauds of the seller, a vendor of coals, who had delivered a vendor's ticket to the purchaser, which was not signed by the meter, could not recover the price of coals from such purchaser. Little v. Poole, 9 B. & C. 192.

It is sufficient, to satisfy the words of the 117th section, if the meter leave the office within two hours after the receipt of the notice, and proceed with due diligence to the house of the purchaser, although he do not arrive there within that time. Loader v. Thomas 3 Y. & J. 525.

The penalty of 20*l.* per chaldron for every chaldron of coals of one sort sold as and for another sort, inflicted by the stat. 47 Geo. 3, sess. 2, c. 68, is a penalty exceeding 20*l.* and therefore recoverable in the superior courts, under s. 150 of that statute. Reeve q. t. v. Poole, 4 B. & C. 155; 1 C. & P. 622: S. C. nom. Thompson q. t. v. Poole, 6 D. & R. 29.

In an action of debt, q. t. for selling coals contrary to law, the contract upon which the penalty arises must be truly stated, and any variance is fatal; therefore, where the contract was stated to be with two persons, and in fact it was with those two and another, it was ruled to be a fatal variance, though the declaration stated the exact quantity which the two were to have. Parish q. t. v. Burwood, 5 Esp. 33—Ellenborough.

Where, in a declaration, the defendant is described as a meter for the superintending the delivery of coals, his being a deputy coal meter satisfies that averment. Davy v. Lowe, 5 Esp. 70—Ellenborough.

A person generally employed on commission to buy coals for a retail coal merchant, but who sometimes before the receipt of such orders bought coals, and then let his employer have what he pleased of them, paying him at the same rate as when he had ordered them before hand, is not to be considered, even with respect to the latter coals, as the vendor of them, so as to be liable to the coal meter for the inspection fee under 47 Geo. 3, c. 68, s. 95. Bigg v. Megarey, 1 M. & Rob. 35—Tenterden.

If an agent employed to sell coals make a bargain in his own name with a tradesman to furnish him with coals on credit, for which in return he is to receive goods on credit, and both the coals and goods are delivered; the real seller of the coals may recover the price from the tradesman, if his name be in the ticket sent with the coals as seller, because the tradesman after that is bound to inquire into the nature of the agent's situation, and should not continue to treat him as a principal. Pratt v. Willey, 2 C. & P. 350—Best.

Where the vendor of coals himself inserts in the vendor's ticket the description of them, it is not necessary in an action for penalties under the 47 Geo. 3, c. 68, to produce the ships-meter's certificate, required by the 55th sect. of that statute. Reeve v. Starey, 4 C. & P. 17—Tenterden.

Where several persons in a club join to buy a quantity of coals, and afterwards subdivide their shares, and the coals are delivered to each short of measure, each person cannot maintain an action for the penalty against the seller, for the contract of sale is joint. Everett q. t. v. Tindal, 5 Esp. 169—Ellenborough.

Where a local act for the improvement of a harbour, authorized certain commissioners to make an order for payment of duties on coals brought or delivered within certain limits, and they accordingly imposed a duty of three shillings per chaldron:—Held, that it was payable for coals brought in less quantities than a chaldron. Mills v. Furnel, 2 B. & C. 899; 4 D. & R. 561.

Coals sent from Newcastle to London paid a port duty according to the Newcastle chaldron. Linskill v. Read, Peake's Add. Cas. 68—Kenyon.

I. SEVERAL DESCRIPTIONS, AND HOW CLAIMED.

A claim of a right of common without stint, as annexed to an ancient messuage without land cannot as such exist by law. Benson v. Chester, 8 T. R. 396.

Common appurtenant may be claimed, as well by grant within time of memory, as by prescription; and after an unity of possession in the lord of the land, in respect of which the right of common was claimed with the soil and freehold of the waste, evidence that the lord's tenant of the land had, for fifty years past, enjoyed the right of common on the waste, is evidence for the jury to presume a new grant of common as appurtenant, so as to support a count in an action by the tenant for surcharging the common, declaring upon his possession of the messuage and land, with the appurtenances, and that by reason thereof he was entitled of right to the common of pasture as belonging and appertaining to his messuage and land; and also to support another count, in substance the same, alleging his possession of the messuage and land, and that, by reason thereof, he was entitled to common of pasture, &c. Cowlan v. Slack, 15 East, 108.

A plea of prescription for common in a que estate is good after verdict, though it be not in express terms alleged that the owners of the estate have used it from time immemorial. Clark v. King, 3 T. R. 147.

The plaintiff prescribed for a right of sole pasture "from the feast of St. Thomas until the 18th April," and proved the exercise of the right between those periods:—Held, on motion to set aside a nonsuit, that it was not necessary to allege the right in the pleadings from Old St. Thomas's day. Smith v. Flower, 3 Bing. 401; S. C. nom. Smith v. Fowler, 11 Moore, 264.

Plaintiff in replevin pleaded in bar to an avowry for damage feasant, that the locus in quo, from time whereof, &c. ought to be open and common, "on or before the 15th of October, when the corn was cut and carried, and from thence for a long time, to wit, for three weeks and upwards;" that the plaintiff at the time when, &c. put in his cattle "the same time being when the said field was and ought to be open and common as aforesaid:"—Held, that the plea was bad for uncertainty, even after verdict, the right of common being too generally described, both in its commencement and conclusion. Da Costa v. Clarke, 2 B. & P. 257.

Common for cattle levant and couchant cannot be claimed by prescription, as appurtenant to a house without any curtilage or land. Scholes v. Hargreave, 5 T. R. 46.

Quære, if common appurtenant to a messuage without land may exist? Bunn v. Channen, 5 Taunt. 244.

Semble, common appurtenant may be converted to common in gross, by demising it. Id.

A right of common cannot be reserved in a demise under the word "land." Smith d. Jerdon v. Milward, 3 Dougl. 70.

A right of common (whether appendant or appurtenant not stated in the case) cannot be reserved from the land and converted into common in gross. Id.

By a grant of a manor with an exception of the wastes, they are thereby severed from the manor, though the copyholders continue to have a right of common thereon by immemorial custom; and after a grant of the soil of those wastes to trustees for the use of the copyholders in free socage, the lands, when inclosed, will be freehold and not copyhold. Revell v. Jodrell, 2 T. R. 415.

An ancient deed of feoffment, granting the wastes of a manor to feoffees in trust to permit the tenant and inhabitants, &c. to use and enjoy the same as they had formerly done, or been accustomed to do, must be taken to mean such a right of common as may by law exist, namely, a right of common restricted by levancy and couchancy. Benson v. Chester, 8 T. R. 396.

A copyholder who has common in a waste, without the manor of which his copyhold is parcel, has it annexed to the land, and not to his customary estate, and must prescribe in a que estate, through his lord, for him and all his customary tenants thereof. Barwick v. Matthews, 5 Taunt. 365; 1 Marsh. 50.

And such common, without the manor, is not extinct by enfranchisement of the copyhold, though there be no words of regrant. Id.

And after enfranchisement, the feoffee must prescribe in a que estate of his lord, for himself and his customary tenants, till the time of the enfranchisement, and since that time for the feoffee and his heirs, as appurtenant to the enfranchised tenement. Id.

If a copyholder in the manor of A. has common in the wastes of the same lord's manor of B., for his cattle levant and couchant on his tenement in A., this is a proof that the manors were formerly in different hands; for the estate of the copyholder was too weak to support a grant by the lord to his copyhold tenant of common appurtenant in another manor. Id.

After an easement has been extinguished by unity of possession, a new easement is not created by a grant of a messuage and land with common appurtenant, though those who have occupied the tenement since the extinguishment have always used common therewith. Clements v. Lambert, 1 Taunt. 205.

Otherwise, if it had been a grant of all commons used therewith. Id.

In case of disturbance of common of pasture, plaintiff declared, in respect of a messuage and lands, for common for all his cattle levant and couchant:—Held, that a lease to plaintiff's testator, for years, determinable on lives, of a farm, &c. together with reasonable common of pasture, was sufficient to sustain the right of common alleged in the declaration, and that this right was not destroyed by a subsequent conveyance to the plaintiff in fee of the farm and common of pasture thereto belonging and appertaining; for this operated as a new grant of the common. Doidge v. Carpenter, 6 M. & S. 46. And see Ballard v. Dyson, 1 Taunt. 279.

A prescription for common of pasture, for a certain number of sheep, on A., every year, at all times of the year, is well laid, though the evidence which proves the right of common, proves also that the tenant of a certain farm has a right to have the sheep folded at night on his farm, after they have fed on the common during the day. Brook v. Willett, 2 H. Black. 224.

Where a declaration set out a right of common for all commonable cattle, and it was proved that plaintiff turned out all the commonable cattle he had, but that he had no sheep:—Held, not a fatal variance. Manifold v. Pennington, 6 D. & R. 291; 4 B. & C. 161.

The allegation of a right of common for all the plaintiff's cattle, levant and couchant, is supported, although, according to the evidence, the common is not sufficient to feed all the cattle for any length of time. Willis v. Ward, 2 Chit. 297.

A defendant in trespass cannot plead by way of justification that he was possessed of a right of common over the locus in quo under a deed of grant by a former owner, alleged to be since lost or destroyed by accident and length of time, and therefore not proffered in court, of which the date and names of the parties are unknown. Hendy v. Stephenson, 10 East, 55.

Where one of two adjoining commons, with common of vicinage, was inclosed and fenced off by the owner of the soil, leaving open only a passage sufficient for the highway which led over the one to the other; yet, as the separation was not complete, so as to prevent cattle straying from one to the other by means of the highway, the common by vicinage still continued. Gullett v. Lopes, 13 East, 348.

The plaintiff being possessed of a house and land in E., had for sixty years exercised rights of common in W.; it appeared at the trial that this was done near the boundary of the two commons of W. and E., which lay open and uninclosed, and adjacent to each other, and that the parties exercising the right did not at the time know the exact boundary; that the plaintiff had on the previous inclosure of the common at E., obtained an allotment there in respect of his estate:—Held, that it was properly left to the jury to say, whether the evidence was referrible to an exercise of the right in E., and a mistake of the boundary, or to an exercise of the right in W. Hetherington v. Vane, 4 B. & A. 428.

If to an action of trespass in the common called A., the defendant plead that A. and B. commons lie open to each other, and then prescribe for a right in both commons, the plaintiff must traverse the whole prescription. Moorwood v. Wood, 4 T. R. 157.

In pleading a right to enter a common to dig for and carry away sand and gravel for the repairs of a house, it is necessary to allege that the house was out of repair, and that the party entered for the purpose of digging for and carrying away sand and gravel for the necessary repairs of that house, and that the materials were used for that purpose. Peppin v. Shakespeare, 6 T. R. 748.

Prescriptions and contracts must be proved in the extent alleged; but aliter of torts where the right stated is merely an inducement to the action. Ricketts v. Salwey, 2 B. & A. 360; 1 Chit. 104, 112.

In an action on the case for disturbance of common, where the right is alleged to be in respect of a messuage and land, it is not necessary for the plaintiff to prove the whole of such allegation; and where the plaintiff declared upon a right of common in respect of a messuage and 150 acres of land, with the appurtenances:—Held, that the declaration was divisible, and proof of common right in respect of the land was enough to entitle him to a verdict pro tanto. Id.

In an action for disturbing a common, the plaintiff must prove a right to the same kind of common as that alleged, but need not prove the same title. Id.

Plea to trespass, that an ancient messuage and twelve acres of land were immemorially parcel, and a customary tenement of the manor of A.; and that there is a custom in the manor, "that from time whereof, &c.: the customary tenant of the said customary tenement for all the time aforesaid has had right of common," &c.: replication traversing the custom on such pleadings: the plaintiff may prove that the messuage was built within twenty years, and not upon the site of an ancient house. Dunster v. Tresider, 5 T. R. 2.

The mere exercise of a right of common for more than twenty years, will not of itself authorize the presumption of a grant, if circumstances of great difficulty in the prevention of trespass appear. Dawson v. Norfolk (Duke), 1 Price 246.

II. USER OF COMMON.

The lord of a manor may have, in respect of the waste or common land in his own manor, a right to turn his own cattle upon a common of an adjoining manor. Seston (Earl) v. Court, 5 B. & C. 917; 8 D. & R. 741.

In case of an absolutely stinted common in point of number, one commoner may distrain the supernumerary cattle of another, but not if an allotment is necessary, as where the stint has relation to the quantity of the commoner's land. Hall v. Harding, 1 W. Black. 678; 4 Burr. 2436.

A. being possessed of a quantity of land in a common field, and having a right of common over the whole field, and B. having also a right of common over the whole field, they enter into an agreement, for their mutual advantage and convenience, not to exercise their respective rights for a certain term of years, and each party covenants to that effect. If, during the term, the cattle of B. come upon the land of A., he may distrain them damage feasant; and may, in his replication (in answer to a plea pleaded by B. of his right of common, in bar of the cognizance of A.,) set forth the special circumstances of the agreement and covenants. Whiteman v. King, 2 H. Black. 4.

In case for a surcharge of common, the plaintiff need not show that he turned on any cattle of his own at the time of the surcharge, but only that he could not have enjoyed his common so beneficially as he ought. Wells v. Watling, 2 W. Black. 1233.

In an action on the case for a surcharge of common, the plaintiff may declare generally for the injury, without stating the defendant's right of common. Atkinson v. Teasdale, 2 W. Black. 817; 3 Wils. 278. And see Cheeseman v. Hardham, 1 B. & A. 706.

One commoner, who has surcharged, may nevertheless maintain an action against another for surcharging the common. Hobson v. Todd, 4 T. R. 71.

A commoner may maintain an action on the case for an injury done to the common, by taking away from thence the manure which was dropped on it by the cattle, though his proportion of the damage be found only to the amount of a farthing; at least the smallness of the damage found is no ground for a nonsuit. Pindar v. Wadsworth, 2 East, 154.

The right of commoners in a common may be subservient to the right of the lord in the soil; so that the lord may dig clay-pits there, or empower others to do so, without leaving sufficient herbage for the commoners, if such a right can be proved to have been always exercised by the lord. Bateson v. Green, 5 T. R. 411. And see Place v. Jackson, 4 D. & R. 318. and Clarkson v. Woodhouse, 5 T. R. 412, n.

The occupier of a messuage and lands, who has common in the lord's waste, may set up a custom to cut rushes, as annexed to his right of common. Bean v. Bloom, 2 W. Black. 926.

A commoner cannot justify cutting down trees planted by the lord on the waste, although there be not a sufficiency of common left; but his remedy is by action on the case, or by assize. Kirby v. Sadgrove (in error), 1 B. & P. 13; 3 Anst. 892; 6 T. R. 483.

A custom that all the customary tenants of a manor, having gardens, parcels of their customary tenements respectively, have immemorially, by themselves, their tenants and occupiers, dug, taken and carried away, from a waste within the manor, to be used upon their said customary tenements, for the purpose of making and repairing grass plots in the gardens, parcels of the same respectively, for the improve turf covered with grass, fit cattle, as hath been fit and put at all times of the year, as quantity as occasion hath required as being indefinite and uncertain of the common; and so is a taking and applying such tur making and repairing the bar of, and for the hedges and customary tenements. Wilson 121; 3 Smith, 167.

In an action of replevin for the plaintiff's cattle, the defendant avowed common of pasture, from the to the burgesses of the borough; plaintiff pleaded in bar, that if A. had been accustomed to apply and proper number of herds, things) taking care of the common; and also to appoint each such herd, a reasonable amount of stints of each of such herds, thereon:—Held, sufficient, after it was urged that the number of and the duties required from have been set out with certain Elliott v. Hardy, 10 Moore, 347

Trespass lies for digging up a common. Cooper v. Marsh Same, 1 Burr. 259, 268; 2 Ld. K.

To an action of trespass for entering, and digging up plaintiff's ing up and spoiling the coney a plea of a right of common, that rows were wrongfully, unlawfully newly erected and kept up whereof the said common was spoiled, so that defendant could common, as of right he ought; this in order to abate the said no justification. Id.

III. ENCROACHMENT

An inclosure made from the thirteen years before, and seen by the same lord from time to time, tion made, may be presumed by to been made by license of the lord; cannot be brought against the trespasser, without previous notice to Doe d. Foley v. Wilson, 11 East, 5

If a license be given by a common to build a cottage on a common, he can maintain an action for the encroachment no sufficient commoner remained Reynolds, 12 Price, 724; 1 C. & 1

To trespass on the case by a free right of common against a defendant encroachment, a plea of leave and license to be supported by evidence that the permitted a former encroachment by ant, the plaintiff being then under since, when of full age, countenanced encroachment by expressing his as quiring an increase of the rent or annual acknowledgement paid by the defendant. Id.

Where a cottager occupied a piece of land inclosed from the waste on the side of a turnpike road for more than thirty years, without paying rent, and at the end of that time paid sixpence rent on four several occasions to the owners of the adjoining land:—Held, that this was conclusive evidence of a permissive occupation only, so as to maintain ejectment. Doe d. Jackson v. Wilkinson, 5 D. & R. 273; 3 B. & C. 413.

A cottage standing in the corner of a meadow (belonging to the lord of a manor,) but separated from it and from a high-road by a hedge, had been occupied for above twenty years without any payment of rent. The lord then demanded possession, which was reluctantly given, and the occupier was told that if he were allowed to resume possession, it would only be during pleasure. He did resume, and kept possession for fifteen years more, and never paid any rent:—Held, that the possession was not necessarily adverse, but might be presumed to have commenced by permission of the lord. Doe d. Thompson v. Clark, 8 B. & C. 717.

A., being possessed of a portion of a lawn as a field, over which a right of common existed part of the year took down the customary post and rail fence, containing gaps, through which the commoners' cattle might pass, and built a wall, with a single doorway, at which they might enter and return:—Held, that this was an encroachment. One farthing damages will sustain the verdict for the plaintiff in an action of trespass. Kitchen v. Knight, M'Clel. 373.

Encroachments by the tenant on the waste do not belong to the landlord. Doe d. Colclough v. Mulliner, 1 Esp. 460—Kenyon. But see Doe d. Challenor v. Davies, 1 Esp. 461, and Bryan d. Child v. Winwood, 1 Taunt. 208.

IV. COMMON FIELDS.

By 13 Geo. 3, c. 81, intituled "An Act for the better cultivation, improvement, and regulation of the common arable fields, wastes, and commons of pasture," arable common field lands were to be ordered, fenced, cultivated, and improved in such manner, by the respective occupiers, under such rules, regulations, and restrictions, as three-fourths in number and value, having consent of the owners and tithe-owner, shall at a meeting convened on twenty-one days' notice by writing under their hands, constitute, direct, and appoint.

S. 2 provides, that such rules were not to be in force longer than six years or two rounds of husbandry.

By s. 3, field masters, or field reves, were to be appointed.

By s. 7, the occupiers, at a meeting convened on fourteen days' notice, were to settle the time of opening common field lands.

An averment in a declaration for disturbing the plaintiff's right of common, that the plaintiff was entitled to common of pasture for all his cattle levant and couchant upon his land, is well supported by evidence that the plaintiff was a part owner with defendant and others of a common field, upon which, after the corn was reaped and the field cleared, the custom was for the different occupiers to turn out in common their cattle, the number being in proportion to the extent of their respective lands within the common field; although such cattle were not maintained upon such land during the winter; and although the custom proved was to turn out in proportion to the extent and not to the produce of the land, in respect of which the right was claimed:—Held, also, that it was not necessary to state his right to be with the exception of his own land, but that it was well laid to be over the whole common. Cheesman v. Hardham, 1 B. & A. 706.

V. APPROVEMENT.

By the statute of Merton (20 Hen. 8, c. 4,) and Westminster II., 13 Ed. 1, stat. 1, c. 46, enforced by 3 & 4 Ed. 6, c. 3, lords may approve against their tenants and neighbours, leaving a sufficiency of common.

By 26 Geo. 2, c. 36, the lords and tenants, by mutual consent, might inclose part of any common for the purpose of planting and preserving trees fit for timber or underwood.

By 31 Geo. 3, c. 41, these powers are declared to be vested in tenants for life, or years determinable on lives.

Any person who is seised in fee of part of a waste within a manor may approve, leaving a sufficiency of common, though he is not the lord of the manor. Glover v. Lane, 3 T. R. 445.

A custom for one commoner to inclose against another, is good. Barber v. Dixon, 1 Wils. 44.

A custom for the lord to grant leases of the waste of a manor, without restriction, from the time of the original grant, cannot be presumed, and is bad in point of law. Badger v. Ford, 3 B. & A. 153.

A custom for the lord, with the assent of the homage, to grant part of the waste in severalty, in exclusion of the commoners, is good. Buckett v. Winmill, 2 Camp. 261—Macdonald.

A custom for the lord, with the consent of the homage, to grant parts of a common for building, is good. Folkard v. Hemmett, 5 T. R. 417, n.

A custom for the owners of a waste to set out to the owners of certain ancient messuages portions of the waste to be by them held in severalty for getting turves therein, and when the portions set out are cleared of turves, for the owners of the waste to inclose and approve such portions, to hold at their pleasure in severalty for ever, freed of all common of turbary and pasture, is good. Clarkson v. Woodhouse, 5 T. R. 412, n. And see Bateson v. Green, 5 T. R. 411; Place v. Jackson, 4 D. & R. 318.

It was at one time held that there could be no approver in derogation of a right of common of turbary. Grant v. Gunner, 1 Taunt. 435.

But semble, that a lord may approve against a right of common of turbary. Arlott v. Ellis, 7 B. & C. 346; 9 D. & R. 897; 9 B. & C. 671.

But the lord has not an unlimited right to inclose parts of a common without the consent of the homage. Id.

In pleading the right of a lord to inclose parts of a common, it must be stated that there was sufficiency of common left for the commoners. Id.

But this right of the lord may be given in evidence on an issue, joined on the right of common over the lo. in quo, at the time the trespass was committed, and need not be specially pleaded. Id.

The lord, or those claiming under him, must prove that there was a sufficiency of common left; and, in the case of a common of turbary, that what was left was also conveniently situated for the commoners. Id.

When a part and not the whole of a common had been inclosed, a commoner, in asserting his right of common, may throw down the whole of the hedge erected on the common, and a plaintiff, in trespass, cannot recover against him on a new assignment, because he had thrown down more than sufficient to admit his cattle. Id.

On a similar issue, the plaintiff may give in evidence a custom for the lord to approve parts of the common, and that the locus in quo had been unapproved. Id.

Quære, whether the defendant was entitled to have the issue on the right of common of turbary found for him? Id.

Upon an issue of de injuriâ between the lord and the commoner, the plaintiff cannot give in evidence that there was sufficiency of common left. D'Ayrolles v. Howard, 3 Burr. 1385.

Trespass for entering plaintiff's close, and consuming the herbage: plea, that the locus in quo was part of a common, over which defendant had a right of common for sheep: replication, that the locus in quo had been inclosed by the consent of the lord: on special demurrer to the replication, it was held bad, for not going on to state, that after the inclosure there was sufficient common left for the commoners. Rogers v. Wynne, 7 D. & R. 521.

The lord of a manor, or his grantee, may inclose and approve part of a common against tenants having common of pasture, notwithstanding they have also some other right on the common, as a right to dig sand, &c. if he leave sufficient common of pasture. Shakespear v. Pep-pin, 6 T. R. 741.

A custom of inclosing for the tenants in a manor, does not abridge the common law right of the lord to inclose. Duberley v. Page, 2 T. R. 392, n.

The lord has no right, under the statute of Merton, to inclose and approve the wastes of a manor, where the tenants of a manor have a right to dig gravel on the wastes, or take estovers there. Id.

Evidence that the lord of a manor has, from time to time, erected houses to the exclusion of those claiming a right of common, is not to be placed in competition with evidence of long enjoyment, coupled with an acknowledgment of the defendant, the lord of the manor, by deed; that the confirmation of the commoners was essential to an alienation of part of such common. Drury v. Moore, 1 Stark. 102—Ellenborough.

INCLOSURE.

Construction of Acts generally.

By the 41 Geo. 3, c. 109, (the general inclosure act, to which local inclosure acts usually refer,) the course of proceeding applicable to inclosures is pointed out.

Inclosure bills are not to be considered as merely private acts. Riddell v. White, 1 Anst. 281.

The 6th sect. of 41 Geo. 3, c. 109, limiting the time for making claims before the commissioners, not only applies to allotments in respect of land, but extends to tithes also; and the lessor of the plaintiff, who had neglected to make a claim for tithes within the time required by that section, could not prevail in ejectment against a party in possession of the allotment, actually set out in respect of the tithes, although the party under whom he claimed title had also omitted to make a claim according to the statute. Doe d. Watson v. Jefferson, 9 Moore, 260; 2 Bing. 118.

A corporation, who were mentioned in an enclosure act as lords of the manor, and received under it an allotment in lieu of their manorial rights, are bound by the act. Phillips v. Maile, 4 M. & P. 770; 7 Bing. 133.

By a local inclosure act, it was provided that whenever the office of commissioner should be vacant, the lord of the manor, with the major part in value of the proprietors of lands and common rights in the parish, (such value to be ascertained according to their respective assessments in the last rates made for the relief of the poor of the parish, in the said parish,) present at a public meeting, should elect another. The office of commissioner having become vacant, a new one was elected by the lord of the manor and the major part in value of the proprietors of lands at a public meeting. No one there disputed that he had such majority, but no reference was made to the poor-rates:—Held, that, nevertheless, the appointment was valid. Doe d. Harris v. Bodenham, 9 B. & C. 495.

The stat. 52 Geo. 3, c. 71, for the better cultivation of navy timber in the forest of Woolmer, in the county of Southampton, which (s. 8.) enacts, "for the regulating and securing to the several persons now having right of common of pasture in and over the said forest, the power of cutting peat and turves within such parts of the said forest as shall not be inclosed by virtue of the act, that, after the enclosure shall be made and completed, it shall be lawful for all persons having right of common in the said forest, to cut and take peat and turves in any part of the said forest not inclosed under the act, without payment of any fee or sum of money to any keeper or other person having the care or superintendance of the said forest for taking the same," merely regulates the previous existing rights, but confers no new right, and authorizes those only who before had the right of estovers and common of pasture to cut without payment of fees, for the necessity of the dwelling-house, in respect of which the original right existed. Att. Gen. v. Gauntlett, 3 Y. & J. 93.

An inclosure act authorized the commissioners to award lands in exchange for other lands:—Held, that they were authorized in awarding lands given in exchange partly for other lands and partly for money. Doe d. Suffield (Lord) v. Preston, 7 B. & C. 392; 1 M. & R. 713.

The commissioners under an inclosure act were required to allot the lands directed to be inclosed unto the several proprietors thereof, in such shares, quantities, &c. as they should adjudge to be a just compensation for their several and respective lands, rights of common, &c. therein; and were empowered also to set out, allot, and award any lands, &c. within the parish, of A., "in lieu of or in exchange for any other lands, &c. within the said parish, provided that all such exchanges should be ascertained, specified, and declared in and by the award to be made by the consent of the owners of the lands exchanged." The commissioners awarded a certain allotment to A. B., "as a compensation for his open fields, lands, and rights of common, and an old inclosure given up by A. B. to be allotted by the commissioners in exchange:"—Held, that the commissioners had not pursued the powers vested in them by the act, and that A. B. could not make a good title to the allotment. Wingfield v. Tharp, 10 B. & C. 785.

2. Expenses.

The commissioners under an inclosure act are liable to suits at law, and in equity for acts which are done not according to their authority. Speer v. Cawter, 17 Ves. jun. 216.

A bond taken by the commissioners appointed under an inclosure act, to indemnify themselves against the expenses of a suit brought to try the right to allotment made by them, and in which they are, according to the directions of the Act, made defendants, is not void; though there be a fund provided out of which such expenses may in some cases be satisfied; at least if the commissioners doubt whether the case in question be one of those cases. Iles v. Boxall, 2 B. & P. 89.

By a local act, it was provided, that, out of the lands to be allotted, the commissioners should allot a part, in their judgment sufficient, when sold, to defray the expenses of carrying the act into effect; and if it should prove insufficient, the deficiency should be made up by the persons interested in the lands to be inclosed, and should be paid in such proportions, and at such times, as the commissioners should direct. The commissioners having set apart and sold a portion of the lands to be allotted in order to defray the expenses, found that there was a deficiency, and made a rate upon the parties interested in order to provide for that deficiency. One of those parties having refused to pay:—Held, that the commissioners might bring ejectment under 4 Geo. 3, c. 109, s. 29, to recover the land allotted to him in respect of which the rate was imposed. Doe d. Harris v. Bodenham, 9 B. & C. 495.

By another clause it was enacted, that the commissioners should once a year lay their accounts before a justice of the peace, and get them allowed by him, and that no charge or item in such account should be binding on the parties concerned, or valid in law, unless the same should have been duly allowed by such justice; and an appeal was given against the accounts or rates to be made by the commissioners. The commissioners, instead of laying their accounts before a justice annually, had done so only twice in fourteen years, and had not done so for several years before the rate was made, but there never was any appeal against the accounts or the rate:—Held, that the commissioners had power to make such rate, notwithstanding their neglect in passing their accounts. Id.

By a local inclosure act, it was directed that the costs of carrying the act into effect, and all the charges of the commissioners and the persons employed by them, should be borne by the parties interested in the lands to be allotted, &c. as the commissioners should direct, and should be levied according to the general inclosure act; and the commissioners were required once a year at least to lay before a justice of the county, a statement of all the sums by them received and expended, or due to them for their own trouble and expense; and it was enacted that no charge or item in such account should be binding or valid, unless the same should have been duly allowed by such justice. Commissioners under the act levied by distress a sum of money, part of which was due for their own trouble and expense during several preceding years, and had not been accounted for annually, nor until a short time before the issuing of the distress warrant: Held, that the accounting was not a condition precedent to the levy, and that the distress was legal. Smith v. Jones, 1 B. & Adol. 328.

Where an inclosure act empowered the commissioners to make a rate to defray the expenses of passing and executing the act; and provided that persons advancing money should be repaid out of the first money raised by the commissioners; and expenses were incurred in the execution of the act before any rate was made; to defray which expenses the commissioners drew drafts on their bankers, requiring them to pay the sums therein mentioned on account of the public drainage, and to place the same to their account as commissioners; and the bankers for six years continued to advance considerable sums by paying these drafts:—Held, that the commissioners were personally responsible to the bankers for the amount of such drafts; and the latter, having from time to time made half-yearly rests in the account, and charged interest on the balance there struck; and the commissioners having consented to that method of keeping the accounts:—Held, that this mode of charging interest half-yearly was not illegal or usurious. Eaton v. Bell, 5 B. & A. 34.

Where under a local inclosure act, three commissioners and their successors were appointed, and it was provided, that all acts or things done by any two of the commissioners should be valid; and it was further provided, that if any of them should die, or become incapable to act for the space of forty days, when occasion should require his or their attendance for carrying the act into execution, a new commissioner or commissioners should be elected and appointed in his or their stead:—Held, that an assessment made by two commissioners, after the death of one of the three appointed by the act, and before the election or appointment of a successor, was invalid, although such assessment was made for the purpose of carrying the act into execution. Doe d. Nicholson v. Middleton, 6 Moore, 532; 3 B. & B. 214.

By the same act the commissioners were required to make a statement or account of all monies received, expended, or due to them, in the execution of such act; and to lay the same before a magistrate, who was to examine and balance the same; and no charge or item in such account was to be binding, unless allowed by such magistrate. Quære, whether the commissioners, having made an assessment for the costs of carrying the act into execution, could proceed for the recovery of such assessment before it was allowed by a magistrate. Id.

But it was held that such clause did not take away an appeal given by a subsequent clause, "to the party grieved by any thing done in pursuance of that or the General Inclosure Act, other than and except such determinations as were by that or the General Inclosure Act declared to be binding, final, and conclusive," the allowance of the accounts by a magistrate not falling within that exception. Rex v. Cumberland (Justices), 1 B. & C. 64.

3. Roads.

Making and stopping up.—By the 41 Geo. 3, c. 109, s. 8, the commissioners are authorized to set out and appoint the public carriage roads and highways through and over the lands and grounds to be inclosed; and to divert, and turn, and stop up, any of the roads and tracks upon and over all or any part of the said lands and grounds; provided that, in case the commissioners shall be empowered by any local act to stop up any old or accustomed road, passing or leading through any part of the old inclosures in such parish, the same shall in no case be done without the concurrence and order of two justices, and their order shall be subject to an appeal to the quarter sessions.

By the 11th section it is provided, that all roadways, &c. which shall not be set out as by the act is directed, shall be for ever stopped up and extinguished.

Under the 8th section, the commissioners are authorized to stop up or divert footways as well as carriage roads; and the proviso at the end of the section is not confined to carriage roads, but extends to every species of ways; and, therefore, where the commissioners were empowered by a local inclosure act to stop up all ways passing over the lands to be inclosed, as well as ways passing through old inclosures in the parish, it was held, that in order effectually to stop up a public footway passing partly over the lands to be inclosed, and partly over an old inclosure, it was necessary for them to have the concurrence and order of two justices; and no such order or concurrence having been obtained, it was held, that a footway which the commissioners ordered to be stopped up, had not been effectually stopped, but continued a public footway. Logan v. Burton, 8 D. & R. 299; 5 B. & C. 513.

A local inclosure act empowered the commissioners, with the concurrence and order of two justices of the peace, to stop up and discontinue roads, &c. On a special case, stating that an old footpath had been omitted by the commissioners in preparing a map of roads, &c. set out:—Held, that the old way was not stopped up and extinguished, according to the true construction of the acts of parliament, by the commissioners and two magistrates making and signing an order confirming the map; an express order of two magistrates being indispensably necessary to the stopping up of roads, whether they were public carriage roads, or private, or bridle and foot roads: and that merely not setting it out, is not sufficient to extinguish it. Harber v. Rand, 9 Price, 58.

The plaintiff having an allotment made to him by a commissioner, under an inclosure act, of land, over which the defendant had a private right of way before the passing of the act, but which way was not noticed or described amongst those set out by the commissioner appointed for executing that act, (the operation of which, as to the powers of setting out or stopping up roads, was left to the General Inclosure Act, 41 Geo. 3, c. 109,) may, under the 11th section of the latter statute, justify the stopping up of such way without any directions from the commissioner for that purpose in the award, or any other road being set out or appointed in lieu of it. White v. Reeves, 2 Moore, 23.

A rejoinder to a replication in trespass for stopping up a private way under an inclosure act, alleging that the commissioner did not direct the way to be stopped up, or give any orders relating to the same, or, by his award, set out, or appoint any other way in lieu of it, is bad for duplicity. Id.

An old footway passed from a public highway over wastes and old inclosures into another public highway. By an award of the commissioners under a local act for inclosing the wastes, the part of the waste over which the footway ran was allotted; but the footway was not mentioned in the award, nor was any new way set out therein. No power to stop up ways over old inclosures was given by the particular inclosure act:—Held, that the old footway was not extinguished by the allotment. Thackrah v. Seymour, 1 C. & M. 18.

By a clause in an inclosure act, a commissioner was empowered to stop up any way, provided it was done by the order, and with the concurrence of two justices; and such order was to be subject to an appeal to the quarter sessions, in like manner, and under such forms and restrictions as if the same had been originally made by such justices; and by a subsequent clause, any party aggrieved might appeal at any time within six months next after the cause of complaint had arisen under the act; the commissioner with the concurrence and order of two justices, stopped up a road without giving the public notices required by the 55 Geo. 3, c. 68, s. 2:—Held, that a party aggrieved might, under these circumstances, appeal at any time within six months. Rex v. Townshend, 5 B. & A. 420.

Quære, whether it be necessary for a commissioner to give such notices as are required by the general act, where roads are stopped up under the provisions of a private or local inclosure act? Id.

Where a private act reserved to the lord all mines, &c. and liberty of laying such wagon ways, &c. as might be necessary or convenient for the full and complete enjoyment thereof: and trespass was brought for laying a wagon way over one of the allotments in an improper manner:—Held, that the real question was, whether such wagon way had been laid in such a manner as a person of reasonable or ordinary skill would have laid it; and such as a prudent person would have adopted if he had been making the road over his own land, and not over that of another. Abson v. Fenton, 1 B. & C. 195.

Allotments were set out under an inclosure act to a party claiming them, and possession given in or about 1817. There was no road to them, nor any access but through allotments made, or land sold under the act to other persons. On motion, in 1829, for a mandamus to the commissioners who had not yet published their award, to set out an occupation road to the first-mentioned allotments, the court held that the application came too late. Rex v. Cockermouth Inclosure, 1 B. & Adol. 378.

Where a public footway over crown land is extinguished under an inclosure act, but the public continue for twenty years afterwards to use the way, such user is not evidence of a dedication of the way, to the public, unless it appears to have had the consent of the crown. Harper v. Charlesworth, 6 D. & D. 572; 4 B. & C. 574.

It seems that an indictment against the commissioners under an inclosure act, for not obeying an order of sessions, directing them to set out a road as a public road, would not be such a remedy to the party, supposing him entitled to have the road so set out, as would make the court refuse to interfere by mandamus. Rex v. Dean Inclosure, 2 M. & S. 80.

But a mandamus was refused to commissioners, for not laying out public roads according to an act of parliament. Anon. Loft, 189.

Expenses of making.]—By 41 Geo. 3, c. 109, s. 10, the commissioners are empowered to set out private roads, which, when set out, are to be made and kept afterwards in repair at the expense of the owners and proprietors of the lands inclosed.

Commissioners who had made private roads under the authority of that and a private inclosure act, (which said nothing about private roads,) had no power to make a rate for reimbursing themselves the expenses incurred. Falmouth (Earl) v. Richardson, 5 D. & R. 664; 3 B. & C. 837. And see Rex v. St. Benedict, 4 B. & A. 447.

Where commissioners, by an inclosure act, were empowered (inter alia) to make roads, and to defray the expense by a rate on the several proprietors, and they executed their award as to the allotments before the roads were completed, or sufficient funds were raised for that purpose:—Held, that they might afterwards make a rate to defray the expense of completing the roads. Haggerston v. Dugmore, 1 B. & A. 82.

Where an inclosure act gave the commissioners power to set out and make roads, &c. and directed that the expenses of making and repairing those roads, and all other expenses, should be borne by the proprietors in certain proportions, to be ascertained by the commissioners in one general rate, and then gave an appeal to the sessions in all cases where the parties should think themselves aggrieved: it was held, that an objection to the rate on account of the commissioners having expended money on an improper object, could not be tried in an action of trespass, but that the party aggrieved must appeal to the sessions. Bonnell v. Beighton, 5 T. R. 182.

The commissioners appointed by a local act, which enacts that the private roads set out by them should be repaired by such person or persons as they should award, have no power to impose on the parish at large the burden of repairing. Rex v. Cottingham, 6 T. R. 20.

Rights afterwards.]—An inclosure act, authorizing commissioners to make roads through inclosed lands, and declaring that the persons having common rights over such lands should be entitled to the herbage of the roads in such manner as the commissioners should award, does not authorize them to sell the herbage by auction or otherwise, to one individual commissioner. Raimes v. Robinson, 2 Chit. 501.

An inclosure act having directed that the allotments made by the commissioners, should forever remain for the benefit of the appointees:—Held, that an award and assignment of the herbage of a certain close to the surveyors of the highways and their successors, for the benefit of the parish of B. though bad as a common law conveyance, the appointees not being a corporation, was yet good as a parliamentary declaration of the persons entitled to take the same, as if the terms of the award had been specifically enacted; and the lord of the manor, in whom the fee of the soil remained, is a trustee for the surveyors of the highways for the time being. Johnson v. Hodgson, 8 East, 38.

to be inclosed, is not conclusive of the fact, as to what were the boundaries previous to such determination. Rex v. St. Mary, Bury St. Edmund's, 4 B. & A. 462.

Where the commissioners, with special powers to ascertain and fix boundaries were directed to insert in their award a description of such boundaries, corresponding with one to be advertised; but upon the award being made, it was found that the description in the award varied from that which had been advertised:—Held, that the award was not final, because the commissioners had not pursued their powers. Rex v. Washbrook, 7 D. & R. 221; 4 B. & C. 732.

The court would not consolidate several feigned issues to try the boundary of a manor, where they were empowered to do so by an inclosure act, as it appeared the different plaintiffs had conflicting interests. Cranmer v. Pennington, 5 Taunt. 167.

Upon an indictment against the parish of H. for not repairing a highway, an award made by commissioners under an inclosure act, which awarded the highway to be in a different parish, was holden not to be admissible evidence for the defendants, without showing that the commissioners had given the previous notices required by the act, before they ascertained the boundaries; it appearing that the usage had not been pursuant to the award, the defendants having since the award, as well as before, repaired the highway. Rex v. Haslingfield, 2 M. & S. 558. And see Maule v. Stowell, 15 East, 99.

Where in an action of replevin for taking the plaintiff's cattle, the defendant avowed the taking, alleging that the cattle were damage feasant on his soil and freehold; and the plaintiff claimed under J. S. who had a manor in the parish of A., and the defendant had a manor in the adjoining parish of B., and J. S. had immemorially exercised acts of ownership over the locus in quo, and the defendant had also exercised such acts, but not to so great an extent as J. S.; and an act of parliament was passed for the inclosure of waste land in A., in which J. S. was stated to be the owner of a manor in A.; but no mention was made in the act of the parish of B., nor of any claim of J. S. in respect of property there; and by an adjudication of the quarter sessions under the act, the locus in quo was found to be in the parish of B., and the judge left it to the jury to say, whether it was in J. S. or the defendant:—Held, that it was properly left, and they having found a verdict for the defendant, the court refused to disturb it, although it was insisted that it should have been left for them to say, whether the parishes and manors were co-extensive and contiguous, and as there was no mention in the inclosure act for the parish A., of J. S. having any property in the adjoining parish of B., it was sufficient to warrant the jury to infer that the manor of J. S. did not extend into the latter parish. Lester v. Kemp, 9 Moore, 65; 2 Doug. 30.

the boundaries of the manor, over and above the allotment awarded to him by the act in respect of his right as lord of the manor. Arundell v. Falmouth, (Viscount,) 2 M. & S. 440.

An owner of the soil sufficiently answers the description of lord of the manor, to take an allotment under an inclosure act, although the manor be, to other purposes, extinct. Smith v. Smith, 9 Price, 101.

Where by the terms of an inclosure act for inclosing the wastes of a manor, a certain portion was to be given to the lord in lieu of his right and interest in the soil, and the residue was to be allotted to the several tenants in fee, discharged from all customary tenures, &c.: a saving clause reserving to the lord all seigniories incident to the manor, and all rents, fines, services, &c., and all other royalties and manorial jurisdictions whatever, will not reserve mines under those allotments to the tenants; though it appear that there was a subsisting lease of such mines at the time the act passed, granted by the lord of the manor. Townley v. Gibson, 2 T. R. 701.

An inclosure act recited that the Duke of N. was lord of a barony and of manors in which certain wastes were situate, and, as such lord, was entitled to the soil and royalties belonging to the said manors; and that he and other owners of lands within the barony were also entitled to right of common on the wastes. It then directed the commissioners to set out to the duke an allotment in respect of his right of soil, and afterwards to allot the residue of the wastes to him and other persons entitled to common, in certain proportions, according to a rate already charged upon the lands in respect of which such common was claimed. Allotments were made to the duke accordingly. The lands in respect of which in part his allotments were given were exempted from all tithes by a modus. In an action brought for tithes of corn grown upon the allotment given in lieu of the duke's right in the waste, it was left to the jury whether the modus had extended to that right, and they found that it had:—Held, that the question was properly left, for that the duke's right upon the waste, though it could not strictly be a right of common appurtenant or appendant to land which was the duke's own, was yet treated by the act as a quasi right of common annexed to the land, and that it might, as such, be legally comprehended within the same modus:—Held, also, that the modus, as it covered all tithes both on the demesne land and common before the inclosure, covered likewise the tithes of any crop (as grain) raised afterwards upon the allotment given in lieu of common. Astle v. Wilkinson, 3 B. & Adol. 152.

6. Allotments in lieu of Tithes.

An inclosure act empowered commissioners to allot to the rector of the parish of W. corn &c. such lands within the township of S., and of the titheable parts of the township of W., as should (quantity, quality, and situation considered) be equal in value to two-fifteenth parts of the titheable places of the last-mentioned lands and grounds, in lieu of tithes belonging to the rector, and arising within those lands and grounds. Another clause saved to all persons, their heirs, &c. (except the persons to whom any allotment should be made by virtue of the act, in respect of the interest or property for which such allotment should be made,) all such estate and interest as they had in respect of the waste lands before the passing of the act. The commissioners allotted to the rector, lands in W., lands in S., and lands in A.; such lands were more than two-fifteenths of the lands inclosed in S. and A., but less than two-fifteenths of the lands inclosed in W., S., and A. No one of the allotments was expressed in the award to be in lieu of the rector's tithes in W.:—Held, that the commissioners had not made the rector any allotment in lieu of his tithes in W., and that his right to tithes in kind there was reserved to him by the saving clause. Cooper v. Walker, 6 D. & R. 31; 4 B. & C. 36. And see Chatfield v. Ruston, 5 D. & R. 675; 4 B. & C. 863.

Where, under an inclosure act, the tithes payable in respect of certain old inclosures were extinguished, and in lieu thereof a corn rent substituted, which was directed to be paid for ever afterwards to the impropiator and vicar, by the person who for the time being should be in the possession or occupation of the land, out of which the rent should be issuing; and a power of distress was given for the recovery thereof, the same as for rent service or other rent in arrear; and for several years part of such land remained uncultivated, untenanted, and wholly unprofitable to the owner, who during that time resided on another estate; and he afterwards demised the land to another tenant, who entered and occupied, and brought it into cultivation:—Held, that during the time the land was unoccupied and uncultivated, the landlord was in the legal possession thereof within the meaning of the act, so as to subject him to the payment of the corn rent in arrear; and the tenant coming in under him was liable to be distrained upon for such payment. Newling v. Pearce, 2 D. & R. 607; 1 B. & C. 437.

An inclosure act directed that the commissioners should set out, allot and award certain portions of lands out of the commons to be inclosed, to the impropriate rectors and curate, in lieu of all great and vicarial tithes; and the commissioners were then required to distinguish by their award, the several allotments to such rectors and curates respectively, and the same allotments were thereby declared to be in full satisfaction and discharge of all tithes:—Held, that the tithes were not extinguished until the commissioners had made their award. Ellis v. Arnison, 5 B. & A. 47; 1 B. & C. 70; 2 D. & R. 161.

A ditch which from time immemorial has been the only boundary between a common and adjoining township, is a fence within the meaning of the General Inclosure Act, 41 Geo. 3, c. 109. Therefore, where the issue was, whether a certain allotment was bounded by a sufficient fence within the meaning of a local inclosure act, which required "that the allotments in lieu of tithes should be inclosed and fenced on all such parts and sides as should not be directed to be fenced by any other proprietor, or as should not adjoin to any inclosed land, or be bounded by any river or other efficient fence; and the proof was, that part of the locus in quo was bounded by an old deep ditch:—Held, that this was a sufficient fence within the meaning of the statute. Id.

Where, to an action of covenant for not setting out tithes of certain garden ground, the defendant pleaded the above act, by which the plaintiff received an allotment of waste lands in the parish in lieu of tithe, but omitted to allege that the commissioners under the act had made their award in pursuance thereof; and after a finding for the defendant by the jury upon an issue of fact, the court entered judgment for the plaintiff non obstante veredicto. Ellis v. Arnison, 3 D. & R. 27.

By an inclosure act, referees were appointed to ascertain the average price of corn, in the week after the close of Easter next after the expiration of fourteen years after the division and allotments under the inclosure act were finished, and the exact amount of a yearly corn rent in lieu of tithes was to be declared by an order of quarter sessions. The referees delivered their report into the court of quarter sessions, who ordered it to be filed:—Held, that this was not an order as required by the statute, declaring the exact amount of the yearly corn rent in the manner therein directed. Bendshye v. Pearce, 4 Moore, 99; 1 B. & B. 460.

The allotments were made and finished in September, 1799, and the commissioners made their award on the 20th of October, 1800, and application was made at the Easter sessions, 1814. Quære, whether this was premature within the meaning of the act? Id.

The referees delivered their report into the court of quarter sessions, who ordered it to be filed:—Held, that the commissioners under the act, having made minutes of their proceedings in writing, no parol evidence could be admitted to show when the division and allotments were made and completed, as such minutes were neither produced, nor proved to have been destroyed. Id.

Where commissioners, under an inclosure act of 1769, were to make allotments to persons possessing interests in the contiguous townships of A., B., and C.; and they made allotments to a rector in B. and C., in respect of tithes and glebe to which he was entitled in those townships, and in A., in respect of glebe to which he was entitled in A., but omitted to make any specific allotment in A. in respect of tithes to which he was there entitled:—Held, as the act contained a saving clause for all persons other than those to whom allotments or compensations should be made in respect of their several interests, that the rector was not barred from suing for his tithes in 1825, although the award was to be final unless appealed against in six months. Thorp v. Cooper (in error), 5 Bing. 116; 2 M. & P.

245; 2 Y. & J. 445: S. C. nom. Cooper v. Thorpe, 1 Swans. 92.

The award would not be vitiated by error in the allotment. Id.

The act having directed the commissioners, in estimating the proportion, to have regard to quality, quantity, and situation, deficiency in quantity is not proof of error. Id.

A mandamus was granted to the commissioners of an inclosure act, to inquire whether there was any modus. Anon. 2 Chit. 251.

But the court will not grant the writ where discretion was given to commissioners under an inclosure act, and they had exercised it, and no ground was shown that they had acted wrongfully. Rex v. Flockwold Inclosure, 2 Chit. 251.

7. Allotment to Commoners.

Rights of the Parties.—The owner of a tenement may have two distinct rights of common for his cattle levant and couchant upon such tenement upon different wastes in different manors under several lords; and therefore an allotment under one inclosure act in lieu of his right of common upon one of such wastes, will not do away or lessen his claim for an equal allotment with other commoners under a subsequent act for inclosing the other waste. Semble, aliter, if the different wastes had appeared to have been originally holden under the same lord. Hollingshead v. Walton, 7 East, 485.

If a person who has common within the manors of A. and B. for all his cattle levant and couchant on his tenement in A., receives under an act for inclosing the wastes in A. an allotment in satisfaction of his common in A., he is nevertheless entitled under an act for inclosing wastes in B. to an allotment thereof in respect of his common in B., and that to the same extent as if he had never had any common or allotment in A. Barwick v. Matthews, 5 Taunt. 365; 1 Marsh. 50.

And though the estate in respect of which he claims be partly enfranchised, and becomes freehold, it does not extinguish his right as to that part. Id.

Where allotments were made and awarded to W. L., in respect of several customary estates, of which he was seised in fee according to the custom of the manor, under an agreement between the lord of the manor and the commissioners, and an award made thereon, which were confirmed by an inclosure act, and which agreement contained a clause saving to the lord all mines, and all royalties and privileges in tam amplo modo as he had enjoyed the same within the ancient customary tenements, and the award contained also a clause, saving to the lord seignories and royalties incident to the manor, and the act saved to him seignories, and all rents, services, courts, &c., and all other royalties, jurisdictions, and pre-eminences incident to the manor, in tam amplo modo as he might have enjoyed the same in case the act had not been made; and also contained a clause that nothing should alter or annul any settlements, &c. affecting the lands to be inclosed, but that the several allotments should be held by the several persons to whom allotted, to the same uses and for the same estates, and subject to such limitations, &c. as the lands in respect of which such allotments were made were limited:—Held, that the allotments so made were freehold and not customary estates; and therefore were not within the custom of the manor, that customary estates were not devisable by will. Doe d. Lowes v. Davidson, 2 M. & S. 175.

The lord of a manor, by a copy of court roll, granted an ancient tenement to A., B. and C., for life, successively, according to the custom of the manor. A. died in 1825, and B. 1826, leaving C. surviving. After the grant, an act passed for inclosing the waste lands of the manor, enacting that all persons having rights of common over the waste lands should give the commissioners a written statement of their claims, and that the determination of the commissioners should be final; that the commissioners should allot the waste lands among all persons and proprietors interested therein in respect of their ancient tenements, and that the act should not extend to alter or annul any will or settlement of the lands intended to be inclosed, but that the lands allotted should, immediately after such allotment, enure to the same uses and purposes as the tenements in respect of which the allotments should be made then were, or would have been if the act had not passed. Neither A. nor C. made any claim before the commissioners; B. did make a claim, and the commissioners awarded allotments to B. and to the lord, according to their respective rights and interests in respect of the ancient tenement:—Held, that the claim by B. enured for the benefit of all parties interested in the ancient tenement, and that the award vested the legal estate in the allotment in A., B. and C. successively. Doe v. Hellard, 4 M. & R. 736; 9 B. & C. 789.

Where a right of common was awarded by the commissioners under an inclosure act, by which the award of the commissioners was declared to be final, unless appealed from by an action upon a feigned issue to be brought at the next or following assizes:—Held, that after the expiration of the time limited for disputing the award, the original right of common could not be called in question. Phillips v. Maile, 4 M. & P. 770; 7 Bing. 133.

Where lands are allotted under an inclosure act, in respect of rights of common appurtenant to other lands, of which the land tax has been redeemed, the land tax does not attach upon the allotment. Boehm v. Wood, 1 Turn. & Russ. 334.

Where commissioners, under an inclosure act, awarded that certain persons, entitled to a right of common in certain commonable lands, "should for ever thereafter use and enjoy the said commonable place as a common pasture, exclusive of all others whatsoever:"—Held, that the right of the commoners was still subservient to the right of the lord to take stone, it appearing, that, both before and since the award, the lord had exercised that right; and that an action was not maintainable against his lessee, although the soil had latterly been subverted to an unusual extent: it seems, however that if the lord wantonly and unnecessarily exercise manorial rights, to the injury of the commoners' pasture, he is liable to an action. Place v. Jackson, 4 D. & R. 318.

When vested.]—By the General Inclosure Act 41 Geo. 3, c. 109, the legal title to an allotment is not acquired until the execution and proclamation of the commissioners' award; and where a local act directed that the commissioners, by notice, might cause all rights of common to be extinguished, and might then allot the waste land amongst the proprietors, and that the owners might fence their allotments after they had been marked, staked out and confirmed, and before the signing the award, and might also, within three months before the execution of the award, sell and convey their interests in the allotments, the commissioners being thereby authorized to allot to the purchasers, and the latter, after the execution of the award, to hold the allotted lands in such manner as the vendor would have done if there had been no sale, provided, where the allotments were copyhold, that the deed should be inrolled in the court rolls of the manor, and that the purchaser should be admitted tenant thereto at the same time as the other allottees of copyhold lands, viz., after the execution of the award:—Held, that this authority to inclose and so to enjoy in severalty, and the power to sell and convey, might well (considering the language in which that power was given) be enjoyed and exercised without the legal seisin of the land; and that therefore, these provisions, not sufficiently countervailing those of the General Inclosure Act, the legal freehold did not pass to the allottee till after the execution and proclamation of the award. Farrer v. Billing, 2 B. & A. 171.

Where commissioners under an inclosure act made an allotment in respect of R.'s lands, in 1824:—Held, that the allotment passed by a subsequent conveyance of the land in 1824, although the commissioners' award was not executed till 1827. Doe d. Dixon v. Willis, 5 Bing. 441; 3 M. & P. 24.

By 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 23, s. 1, landlords may enter upon land allotted, and distrain for rent, notwithstanding the commissioner's award shall not be executed.

By s. 2, they may also bring actions for injuries.

Sec. 3, provides that the right of appeal against the award is not to be taken away.

Specific performance of a contract for sale of an allotment under an inclosure act was decreed, before the award was made, where the act expressly enabled a sale, and declared the conveyance valid before the award, and the purchaser had notice of the circumstances. Kingsley v. King, 18 Ves. jun. 207.

8. Award.

Form.]—No technical form is necessary in the award of commissioners of inclosure; but if they substantially pursue their powers in shutting up old roads, those roads effectually cease. Pick v. Clarke, 2 W. Black. 1318.

The preparation of plans and maps for the purpose of carrying an inclosure into effect, is no evidence of an allotment under the act, which requires an appeal against an allotment to be made within six months after the cause of complaint has arisen; and it suffices to appeal within six months from the making of the conclusive allotment. Rex v. Middlesex (Justices), 1 Chit. 366.

Stamps and Inrolment.]—An award made by commissioners under an inclosure act, which stated an exchange of lands authorized by the act, need have only an award stamp, and does not require an ad valorem stamp. Doe d. Suffolk (Lord) v. Preston, 7 B. & C. 392; 1 M. & R. 713.

By 41 Geo. 3, c. 109, s. 35, awards are to be inrolled in one of the courts at Westminster, or with the clerk of the peace of the county.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 87, all awards already made, but not inrolled, are declared valid; and any proprietor may cause inrolment to be made.

9. Appeal.

A private inclosure act, which gives an appeal to the quarter sessions within four months after the cause of complaint shall have arisen, to the party grieved by any thing done in pursuance of that or of the General Inclosure Act (other than and except such determinations as are by that or by the General Inclosure Act declared to be binding, final, and conclusive,) does not give any appeal against their determination to a party complaining that the commissioners have omitted to set out a particular road as a public road; and supposing it did, yet he must appeal within four months, and cannot after that time, when the commissioners set out the road as a private road, appeal against that determination; his cause of complaint being, that it is not set out as a public road, and not that it is set out as a private road. Rex v. Dean Inclosure, 2 M. & S. 80.

By an inclosure act, an appeal was given to the next sessions within six months after the cause of complaint; an appellant moved the court of sessions in due time, to receive and register his appeal to the next sessions, which was refused: and the court of K. B. would not grant a mandamus to the justices at the sessions to receive it. Rex v. Derbyshire (Justices), 4 T. R. 488.

By 51 Geo. 3, c. 61, (inclosure act,) the party aggrieved by any thing done in pursuance of the act, may appeal to the quarter sessions within six calendar months after the cause of complaint. The commissioners in 1812 made an allotment upon the map to the vicar, in lieu of his tithes, which the vicar inspected at a meeting held November, 1812, and appointed an agent, who attended a subsequent meeting, when an alteration was made in the map, which the agent approved, and it was understood that all objections to the vicar's allotments were reconciled. In November, 1813, the commissioners gave notice that they had ordered all tithes, &c. to cease from the 29th of September then last:—Held, that the vicar was not out of time to appeal to the next quarter sessions after that notice. Rex v. Gloucestershire (Justices), 3 M. & S. 127.

An appeal to the next sessions after an inclosure, made by virtue of an inquisition taken on a writ of ad quod damnum, is too late, if those sessions be not the next after the inquisition taken, and entered, and recorded at the sessions: therefore, where the sessions dismissed such appeal as being out of time, the court of K. B. refused a mandamus to them to enter continuances, &c. Rex v. Bucks (Justices), 2 M. & S. 230.

Where a clause in a private inclosure act, in which the general inclosure act (41 Geo. 3, c. 109,) was recited, gave an appeal to any person aggrieved by any thing done in pursuance of that act, in all cases, "except as to such acts, determinations, or proceedings of the commissioners, as by the general inclosure act were directed to be final, binding, and conclusive;" and an order was made by a commissioner and a magistrate, jointly, for stopping up a private road, set out under the local act:—Held, that an appeal lay to the sessions against such order, because it was not an order of the commissioner alone, but of him and a magistrate together; and there being no words contained in the general inclosure act, which rendered the decision of the commissioner and justice final and conclusive, or that an order of a commissioner should be final, as far as regarded private roads. Rex v. W. R. Yorkshire (Justices), 3 D. & R. 306; 2 B. & C. 228.

An inclosure act gave to the party aggrieved a right of appeal for any thing done in pursuance of the act, or of the recited general inclosure act, on giving to the commissioner and to the parties concerned, ten days' notice in writing. Notice of appeal against an order ascertaining the boundaries between two townships, was served on the commissioner, but not on the lady of the manor, who was a party materially concerned in the question:—Held, that the notice was insufficient; although the general inclosure act authorized the commissioner to ascertain the boundaries between the several parishes, and gave a right of appeal on giving notice to the commissioner only. Rex v. Lancashire (Justices), 1 B. & A. 630.

Under an act, which requires an appeal against an allotment, to be made within six months after the cause of complaint has arisen: it suffices to appeal within six months from the making of the conclusive allotment. Rex v. Middlesex (Justices), 1 Chit. 366.

10. Issues to try Rights.

By most of the inclosure acts, the rights of parties, in case of dispute, are directed to be tried upon feigned issues, in order to obviate the expense and annoyance consequent upon each individual being allowed to try his rights by an action.

By 51 Geo. 3, c. 30, "any person dissatisfied with the determination of the commissioners, may bring an action against the person in whose favour such determination shall have been made; and if it shall appear that the party claiming is entitled to a qualified or less interest, the jury may declare the same on their verdict, to be indorsed on the postea, in addition to the verdict given on the issue joined; but the costs of such action shall abide and be determined by the verdict given upon the issue joined."

An action having been brought against defendant for claiming a right of common in respect of ninety-one acres, and upon the general issue, (the declaration consisting only of one count,) there was a verdict for plaintiff as to thirty acres, and for defendant for the residue, and an indorsement on the postea, that the jury found the right of common in respect of sixty acres, &c.:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to general costs. Durham v. Hertford (Marquis), 3 M. & S. 323.

An inclosure act directed that the parties who were dissatisfied with the determination of the commissioners, might bring actions to try their rights, adding, "that if the verdict should be in favour of the commissioners' determination, the costs should be borne by the plaintiff; and if against such determination, then by the proprietors at large:" a proprietor brought an action, claiming nine distinct rights, and recovered for three only:—Held, that he should only have his costs on those issues found for him, and that the defendant should have his costs of the other issues. Braithwaite v. Bradford, 6 T. R. 599.

1. By Letters.

In order to constitute an agreement by letter, the answer to the written proposal must be a simple acceptance of the terms proposed, without the introduction of any new or different terms. Holland v. Eyre, 2 Sim. & Sta. 194.

Letters passing between buyer and seller of goods, do not constitute a note in writing under the statute of frauds, if they vary in their description of the terms of the contract. Smith v. Surman, 4 M. & R. 455.

Where a letter contains the entire terms of an agreement for the purchase of lands, it is not necessary for the plaintiff to prove that he accepted the terms. If it require the plaintiff to supply a term in the agreement, there must be a special acceptance in writing supplying that term, in order to take the case out of the statute of frauds. Boys v. Ayerst, 6 Madd. 316.

A. by letter offers to sell to B. certain specified goods, receiving an answer by return of post: the letter being misdirected, the answer notifying the acceptance of the offer arrived (two days later than it ought to have done) on the day following that when it would have arrived, if the original letter had been properly directed. A. sold the goods to a third person:—Held, that there was a contract binding the parties, from the moment the offer was accepted, and that B. was entitled to recover against A. in an action.

for not completing his contract. Adams v. Lindsell, 1 B. & A. 681.

In an action for the breach of an agreement in not delivering a certain quantity of coals, a letter from the defendant, containing the terms of the contract between him and the plaintiff, concluded by stating, as to the proposition therein contained, that it was desirable that he should have an answer per return, as he could have a vessel to charter at the price stated, which would not wait any longer for the defendant's answer; and failing her, he feared he should not be able to get another; and there was no averment in the declaration, that the plaintiff had sent an answer per return:—Held, that this amounted to a mere request, and formed no part of the contract, and consequently that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Johnson v. King, 2 Bing. 270; 9 Moore, 482.

In order to form a contract by letter, of which the court will decree a specific performance, nothing more is necessary than that the amount and nature of the consideration to be paid on one side, and received on the other, should be ascertained, together with a reasonable description of the subject-matter of the contract. Kennedy v. Lee, 3 Mer. 441.

The person entitled to the reversion in fee of a house, expectant upon a term vested in a lessee who has demised the premises for a portion of his term to a sub-lessee, agrees by one letter to grant that sub-lessee an extension of lease at a certain yearly rent; and in another letter, fixes the time, when the term which he thus purposes to grant, is to expire; this is a valid agreement within the statute of frauds, and, under it, the sub-lessee has a right to a lease which shall commence from the expiration of the existing term. Verlander v. Codd, 1 Turn. & Russ. 353.

An agreement to purchase was established upon a correspondence referring to the terms of such agreement. Ogilvie v. Foljambe, 3 Mer. 53.

Quære, whether letters referring to other letters which have been suppressed, but not containing in themselves certain terms of agreement, can be made the foundation of a specific performance? Collett v. Butler, 3 Swanst. 402.

If the terms of a contract are proposed and accepted by letters, but are afterwards varied by the contract as drawn up, the construction of the contract cannot be affected by the letters. Farquharson v. Barston, 4 Bligh, N. S. 560.

An agreement to employ the plaintiff in a particular situation, cannot be inferred from a direction upon a letter addressed by the defendant to the plaintiff in that character, the letter relating to the quantum of salary only. Chiodi v. Waters, 1 Stark. 335—Ellenborough.

2. Acceptance of Offer.

Where the defendant offered to purchase a house from plaintiff, and to give him six weeks for a definitive answer:—Held, that before the offer was accepted, the defendant might retract it at any time during the six weeks. Routledge v.

Grant, 4 Bing. 653; 1 M. & P. 717; 3 C. & P. 267.

Where defendant offered to purchase on certain terms, "possession to be given on or before 25th July," and plaintiff agreed to the terms, and said he would give possession on the 1st August:—Held, no acceptance of defendant's offer. Id.

A. having proposed to sell goods to B., gave him a certain time at his request to determine whether he would buy them or not; B., within the time, determined to buy them; and gave notice thereof to A.; yet, held that A. was not liable in an action for not delivering them, for B. not being bound by the original contract, there was no consideration to bind A. Cooke v. Oxley, 3 T. R. 653.

A. and B. being together, B. offers goods to A. at a certain price, and gives A. three days to make up his mind. Before the three days expire, B. offers the goods to C. A. cannot declare against B. as upon an absolute bargain; and semble, that B. had a right to retract. Head v. Diggon, 3 M. & R. 97.

A. having a horse to sell, agreed to let B. have him for thirty guineas, if he liked him, and that he should take him a month upon trial: B. accordingly took him, and kept him about a fortnight, and then told A. he liked the horse, but not the price, and A. desired him, if he did not like the price to return the horse; B. however kept him ten days more, and then returned him, but A. refused to receive him, and brought an action on the contract for thirty guineas, the price of the horse:—Held, that he could not maintain such action. Ellis v. Mortimer, 1 N. R. 257.

3. Mutuality.

The want of mutuality in a contract is sufficient ground to refuse a specific performance. Howell v. George, 1 Madd. 1.

A written agreement "to remain with A. B. two years, for the purpose of learning a trade," is not binding, for want of an engagement in the same instrument by A. B. to teach. Lees v. Whitcomb, 5 Bing. 34; 2 M. & P. 86; 3 C. & P. 269.

It will not support a declaration, stating the consideration to be, that C. D. would "receive" A. B. "into his service." Id.

The written undertaking of one party will be enforced, although the other party is not mutually bound by writing. Palmer v. Scott, 1 Russ. & Mylne, 391.

For, an agreement signed by one party only is good to charge him within the statute of frauds. Seton v. Slade, 7 Ves. jun. 289.

And semble, that a contract signed by one party only may be enforced in equity by the other. Martin v. Mitchell, 1 J. & W. 426.

Where a contract is signed by one party only, the other, by filing a bill for specific performance, makes it binding on himself. Id.

Where a contract has been signed by one party only; quære, whether he is not at liberty to recede from it, until the other party has done some act to bind himself? Id.

If a written agreement is not signed by the defendant, the plaintiff need not give it in evidence although he has signed it, and it relates to the matter in issue between the parties. Wilson v.

performed within a year. Mavor v. Pyne, 11 Moore, 2; 3 Bing. 285; 2 C. & P. 91.

An agreement to hire a carriage for more than one year, determinable by the custom of the trade, at any time, upon payment of a year's hire, is an agreement not to be performed within one year from the making thereof, and must be signed by the party to be charged therewith. Burch v. Liverpool (Earl), 4 M. & R. 380; 9 B. & C. 392.

Where an agreement is to be performed on a contingency, which may happen within the year after it is made, and it does not appear on the face of the agreement that it is to be performed after the year, it does not fall within the statute: where, therefore, a debtor to the plaintiff, stated to the plaintiff's solicitor, on being applied to for payment, that he, the debtor, could not pay then or during his lifetime, but that he had provided for payment by his will, and directed his executors to pay:—Held, to be binding on the executors, although there was no promise in writing by the testator to pay. Wells v. Horton, 12 Moore, 176; 4 Bing. 40.

An agreement to leave money by will need not be in writing, although uncertain as to the time of performance. Fenton v. Emblers, 3 Barr. 1278; 1 W. Black. 353.

But, an agreement to enter into partnership for ten years must. Williams v. Jones, 7 D. & R. 548; 5 B. & C. 108.

A contract for a year's service to commence at a subsequent day, is a contract not to be performed within the year, and by the statute must be in writing; therefore, no action can be maintained for the breach of a verbal contract made on the 27th May, for a year's service, to commence on the 30th June following. Bracegirdle v. Heald, 1 B. & A. 722.

A wharfinger having acknowledged that certain timber on his wharf was the property of the plaintiff:—Held, that he was thereby estopped from disputing the plaintiff's title in trover; and that it was not necessary that the acknowledgment should be in writing. Gosling v. Birnie, 5 M. & P. 160; 7 Bing. 339.

(b) Contract executed.

Where an agent who received instalments of annuities for his principal, paid over instalments he had not received, and charged commission on them, it was held that the agreement to be responsible to his principal for the annuities need not be in writing, as the contract was executed when he paid over the money he had received. Shaw v. Woodcock, 7 B. & C. 73.

The services of a clerk had been continued for some years. In an action for dismissing before the end of a current year, it was held that the agreement need not be in writing. Buston v. Collyer, 4 Bing. 309; 2 C. & P. 607.

Plaintiff having distrained, for rent in arrear, goods which the tenant was at that time about to sell, agreed with defendants to deliver up the goods, and permit them to be sold by one of the defendants for the tenant, upon defendants' joint undertaking to pay the plaintiff all such rent as should appear due to him from the tenant; and he thereupon delivered up the distress:—Held, that this agreement was not within the statute of frauds. Edwards v. Kelly, 6 M. & S. 204.

Semble, that it is no variance if the declaration on an executed contract state the consideration as executory. Payne v. Wilson, 1 M. & R. 708; 7 B. & C. 423.

Declaration on a promise to pay the debt of another, in consideration that plaintiff would consent to suspend proceedings. The writing proved was, "the plaintiff's having at my request consented to suspend proceedings, &c.:"—Held, no variance. Id.

3. Signature.

Provided the name be inserted in an instrument, in such a manner as to have the effect of authenticating it, the requisition of the act with respect to signature is complied with, and it does not matter in what part of the instrument the name is found. Ogilvie v. Foljambe, 3 Mer. 53.

A letter from a mother to her son, beginning, "My dear Robert," and concluding, "Your affectionate mother," is not signed so as to constitute a binding agreement on the part of the mother, within the intent of the statute of frauds. Selby v. Selby, 3 Mer. 2.

There must be a signing, either by an actual signature of that name, or something intended by the writer to be equivalent to a signature; such as a mark by a marksman, &c. Id.

Though an agreement be not signed, the party is bound by a letter containing the terms, which by the contents can be connected and identified with the agreement. Coles v. Trecothick, 9 Ves. jun. 250.

Quære, whether bonds of arbitration are sufficient to take the case of an agreement out of the statute. Cooth v. Jackson, 6 Ves. jun. 17.

If an agreement purport, by the words attached to the signature of a particular person, to have been signed by that person on the behalf of another having an interest, but not being a party, such person may be examined to prove that he signed in reality for a different person named as a party, and whose signature was not to the agreement, and that the statement of his having signed for the first-mentioned person was written by mistake. Rumball v. Wright, 1 C. & P. 589—Best.

A paper written by a party is admissible in evidence against such party, although it is signed by a third person. Alexander v. Brown, 1 C. & P. 288—Best.

III. VALIDITY GENERALLY.

Contracts not prohibited by positive laws, nor adjudged illegal by precedent, may nevertheless be void as against principle. Jones v. Randall, Cowp. 39.

the benefit of it, subject to all rights, known or unknown at the time, which are against the contract. Clarks v. Johnson, Loft, 756.

The courts will relieve a man who comes to overthrow an illegal contract, although particeps criminis, but not if he comes to demand performance. Walker v. Chapman, Loft, 342.

The test, whether a demand connected with an illegal transaction, is capable of being enforced at law, is, whether the plaintiff requires any aid from the illegal transaction to establish his case. A. bets an illegal wager of twenty-five guineas with B. on a horse-race, of which C., at his own request, stakes ten. A. wins, and pays C. ten guineas, in the expectation of receiving the whole amount of the bet from B. B., however dies, and A. never receives it:—Held, that A. could not recover back the ten guineas which he had paid to C., because he could not establish his claim, without going into proof of the illegal transaction, in which both were equally engaged. Simpson v. Bliss, 2 Marsh. 542; Taunt. 246.

Overruling the decision at nisi prius, where it was held that he could recover. Simpson v. Bliss, Holt, 237—Gibbs.

An illegal contract, if rescinded as to part, must be rescinded in toto. Therefore where goods were delivered under an agreement to take a specific parcel of copper money in payment, a delivery of such copper, though in fact counterfeit money, will be a bar to an action. Alexander v. Owen, 1 T. R. 225.

A contract may continue to carry interest, though the security itself be void. Robinson v. Bland, 1 W. Black. 262.

Quero, whether a legal contract giving a right of action, can arise out of illegal transactions, as by payments made on account of another in settling differences upon transactions within the stock-jobbing act? Ex parte Daniels, 14 Ves. jun. 191.

The plaintiff may recover upon actions arising out of illegal transactions, which are malum prohibitum only, unless it be directly upon the contracts, in which case he is precluded. Ex parte Bulmer, 13 Ves. jun. 213.

The court of Chancery has jurisdiction to declare an instrument forged, and to order it to be delivered up. Peaks v. Highfield, 1 Russ. 559.

IV. VALIDITY AS REGARDING PUBLIC POLICY.

1. Compromise of Legal Proceedings.

Civil Proceedings.—Where two parties come to an arrangement, and one is ignorant of his rights, the agreement is not in general binding upon him. Baddley v. Oliver, 1 Dowl. P. C. 598; 1 C. & M. 219.

If a person after due deliberation, enter into an agreement for the purpose of compromising a claim made bona fide, to which he believes himself entitled, the agreement; and a court of equity, without considering whether he was in truth liable to the claim, will compel a specific performance. Atwood v. —, 1 Russ. 353; 5 Russ. 149.

If a declaration aver, that in pursuance of an agreement, an action was discontinued, evident that since the agreement no steps had been taken in the cause, is not sufficient to support the allegation. Fenabone v. Hoard, 1 M. & P. 191; 3 C. & P. 190.

Such an averment cannot be supported without proof of a rule to discontinue. Id.

Seemle, that it cannot be made one of the terms of the compromise of a suit, that the solicitor's bill shall be paid without taxation. Miles v. River, Jacob, 307.

An undertaking to pay the costs of the plaintiff's attorney in an action still pending, in consideration that the plaintiff will, with the consent of that attorney, give an authority to the defendant to pay over the debt sued for, to a creditor of the plaintiff, is not binding. Taylor v. Watson, 4 M. & R. 259.

Where a person having a clear title to 10l. for rent, and claiming the property of the land, is induced, by the representations of two professional persons, that he had no right to either rent or land, to agree to accept 10l. in full, for rent and land: the court will not entertain a bill for the specific performance of the agreement. Staley v. Robinson, 1 Russ. & Mylne, 527.

A warrant of the Lord Chancellor for the commitment of a person, appointed a receiver by the court of Chancery, for the non-payment of a balance certified against him, is only in the nature of a civil execution: therefore where D., being appointed receiver in a suit in Chancery, was in custody of the officer under such warrant, and the defendant, in order to procure his discharge, joined with him as surety in two promissory notes to the plaintiff, who was a party to the suit in Chancery, and his solicitor, who sued out the warrant, for the amount of the debt and costs, and was thereupon discharged by the direction of the solicitor:—Held, that the discharge was a legal consideration for the notes, and that an action might be maintained on them; and although there were other parties to the suit in Chancery, who did not concur in the discharge: and therefore though D. remained liable to be taken again, yet the consideration had not failed; and that it was no objection to the validity of the notes, that the sum given to cover costs exceeded the sum due, no fraud being intended. Brett v. Clay, 16 East, 293.

Securities given to persons who would be prejudiced by the passing of a private bill in parliament, in consideration of their withdrawing their opposition to it, are illegal on the ground of public policy. Vauxhall Bridge Company v. Spicer (Earl), Jacob, 64; 2 Madd. 357.

Bankruptcy and Insolvency.—A bankrupt who had obtained a verdict in an action brought by him to try the validity of his commission, pending a rule nisi for a new trial, confessed judgment to one of his assignees, who was a petitioning creditor for a sum of money in discharge of his debt, in consideration of his not opposing the bankrupt's petition for a supersedeas; the court set aside the judgment on the bankrupt's application. Thomas v. Rhodes, 2 Rose, 104; 3 Taunt. 478.

If an insolvent debtor apply for his discharge, a security obtained by a creditor, who threatens an opposition, to cease opposing is void. Rogers v. Kingston, 10 Moore, 97; 2 Bing. 441.

A creditor of an insolvent withdrew his opposition, after stipulating for, and receiving a promissory note for the amount of his debt; the insolvent, after his discharge, was arrested for non-payment of this note, but settled the action by giving a warrant of attorney, in which his brother joined him, to confess a judgment for the debt, costs, and interest, to be paid by instalments; the court, on motion, set aside this warrant of attorney, after payment of the first instalment. Id.

Where an insolvent petitioned the Insolvent Court to be discharged under the 1 Geo. 4, c. 119, and a creditor gave notice of his intention to oppose him, on the ground that the debt was fraudulently contracted; but, to induce the latter to withdraw his opposition, the insolvent agreed to execute a warrant of attorney for the debt within three days after his discharge, and in the mean time to give a promissory note of a third person for the amount, which was to be delivered up on the execution of the warrant of attorney; and the insolvent was discharged on the delivery up of the note: the court set aside such warrant of attorney, and the judgment entered up thereon, on the ground that the agreement on which they were founded was contrary to the policy of the act as it enabled the creditor to take to himself a large portion of the future effects of the insolvent, which were intended by the legislature to be distributed amongst all his creditors. Jackson v. Davison, 4 B. & A. 691.

An agreement by which A., an opposing creditor of B., an insolvent, undertakes to withdraw his opposition, on the terms that A. shall be sole assignee, and shall in that capacity receive a certain sum within a given time, is contrary to public policy, and therefore void. Murray v. Reeves, 2 M. & R. 423; 8 B. & C. 421.

Where a debtor applied to take the benefit of the Insolvent Act, and one of his creditors, an attorney, by threats of opposition, obtained from him promissory notes for the amount of his debt, and the creditor afterwards indorsed one of them to a bona fide holder, without notice of the circumstances under which it had been obtained: the debtor being afterwards arrested on the note, and having given a bail bond, the court directed the bond to be given up to be cancelled, on filing common bail; but refused to make the attorney deliver up the other notes, though part of the debt for which they were given was work and labour done as an attorney, the notes having been obtained in his character of creditor and not of attorney. Kay v. Masters, 1 Dowl. P. C. 86.

An agreement by a debtor with his creditor, not to entitle himself to take the benefit of the Lord's Act, will not be supported by a court of law. Parish v. Wolstoncroft, 3 Smith, 51.

Criminal Proceedings.—It is not illegal to compromise indictments for misdemeanours. Elworthy v. Bird, 9 Moore, 430; 2 Bing. 258; 13 Price, 222; 2 Sim. & Stu. 372.

Secus, as to indictments for felony. Id.

The construction to be put upon an agreement to discontinue an indictment is, that a nolle prosequi should be regularly entered by the attorney-general. Id.

Where, in a declaration for the breach of an agreement, in which one of the considerations for the defendant's undertaking was, that all indictments and actions which were then pending should be discontinued; it was averred, that all such indictments and actions had been wholly discontinued, and not further proceeded with; and it appeared that three indictments which were pending against the defendant at the time the agreement was executed, had been afterwards moved by certiorari into K. B., and that the prosecutors had taken no steps by nolle prosequi, or otherwise, towards putting an end to such indictments:—Held, that the word "discontinuance" meant putting an end to the indictments and actions in a legal way; and that the plaintiffs, not having shown that this had been done, they could maintain no action on the agreement. Id.

Quære, whether such an agreement be legal? Id.

A note given for compounding a misdemeanour, may be recovered at law. Drage v. Ibberson, 2 Esp. 643—Kenyon.

There is no objection to the legality of an agreement to pay money in consideration of putting off the trial of an indictment. Harvey v. Morgan, 2 Stark. 17—Ellenborough.

Upon a conviction before magistrates for a breach of the excise laws, a warrant to levy the penalties was directed to an excise officer, who, by way of indulgence to the party, took from him a promissory note for the amount, without any previous authority from his superiors:—Held, that it was a valid security. Sugars v. Brinkworth, 4 Camp. 46—Ellenborough.

In an action against magistrates for trespass and false imprisonment, they pleaded a charge preferred before them for an offence against the Toleration Act, (1 W. & M. c. 18, s. 18,) in disturbing a dissenting congregation, and a commitment for want of surties under it to the next sessions: and that before the next sessions, it was agreed between the prosecutor and the plaintiff, with the consent of the defendants, that the prosecution should be dropped, and the plaintiff be discharged at the sessions for want of prosecution; that the plaintiff was accordingly then and there so discharged, in full satisfaction and discharge of the assault and imprisonment:—Held, this was no legal satisfaction; for either the agreement was illegal, as stifling a prosecution for a public misdemeanour, and thereby impeding the course of justice, or the satisfaction, if any, was moving from the prosecutor only, and not from the justices; their authority over the prosecution being at an end after the commitment of the plaintiff, and their consent afterwards to the prosecutor dropping the prosecuting being a mere nullity, and no satisfaction for a prior injury, if any, received by the plaintiff from their act. Edgcombe v. Rodd, 5 East, 294; 1 Smith, 515.

A person, who had voluntarily offered to pay a sum of money for the use of the poor of the parish, in order to avoid a prosecution by a magistrate, upon a charge of having instigated an escape, which offer was consented to by the magistrate, and the money accordingly paid by the party to the master of the workhouse for the use of the poor, may, at any rate, countermand the application of the money before it is so applied, and recover it back in an action for money had and received. Taylor v. Lendoy, 9 East, 49.

A security for the fair expenses of the prosecution, agreed to be given, at the recommendation, of the court of quarter sessions, by a defendant who stood convicted before them of a misdemeanour, in ill-treating his parish apprentice, for which the parish officers had been bound over by recognisance to prosecute him under the stat. 32 Geo. 3, c. 57; and the giving of which security, was considered by the court, in abatement of the period of imprisonment to which he would otherwise have been sentenced; is legal. Beeley v. Wingfield, 11 East, 46.

A promissory note given by a defendant in prison after conviction for misdemeanour, and before sentence, in pursuance of a recommendation of the court to compromise, is valid; although the court is not apprized of the terms of the compromise, and although the costs of the prosecution are included in the note. Kirk v. Strickwood, 1 Nev. & M. 275; 4 B. & Adol. 421.

An agreement to forego a criminal prosecution is illegal, but the plaintiff may recover on a bill given by the defendant for the costs of a civil proceeding against a third person, and the amount of a composition with him, although the plaintiff had instituted a prosecution against such third person, which he afterwards abandoned, unless it be expressly proved that the abandonment of the prosecution formed part of the consideration of the bill. Harding v. Cooper, 1 Stark. 467—Ellenborough.

An agreement by the payee of a bill of exchange to discharge a person liable upon it, in

A bond given by way of indemnity, to one who had given his note for 350*l.* to a prosecutor on an indictment for perjury, to induce him to withhold his evidence, is void, ab initio, and the facts may be specially pleaded. Collins v. Bleantern, 2 Wils. 341, 347.

A bond, conditioned (on the obligee's agreeing not to prosecute) to remove certain public nuisances, and not erect any others of the same kind, is good. Fallowes v. Taylor, 7 T. R. 412; Peakes' Add. Cas. 155.

The nuisance must be entirely done away. Id.

Seemle, that a private person should not take a bond conditioned to remove a public nuisance. Id.

2. Trading Combination.

An agreement entered into by a number of dyers, pressers, bleachers, &c. at a public meeting, that they would not receive any more goods to be dyed, &c., but on condition that they should respectively have a lien on those goods for their general balance, is good in law; and any one who after notice of it delivers goods to either of these persons, must be taken to have assented to these terms; and consequently cannot demand goods so delivered to any such dyer, &c., without paying the balance of his general account. Kirkens v. Shawcross, 6 T. R. 14.

An agreement between two coachmasters not to oppose each other, and to charge the same prices, is legal. Hearn v. Griffin, 2 Chit. 407.

An agreement between several persons jointly interested, to horse a coach, each of them one stage, on the road from L. to B.; and that, in case of default, one of them should sue the defaulter for a penalty, which when recovered, was to be divided amongst the non-defaulters:—Held, to be such an agreement as an action might be maintained on against the defaulter, by one of the parties appointed by the others to sue, and that the others need not join in the action. Radenhurst v. Bates, 3 Bing. 468; 11 Mass. 421.

An agreement between three persons carrying on the trade of trunk and box makers, and travelling by themselves and their servants into various parts of England to vend trunks and boxes, to divide, and not interfere with certain districts of the several counties, boroughs, towns, and villages, as set forth by them on Bowles's post map of England; and time, during their joint lives, any person or persons shall set and oppose any or either of the parties, to meet together and enter into such mutual agreement, to the intent therein agreed to, as shall be beneficial to the mutual interests of the parties, it being their declared intentions not to do any act prejudicial to the interests of each other, but to aid and assist each other in their said trade and business to the utmost of their power; does not operate in general restraint of trade, and, as an agreement contemplating a partial restraint only, if founded on a sufficient and valid consideration, is good: therefore, counts setting forth the same, and averring, by way of breaches, that the defendant travelled in the districts of the plaintiff, and sold boxes therein, were held good on general demurrer. Wickens v. Evans, 3 Y. & J. 318.

3. Prohibited Trades.

In a lease for years of a messuage and premises in a public street, the lessee covenanted that he, his executors, &c. should not permit or suffer any person or persons to inhabit the same, who should carry on therein certain enumerated trades or businesses, "or any other trade or business that might be, or grow or lead to be, offensive, or any annoyance or disturbance, to any of the other tenants of the lessor, &c." The lessee granted an underlease of the premises (subject to the like covenant) to A., who opened them as a public-house, in the business of a licensed victualler, which was not one of the businesses enumerated in the covenant:—Held, that such an act did not amount to a breach of covenant. Jones v. Thorne, 3 D. & R. 152; 1 B. & C. 715.

Where a lessee of a house and garden for a term of years, covenanted with the lessor not to use or exercise, or permit or suffer to be used or exercised, upon the demised premises, or any part thereof, any trade or business whatsoever, &c. without the license of the lessor, &c.; and afterwards, without the license of the lessor, assigned the lease to a schoolmaster, who carried on his business in the house and premises:—Held, that the assignment was a breach of this covenant, and the lessor entitled to re-enter, under a proviso for re-entry for non-performance of covenants. Doe d. Bish v. Keeling, 1 M. & S. 95.

A covenant in a lease that the lessee shall not exercise the trade of a butcher upon the premises, is broken by his selling raw meat by retail, although no beasts were there slaughtered. Doe d. Gaskell v. Spry, 1 B. & A. 617.

On a covenant that (in consideration of a weekly payment to A. and his executors for a term certain) A. shall not exercise a particular trade, the executors of A. are not bound to abstain from exercising it. Cook v. Calcraft, 2 W. Black. 856; 3 Wils. 380.

4. Trading within a limited Distance.

Contracts by bond or otherwise, entered into between two persons, to restrain one of them from setting up, or exercising a particular trade, within a certain limited district, and for a valuable consideration, are valid. Cheesman v. Nainby (in error,) 1 Bro. P. C. 234; S. P. Morris v. Colman, 18 Ves. jun. 438.

A covenant to restrain a person from exercising a trade, is not illegal, if it be not to the general prejudice of the public, and the consideration be reasonable. Horner v. Ashford, 11 Moore, 91; 3 Bing. 322.

A declaration stated that the defendant, for the considerations mentioned in the deed declared on,) which the plaintiff brought into court,) covenanted to submit to certain particular restraints in the carrying on of his trade, which covenant he afterwards broke:—Held, on general demurrer, that this was a sufficient statement of consideration for the restraint agreed to. Id.

An agreement in partial restraint of trade can only be supported by an adequate consideration. Thus an agreement by which a brass-founder was to work exclusively for certain factors, for his and their lives, they not undertaking to find him full employment, but on the contrary reserving liberty to employ others to execute their orders in his trade, if they should think fit, and to put an end to the agreement at three months' notice, is bad, though London and six miles round were left open to the party to take orders from. Young v. Timmins, 1 Tyr. 226; 1 C. & J. 331.

A note given by a party for damages arising by his working for others, contrary to an agreement which was in restraint of trade, and therefore bad, is bad for want of consideration. Id.

And cannot be set off in an action at the suit of the assignees of a party, for work done. Id.

A trader may sell a secret in his trade, and restrain himself generally from the use of it. Bryson v. Whitehead, 1 Sim. & Stu. 74.

An agreement that defendant, a moderately skilful dentist, would abstain from practising over a district 200 miles in diameter, in consideration of receiving instructions and a salary from the plaintiff, determinable at three months' notice:—Held, unreasonable and void, being a restraint of trade, not founded on an adequate consideration. Horner v. Graves, 7 Bing. 735; 5 M. & P. 768.

A bond by an apothecary, not to set up business within twenty miles of A., is not illegal, as being in restraint of trade. Hayward v. Young, 2 Chit. 407.

So, where a surgeon took an assistant, who entered into a bond not to practise on his own account for fourteen years, within ten miles of the place where the surgeon lived: the bond was held good in law. Davis v. Mason, 5 T. R. 118.

An agreement by an attorney, first to relinquish his business, and recommend his clients to two other attorneys for a valuable consideration; secondly, not to practise in such business within certain limits: and thirdly, to permit the purchasers to make use of his name in their firm for a certain time, without any interference on his part, was held valid. Bunn v. Guy, 4 East, 190;

1 Smith, 1. But see Hughes v. Statham, 6 D. & R. 219; 4 B. & C. 187.

Articles under which A. had served his clerkship to an attorney, contained a proviso that A. should not practise within a certain distance; and also a covenant, on the part of his father, that A. should, within a month after he came of age, execute a bond, in a specified penalty, to insure his fulfilment of the proviso; A., who was an infant at the time of the execution of the articles, served under them for three years after he attained full age, but was never called on to execute any bond, and, with a knowledge of the purport of the articles, completed his clerkship, and afterwards began to practise as an attorney within the district from which the articles purported to exclude him. A motion for an injunction to restrain him from practising within that district, was refused with costs. Capes v. Hutton, 2 Russ. 357.

A coachmaster having sold his share of the business to his partner, with an undertaking not to be concerned in any coach running from R. to London, or prejudicial to the business which he had sold, an injunction was granted, restraining him from running a coach from P. through R. to London. Williams v. Williams, 2 Swans. 253.

In assumpsit for the breach of an agreement, a clause contained therein, (although illegal, as being in restraint of trade,) if it form no part of the consideration, need not be set out in the declaration. McAllen v. Churchill, 11 Moore, 483.

In the construction of an engagement (a bond) not to open shop within a mile of a certain spot, the shortest way of access is by the footpath is to be taken. Woods v. Dennett, 2 Stark. 89—Ellenborough.

In a covenant not to keep a public-house within half-a-mile of a particular spot, the distance must be estimated by the nearest mode of access at the time of the covenant—per Tenterden and Littledale; or as the crow flies—per Parke. Leigh v. Hind, 4 M. & R. 579; 9 B. & C. 774.

5. Dealing with particular Persons.

An agreement in a lease, that in case the lessee ceased to purchase beer of the lessor, his rent should be advanced, was held to be extremely injurious to the public interest and welfare, and not to be favoured by the courts. Cooper v. Twibill, 3 Camp. 286, n.—Ellenborough.

A plea in bar to an avowry for such advanced rent, stating the beer delivered to the plaintiff to be bad, nauseous, and unwholesome, was considered to be a good defence. Id.

Where such an agreement was in the alternative, either that the publican should take all his beer of the brewer, or pay an advanced rent:—Held, that it could not be enforced, unless it was proved that good beer was supplied. Holcombe v. Hewson, 2 Camp. 391—Ellenborough.

Contracts by which brewers bind publicans to deal with them, are not to be favoured in law, because they tend to prejudice the health of the subject. Thornton v. Sherratt, 8 Taunt. 529.

A condition in a deed of composition, that a publican shall continue to deal for twelve years with his creditors, in the articles of their respective trades, may be valid; but it is qualified by the implied condition that such articles shall be good, and of a marketable quality. Id.

Where in the conditions of sale of a public-house, it was described as a free public-house, and the lease contained a covenant of this nature, it was held, that the purchaser was not bound to complete his purchase, and might recover back his deposit, even although the lease was read over by the auctioneer at the time of sale. Jones v. Edney, 3 Camp. 285—Ellenborough.

Quære, whether a covenant by a lessee of a public-house, that he and his assigns will buy all their beer of the plaintiff, is binding on the assignees? Hartley v. Pehall, Peake, 131—Kenyon.

Where the lessee of a public-house covenanted for himself, his executors, and assigns, with his lessors (brewers) to take all his beer of them or their successors in their said trade, and the lessors sold their trade and the public-house, with other premises, to third persons, who moved the plant, &c. to a distance of two miles, and there carried on the business of brewers:—Held, that the trade of the lessors was thereby determined, and that their assignee could not take advantage of the covenant, on the assignees of the lessee purchasing beer from another brewer. Doe d. Colvert v. Reid, 10 B. & C. 849.

By indenture between A. and B. and C., dissolving their partnership as rope-makers, A. and B. covenanted to allow C., during his life, &c. on every cwt. of cordage which they should make on the recommendation of C. for any of his friends and connexions, and whose debts should turn out to be good; and that A. and B. should stand the risk of such debts incurred, but should not be compelled to furnish goods to any of C.'s connexions whom they should be disinclined to trust. And C. covenanted not to carry on the business of a rope-maker during his life (except on government contracts;) and that all debts contracted or to be contracted in his or their names, pursuant to the indenture, should be the exclusive property of A. and B.; and that C. should, during his life, exclusively employ A. and B. and no other person, to make all the cordage ordered of him by or for his friends and connexions, on the terms aforesaid, and should not employ any other person to make any cordage, on any pretence whatsoever:—Held, that the covenant by C. to employ A. and B. exclusively to make cordage for his friends, and not to employ any other, &c. (A. and B. not being obliged to work for any other than such as they chose to trust) was not illegal and void, as being in restraint of trade without adequate consideration; for the whole indenture must be construed together, according to the apparent reasonable intent of the parties; and the general object being only to appropriate to A. and B. so much of C.'s private trade as they chose to give his friends credit for, so much only was covenanted to be transferred, and C. was still at liberty to work for any of his friends who were refused to be trusted by A. and B.; by which construction the restraint on C. was only co-extensive, as in reason it could only be intended to be, with the benefit to A. and B.; and therefore the restraint on C. could be no prejudice to public trade. Gale v. Reed, 8 East, 80.

The plaintiff demised a public-house to the defendant; the defendant to take all his malt of the plaintiff; the plaintiff upon every reasonable request to deliver good malt, and if he did not, the defendant to be at liberty to buy it of any other: breach, that the defendant used a quantity of malt not bought of the plaintiff, and without requiring the plaintiff to deliver such: plea, that the plaintiff had delivered bad malt to the defendant, who thereupon bought malt of others:—Held, that the plea was bad; for, as one failure by the plaintiff would not operate as a total suspension of the covenant, the defendant should have alleged a request to send him good malt, and that he had purchased the malt of others on the plaintiff's failure to do so. Weaver v. Sessions, 1 Marsh. 505; 6 Taunt. 154.

Merchants in London agreeing to become sureties for a West India planter, on being secured by a conveyance of his plantation, in trust, with a covenant that they should be considered as consignees till the expiration of five years after the reimbursement of what they might advance, held entitled to the benefit of this covenant. Bunbury v. Winter, 1 J. & W. 255.

Quære, whether a covenant to continue a mortgagee as consignee after payment of the debt is valid? Id.

A contract with the proprietors of a theatre not to write dramatical pieces for any other, is legal, not resembling a covenant restraining trade generally. Morris v. Colman, 18 Ves. jun. 437.

So would a similar restraint of a performer. Id.

6. Brokerage.

An agreement to procure a situation for a medical man, by the assignment of patients by a third person, to whom a premium was to be paid, is not illegal. Edgar v. Blick, 1 Stark. 464—Ellenborough.

So, an action lies for brokerage in procuring a medical partnership. Id.

But an agreement to allow poundage to a person upon the amount of the bills of all customers recommended by such person, is illegal, as a fraud upon the customers. Wyburd v. Stanton, 4 Esp. 179—Ellenborough.

A demurrer was allowed to a bill of discovery in support of an action to recover the expenses of entertainments, given by the plaintiff under an agreement with the defendant to introduce him to a woman of fortune, with a view to marriage. King v. Burr, 3 Mer. 693.

An action will not lie to recover back money deposited for the purpose of being paid to a person, for his interest in soliciting a pardon for a person under sentence of death. Norman v. Cole, 3 Esp. 253—Eldon.

7. Goodwill.

A court of equity will not execute a contract for the sale of a good will, but will leave the parties to law. Barter v. Conolly, 1 J. & W. 576.

Quære, whether a court of equity will enforce the performance of a contract for the purchase of a subject-matter, of which the goodwill of a public-house, unconnected with any fixed interest in the premises, forms the principal part? Coslake v. Till, 1 Russ. 376.

Specific performance was decreed of an agreement to sell the goodwill of a trade and business, exclusive of a secret in dyeing. Bryson v. Whitehead, 1 Sim. & Stu. 74.

Specific performance of an agreement to purchase the business of an attorney, refused upon the bill of the vendor, there being no express stipulations by which the court might be enabled to carry it into effect on his part, in return for the defendant's purchase money; and there being no conditions generally applicable to transactions of this nature, so as to come within the description of "usual clauses" to be inserted in an instrument to be drawn up in pursuance of the agreement. Quære, whether such an agreement is in its nature valid, upon the ground either of morality or of public policy? Quære, if legally a valid agreement, whether it is of such a nature as is capable of being enforced in equity? Bozon v. Farlow, 1 Mer. 459.

The sale of a trade with a goodwill does not prevent the vendors setting up again a similar trade, unless there is an express covenant, or fraud by representing it as a continuation of the old trade, or conduct encouraging others to involve themselves in the confidence that he would not trade again, &c. Cruttwell v. Lye, 17 Ves. jun. 335.

The remedy for a breach of an undertaking upon the sale of the goodwill of a trade not to carry on the same business, and to use the best endeavours to assist the purchaser, is an action or issue quantum damnificatus; and an injunction against proceeding under a judgment for the consideration; upon affidavits before answer was refused. Shackle v. Baker, 14 Ves. jun. 438.

8. Marriage Contracts.

Restraint of Marriage.—An agreement or bond, engaging not to marry any one but the obligee, who did not engage to marry the obligor, is void, because against policy and reason. Low v. Pure, Loft, 345; S. C. nom. Lowe v. Peers, 4 Burr. 2225.

A wagering contract for fifty guineas, that the plaintiff would not marry within six years, is prima facie in restraint of marriage, and therefore void; no circumstances appearing to show that such restraint was prudent and proper in the particular instance. Hartley v. Rice, 10 East, 22.

Where the condition of a bond was that one defendant should not marry any other person but the plaintiff, and to pay 1200*l.* in case she did so, or refused to marry him within a month after her father's death; semble, that when she married the other defendant, although her father was alive, the bond was forfeited, and the money payable. Box v. Day, 1 Wils. 59.

A bond to marry a woman, or pay a sum of money, being established at law, an injunction was granted till the hearing, on the grounds of public policy; it being an engagement founded upon expectations under the will of a third person, (though no relation,) from whom it was kept secret, to marry at his death, and no mutual obligation. Cock v. Richards, 10 Ves. jun. 429.

Separation.—A deed made between husband and wife, and a third person, (a trustee,) with a covenant by the husband, to pay such third person an annuity, in case the wife should live separate and apart from her husband, and should take one of her children to reside with her, is, it seems, void, as being a deed made in contemplation of a future separation at the pleasure of the wife, and therefore contrary to the policy of marriage. Durant v. Tilley, 7 Price, 577.

A covenant by a husband, to pay to trustees a certain annual sum by way of separate maintenance for his wife in case of their future separation, with the consent of such trustees, or their executors, &c., is valid in law. Rodney (Lord) v. Chambers, 2 East, 283.

By indenture, between husband and wife, of the first and second parts, and a trustee for the wife, of the third, reciting that unhappy differences had arisen between the husband and wife, and that they had mutually agreed to live separate, and the husband covenanted to pay an annuity of 80*l.* during so much of the wife's life as he should live, in full satisfaction of her support and maintenance, and of all alimony whatsoever, and that he would not, at any time thereafter, sue her for the restitution of conjugal rights; and the trustee covenanted that the wife should release her husband's real and personal estate from all claims for jointure, dower, or thirds, and that he would indemnify the husband from debts incurred by the wife after separation:—Held, that such indenture was valid in law, and that a plea by the husband, "that the wife had instituted a suit in the Ecclesiastical Court, for restitution of conjugal rights, in which cause he had put in an allegation and certain exhibits, charging her with adultery, and that a decree of divorce à mensâ et thoro was thereupon pronounced by that court," was no answer to an action by the trustee for arrears of the annuity. Jee v. Thurlow, 4 D. & R. 11; 2 B. & C. 547.

An agreement by husband and wife to live separate is legal; and the former cannot set up adultery to avoid such agreement. Scholey v. Goodman, 8 Moore, 350; 1 C. & P. 36; S. C. not S. P. 1 Bing. 349; Baymore v. Battley, 8 Bing. 256; 1 M. & Scott, 339.

But if the parties live together after the agreement, it will have the effect of avoiding it altogether. Id.

Where husband and wife entered into a deed, with a provision, that in a certain event, and upon the consent of trustees, the wife should be permitted to live separate; quære, whether the deed was valid? Chambers v. Coulfield, 6 East, 244; 2 Smith, 356.

Where a deed was made between husband, wife, and a trustee, providing a separate maintenance for the wife, and purporting to be made in contemplation of an immediate separation; but, in fact, no separation then took place, nor was intended to take place at that time:—Held, that the deed was void. Hindley v. Westmeath (Marquis), 6 B. & C. 200; 9 D. & R. 351. And see S. C. 1 Dow. and Clark, 519.

A bequest of an allowance to a feme covert, on condition that she lived apart from her husband, was held void, as being contra bonos mores. Brown v. Peck, 1 Eden, 140.

Quære, whether a gift of an annuity to the separate use of a married woman, on condition of her living apart from her husband, is good? Westmeath v. Westmeath, Jacob, 137.

Quære, whether a covenant in a deed of separation not to sue for the restitution of conjugal rights is binding, and if not, whether the rest of the deed can stand? Id.

9. Foreign Loans.

It is illegal for a person residing in this country to raise money by way of loan, to assist subjects of a foreign state, so as to enable them to prosecute a war against a government in amity with our own. De Witz v. Hendricks, 9 Moore, 586; 2 Bing. 314.

A foreigner has no right to negotiate in England, a loan for the use of a state which has separated itself from, and is at war with one of England's allies, (such state not being at the time recognised by England,) without the permission of the English government. Yrizarri v. Clement, 3 Bing. 432; 11 Moore, 308; 2 C. & P. 221.

If several persons are jointly engaged in a bubble, to raise money for a non-existing state or government, one cannot maintain an action for money had and received against another, for the money so raised. Mac Gregor v. Lowe, 1 C. & P. 200; R. & M. 57—Abbott.

Nor where the original contract was made with a government not acknowledged by Great Britain, can a court of equity give relief. Thompson v. Poreles, 2 Sim. 194.

Quære, whether the king's courts will interfere upon the subject of a contract with a country which he does not recognise, or will assist in the recover of money advanced by the subjects of this country to a colony at war with its parent state, the parent state being at peace with this country? Jones v. Gracia del Rio, 1 Turn. & Russ. 299.

10. Foreign Illegality.

A written contract made in Jamaica, which by the laws of that island, is void for want of a stamp, cannot be recovered upon here. Alcock v. Hodgson, 7 T. R. 241; 2 Esp. 598.

The value of paper made for the purpose of forging assignats upon, to be exported to France, may be recovered in our courts, although the plaintiff knew for what purposes the paper was to be applied. Smith v. Marconnay, Peake's Add. Cas. 81.—Kenyon.

11. Champerty and Maintenance.

Champerty is the unlawful maintenance of a suit, in consideration of a bargain for part of the thing, or some profit out of it; and is not confined to courts of common law. Stevens v. Bagwell, 15 Ves. jun. 139.

Assignments to navy agents of part of the subject of a prize suit then depending, are void, as amounting to champerty. Id.

An agreement between the seller and purchaser of an estate, that the purchaser bearing the expense of certain suits commenced by the seller against an occupier for arrears of rents, should have the rent to be so recovered, and any sum that could be recovered for dilapidations, and might use the seller's name in actions he might think fit to commence against the occupier for arrears of rent or dilapidations, is not void, as savouring of champerty. Williams v. Protheroe, 5 Bing. 309; 2 M. & P. 779; 3 Y. & J. 129.

A., B., C. and D. employed a broker to effect a policy of insurance on goods on board a certain vessel, and upon a loss happening, an action was brought in the broker's name against the underwriter's; A.'s evidence being necessary to the maintainence of the action, he, in order to render himself competent, executed a release to the broker, for a nominal consideration, of all liability to him for the money to be recovered in the action; and after action brought, he conveyed all his interest in the policy to L. and R. for a nominal consideration, having, with his co-assured, previously executed a bond of indemnity to the broker for the costs of the action:—Held, in error, that A. was still liable for costs to the attorney who brought the action, and was therefore an incompetent witness. Semle, that the machinery resorted to for the purpose of making A. a competent witness amounted to maintenance. Bell v. Smith, (in error,) 7 D. & R. 846; 5 B. & C. 188.

A gift obtained from an heir-at-law ignorant of his rights, by one who undertook to support him in obtaining possession of his estate, was set aside under the circumstances; also money having been advanced to him by a subscription from different persons, and among the rest from his attorney, to enable him to prosecute suits; and an absolute bond having been taken from him for double the sum lent, with a defeasance executed some days after, declaring that, if he did not recover the estate, or half of it, the bond was to be delivered up:—Held, to be unconscionable, savouring of champerty, and dangerous to public justice. Strachan v. Brander, 1 Eden, 303.

Where a creditor who had instituted proceedings at law and in equity against his debtor enters into an agreement with the debtor to abandon those proceedings, and give up his securities, in consideration of the debtor giving him a lien on securities in the hands of another creditor, with authority to sue such other creditor, and agreeing to use his best endeavours to assist in adjusting his accounts with the holder of the securities, and in recovering his securities:—Held, that the agreement does not amount to champerty, but would have done so if it had stipulated that the creditor should maintain the proceedings instituted by the debtor against the holder of the securities, in consideration of the profits to be derived by the debtor from the suit. Hartley v. Russell, 2 Sim. & Stu. 244.

An agreement to communicate such information as shall enable a party to recover a sum of money by action, and to exert influence in procuring evidence to substantiate the claim, upon condition of receiving a portion of the sum recovered, is illegal, as it amounts to champerty. Stanley v. Jones, 7 Bing. 369; 5 M. & P. 193.

An agreement made by parties out of possession of premises, to proceed in a court of equity, to recover, and to divide lands, &c., when recovered, is contrary to the policy of the law as well as the statute of Hen. 8 against pretended titles. Cholmondeley v. Clinton, 4 Bligh, N. S. 4.

A count in a declaration alleging that the plaintiff, at the request of the defendant, and upon the defendant's undertaking to indemnify, defended an action for the recovery of money, in which the defendant claimed an interest; that judgment was given against plaintiff for 42*l.*; and that he was imprisoned and paid the money under a ca. sa.:—Held, not to disclose a contract which was void on account of maintenance. Williamson v. Henley, 6 Bing. 299; 3 M. & P. 731.

12. Fraud.

If A. agree to give B. a certain sum for goods, in advancement of C., any secret agreement between B. and C., that the latter shall pay a further sum, is void as a fraud on A., although the bill of sale is made to A.; and B. cannot recover such further sum against C. Jackson v. Duchaire, 3 T. R. 551.

Government having contracted to furnish forage for a certain number of horses to be kept by a sutler, and the contractor for forage having agreed not to commute the forage for money; an agreement between the sutler and the contractor, that the latter should allow the former a sum of money for each ration of forage allowed for the whole number of horses, and should retain the forage, is void. Willis v. Baldwin, 2 Dougl. 450.

A brewer who supplies goods to a public-house, cannot charge any person as a primary debtor, but the person licensed to keep the house; and if goods be so applied on the credit of a person not licensed, the brewer cannot recover against such person, on the ground that it is a fraud upon the excise. Meux v. Humphries, 3 C. & P. 79; M. & M. 132—Tenterden.

An agreement between two sons to divide equally whatever property they may receive from their father in his lifetime, or become entitled to under his will, or by descent or otherwise, from him, is not contrary to public policy, but will be enforced in equity. Wethered v. Wethered, 2 Sim. 183; S. P. Harwood v. Tooke, 2 Sim. 192.

A deed of gift by a client to an attorney, or by an heir to his guardian; the purchase of a reversion from a young heir, and a sale of property by a trustee, are severally contracts contrary to the policy of the law, and may be set aside without evidence of actual fraud. Morse v. Royal, 12 Ves. jun. 371.

13. Intoxication and Duress.

It is a general rule, that a court of equity will not assist a person who has obtained, or wishes to get rid of an agreement or deed, on the mere ground of intoxication. The exception is, where any contrivance was used to draw him into drink, order to avoid the deed at law, the unsoundness of mind must amount to that which constitutes idiocy, according to the strict legal definition of an idiot:—Held, that this direction was right, and that the case could not be argued or decided upon an objection that the direction was too general and vague, because such objection was not taken at the trial, and did not form part of the bill of exceptions. Ball v. Mannin, 3 Bligh, N. S. 1; 1 Dow & Clark, 880.

J. M., a man 83 years old, being entitled under the provisions of a trust disposition and settlement to the annual produce of a fund during his life, estimated at the value of 6000*l.*, but subject to a deduction in the proportion of one-third upon the event of a suit, executed a deed, by which he renounced all his interest in the fund.

fraud, and they were actually used by the party:—Held, that an action would lie upon the contract, notwithstanding an inquisition of lunacy finding the party to be of unsound mind at the time the carriages were ordered. Id.

A court of equity will not interfere to set aside a contract overreached by an inquisition in lunacy, if fair and without notice, especially where the parties cannot be reinstated. Niell v. Morley, 9 Ves. jun. 478.

Upon a bill for specific performance of a contract overreached by a commission of lunacy, the plaintiff not having traversed the inquisition, an issue was directed, whether the defendant was a lunatic at the execution, if so, whether he had lucid intervals, and whether the contract was executed during a lucid interval. Hall v. Warren, 9 Ves. jun. 605.

15. Misrepresentation.

The specific performance of an agreement is the subject of discretion; and it will therefore be refused in the case of mistake, though there is no fraud. Mason v. Armitage, 13 Ves. jun. 25.

If A., in contracting with B., falsely represents himself to be the agent of C., and thereby obtains better terms, the court will, notwithstanding, enforce the contract, unless A. knew that such would be the effect of the misrepresentation. Fellows v. Gwyder (Lord,) 1 Sim. 63; 1 Russ. & Mylne, 83.

An agreement will not be avoided by reason that representations, made by one party to the other, upon the subject of the agreement, are not correct, if it be manifest that the party making the representations is speaking, not from personal knowledge, but with reference to accounts which were equally open to both parties, and if the representations be justified by those accounts. Harris v. Kemble, 1 Sim. 111.

A., a shareholder in a theatre, entered into an agreement with B., C., and D., three other shareholders, by which the theatre was to be leased to them at a certain rent. He subsequently filed a bill against them for specific performance, on which they proved that another agreement, of which they had before had no notice, had been entered into some years before between A. and the quantities of materials required for the manufacture of iron, notwithstanding possession had been taken, the mines worked, and other acts of ownership had been exercised, and notwithstanding some acts in confirmation of the contract. Small v. Attwood, 1 Young, 507.

When a contract is rescinded for fraud or misrepresentation, it is the same as if no contract had ever existed, and the parties are restored to the situation in which they were before the contract, as nearly as possible. Id.

A party obtaining an agreement by a partial misrepresentation, is not entitled to a specific performance on waiving the benefit effected by the misrepresentation. The effect of partial misrepresentation is not to alter or modify the agreement pro tanto, but to destroy it entirely, and to operate as a personal bar to the party who has practised it. Clermont (Viscount) v. Tushnet, 1 J. & W. 118.

16. Fraudulent Advantage.

To form a case for relief on the ground of oppression on the one side, and distress on the other, the disadvantage of the bargain must be within the view of the parties. Ramsbottom v. Parker, 6 Madd. 5.

A sale by an heir apparent of interests in possession and in reversion, was set aside, the consideration being inadequate, and advantage having been taken of the vendor's embarrassments. Portmore (Earl) v. Taylor, 4 Sim. 182.

A bond given at full age, and not in distress, but under a notion of honour, will, if attended with money actually advanced, maintain a former bargain, however disadvantageous; but it is no confirmation, if it is not given freely, as if under distress, or terror, or apprehension from the original transaction, though unfounded. Croce v. Ballard, 1 Ves. jun. 220.

A patient executed instruments, whereby he secured to the defendant, his surgeon, an annuity of 100*l.* during the life of the defendant, in consideration that the defendant would live with him, and give him the benefit of his professional assistance during his life. Four days before the execution of these instruments, the defendant called in an eminent physician to visit the pa-of a bankrupt, were ignorant of a circumstance considerably increasing the value. Turner v. Harvey, Jacob, 169.

17. Family Agreements.

Family compromises are favoured, if reasonable, and upon a doubtful right, even in the strongest case, as where one party was drunk at the time. Stockley v. Stockley, 1 Ves. & B. 23.

Quære, where upon a mere supposition of right, proving erroneous? Id.

Family agreements without fraud, are established, though founded in mistake. Gordon v. Gordon, 3 Swan. 463.

They are not supported if founded in the mistake of either party to which the opposite party is accessory. Id.

A family agreement may bind the parties, though neither of them had a valid title to the property in question. Id.

Family agreements require communication of all material circumstances. Id.

A father having advanced a child in his infancy, upon his coming of age takes a bond from him to a greater amount than the sum advanced:

...ing the alienation of the income of a public office. Aston v. Gwinnett, 3 Y. & J. 136.

The office of private secretary does not fall within the meaning of the stat. 5 & 6 Ed. 6; therefore, an assignment of the profits of all offices which the defendant might acquire, is good as to all those which may be legally assigned. Harrington Kloprogge, 6 Moore, 31, n.; 2 B. & B. 678, n.; 2 Chit. 475; 4 Dougl. 5.

A demurrer will not lie to a bill stating a sale of the office of secondary to the Wood Street Compter, and praying an account of the profits of the office; for, upon demurrer, the nature of the office does not appear, nor, consequently, whether such sale is illegal under stat. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. Hicks v. Raincock, 1 Cox, 40.

A declaration under the stat. 49 Geo. 3, c. 136, s. 6, alleges that the defendant advertised a proposal for a promise to give the sum of 150 guineas to any one who would procure A. B. a peer under government: the words "for a promise" are surplusage: and the words "under government" are sufficient, though the words of the statute are office in the gift of the crown. Clarke v. Harvey, 1 Stark. 92—Ellenborough.

Where, after the recital of the appointment of A. to be deputy to B., in the execution of an office within the purview of 5 & 6 Ed. 6, c. 16, or 49 Geo. 3, c. 126, A. paying thereout to B. an annual sum; the condition of the bond in suit is stated to be for the payment by A. to B. of such annual sum generally, it is a good plea in bar, to say that the bond was given in pursuance of an agreement to pay such sum absolutely at all events. Semble, that the condition taken per se shows the bond to be given upon an illegal contract. Greville v. Atkins, 4 M. & R. 372; 9 B. & C. 462.

A., by the interest and on the application of B., is appointed custom-house officer of a port, having previously signed an agreement, declaring that his name was used in the application in trust for B., that he would appoint such deputies as B. should nominate, and would empower B. to receive the profits of the office to his own use. On the failure of A. to comply with the agreement, no action upon it will lie against him. Garforth v. Fearon, 1 H. Black. 327.

If a covenant is entered into, that if the plaintiff will procure the defendant to be appointed to an office, he will pay the plaintiff a share of the emoluments, and this be without the knowledge of the person who has the right of appointing to the office; it is such a fraud on him as will avoid the covenant, whether the office is one lawfully saleable or not. Waldo v. Martin, 6 D. & R. 364; 4 B. & C. 319; 2 C. & P. 1.

An agreement to allow a certain share of the profits of an office in a dock yard, in order to induce the possessor to procure himself to be superannuated, is void. Parsons v. Thompson, 1 H. Black. 322.

A. being possessed of an office in a dock yard, B., in order to induce him to procure himself to be superannuated, and retire on the usual pension, agrees (without the knowledge of the Navy Board, to whom the appointment belongs,) in case B. should succeed A. in the office, to allow him a certain annual share of the profits. A. retires; B. is appointed to succeed him, but does not perform the agreement. A. can maintain no action against B. on the agreement. Id.

An attorney, town-clerk and clerk of the peace for the borough of D., in the county of L., upon the dissolution of partnership which had existed between him and two other persons, entered into an agreement to pay to one of them (C. D.) a certain sum of money, and use his endeavours to procure for him one-fourth of the prosecutions arising in the town clerk's office. In an action by C. D. on this agreement, it appeared that the magistrates of the borough of L. commit some offenders to be tried at the borough sessions, others at the county sessions, and others at the county assizes:—Held, that the defendant, as clerk of the peace of the borough, could not legally enter into such an agreement as that set out in the declaration. Quære, whether it would have been legal had he been town-clerk only, and not clerk of the peace. Hughes v. Statham, 6 D. & R. 219; 4 B. & C. 187.

An assignment to trustees of all the emoluments and profits, which during the life of J. S. and his continuing to hold the office of clerk of the peace for Westminster, should arise or become due to him as such clerk of the peace, or in respect of his office, after deducting the salary of his deputy for the time being, upon trust to pay the interest arising on certain debts due from J. S., and from time to time render the residue, after satisfying the trusts, to J. S., is invalid in law. Palmer v. Bate, 6 Moore, 28; 3 B. & B. 673.

2. Attornies.

By a memorandum, dated in November, 1822, A., an attorney, agreed with B., for a valuable consideration, to take C. (the son of B.) into partnership, as attornies and solicitors, for ten years, and to allow him a moiety of the profits. The memorandum did not state when the partnership was to commence. C. was not admitted an attorney until April, 1823, but he conducted the business in the name of A. from the beginning of January, 1823. In an action by A. against B. for part of the consideration money:—Held, first, that the agreement, though legal on the face of it, upon proof that C. had not been admitted an attorney until after its execution, became illegal within 22 Geo. 2, c. 46, s. 11, and void. Secondly, that such proof was properly admitted on the part of the defendant. Thirdly, that proof on the part of the plaintiff, that the agreement was to be kept as an escrow, and not acted upon till after C.'s admission, was not admissible, and properly rejected. Williams v. Jones, 7 D. & R. 548; 5 B. & C. 108.

Quære, whether an agreement, whereby the town-clerk of a borough undertook that in consideration of plaintiff having consented to a dissolution of partnership with him as an attorney, "he would use all his best endeavours, and exercise his influence to procure the prosecutions for felony arising in the town-clerk's office," to be divided between plaintiff and three others, is not void, as being contrary either to the 22 Geo. 2, c. 46, s. 14, or to the general policy of the law? Hughes v. Statham, 6 D. & R. 219; 4 B. & C. 187.

Semble, that an agreement by an attorney to pay a share of the profits of his business to another person who is not an attorney, is not illegal. Candler v. Candler, Jacob, 225.

A., an attorney, agrees to conduct a cause for B. for 100 guineas, besides his taxed costs; if tried, A. to pay all expenses, if not, he was to receive the same sum; if tried, and a verdict against B., A. to have no demand on B. for costs. Quære, whether this agreement be legal or not? Guy v. Gower, 2 Marsh. 273.

An agreement by an attorney to conduct all his client's suits, in consideration of having exclusively the drawing of his leases, when stated as a defence to an action on the attorney's bill, is not vacated by proving that other persons have been employed to draw the leases. Parker v. Harcourt, 5 Esp. 249—Ellenborough.

Nor can an attorney, by that statute, give an undertaking to a sheriff's officer to appear and put in bail, even before the arrest is made, and it is not in the power of the officer to execute the writ. Parker v. England, 2 Smith, 52. And see Rex v. Southerton, 6 East, 143; and King v. Price, 1 Price, 341.

So, an agreement in writing to put in bail, at the return of the writ, or surrender the body, or pay debt and costs, made by a third person with the bailiff of the sheriff, in consideration of his discharging the party arrested, is void by 23 Hen. 6, c. 10. Rogers v. Reeves, 1 T. R. 418.

But an undertaking of an attorney, given to the plaintiff in order to procure the discharge of the defendant, to put in bail or pay the debt, is not within the statute, because it is not given to the sheriff. Id.

A promise of a bribe to a bailiff to take bail is illegal, and assumpsit will not lie upon the promise. Smith v. Statesbury, 1 W. Black. 204; 2 Burr. 924.

4. Bankrupts.

A promise made by a friend of a bankrupt, when he was on his last examination, that in consideration that the assignees and commissioners would forbear to examine him, touching certain sums which he was charged with having received, and not accounted for, he would pay such sums as the bankrupt had received and not accounted for, is void, as being against the policy of the bankrupt laws. Neret v. Wallace (in error,) 3 T. R. 17.

Quære, whether the creditors having consented to the agreement made by the assignees, would have varied the case? Id.

A bill given to a creditor, to induce him to sign a bankrupt's certificate, is void, in whosever hands it may be, and whatever the consideration given by the holder; but a bill given to a creditor, to keep him from taking steps to oppose the certificate, would be good in the hands of a holder for value without notice. Birch v. Jervis, 3 C. & P. 379—Tenterden.

If a creditor has taken money for signing a bankrupt's certificate, it shall be recovered back in an action for money had and received. Smith v. Bromley, 2 Dougl. 696, n.

A bond, given to a creditor of a bankrupt, in order to induce him to withdraw a petition, which he had preferred to the Chancellor against the allowance of the certificate, is void by stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 11. Sumner v. Brady, 1 H. Black. 647. And see Jackson v. Lewis, 4 T. R. 166; Price v. Randall, 6 T. R. 146; 1 Esp. 224.

A covenant by a friend of a bankrupt to pay all his creditors their full debts, in consideration that they will not proceed any further under the mitting any act of bankruptcy whereas a commission shall issue, is good. Rex d. Hunt v. Galliers, 2 T. R. 133.

A promissory note, given by a bankrupt to a commissioner acting under his commission, for a debt contracted before the bankruptcy, is an invalid security. Haywood v. Chambers, 1 D. & R. 411; 5 B. & A. 753. And see Wells v. Gwing, 4 Moore, 78; 1 B. & B. 447.

Even, though the note was dated after the issuing of the commission, and before the signing of the certificate, and the debt for which it was given was not proved. Id.

An agreement between a bankrupt and a third person, that the former should receive a certain sum from the latter, on his obtaining the assent of his assignee, to the sale of his house to such person at a certain price, is void in law. Miller v. Gill, 1 C. & P. 149—Abbott.

Unless, as it seems, a communication be made to all the creditors; but a communication to the assignees alone is not sufficient. Id.

If standing timber be sold to a trader, with a proviso that, in case of bankruptcy, the vendor may retake it, such a condition is void, under the statute 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, s. 11, if the bankrupt has the disposition of the goods; and the property passes by the assignment. Blaird v. Guyton, 2 Taunt. 176; 1 Rose, 113.

A creditor may legally contract to execute a commission of bankruptcy against his debtor, in consideration that a friend of the debtor will give the petitioning creditor 5s. in the pound for his debt: and a bill given for the agreed sum is a valid bill. Fry v. Malcolm, 5 Taunt. 117.

5. Poor Laws.

A covenant with a lessor of premises in a parish, to indemnify the parish against any repairs which the covenantor may cause to be executed in it, is valid, although it was objected that it was unreasonable, in restraint of trade, and contrary to the policy of the poor laws. Widd v. Fussell, 3 M. & P. 457; 6 Bing. 163.

A bond given to parish officers, reciting that B. had taken a house in the parish for a term of seven years, and conditioned to indemnify the parish against any charges which they might sustain on account of B. and his family being inhabitants of and belonging to the parish, is not discharged by B.'s purchasing an estate of the value of 30l. in the parish, and residing on it upwards of forty days after the expiration of the seven years' lease. Edwards v. Biddell, 1 H. & C. 120.

A bond to indemnify a parish against a pauper, is forfeited, though the parish, to avoid the expense of removal, choose to pay a weekly sum for his maintenance in another parish. Abbott v. Foxhall, 2 W. Black. 1177.

6. Revenue Regulations.

The breach of mere revenue regulations, which tend to insure the due payment of duties imposed upon the manufacture of an exciseable article, does not render the trade itself illegal, so as to incapacitate the manufacturer from recovering the price of such article, or from suing upon a guarantee given for the due payment thereof. Brown v. Duncan, 5 M. & R. 114; 10 B. & C. 93.

The stat. 17 Geo. 3, c. 42, which requires bricks for sale to be of certain dimensions, and gives a penalty for the breach of that regulation, being passed to protect the buyer against the fraud of the seller, if bricks be sold and delivered under the statutable size unknown to the buyer, the seller cannot recover the value of them. Law v. Hodson, 11 East, 300; 2 Camp. 147.

Although when sold, they were selected by the purchaser himself, and they were afterwards used by him in building a house, without any complaint being made as to their size or quality. Id.

A contract declared by a statute to be illegal, is not made good by a subsequent repeal of the statute. Jaques v. Witky, 1 H. Black. 65.

VI. VALIDITY AS REGARDS ORDERS IN COUNCIL AND BYE-LAWS.

1. Orders in Council.

A. commissions B. to get a charter-party effected on his ship, Russian built and British owned. She is accordingly chartered to go to America, and take in there a cargo of permitted goods, rice and cotton being specified, and to sail therewith to Cadiz, Lisbon, or Gottenburgh, as directed. By a previous agreement, it appeared to have been in the contemplation of the parties to carry the goods to some port in the united kingdom, and that the ship should carry no license:—Held, that this was not an illegal contract, so as to deprive B. of his right to his commission, for procuring the charter-party to be effected. Haines v. Busk, 1 Marsh. 191; 5 Taunt. 521.

Where A, agreed to sell to B. one-third share of a ship, which was then to be employed on a joint adventure, in the exportation of military stores to South America, contrary to an order in council then in force:—Held, that (the agreement being entire, and containing on the face of it an illegal stipulation) it lay on the party seeking to enforce the same, to show that means had been used to obtain a license, or that the illegal purpose had been abandoned: and that in failure thereof, A. could not recover for the share of the ship. Holland v. Hall, 1 B. & A. 53.

To debt on bond, the defendant pleaded that the bond was given to secure payment of the price of goods, agreed to be sold and delivered in London by the plaintiff to the defendant, to be by the latter shipped to Ostend, and from thence reshipped for the East Indies, and there trafficked with clandestinely:—Held a sufficient bar to the action; the case being within the 7 Geo. 1, c. 21, which avoids all contracts for supplying cargoes to foreign ships in such a trade. Lightfoot v. Tenant, 1 B. & P. 551.

2. Sale of Ship's Command.

A sale (by the owner) of the command of a ship, employed in the East India Company's service, without the knowledge of the company, is illegal, and no action will lie on the contract. Blachford v. Preston, 8 T. R. 89; S. P. Hartwell v. Hartwell, 4 Ves. jun. 815.

For, the command of an East India ship is a public trust; and the sale of it, contrary to a public regulation of the company, is a breach of a public duty. East India Company v. Neave, 5 Ves. jun. 181.

The statute 49 Geo. 3, c. 126, relative to the sale of offices under the East India Company, applies only to their public offices, and not to the command of their ships, which are merely in their trade as merchantmen. Richardson v. Mellish, 2 Bing. 253; 1 C. & P. 24.

Where the defendant, having purchased twelve sixteenth shares of an East India ship commanded by the plaintiff, and then chartered to the company by the former owners for four voyages, proposed to the plaintiff that he should resign the command in favour of the defendant's nephew, on receiving in exchange the command of another ship, of which the defendant was sole owner, and then chartered to the company for one voyage only, and to which the plaintiff assented, and the company acceded to the exchange; and it was agreed, that in case the defendant's nephew died, or resigned before the expiration of the four voyages, the plaintiff should succeed him: and, as a further inducement to the plaintiff to resign the command of the ship chartered for four voyages, the defendant undertook to procure a beneficial alteration in the destination of the other, chartered for the one voyage only; and the person who acted as the plaintiff's agent undertook, without his knowledge, to pay the defendant 2000*l.* if the plaintiff should refuse to resign: and the destination of the latter vessel was altered with the assent of the company, and the plaintiff and defendant's nephew sailed on their respective voyages, and the plaintiff's adventure failing, he became bankrupt on his return home from his voyage, and the nephew died in the course of his second voyage; and the plaintiff having required the defendant to reappoint him to the command for the two remaining voyages, which he refused, the plaintiff sued him in assumpsit for a breach of agreement; and the jury found a verdict for the plaintiff:—Held, 1st, that after verdict there was a sufficient consideration for the defendant's agreement; 2dly, that the agreement was not illegal, although it was insisted, that it was made in violation of the by-laws of the company, a fraud on the part of the owners, and contrary to public policy; and lastly, that the judge properly plied; but if the woman merely lodges there, and receives her visitors elsewhere, he may. Appleton v. Campbell, 2 C. & P. 347—Abbott.

So, although he did not know, at the time of letting the lodgings, of the defendant's habits, if he afterwards became acquainted with the fact, and permitted her to remain as a tenant. Jennings v. Throgmorton, R. & M. 251—Abbott. S. P. Girardy v. Richardson, 1 B. & P. 340; 1 Esp. 13.

But an agreement to pay for the washing and getting up of expensive articles of dress for a prostitute has been held valid, although it was known to the party by whom the work was done, that the dresses were to enable her to appear at public places in the exercise of her avocation. Lloyd v. Johnson, 1 B. & P. 340.

And so held, in nearly a similar case at Nisi Prius, unless it were proved that the plaintiff had furnished them with an express view to enable the defendant to carry on her prostitution, and expected to be paid from the profits of it. Bowry v. Bennet, 1 Camp. 348—Ellenborough.

3. Other Immorality.

The printer of an immoral and libellous work cannot maintain an action for his bill against the publisher who employed him. Poplett v. Stockdale, R. & M. 337; 2 C. & P. 198—Best.

A. agreed to supply B. with a manuscript of a work, to be printed by the latter, the profits of which were to be equally divided between them:—Held, that B. might maintain an action against A. for refusing to supply manuscript after part of the work had been printed: but it seems that it would be a good defence to such action, to show that the intended publication was of an illegal nature: but this is not to be presumed, the work itself not having been produced at the trial. Gale v. Leckie, 2 Stark. 107—Ellenborough.

Nor will an action lie for the price of libellous, obscene, or immoral prints. Fores v. Johns, 4 Esp. 97—Laurence.

Nor for pirating a work of a libellous or immoral tendency—as the amours of a courtesan. Stockdale v. Onwhyn, 7 D. & R. 625; 5 B. & C. 173; 2 C. & P. 163.

VIII. CONSTRUCTION OF CONTRACTS.

1. Generally.

The place of making a contract should be considered in expounding it, unless the parties have a view to another kingdom. Robinson v. Bland, 1 W. Black. 234, 256.

Where a contract was made between A. and B., whereby A. having a quantity of apples, agreed to sell his cyder to B. at a certain price per hogshead, to be delivered at T. at a future time, and to lend such pipes as he had for the use of the cyder, to be manufactured on his, A.'s, premises, and to be paid for before it was removed; and A., in pursuance, delivered a quantity of juice expressed from the apples to a servant hired by B. to manufacture the cyder on A.'s premises, and before the cyder was completely manufactured it was seized by the excise officers, because the place where it was deposited had not been entered, and was condemned in the Exchequer as B.'s property, together with the casks; and, in assumpsit for goods sold and delivered, brought by A. against B., it appeared that the word cyder, at the place where the contract was made, meant the juice of the apples as soon as it was expressed: it was thereupon held, that the contract must be construed to have been for the sale of cyder in that sense of the word, and that the property passed to B. as soon as the apple juice was delivered to his servant; secondly, that it was B.'s duty to enter the premises; and as through his fault it became impossible for A. to deliver the goods at T., the failure to do so did not bar his action: thirdly, that A. might recover in this action the price of the casks lent to defendant. Study v. Sanders, 5 B. & C. 628.

Under an agreement to perform one of two things, the option is in the person who is to perform; and if one of the two things be prohibited under a penalty, no action will lie for the penalty, until the party makes his election by performing the prohibited part of the contract. Layton v. Pearce, 1 Dougl. 15.

In general, where the contract is in the alternative, the election is in the party who is to do the first act. Chippendale v. Thurston, 4 C. & P. 98—Parke.

A contract by A. to let, and by B. to take, the milking of thirty cows, at 7l. 10s. per cow per annum, from 14th February, the rent to be paid quarterly in advance, and by C. to pay the rent, is an entire and not a divisible contract. Whitcher v. Hall, 8 D. & R. 22; 5 B. & C. 269.

Plaintiff's intestate bought a coach of defendant, and gave him bills for the price, and agreed that defendant "do have and hold a claim upon the coach until the debt be paid:"—Held, that this agreement operated only as a personal license from testator to defendant to take the coach if the bills were not paid, but was not a bar to an action of trover by the administrator. Howes v. Ball, 7 B. & C. 481; 1 M. & R. 288.

Plaintiff entered into an agreement to buy the next presentation to a living. The vendor afterwards entered into an agreement with defendant, with the consent of the plaintiff, to sell this presentation to defendant on having such title as he had received for 7500l., of which 500l. was to be paid to plaintiff, "absolutely with the consent of the vendor," on a certain day:—Held, in an action for the 500l., first, that the vendor was not bound to make out a good title; second, that he was not bound to tender a conveyance; third, that the consent of the vendor to the payment of the 500l. was given at the time of making the agreement, and that his having objected at the time of paying the money, was of no avail. Wilmot v. Wilkinson, 6 B. & C. 506.

A., the creditor of B. by bills, for which C. and D. are sureties, by a deed to which B. and C. are parties, discharges B. & C., reserving his remedies against D.; such reservation is not defeated by a stipulation that the bills shall be delivered up; it appearing that such stipulation was intended to be so modified as to give to A. the benefit of such reservation. Malby v. Carstairs, 1 M. & R. 549; 7 B. & C. 735.

By agreement, A. stipulated that he would, as soon as he should become possessed of a certain public-house, execute a lease thereof to B. from the 21st December 1825, for fourteen or twenty-one years. At the time of making the agreement, the house was upon lease, which would not expire till Midsummer, 1827; the legal estate being in trustees, first, to pay debts, and then to pay an annuity, and subject thereto to the use of A. if he attained twenty-four. In June, 1825, after A. had attained twenty-four, but before the outstanding lease had expired, he and the trustees had joined in a lease to C. for twenty-three years.—Held, that A. having thereby put it out of his power so long as the latter lease of 1825 subsisted, to grant any lease to B., had committed a breach of his agreement, and was liable to an action for a breach of that agreement, although the first lease had not expired. Ford v. Tiley, 6 B. & C. 325.

2. Condition Precedent.

As to Time.—The time at which a contract is to be performed is not essential in equity as at law. Radcliffe v. Warrington, 12 Ves. jun. 326.

The lapse of time, if not an essential object of a contract, is no objection to a specific performance. Horne v. Tenant, 13 Ves. jun. 267.

Where it was a part of the condition precedent to the claim of a sum of 80*l.*, in addition to the purchase-money for a new house, that the pavement in front of the adjoining houses should be laid down by the 21st April; it was held, that the delay of four days, though occasioned by bad weather, which prevented the workmen from proceeding, was sufficient to prevent the recovery of such claim. Murray v. Carter, 4 C. & P. 295.—Tindal.

In an agreement by a tenant at will of a public house, for the sale of the possession, trade, and good-will of the house at a fixed sum, and of the stock and furniture at a valuation, one of the terms being, that possession should be taken, and the money paid on a given day, time is of the essence of contract; and a purchaser who was not in a condition to fulfil his part of the contract on that day, cannot compel a specific performance, though he was ready on the following day to have proceeded to complete the purchase. Coolake v. Till, 1 Russ. 376.

Defendant agreed to sell plaintiff a certain quantity of sponge; plaintiff agreed to sell defendant ochre, to be delivered free of expense, on or before a certain day:—Held, the delivery of the ochre by that day, to the extent of the value of the sponge, was a condition precedent to the delivery of the sponge, and the plaintiff, not having done so, they could not recover for the non-delivery of the sponge. Parker v. Swlings, 4 Bing. 280; 12 Moore, 520.

Other Matters.—A party published a prospectus for the publication of a county map and gazetteer, stating that the map would contain "the exact limits of every parish and township in the county." The defendant agreed to take a copy of each. They were published, and there were lines on the map denoting the boundaries of townships, but no distinct lines to show the boundaries of those parishes which consisted of several townships:—Held, that the map was not according to the prospectus, and that the defendant was not bound to take the map, although, by reference to the gazetteer, it could be ascertained what townships were in each parish. Tosell v. Anderson, 4 C. & P. 198.—Tenterden.

Certain stock of the plaintiff was transferred under a forged power of attorney: the Bank of England offered to replace the stock, if the plaintiff would first prove the amount under a commission of bankruptcy issued against a firm in which the forger of the power had been a partner: after this offer the plaintiff received a demand, and engaged to tender a proof of this demand under the commission of bankruptcy.—Held, that they could not sue the Bank in respect of the stock, till they had fulfilled their engagement to tender the proof under the commission of bankruptcy. Stacy v. England (Bank) 6 Bing. 754; 4 M. & P. 639.

The defendant, the master of a vessel, agreed in writing to take out to the Cape of Good Hope a boat belonging to the plaintiff, not exceeding thirty feet in length and ten in width. The plaintiff tendered a boat within those dimensions, but it was a decked boat. The defendant refused to take it on board, unless the deck was removed; and he offered to take it off, and replace it on the arrival of the vessel at the Cape. This the plaintiff declined. The defendant proved that it was the custom to remove the decks of such boats, as they tended to impede the navigation of the vessel:—Held, that such evidence was properly received, and that the plaintiff could not recover against the defendant in an action for a breach of the agreement for not taking out the boat. Haynes v. Hildridge, 5 M. & P. 523; 1 Bing. 587.

Declaration stated that the plaintiff agreed to let, and A. B. agreed to take, the milking of thirty cows, for the sum of 7*l.* 10*s.* per annum per cow, from the 14th of February, the rent to be paid quarterly in advance, on the 14th of February, the 14th of May, the 14th of August, and the 14th of November, and the defendant agreed to pay the rent at the times therein mentioned. The plaintiff then averred performance of the agreement by him, and that A. B. took the milking of the thirty cows, and alleged as a breach the non-payment by the defendant of the rent, which became due on the 14th of November. It appeared in evidence at the trial, that in May it was agreed between the plaintiff and A. B. the latter having then thirty-two cows, that the plaintiff instead of taking away two at that time, should be at liberty to take four at the fall of the year, and it appeared that between the 4th and the 20th October, the plaintiff did take away four cows, leaving A. B. after that period less than thirty. It was proved that this alteration in the mode of using the cows, made no substantial difference as to profit or loss:—Held, by Bayley and Holroyd, Justices, (Littledale, J. dissentiente,) that this was an entire contract for the letting of thirty cows, neither more nor less, and that the plaintiff in this action against a surety, was bound to prove a literal performance of that contract; that he had not done so, inasmuch as he had shown that during part of the year he had allowed A. B. to have the milking of twenty-eight cows only. Whitcher v. Hall, 5 B. & C. 269; 8 D. & R. 22.

Assumpsit, in consideration, that plaintiff at defendant's request would consent to suspend proceedings against another person, defendant promised to pay the debt on a certain day: averment, that plaintiff did suspend the proceedings. The agreement proved was in writing as follows: "the plaintiff having at my request consented to suspend proceedings, &c.:"—Held, 1st, that, as the request must have preceded the consent to suspend proceedings, the contract was properly declared on, as an executory contract; 2dly, that the consideration for the promise was good, as it must be taken as a consent to suspend the proceedings, at least until the day defendant was to pay the debt; 3dly, that after verdict, the averment that "plaintiff had suspended proceedings" was sufficient without specifying for what period. Payne v. Wilson, 7 B. & C. 423; 1 M. & R. 708.

A. & B. were litigant parties in several actions, C. was the attorney of B., and, at a meeting to settle the actions, it was agreed between A. and B., in the presence of C., inter alia, that C. should give his promissory note at two months, as a collateral security from B. to A. of a sum of 450*l.*, and it was added that all the effects which A. had of B.'s, should be delivered up to C., as B.'s attorney; C. signed the note at the meeting immediately after the signing of the agreement:—Held, in an action on the note by A. against C., that the delivery up of the effects was not a condition precedent to the right of A. to claim the money. Irving v. King, 4 C. & P. 309—Tenterden.

IX. PROCEEDINGS IN EQUITY.

1. Inadequacy of Consideration.

Contracts entered into by parties knowing their rights, though upon inadequate consideration, shall not be set aside. Stephens v. Bateman, 1 Bro. C. C. 22.

A contract was executed, though the consideration was inadequate, as it did not amount to fraud; but without costs. Burrows v. Lock, 10 Ves. jun. 470.

Inadequacy of value is not in itself sufficient to set aside a contract. Griffith v. Spratley, 1 Cox, 383.

But when gross, it is strong evidence of fraud. Lowther v. Lowther, 13 Ves. jun. 103. And see Low v. Barchard, 8 Ves. jun. 133.

It is a badge of fraud, upon which a contract shall be set aside. Heathcote v. Paignon, 2 Bro. C. C. 167.

Mere inadequacy of price, where it cannot be used as evidence of fraud, is not in itself sufficient to prevent the court from decreeing a specific performance of an agreement for the purchase of land. Collier v. Brown, 1 Cox, 428.

Relief was given in equity upon inadequacy of consideration, so extreme, as to satisfy the court, that there must have been imposition or oppression. Underhill v. Horwood, 10 Ves. jun. 209.

A bill was filed to compel the transfer of certain stock, the reversionary interest in which had been formerly purchased by the plaintiff, and had now become vested in possession. The transfer was resisted by the vendor, and the trustees of the settlement under which he claimed, on two grounds—first, fraud, or undue advantage—and secondly, inadequacy of the consideration. The first wholly failed in evidence. On the second point, the effect of the evidence was, that the price given was sufficient, according to the opinion of auctioneers, and persons of that description, but was about two-thirds of the value, calculated by actuaries from the tables:—Held, that the inadequacy of the consideration was not sufficiently proved. Potts v. Curtis, 1 Younge, 543.

2. Impossibility of Performance.

A court of equity will relieve against a contract, become impossible to be performed. Smith v. Morris, 2 Bro. C. C. 311.

On the question of executing an agreement, hardship cannot be regarded, unless it amounts to a degree of inconvenience and absurdity, so great as to afford judicial proof that such could not be the meaning of the parties. Pribble v. Boghurst, 1 Swans. 329.

Specific performance of an agreement to build may be decreed if sufficiently certain, but a general covenant to lay out a certain sum in a building of a certain value, cannot be so executed. Mesely v. Virgin, 3 Ves. jun. 184.

3. Other things.

A person executing a deed for the purpose of defrauding the law, cannot come into equity for the purpose of setting it aside, even though the instrument has never been made use of; and, therefore, if A. convey an estate to B. as a qualification to kill game, equity will not compel a reconveyance. Roberts v. Roberts, 1 Daniel, 143: S. C. nom. Doe d. Roberts v. Roberts, 2 B. & A. 369; 2 Chit. 272.

Two parties, treating for a lease, agree by articles in writing, that the amount of rent shall be settled by arbitration; the arbitrators, in case they disagreed, to have power to call in a third party, and his decision, with that of one of the arbitrators, to regulate the rent. The arbitrators disagree, and an umpire is appointed. He, in making his valuations, takes into account an agreement made with himself by the lessee to lay out a considerable sum in repairs, which agreement or obligation the lessor, by the original agreement between the parties, has no power to enforce. The arbitrator for the lessee agrees to the valuation, not as the result of his own judgment, but after consulting the lessee, and at the instigation of the lessee's wife. The House of Lords, reversing a decision of the court below, held, that, under these circumstances, a specific performance ought not to be granted. Chichester v. McIntire, 1 Dow & Clark, 460; 4 Bligh, N. S. 78.

Though a parol waiver of a written contract, amounting to a complete abandonment, which is clearly proved, or even parol variations so acted upon, that the original agreement could no longer be enforced without injury to one party, would bar a specific performance: yet variations verbally agreed upon are not sufficient to prevent the execution of a written agreement, the situation of the parties in all other respects remaining the same. Price v. Dyer, 17 Ves. jun. 356.

Treaty and negotiations for a variation of the terms of a contract will not amount to a waiver, unless the circumstances show that it was the intention of the parties that there should be an absolute abandonment and dissolution of the contract. Robinson v. Page, 3 Russ. 114.

4. Proceedings.

Specific performance of a contract by a competent party, where its nature and circumstances are unobjectionable, is as much of course as damages at law. Hall v. Warren, 9 Ves. jun. 608.

An infant cannot sustain a suit for the specific performance of a contract, because the remedy is not mutual. Flight v. Bolland, 4 Russ. 298.

Where damages in an action at law for a breach of contract to sell a chattel, would be an insufficient remedy for the purchaser, although a sufficient remedy for the vendor; a demurrer to a bill by the vendor for a specific performance was overruled, because the remedy in equity must be mutual for purchaser and vendor. Withy v. Cottle, 1 Sim. & Stu. 174.

After a decree for a specific performance against a defendant, he cannot proceed by action at law on the contract for damages. Reynolds v. Nelson, 6 Madd. 290.

A bill for the specific performance of an agreement, was dismissed upon the lapse of time, without proceeding in the performance. Alley v. Deschamps, 13 Ves. jun. 225.

I. NATURE OF TENURE.

1. Creation and General Incidents.

A copyhold must have been such time out of mind, and cannot be created within the time of legal memory. Roe d. Newnan v. Newnan, 2 Wils. 125.

After a grant of the soil of wastes to trustees for the use of the copyholders in free socage, the lands when inclosed will be freehold, and not copyhold. Revel v. Jodrell, 2 T. R. 415.

A copyhold cannot be created by operation of law, but must have been demised or demisable by copy time out of mind. Id.

Where there is no custom for that purpose, the lord of a manor cannot make a new grant of copyhold. Rex v. Hornchurch, 2 B. & A. 189.

If there be a custom within the manor for a lord to grant parcels of the waste by copy of court roll, the premises granted in that mode are well described as copyhold premises, though the date of the grant be modern. Northwick (Lord) v. Stanway, 3 B. & P. 346: S. C. not S. P. 6 East, 56.

A grant of parcel of the waste of a manor to hold to B. and his heirs by way of increase to his copyhold, by such services as the copyhold was subject to, for which B. paid a fine of 10s. was held not to enure as copyhold, there being no custom to warrant such grant, nor as an estate in fee-simple. Rex v. Wilby, 2 M. & S. 504.

A lord of the manor cannot grant copyhold lands to his wife; if he does, the grant is void. Firebrass d. Symes, v. Pennant, 2 Wils. 255.

There is no general custom for all copyholds. Everest v. Glyn, 6 Taunt. 425; 2 Marsh. 84; Holt, 1.

Copyhold estates are liable to especial occupancy. Doe d. Lempriere v. Martin, 2 W. Black. 1148. And see Zouch d. Forse v. Forse, 7 East, 186; 3 Smith, 191.

One may hold the prima tonsura of land as copyhold, and another may have the soil and every other beneficial enjoyment of it as freehold. Stammers v. Dixon, 7 East, 200; 3 Smith, 261.

An equitable estate tail in a copyhold does not merge by the accession of the legal fee. Merest v. James, 6 Madd. 118.

A tenant of a manor having been originally admitted to a copyhold estate, to hold the same for the lives of H. D. the elder, and H. D. the younger, afterwards surrendered the same into the hands of the lord, and took a regrant of the same estate for the lives of J. G. and D. G. his sons, and the life of the longest liver of them successively, according to the custom of the manor, and paid a fine to the lord for his admittance, the grant describing him as sole purchaser. By the custom of the manor, when a copyhold tenement is granted by copy of court-roll to any person, to hold the same to such person for the lives of two or more other persons, and the life of the longest liver of such other persons successively, and the grantee dies during the life or lives of any one or more of such other person or persons, without having devised the copyhold tenement by his will, such one or more of such other person or persons so surviving the grantee shall be entitled, by virtue of such grant, to take and hold the copyhold tenement successively, as they are respectively named in the grant, during his or their life or lives respectively; but if the grantee devises the copyhold tenement by his will, the devisee upon his death shall hold the same during the life or lives of such other person or persons so surviving. The grantee devised his copyhold estate to his eldest son, one of the cestui que vies named in the grant, who, upon his father's death, entered into the possession of the estate:—Held, that the custom was good and valid in law, and not being inconsistent with the grant, barred the lord's right of entry. Doe d. Nepean v. Goddard, 2 D. & R. 773; 1 B. & C. 522.

Under a grant by copy of court-roll of a reversionary estate to A. (who had before a life-estate in the premises) habendum to him for the lives of B. and C. his grandsons, during the life of either of them longest living, successively, accordingly to the custom, &c. reserving a heriot and 6s. rent; A. only takes the legal estate in reversion, and not the cestui que vies, there being no custom to enable them to take, although they were stated to be admitted tenants in reversion. Right v. Bowden, 3 East, 260.

And though, in consideration of the fine paid by the grandfather, the lord suffered the first in succession of the cestui que vies to enter as tenant upon the death of his grandfather, and received the 6s. rent from him till his death; yet he not dying seised of the legal estate, his widow could not claim her free-bench according to the custom. Id.

Nor did such receipt of rent from the cestui que vie constitute a tenancy from year to year, so as to entitle his widow to notice to quit, the rent not being received as between landlord and tenant, but attributable to another consideration. Id.

Quære, whether the surrenderee or devisee of copyhold lands can accept an enfranchisement before admittance? Wilson v. Allen, 1 J. & W. 611.

The heir may. Id.

The enfranchisement of a copyhold may, upon proper evidence, be presumed even against the crown. And where a surrender had been made to churchwardens and their successors in 1636, without naming any rent; but, in 1649, the parliamentary survey charged the churchwardens with 6d. rent, under the head of "freehold rents;" and there was no evidence of any different rent having been paid since that time, and receipts had been given for it, as for a freehold rent, by the steward of the manor:—Held, that this was evidence to be submitted to a jury, on which they might presume a grant of enfranchisement, although the manor had continued out in lease from before 1636 to 1804; and though a tablet of parochial benefactions, at least as old as 1656, which was suspended in the parish church, noticed the gift of the copyhold by surrender, but did not notice any enfranchisement of it. Roe d. Johnson v. Ireland, 11 East, 280.

A single admittance to copyhold is evidence to prove the custom of the manor for lands to descend to the youngest nephew. Doe d. Mason v. Mason, 3 Wills. 63.

Where a lord of a manor admits a tenant upon the trusts of an indenture referred to in the surrender, he is to be considered as consenting to those trusts, and is bound by them upon the death of the trustee without an heir. Wesley v. Maule, 2 Russ. & Mylne, 97.

A. being seised of a copyhold in fee, surrendered it to the use of B. and his heirs, according source, to sell the tenement, to retain out of the proceeds of the sale a sum of 700*l.*, and interest, for which the surrender was a security, and to pay the overplus to A.; B. was admitted, and died intestate and without an heir, the 700*l.*, with an arrear of interest, still remaining due to him:—Held, that the lord did not become entitled to the tenement by reason of failure of heirs of B.; and that A. had a right to redeem the premises, and, upon payment of what was due on the mortgage, to be readmitted as tenant in fee according to the custom of the manor:—that it was the personal representative of B., and not the lord, who was entitled to receive the mortgage debt. Id.

Estates of inheritance in a manor were held at the will of the lord, according to the custom of the manor, subject to fines on the death of the lord or tenant, and on alienation, and to other dues. The tenant might alien by customary bargain and sale, with the license of the lord inrolled. Courts were held twice a year, at which new tenants on death or alienation were bound to appear, and have their names entered on a roll, paying a shilling to the steward. On default made, the lord might seize quousque:—Held, that, in cases of alienation, the estates passed by the conveyance, licensed by the lord; and, where the lands descended, the heir became entitled as in case of freehold; and, consequently, that a person taking as heir was not bound, on inrolment, to receive a stamped admittance from the steward. Doe d. Carlisle (Earl) v. Thomas, 2 B. & Adol. 585.

The generality and vagueness of descriptions of copyhold property on the court-rolls are so well known, that a vendor is not bound to show how the description on the court-roll is to be applied to the present state of the property, if he prove that the property has actually been enjoyed and passed under that description for upwards of sixty years. Long v. Collier, 4 Russ. 207.

2. Customary Freeholds.

The customary tenements in the north of England, which are parcels of the respective manors in which they are situate, and descendible, from ancestor to heir, by the hereditary right, called tenant right, though held of the lord, according to the custom, differ much from copyhold. Burrell v. Dodd, 3 B. & P. 378.

The difference between copyholders and customary tenants explained. Vaughan d. Atkins v. Atkins, 5 Barr. 2764.

A copyhold, to which a right of common was annexed, having by the custom of the manor vested in the lord by forfeiture, and been regranted by him as a copyhold tenement with the appurtenances:—Held, that it having always continued demisable, whilst in the hands of the lord, it was a customary tenement, and, as such, was still entitled to the right of common. Badger v. Ford, 3 B. & A. 153.

tenant was admitted by the description of a customary tenement, to have to her and her heirs, to hold of the lord by the rod, according to the custom of the manor, by the accustomed rent, suit of court, customs, and services, as in the lord, and not in the tenant, though not holder at the will of the lord. Doe d. Cook v. Denters, 7 East, 299; 3 Smith, 291.

Where a customary tenement is freehold, and the lord, being only tenant for life of the manor, purchases the fee of the customary tenement, the seignory is suspended during the life of the lord, but revives at his death, and the customary tenement descends to his heir. Bingham v. Westgate, 1 Russ. & Mylne, 23.

Where the custom of a manor requires a bargain and sale, as well as a surrender and admittance, to pass the customary tenement, the freehold is in the tenant, and not in the lord. Id.

Where a feme sole, after marriage, was admitted tenant of a manor in the north of England, of certain premises to her and her heirs, as of her own tenant right, according to the custom; and afterwards the lord executed a conveyance of the same premises to the husband in fee, and enfranchised the same from all seignory rights to which they were previously liable; it seems that this conveyance, after his death, did not operate by way of grant of the estate in fee, but as an enforcement of the tenant-right estate; and that the wife's estate became a tenancy in fee-simple, and descended upon her heirs; and that those who derived title from them had a right to claim as heirs ex parte materna. Doe d. Ruddy v. Jackson, 2 D. & R. 514; 1 B. & C. 448.

Where, in a manor, the copies of admission were anciently "to hold of the lord according to the custom of husbandry of the said manor," but other copies were to "hold at the will of the lord" also, and all the modern copies were so:—Held, that this land was copyhold, and not customary freehold. Burn v. Rowlina, 3 Smith, 405; 4 C. nom. Brown v. Rowlina, 7 East, 509.

Where the tenants of a manor, formerly belonging to a monastery, holding by border service, and the defence of Tynemouth Castle, made copy of court-roll, and whose estates passed by surrender and admittance, showed in evidence of surrenders, as far back as they existed in writs by Exchequer decrees between the lords and tenants in the times of Eliz. and Jac. 1, by an acquittal of the jury at the court-baron of the lord in Jac. 2, that they were copyholders of admittance, with fines certain, holding according to the custom of husbandry of the manor, (or according to the custom of the manor generally,) whilst stating them to hold at the will of the lord: admitting this evidence to outweigh proof of ministers' accounts in the 30 & 31 Hen. 8, a grant of the manor from the crown in 9 Car. 1, inserting these estates under the name of tenants of husbandry, subsequent nomine conveyances reserving the coal mines, &c. in certain districts and admissions from 1663 to 1777, (including admissions of the several tenants to the estate immediately in question :) in all which they were stated to hold at the will of the lord, as well as according to the custom of husbandry of the manor, &c.; yet as there was evidence for more than a century past, that the lord had leased the coal and limestone under the copyhold lands in different parts of the manor, and had received rent for the same: and that the lessees of the lord, and not the tenants, had taken the coal and limestone:—Held, that such acts of ownership explained the nature of the tenure, according to the custom of husbandry of the manor, &c. and showed, in aid of the other evidence, that the freehold was in the lord, and not in the tenants; and, at any rate, the evidence preponderating so much in favour of the lord, the court would not disturb a verdict given for him. Id.

If the lord of a manor convey a customary estate to the tenant, he cannot reserve to himself the ancient services; for the tenant by reason of the statute of quia emptores must then hold of the superior lord. Bradshaw v. Lawson, 4 T. R. 443.

Where the lord of a customary manor, by his deed, made since the statute of quia emptores, granted to his customary tenant, who then held by the payment of certain customary rents, and other services, that in consideration of a sixty-one penny fine, (or sixty-one years' rent,) he, the lord, ratified and confirmed to the tenant and his heirs, all his customary and tenant-right estate, with the appurtenances, &c., and granted that the tenant and his heirs should be thereof freed, acquitted, exempted, and discharged, from the payment of all rents, fines, heriots, &c., dues, customs, services, and demands, at any time thereafter happening to become due, in respect of the tenancy; except ld. yearly rent, and also excepting and reserving suit of court, with the service incident thereto; and saving and reserving all royalties, escheats, and forfeitures, and all other advantages and emoluments belonging to the seignory, so as not to prejudice the immunities thereby granted to the tenant; and also granted liberty to cut timber, and to sell or lease, &c. without license;—Held, that such confirmation to the tenant of his customary and tenant-right estate, freed, &c. from all rents and services except, &c., was tantamount to a release of those rents and services not specifically excepted; and that by virtue thereof, the customary tenement became frank-free, or held in free and common socage; and that the old customary estate, which before was not devisable, was extinguished, and became thereupon devisable by the statute of wills. Such customary estates, which are peculiar to the north of England, are not freehold, but seem to fall under the same general consideration as copyholds; alienable by bargain and sale, and admittance thereon, and not holden at the will of the lord. Doe d. Reay v. Huntington, 4 East, 270.

The conventional tenants within the assessable manors of the Duchy of Cornwall, have a perpetual indefeasible right to them and their customary heirs and surrenderees, to renew their estates from seven years to seven years. Rouse v. Brenton, 3 M. & R. 361; 8 B. & C. 758.

3. Quasi Tenancy by Curtesy.

A copyhold having descended to a wife as heir at law, who died before admittance, having first borne a child to her husband, which died an infant, the husband was held entitled to hold for his life, in the nature of a tenant by the curtesy of England, according to the custom of the manor; though the only evidence of such custom on the rolls was three instances of husbands admitted as tenants by the curtesy, according to the custom, whose respective wives had been admitted during their lives; the title of a wife claiming as heir by descent being complete without admittance, by the general law of copyhold, and the title of a tenant by the curtesy being also by the operation of law. Doe d. Milner v. Brightwen, 10 East, 583.

And having such good title to the possession as tenant by the curtesy, his possession of the copyhold after his wife's death will be referred to that, and not to any adverse title; though he were admitted after his wife's death to hold to him pursuant to the settlement, by which the estate of the wife was limited to the survivor in fee; so as to let in the title of the heir-at-law of the wife in ejectment brought within 20 years after the husband's death. And though one-third of the copyhold had been settled many years before upon a third person for life; but no surrender having been made to the trustees under the settlement, the legal estate had remained in the heirs of the tenant last seised and admitted: and the steward of the manor appointed by the heir-at-law and her husband, had, in his accounts after the wife's death (which was evidence of his having done the same in her lifetime) for above 20 years back, debited himself with the receipt of two-thirds of the rent for the husband, on account of his wife, and the remaining one-third for such other person claiming under the settlement; yet such payment to the latter must be taken to have been made by the consent of the person entitled at law to the whole; so as to do away the notion of an adverse possession by the husband of that one-third, distinct from his possession of the other two-thirds, as tenant by the curtesy after his wife's death, in an answer to a claim by the heir-at-law of the wife against the devisee of the husband, who set up an adverse possession for above 20 years after the wife's death. Id.

Nor will any release from the heir-at-law living at the time of such curtesy estate be presumed during that period; nor after his death from the present heir-at-law, who might be called upon in equity to discover it, if given; though such release if proved or presumed would bar the copyholder's claim. Id.

4. Mode of barring Entails.

A custom to bar the entails of copyhold land either by recovery suffered, or by surrender in surrender, may subsist, concurrently with a custom to bar by a recovery in the lord's court, though the instances are much less frequent. See d. Wightwick v. Truby, 2 W. Black. 944.

Where, therefore, it was left to the jury to say whether the custom was to bar by recovery or surrender, without stating to them that such customs might be concurrent and consistent with one another, the court granted a new trial. See d. Wallhead v. Ossingbrooke, 9 Moore, 68; 2 Bing. 70.

Slight evidence suffices to prove a custom to bar by recovery, because it is adverse to the interest of those who make the evidence. See d. Deuncey v. Deuncey, 7 Taunt. 674.

A single instance of a surrender in fee by tenant in special tail of a copyhold estate, is evidence to prove a custom within the manor to bar entails by surrender, though the surrenderor has not been dead 20 years, and though one instance be proved of a recovery suffered by tenant in tail to bar the entail. See d. Bennett v. Jeffery, 2 M. & S. 92.

An attorney may be appointed for the purpose of suffering a recovery of copyhold lands, unless there be an express custom to the contrary. Wymer v. Page, 1 Stark. 9—Ellenborough.

II. SURRENDER AND ADMITTANCE.

1. Construction.

By 9 Geo. 1, c. 29, femes covert and infants may be admitted to copyhold estates by attorney or guardian.

By 1 Will. 4, c. 65, s. 3, infants, femes covert, and lunatics may be admitted by their guardian, committee, or attorney.

By s. 4, infants and femes covert may for that purpose appoint attorneys.

In order to effectuate the intention of the parties, the court will construe the word "or" to mean "and," as well in a surrender of copyhold premises as in a will. Wright v. Kemp, 3 T. R. 470.

John Lealand surrendered a copyhold in his occupation to the use of Joseph Lealand and John Lealand his son, for their lives and the life of the survivor; remainder to the heirs of the body of the said John Lealand, son of Joseph L.; remainder to the right heirs of the said John Lealand:—Held, that the ultimate remainder was meant for the right heirs of John the surrenderor, as well because John the surrenderee is before described with the addition of the son of Joseph, as of the manifest futility of giving John the surrenderee an estate tail, and afterwards a fee in reversion. Though, if the construction had been left doubtful, the ultimate remainder would have continued in the surrenderor. See d. Hucknall v. Foster, 9 East, 405.

A copyholder surrenders "his copyhold est-own possession;" and on the same day he receives "all his copyhold cottage and premises then in his own possession." In fact the craft, between which and the cottage and garden there was only a gooseberry hedge, was in the actual occupation of a tenant at the time; yet held, that the whole passed under the description of "all this copyhold cottage and premises;" the words, "then in his own possession," being merely a mistaken description, following the mistake of the surrender, which mentions the craft with the rest as then being in his possession. Geestrigt d. Lamb v. Peers, 11 East. 58.

Ancient admissions of the copyholder and those under whom he claims the land, by the description of trees acras patri, may be construed only to carry the prima tenura, if, in fact, they have enjoyed no more under such admission, while another has had the after-crop, and has cut the trees and fences, scooped the ditches, repaired the fences, and kept the drains, though the copyholder may have paid all the rates and taxes, which was in his own wrong. Stammers v. Dism, 7 East, 200; 3 Smith, 261.

Where there is a grant of a particular thing once sufficiently ascertained by some circumstance belonging to it, the addition of an allegation, mistaken or false, respecting it, will not frustrate the grant; but where a grant is in general terms, there the addition of a particular circumstance will operate by way of restriction and modification of such grant; therefore, where one having customary tenements, compounded and uncompounded, surrendered to the use of his will "all and singular the lands, tenements, &c., whatsoever, in the manor which he held of the lord by copy of court-roll, in whose tenure or occupation soever the same were, being of the yearly rent to the lord in the whole of 4l. 10s. 8½d., and compounded for:—Held, that the words and "compounded for," restrained the operation of the surrender to that description of copyholds then belonging to the surrenderor. And that the words, "being of the yearly rent, &c., of 4l. 10s. 8½d.," which were not referable to any actual amount of his rents, either compounded or uncompounded, though much more to the whole than to the compounded only, could not qualify or impugn that restriction. See d. Conolly v. Vernon, 5 East, 51; 1 Smith, 318.

2. Operation.

Relation of Time.—The title to copyhold lands relates back from the time of the admittance to the surrender, as against all persons but the lord, so that the surrenderee may recover ejectment against the surrenderor on a demise laid between the times of surrender and admittance. Holdfast d. Woollens v. Clapham, 1 T. R. 600; 4 Burr. 1952.

An admittance of the surrenderee before trial will maintain ejectment brought by him before admittance, upon a demise laid between the times of surrender and admittance. Doe d. Bennington v. Hall, 16 East, 208.

The devisee of a copyhold or customary estate, which had been surrendered to the use of the will, having died before admittance, her devisee, though afterwards admitted, cannot recover in ejectment; for his admittance has no relation to the last legal surrender, but the legal title remains in the heir of the surrenderor. Doe d. Vernon v. Vernon, 7 East, 8; 3 Smith, 6.

A., a copyholder for life, remainder to B., surrenders his own and B.'s estate (over which latter he had no control, and by which he let in B.'s remainder,) and takes a new copy for the lives of himself, C. and B. successive; and on A.'s death, after 20 years had run against B., B. enters on the possession then vacant:—Held, that as against C., who had no possession and no title, B. might defend his legal title, coupled with possession, in ejectment; however 20 years adverse possession by A. might have barred B.'s possessory right as against him; or might have disabled, B., if he had continued out of possession, from recovering in ejectment. Doe d. Burrough v. Reade, 8 East, 353.

One who was admitted tenant, upon a claim as administrator de bonis non to the grantee of a copyhold pur autre vie, having no title in such character, cannot recover in ejectment by virtue of such admission, as upon a new and substantive grant of the lord. Zouche d. Forse v. Forse, 7 East, 186; 3 Smith, 191.

What Estate.]—Devisees of contingent remainders in a copyhold, not being in the seisin, cannot make a surrender of their interest; nor will such a surrender operate by estoppel against the parties or their heirs. Doe d. Blacksell v. Tomkins, 11 East, 185. And see Doe d. Lushington v. Landaff, 2 N. R. 491.

A surrender of copyhold lands to the use of a will only operates on the estate which the surrenderor has at the time of the surrender. Doe d. Ibbott v. Cowling, 6 T. R. 63.

And therefore if a copyholder, having an estate pur autre vie, surrender all his estate in possession, remainder or expectancy, to the use of his will, and afterwards take the fee by descent, and then dispose of the fee by will, the fee will not pass by it. Id.

The testator being tenant of copyhold premises, at Crondall, under four several admissions to the use of himself for life and of such person as he should appoint, and in default of appointment, to the use of himself in fee, subject to certain quit-rents, and being seised and possessed of other real estates in Great Britain and Ireland, and of a leasehold estate held under two leases at Blansby, devised his whole real estate in lands, in Great Britain or Ireland, to his wife for life, and after her death to be divided between his two nephews, and their respective issue, and in default of such issue, to be divided between the children of his nieces, &c.; and by a codicil, reciting that he had ordered all his estates in Great Britain and Ireland, after the decease of his nephews without issue, to be divided, &c., he revoked the same; and before that division devised his whole real estate to B. and his heirs male, &c., and devised his two leases with the quit-rents of his lands in Crondall and in Blansby to B., after his wife's decease:—Held, that B. after the wife's death, took a fee in the copyhold premises. Cuthbert v. Lempriere, 3 M. & S. 159.

A copyhold was surrendered to the use of husband and wife for their lives, and the life of the longer liver of them, and, from and after the decease of the survivor, to the right heirs of the survivor for ever:—Held, that the husband and wife took a vested estate for their joint lives, as well as for the life of the survivor, with a contingent remainder in fee to such survivor. Doe d. Dummer v. Wilson, 4 B. & A. 303.

A surrender of a copyhold "to husband and wife, and the survivor, and after the death of the survivor, to the right heirs of both," vests an immediate fee-simple in the husband and wife by entirety, and the husband cannot alien or devise any part of it, but on his death the whole survives to his wife. Green d. Crue v. King, 2 W. Black. 1211.

If the heir apparent of a copyholder in fee surrender in the lifetime of his ancestor, and survive him, the heir of such surrenderor is not estopped by that surrender of his ancestor from claiming against the surrenderee. Goodtitle d. Faulkner v. Morse, 3 T. R. 365.

Quære, whether in the case of a freehold estate, if the heir had made a feoffment under such circumstances, his heir would not be estopped? Id.

One seized in fee of a copyhold of inheritance by descent ex parte maternâ surrendered the same to the use of himself for life, remainder to such persons and for such estates as he should by deed or will, attested by three witnesses, appoint, remainder in default of appointment to himself in fee; after which he made a mortgage, and surrendered to the use of the mortgagee in fee, who, upon repayment of the principal and interest, surrendered again to the mortgagor:—Held, that the line of descent was thereby broken, and that the estate descended to the paternal heir. Doe d. Harman v. Morgan, 7 T. R. 103.

A dormant surrender operates as a severance of a joint tenancy, though it is revocable during the lifetime of the surrenderor. Gale v. Gale, 2 Cox, 136.

3. Mode of Surrender.

A person claiming to be admitted as heir to a copyhold, need not tender himself to be admitted at the lord's court, if the steward, upon application to him out of court; has refused to admit him. Doe d. Burrell v. Bellamy, 2 M. & S. 87.

A feme covert who surrenders copyhold lands, ought previously to be examined separately from her husband by the steward of the manor. Driver d. Berry v. Thompson, 4 Taunt. 294.

But by special custom she may be separately examined before two customary tenants. Id.

600 Surrender and Admittance. [COPYHOLD] Surrender and Admittance.
A custom for a feme covert to surrender her copyhold lands, without the assent of her husband, is bad. Stevens d. Wise v. Tyrrell, 2 Wils. 1.

A feme covert, entitled to a copyhold, surrendered it after secret examination by the steward, to the use of her husband with his assent, testified by his immediate admittance:—Held, that this surrender was valid. Scamon v. Maw, 3 Bing. 378; 11 Moore, 243.

Semble, that a custom to surrender for inrolment at a subsequent court, within an indefinite time, is an unreasonable custom. Doe d. Priestly v. Calloway, 9 D. & R. 518; 6 B. & C. 493.

4. To the Use of Will.

A copyholder has a right to surrender to the use of his will, though there is no instance of it upon the records of the manor. Church v. Mundy, 15 Ves. jun. 403.

A custom in a manor that copyholds shall not be surrendered to the use of a will, is bad. Pike v. White, 3 Bro. C. C. 286.

A copyholder in fee having surrendered to the use of his will, and afterwards surrendering to new particular uses, with reversion to himself in fee, is in by the old use, and may devise the reversion, without any admittance, or fresh surrender to the use of his will. Thrustout d. Gower v. Cunningham, 2 W. Black. 1046.

Where a copyhold surrendered to the use of a will was devised to six persons, of whom one offered to be admitted, but the lord refused to admit him:—Held, that the lord ought to have admitted him, and could not seize quousque, &c. Roe d. Ashton v. Hutton, 2 Wils. 162.

The statute 55 Geo. 3, c. 192, which was passed "to remove certain difficulties in the disposition of copyhold estates by will," extends only to supply surrenders in form, but not surrenders in substance: therefore, where a feme covert omitted to surrender to the use of her will:—Held, that the case was not within that statute. Doe d. Nethercote v. Bartle, 1 D. & R. 81; 5 B. & A. 492.

If a copyhold be surrendered to such uses as a feme covert shall by will or codicil appoint, a paper, purporting to be a will, though made by her living with her husband, is a good execution. Driver d. Berry v. Thompson, 4 Taunt. 294.

Since the statute 55 Geo. 3, c. 192, a copyhold estate will pass under a general devise of all the testator's real estate, although there was no previous surrender to the use of his will. Doe d. Clarke v. Ludlam, 5 M. & P. 48; 7 Bing. 275.

A dormant surrender of a copyhold, (that is, a surrender to A. on condition to perform the will of the surrenderor,) will vest an estate in the dormant surrenderee, sufficient to support the contingent remainders of the surrenderor's will, without the interposition of trustees for the purpose. Gale v. Gale, 2 Cox, 136.

5. Necessity of Admittance.

A mandamus to the lord to admit to a copy-hold does not lie. Williams v. Lonsdale (Lord), 3 Ves. jun. 754.

A mandamus to the steward of a manor to admit a copyholder claiming by descent, refused, on the ground of descent giving a complete title without admittance. Rex v. Rennett, 2 T. R. 198.

Where a copyholder surrendered to the use of his will, and thereby ordered two persons to sell and apply the money for the purposes in the will:—Held, that they might sell without being admitted; and that the lord was bound to admit the vendee, upon the payment of only one fine. Holder d. Sulyard v. Preston, 2 Wils. 400.

A surrender out of court to the use of his will, made by the surrenderee of a copyhold before his admittance, is absolutely void and of no effect, and cannot be made good by his subsequent admittance. Doe d. Tofield v. Tofield, 11 East, 246.

Till admittance of the surrenderee of a copyhold upon mortgage, the surrenderor continues the legal tenant, and he cannot devise the equity of redemption, even after the surrender made, without a new surrender to the use of his will; but the legal estate, which, on his death, descends to his heir-at-law, will carry the equity of redemption also to the heir in respect to the mortgage. Doe d. Shewen v. Wroot, 5 East, 132; 1 Smith, 363: S. P. Kenebel v. Scrofton, 8 Ves. jun. 30; Floyd v. Aldridge, 5 East, 137, n.

The devisee of a copyhold estate has no title until admittance, and such a right cannot be forfeited to the lord, but will continue in the heir of the surrenderor. — d. Jefferies v. —, 1 Ld. Ken. 110.

Where the lord of a manor, by copy of court roll, granted to A. the reversion of certain premises then in his tenure, to have and to hold to B. for his life, immediately after the death of A.:—Held, that B. might, on the death of A., maintain an ejectment, although he had never been admitted, he having acquired a perfect legal title by the grant, without admittance. Roe d. Coal v. Loveless, 2 B. & A. 453.

If a copyhold be granted for a term of years, the executor of the termor is obliged to be admitted, and the lord is entitled to a fine upon such admittance. Bath (Earl) v. Abney, 1 Barr. 206; 1 Ld. Ken. 471.

A copyhold may be disclaimed by parol, or by other matters without deed. Rex v. Wilson, 5 M. & R. 140; 10 B. & C. 80.

In the case of a devise of copyhold surrendered to the use of the will, the estate descends upon the heir, subject to the contingency of being divested by the admittance of the devisee. Id.

No disclaimer by the devisee, therefore, is necessary to vest the estate in the heir. Id.

A surrender of chambers in New Inn, to the treasurer and ancients of the society, made with their assent, to the intent that they might grant the said chambers to a purchaser, passes the estate to such purchaser, before admission; admission is not necessary, as in the case of copyholds, to complete the grantee's estate, but is only for the purpose of signifying the assent of the society that the grantee should become a member of the Inn. Doe d. Warry v. Miller, 1 T. R. 393.

The admittance of the particular tenant of a copyhold is an admittance of the remainder-man. Church v. Mundy, 12 Ves. jun. 422.

Where a person claiming as heir-at-law, of the tenant last seised of a copyhold, was refused admission by the lord, and a mandamus issued, but the lord in his return thereto did not deny the heirship, except argumentatively, the court ordered a peremptory mandamus. Rex v. Brewers' Company, 4 D. & R. 492; 3 B. & C. 172.

A mandamus lies against a steward of a manor for not admitting a devisee, under the pretence that the testator was insane. Anon. Loft, 390.

The admittance to a copyhold enures according to the title, though not correctly expressed. Church v. Mundy, 12 Ves. jun. 422.

6. Proof.

A surrender of, and admittance to a copyhold may be proved by the original entries on the court-rolls, without showing a copy stamped, as required by stat. 48 Geo. 3, c. 149. Doe d. Bennington v. Hall, 16 East, 208.

Where a surrender of copyhold lands is made out of court by a deed of surrender, the copy of court-roll is still evidence of the surrender, although the act of 48 Geo. 3, c. 149, requires that in such cases the deed of surrender, or a memorandum thereof, shall be stamped, and not the copy of the court-roll, as in all other cases. Doe d. Hawthorn v. Mee, 1 Nev. & M. 424.

A draft of the entry on the court-rolls of the surrender and presentment of a copyhold, is good evidence of the surrender and presentment, though it appears that the entry was never made on the rolls. Doe d. Priestley v. Calloway, 6 B. & C. 484; 9 D. & R. 518.

Parol evidence of holding a manor court, and the proceedings at it, is admissible. Id.

After long enjoyment under an admittance to a copyhold, semble, that a previous surrender (not entered on the rolls) may be presumed. Wilson v. Allen, 1 J. & W. 611.

III. FINES.

Tenants in coparcenery of a copyhold estate are in law but one heir; and it seems that they are entitled to admittance upon the payment of one fine to the lord. Rex v. Bonsall, 4 D. & R. 825; 3 B. & C. 173.

Therefore a mandamus was granted to admit coparceners on payment of one set of fees. Id.

One fine cannot be assessed on the admission to several copyhold tenements. Grant v. Astle, 2 Dougl. 722.

A mandamus lies to the lord and steward of a manor, to admit one to a copyhold tenement who has a prima facie legal title, in order to enable him to try his right; though equity had before refused to compel the lord to admit him for want of his showing an equitable right to the property. But if there be a claim of a previous fine due to the lord in respect of the ancestor from whom the party claims, the rule will only be granted on payment of such fine or fines as shall be due. Rex v. Coggan, 6 East, 431; 2 Smith, 417.

A covenant to surrender a copyhold to a purchaser, and to make and do all acts, deeds, &c. for the perfect surrendering and assuring the premises at the costs and charges of the seller, is not broken by non-payment of the fine to the lord on the admission of the purchaser; for the title is perfected by the admittance of the tenant, and the fine is not due till after the admittance. Graham v. Sime, 1 East, 632.

A covenant made by a copyholder with a stranger to assign and surrender his copyhold to him, which covenant is afterwards presented by the homage, does not give the lord any right to a fine. Rex v. Hendon, 2 T. R. 484. And see Garland v. Jekyll, 2 Bing. 273; 9 Moore, 502.

A., a copyholder, covenants to assign and surrender to B., which covenant is presented by the homage, but before any surrender, B. assigns his interests to C., to whom A. surrenders; C. has a right to be admitted, on payment of a fine for his own admittance only. Id.

If the lord of a manor refuse to admit a person to whom a copyhold is surrendered, on account of a disagreement respecting the fine to be paid, the court will grant a mandamus to compel the lord to admit, without examining the right to the fine; for no right to the fine can arise till admittance. Id.

Where a copyholder in fee, who had paid a fine on his original admittance, surrendered to the use of himself for life, remainder to his wife for life, remainder over; on which surrender and re-admittance no new fine was paid, and by the custom a remainder-man coming into possession on the death of tenant for life, must be admitted and pay a fine:—Held, that such a custom is good. Doe d. Whitbread v. Jenney, 5 East, 522; 2 Smith, 116.

A custom to renew copyholds for lives can only be on payment of certain fines. Wharton v. King, 3 Anst. 659; S. P. Abergavenny (Lord) v. Thomas, 3 Anst. 668, n.

The lord of a manor having taken a full fine on the admittance of a tenant for life, is not entitled to another full fine upon the admittance of the remainder-man as tenant in fee, unless the imposition of such latter fine is authorized by a special custom of the manor. Ely (Dean) v. Caldecott, 1 M. & Scott, 633; 8 Bing. 439.

The lord admitting a tenant for life may apportion the fine, but cannot remit it to the tenant for life, and charge the whole upon the remainder-man. Kensington (Lord) v. Mansell, 13 Ves. jun. 246.

The admission of a tenant for life to a copyhold, is the admission of all in the remainder, and the lord may assess the whole fine. Id.

The lord of a manor is bound to admit the customary heir of a copyholder in fee, although there be a surrender to the use of the will, and a devise by the surrenderor, there being no claim of admittance on the part of the devisee. Rex v. Wilson, 5 M. & R. 140; 10 B. & C. 80.

So, although it appear (upon the return to a mandamus) that the non-claim of admittance on the part of the devisee, is the result of a contrivance between him and the customary heir, to deprive the lord of the fine which would be payable upon the admittance of the devisee. Id.

Where by the custom of a manor, persons not being previously customary tenants, or not dwelling in the manor, purchasing by surrender customary lands within the manor, were liable to pay a larger fine to the lord than tenants or inhabitants; and a person not being a tenant or inhabitant, had purchased the equity of redemption in a customary estate, and in order to save the larger fine due in respect thereof, had subsequently become the purchaser of a smaller estate; the court granted a mandamus to the lord and steward to admit him to the latter; and as the return thereto did not allege any act of fraud in the transaction, the mandamus was made peremptory, although the effect of admittance to the smaller estate would be to defeat the lord's claim to the fine due upon the larger estate first purchased. Rex v. Meer and Forton, 2 D. & R. 824; S. C. nom. Rex v. Boughy, 1 B. & C. 565.

Indebitatus assumpsit lies for copyhold tolls and fines. Whitefield v. Hunt, 2 Dougl. 727.

The declaration may state generally, that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in such a sum, (viz. the amount of the fines, &c.,) for reasonable fines due and payable to him. Id.

If an assessment of a copyhold fine be entered in the court-rolls, as of 100*l.*, but that out of especial favour the lord remitted 40*l.*, and thereby reduced it to 60*l.*, and the lord sued for the fine, and the jury finding the annual value of the premises 30*l.*, gave a verdict for 60*l.*, the lord cannot retain the verdict for the sum actually due, but must make a new assessment; the old assessment, notwithstanding the remitter, being in law an assessment as of 100*l.* Northwick (Lord) v. Stanway, 3 B. & P. 346; 6 East, 56.

The lord may recover from a copyholder the fine assessed, by him on admittance, not exceeding two years' value of the tenement, although there be no entry of the assessment of such fine on the court-rolls, but only a demand of such a sum for a fine after the value of the tenement had been found by the homage. Id.

The lord of a manor can never be entitled to more than two years' intrinsic value of the estate, as a fine upon admission; therefore a custom to take 10 per cent. on the purchase money, be it of ever so long continuance, cannot bind. Leake v. Pigot (Lord), 1 Selw. N. P. 87—Yates.

And assumpsit will lie to recover back the overplus above the two years' value, if it was paid upon compulsion. Id.

The rent reserved in a lease of copyhold premises, is not conclusive as to the amount of a fine payable to the lord, for the tenant may show that the actual value of the premises demised is less than the rent reserved; and the fine must be estimated according to the improved value. Verulam (Earl) v. Howard, 5 M. & P. 148; 7 Bing. 327.

A copyhold estate was vested in fourteen trustees, and by a decree of the court of Chancery, made in a suit to which the lord of the manor, and the trustees for the time were parties, it was ordered, that when at any time the number of the trustees should be reduced to five, the lord should, with the approbation of the master in Chancery, nominate nine others to be added to the five, to whose use a new surrender should be made, and that the lord should admit them on paying a reasonable fine. The annual value of the estate was 1000*l.*:—Held, that 565*l.* 19*s.* was an unreasonable fine, on the admission of fourteen trustees; and that the proper mode of assessing the fine was to take, for the first life, two years' improved value; for the second life, one half of the sum taken for the first; and for the third life, one half of the sum taken for the second; and so on. Wilson v. Hoare, 2 B. & Adol. 350.

IV. HERIOTS, SERVICES, AND QUIT-RENTS.

Where a copyhold estate, in the possession of one owner, paid but one heriot, but several, if divided among several owners; if it afterwards becomes united in the person of a single owner, one heriot only is payable. Garland v. Jekyll, 2 Bing. 273; 9 Moore, 502.

It had been before held, that devisees of a copyhold, holding as tenants in common, had several estates to which they must be severally admitted, and for which several services were due to the lord, and several heriots on the death of each tenant, and the multiplication of heriots and fees on admission still continued, notwithstanding the reunion of the same land afterwards in one person; the estates or interests in the land, once divided into severalty, continuing several. Attree v. Scutt, 6 East, 476; 1 Smith, 449.

Where a copyhold tenement holden by heriot custom becomes the property of several as tenants in common, the lord is entitled to a heriot from each of them; but if the several portions are reunited in one person, one heriot only is payable. Holloway v. Berkeley, 6 B. & C. 2; 9 D. & R. 83.

It seems that a custom for the homage to assess a compensation in lieu of a heriot, to be paid by an incoming copyholder on surrender or alienation, is not good. Parkin v. Radcliffe, 1 B. & P. 282.

Evidence that the homage have been accustomed to assess a certain sum of money "as a heriot," upon alienation, and that such assessment has always been made with reference to the best chattel of the tenant, will not support an avowry for "a heriot in kind" upon alienation. Id.

Where a plea of justification in trespass for taking two horses, as heriots, stated a custom in the manor, that the lord from time immemorial until the division of a certain tenement into moieties, had taken and been accustomed to take a heriot upon the death of every tenant dying seised: and since the division the lord had taken and been accustomed to take, on the death of every tenant dying seised of either of the moieties, a heriot for each moiety; this must be taken to be one entire custom, and not two distinct customs, the one applicable to the tenement before, and the other after the division of it; and being laid to be an immemorial custom, it is disproved by evidence that the division was made within memory. Kingsmill v. Bull, 9 East, 185.

Where the lord of a manor justified under a custom to have the best beast on the tenant's death, and the custom proved was, that the lord should have the best beast or good:—Held, that the variance was fatal. Adderley v. Hart, 1 B. & P. 394, n.

Where a custom to take heriots was set out as a general one, and on evidence given it appeared that there was an exception of mesne seignories and manor lands holden in ancient burgage:—Held, a fatal variance. Anon. Loftt, 523.

Payment of an unvaried rent for a long series of years to the lord of a manor is evidence of a title to the rent only, and not to the land in respect of which the rent is paid. Doe d. Whittick v. Johnson, Gow, 173—Holroyd.

The presumption is, that the rent is a quit-rent. Id.

Mere length of time short of the period fixed by the statute of limitations, and unaccompanied with any circumstances, is not of itself a sufficient ground to presume a release, or extinguishment of a quit-rent. Eldridge v. Knott, Cowp. 214.

V. LEASES OF COPYHOLDS.

A copyholder demised for one year, and from thence from year to year for the term of thirteen years more, if the lord would license, and so as the same should not be liable to forfeiture:—Held, that the license of the lord, &c. was a condition precedent to the lease of the further term of thirteen years; and the lord having given notice that he would not give such license, the assignee of the lessor, to whom the premises were surrendered, was holden entitled to recover in ejectment against the tenant after six months' notice to quit; although it appeared that such surrenderee was a trustee for the lord (the real purchaser,) who had notice of the terms of the demise when he purchased, with an exception in the contract of purchase of all subsisting leases, and afterwards accepted of quit-rent from the tenant, the consideration of these latter circumstances belonging to a court of equity. Doe d. Nunn v. Lufkin, 4 East, 221; 1 Smith, 90. And see Lufkin v. Nunn, 1 N. R. 168.

A lease for years by a copyholder, with the license of the lord, where the widow, by custom, would be entitled to her free-bench, if the copyholder had died seised, defeats the widow of her free-bench. Salisbury d. Cooke v. Hurd, Cowp. 481.

VI. FORFEITURE.

A lord of a manor cannot seize a copyhold estate, as forfeited pro defectu tenentis, without a custom: therefore, where, on the death of a copyholder of inheritance, the lord, after three proclamations for the heir to come in and be admitted, seized the estate into his hands, and afterwards granted it in fee to another, the court considered it as an absolute seizure, and consequently irregular, there being no custom to warrant it: and being irregular as an absolute seizure, it could not afterwards be set up by the lord as a seizure quousque. Doe d. Tarrant v. Hellier, 3 T. R. 162.

If one of several co-heirs of a copyholder be a feme covert at the time of the ancestor's death, and the lord seize the whole estate (in default of the heir's not coming in to be admitted after three proclamations,) without first appointing an attorney or guardian for the feme covert, according to the requisites of the 9 G. 1, c. 29, a seizure of the whole estate is irregular, though it be not known to the lord that one of the heirs is a feme covert. Id.

A forfeiture by a copyholder's levying a fine may be waived by the lord. Id.

A forfeiture of a copyhold estate can only be taken advantage of by him who is lord at the time of the forfeiture, except in those cases where the act of forfeiture destroys the estate. Id.

Quære, whether the lord's right of entry for a forfeiture is not barred after twenty years by the statute of limitations? Id.

The lord may seize copyhold land quousque, in virtue of a right which accrued to the preceding lord, on default of the heir's coming in to be admitted; and that although he be the devisee, and not the heir of the preceding lord: but to entitle the lord to make such seizure, there must be three proclamations made, at three consecutive courts. Doe d. Bover v. Truman, 1 B. & Adol. 736.

The lord may enter for waste committed by a copyholder for life, though there be an intermediate estate in remainder between the estate of copyholder for life and the lord's reversion. Doe d. Folkes v. Clements, 2 M. & S. 68.

There cannot be a forfeiture of copyhold by a conviction of felony before attainder, unless there be a special custom in the manor to the contrary. Rex v. Willes, 3 B. & A. 510.

Where there is a remainder to the use of one who is convicted of felony and hanged before admittance, the lands are not forfeited to the lord, but descend to the heir of the surrenderor. Res d. Jefferys v. Hicks, 2 Wils. 13.

Where a copyholder was convicted of a capital felony, but pardoned upon condition of remaining two years in prison, and the lord did not do any act towards securing the copyhold:—Held, that, at the expiration of the two years, the copy-estate would be lost in the land without any act done by him. Doe d. Evans v. Evans, 5 B. & C. 584; 8 D. & R. 399.

A copyholder who has been admitted to a tenement, and done fealty to the lord of the manor, is estopped, in an action by the latter for a forfeiture, from showing that the legal estate was not in the lord at the time of admittance. Doe d. Nepean v. Budden, 1 D. & R. 243; 5 B. & A. 626.

A lord of a manor is entitled to an injunction and account in respect to waste committed by a copyholder. Richards v. Noble, 3 Mer. 673.

VII. STEWARD.

1. Fees and Duty.

Where a person is admitted to several distinct copyhold tenements, the steward of the manor is not entitled, as a matter of general right, to the full fees on each admission separately; and therefore, where no custom prevails in the manor to that effect, he must stand on his quantum meruit. Everest v. Glyn, 2 Marsh. 84; 6 Taunt. 425; Holt, 1.

The question whether the steward of a manor is entitled to receive a separate fee on the admission of a party to distinct tenements, is a mere matter of usage or custom within the manor, and must be governed by it. Searle v. Marsh, 1 Marsh. 86, n.

Seemingly, that co-parceners are entitled to be admitted to copyhold tenements as one heir, and upon the payment of one set of fees. Rex v. Bensell, 4 D. & R. 825; 3 B. & C. 173.

It is a good custom in a manor that the steward or his deputy should have the sole right of preparing all the surrenders of copyhold tenements within the manor. Rex v. Riggs, 2 B. & A. 550.

In an action for an amercement in a court-leet, if the declaration state the court to have been holden before the "steward" of the manor, and the evidence proves it to have been holden before the "deputy steward," it is a material variance. Wynill v. Shepherd, 1 H. Black. 162.

So, where the declaration stated that the defendant was summoned to serve on the jury of the court-leet and court-baron, but the summons was to serve on the jury of the court-leet only. Gery v. Wheatly, 1 H. Black. 163, n.

I. Books.

1. Statutory Enactments.

The 8 Anne, c. 19, s. 1, gave a copyright in books then printed for twenty-one years, and gave to authors and their assignees the exclusive copyright four fourteen years.

And by s. 9, after the expiration of the fourteen years, another similar period, if the author was living. This act was extended to the United Kingdom by 41 Geo. 3, c. 107.

By 54 Geo. 3, c. 156, s. 4, authors and their assignees have the exclusive copyright for twenty-eight years from the day of publication; and if the authors be living at the end of that term, for the residue of their lives. And see Anon. 1 Q. B. 24.

Ss. 8 & 9 give the same extension of copyright to the authors of books published at the time of the passing of the act.

The property of an author in an unpublished work exists independently of the statute. Scully v. Sherwood, 2 Mer. 435; S. P. Tomson v. Collins, 1 W. Black. 301.

Authors have not, by common law, the sole and exclusive copyright in themselves, or their assigns, in perpetuity, after having printed and published their compositions; but by statute it is secured to them for fourteen years, from the day of publishing; and after that term the right returns to them (if living) for another term of fourteen years. Miller v. Taylor, 4 Burr. 220.

An author whose works had been published more than twenty-eight years before the passing of that statute, is not entitled to the copyright in life. Brooke v. Clarke, 1 B. & A. 396.

That statute does not impose upon authors, as a condition precedent to their deriving any benefit under it, that the composition should be first printed; and therefore an author does not lose his copy-right by selling his work in manuscript before it is printed. White v. Gorch, 22 & A. 298; 1 Chit. 24.

The statute of Anne was held not to extend either to the Universities of Oxford or Cambridge, or to the Colleges of Eton, Westminster, or Winchester, who have a perpetuity in all copies belonging to them. Donaldson v. Becket (in error), 2 Bro. P. C. 129.

Quere, whether the patents granted to the king's printer vest the copyright, or are merely authorities? Oxford and Cambridge Universities v. Richardson, 6 Ven. jun. 713.

Upon a bill brought by the king's printer to restrain the defendant from the publication of certain acts of parliament, &c., to which the patentees for printing law books were also defendants, the court refused to interfere between the contending patents, and therefore only restrained the defendant from printing at any other than a patent press. Baskett v. Cunningham, 2 Eden, 173.

2. What may be the Subject of Copyright.

Generally.—Copyright may be either in respect of the matter or the arrangement, but no property can be acquired in any article copied from a prior work. Barfield v. Nicholson, 2 Sim. & Stu. 1.

Where a person simply makes corrections and additions to a work in which he had originally no interest, he acquires a copyright in them, and may bring an action if they are pirated. Cary v. Longman, 1 East, 358; 3 Esp. 273.

The plaintiff published a book of roads of Great Britain, comprising Patterson's book (to the copyright of which he was not entitled,) with improvements and additions, obtained by actual survey and otherwise; an injunction to restrain a publication of an edition of Patterson, comprising the plaintiff's improvements and additions, was refused. Cary v. Fadin, 5 Ves. jun. 24.

An injunction was granted till hearing, to restrain the publication of Milton's poems, with Doctor Newton's notes, notwithstanding a small addition of original commentary. Tonson v. Walker, 3 Swans. 672.

There may be a copyright in a translation, whether produced by personal application and expense, or by gift; and it will be protected by injunction. Wyatt v. Barnard, 3 Ves. & B. 77.

The court will interfere to protect copyright from piracy, at the suit of plaintiffs who appear to have a good equitable title, even though it should not be quite clear that their legal title is complete. Mawman v. Tegg, 2 Russ. 385.

Public and general Works.—There is no copyright in a general subject, though from its nature the consequence may be close resemblance and considerable interference, as in the case of maps and road-books. Wilkins v. Aikin, 17 Ves. jun. 427.

Though copyright cannot, as such, subsist, in an East India calendar, as a general subject, any more than in a map, chart, or series of chronology, it may in the individual work: and where it can be traced that another work upon the same subject is not an original compilation, but a mere copy with colourable variations, it will be protected by injunction, which in some instances will be continued until the hearing, without a trial at law. Matthewson v. Stockdale, 12 Ves. jun. 270.

An injunction was granted against pirating a court calendar, the individual work creating a copyright, though the general subject was common. Longman v. Winchester, 16 Ves. jun. 269.

There is no copyright in specifications of patents. Wyatt v. Barnard, 3 Ves. & B. 77. But see Newton v. Cowie, 12 Moore, 457; 4 Bing. 234.

A voyage of discovery having been executed, and a narrative of it prepared under the orders of the Crown, the narrative is the property of the Crown; but on a bill by a publisher, authorized by the secretary of the Board of Admiralty to publish such a narrative, the profits remaining at their disposition, an injunction restraining publication by a stranger was dissolved. Nicol v. Stockdale, 3 Swans. 687.

Semle, that it is illegal to publish part of a depending cause. Deacon v. Deacon, 2 Russ. 607.

Letters.—A copyright in private letters remains in the writer after transmission, and it will be protected by injunction against the publication. Perceval (Lord) v. Phipps, 2 Ves. & B. 19.

Letters written by the plaintiff to the defendant, having been returned by him, with a declaration that he did not consider himself entitled to retain them, the publication of copies taken before the return, without the knowledge of the plaintiff, was restrained by injunction, though represented by the defendant as necessary for the vindication of his character. The jurisdiction to restrain the publication of letters is founded on a right of property in the writer. Gee v. Pritchard, 2 Swans. 402.

An injunction was granted to restrain the executor of the person to whom private letters were written from publishing them, without leave of the executors of the person who wrote them. Thompson v. Stanhope, Amb. 737.

Music.—A musical composition is a work within the statute of Anne, which vested the copyright of printed books in the authors or their assignees, during the times therein mentioned. Bach v. Longman, Cowp. 623; S. P. 1 Chit. 26; Platt v. Button, 19 Ves. jun. 447; Coop. C. C. 303.

Though published on a single sheet of paper. Clementi v. Goulding, 11 East, 244; 2 Camp. 25; S. P. Storace v. Longman, and Hime v. Dale, 11 East, 244, n; 2 Camp. 27, n.

In declaration for pirating a book, an allegation that plaintiff was the author of a book, being a musical composition called A., is well supported by showing him to be the author of a musical composition of that name, comprised in, and occupying only one page of a work with a different title, which contained several other musical compositions. White v. Geroch, 2 B. & A. 298; 1 Chit. 24.

Continuations of Works.—An injunction was granted to restrain the publication of a magazine as a continuation of the plaintiff's magazine, in numbers, and as to communications from correspondents received by the defendant while publishing for the plaintiff, not preventing the publication of an original work of the same nature, and under a similar title. Hogg v. Kirby, 8 Ves. jun. 215.

An author having sold the copyright of a work published under his own name, and covenanted with the purchaser not to publish any other work purchased by him from the same author, and published under his name, on the same subject but under a different title, and though there be no piracy of the first work. Barfield v. Nicholson, 2 Sim. & Stu. 1.

Contrary to Morality and Religion.—The author or publisher of a work of a libellous or immoral tendency can have no legal property in it. Stockdale v. Oughyn, 7 D. & R. 625; 5 B. & C. 173; 2 C. & P. 163.

No action can be maintained for pirating a work which professes to be the amount of a courtisan, and it is no answer to the objection that the defendant is also a wrong-doer in publishing them, and that he therefore ought not to set up their immorality. Id.

An injunction to restrain the infringement of copyright in a work, as to which it appeared doubtful whether it did not tend to impugn the doctrines of the scriptures, refused. Lawrence v. Smith, Jacob, 471.

The court of Chancery will not act, either by giving an injunction or an account, even upon a submission in an answer, upon a publication of such a nature, that an action could not be maintained. Walcut v. Walker, 7 Ves. jun. 1.

The court will not interfere by injunction, upon the author's application, to restrain the publication of a work which is of such a nature as that an action could not be maintained upon it for damages. Southey v. Sherwood, 2 Mer. 435.

Foreign Publications.—The court will not protect a foreigner's copyright. Delandre v. Shaw, 2 Sim. 237.

The privileges conferred by the stat. 54 Geo. 3, c. 150, for the protection of copyrights in this country, do not extend to books printed abroad; therefore, where the author of a musical composition sold the right of publishing it to a music-seller in Paris, in 1814, reserving to himself the right of publishing it in this country, and in the same year he sold the work to A., an English music-seller, by parol, who immediately published it; and in 1818, B., another English music-seller, bought a French copy of the composition, in the fair way of his trade, at Paris, and republished it here on his own account; and in 1822, the author executed a valid assignment of the copyright to A. in writing:—Held, that A. could not maintain an action against B. for piracy, on the grounds, that by the parol consent given by the author, in 1814, A. did not acquire the exclusive right of publishing the work in England, and that it therefore could not be deemed a publication by the author, not being made on his account, or for his benefit; that the publication by B. in 1818, was lawful; and that the author could not afterwards, in 1822, by making a valid assignment to A., enable him to maintain an action against B. for selling a copy of the same work after such assignment was executed. Olemani v. Walker, 4 D. & R. 590; 2 B. & C. 361.

genuinely written and published here, and afterwards reprinted in any other country, and imported into this, if the sale of such be distinct. Brooke v. Milliken, 3 T. R. 503.

3. Entry at Stationers' Hall.

By 54 Geo. 3, c. 156, eleven printed copies of every book complete, are to be delivered on demand, within twelve months after publication, for the use of the public libraries, viz. British Museum, Bion College, Bodleian Library at Oxford, public library at Cambridge, Faculty of Advocates at Edinburgh, four Universities of Scotland, and Trinity College and King's Inns libraries at Dublin.

By s. 5, books demandable are to be entered at Stationers' Hall within one month, if published within the bills of mortality, or within six months if published elsewhere.

A single part of a work published at monthly intervals, of which thirty copies only are printed, twenty-six of which are subscribed for, the principal costs of publication being defrayed by subscription, and a part of the profit being reserved by a testator for that purpose, is not a periodical publication, or book, which need be entered at Stationers' Hall; nor is it demandable by the public libraries under the 54 Geo. 3, c. 156. British Museum v. Payne (in error), 27. & J. 166; 1 M. & P. 415; 4 Bing 549.

Quære, if a part of a volume published separately, and which is not required to be entered at Stationers' Hall, be not entered there, while the author has any copyright in it? Id.

The 8 Anne, c. 19, s. 5, made it necessary for the printer of a book composed after the passing of the act, and published for the first time after the composition, which book was printed and published with the consent of the proprietor of the copyright to deliver a copy upon demand of paper to the warehouse-keeper of the Company of Stationers, for the use of the library of the University of Cambridge, notwithstanding the title to the copy of each book, and the consent of the proprietor to the publication, was not entered in the register book of the said Company. Cambridge (University) v. Bryer, 16 East, 21.

An author, whose work is pirated before the expiration of 28 years (under stat. 54 Geo. 3, c. 156) from the first publication of it, may maintain an action on the case for damages against the offending party, although the work was not entered at Stationers' Hall, and although it was first published without the name of the author affixed. Beckford v. Hood, 7 T. R. 608.

4. Assignment of Copyright.

An assignment of copyright of a song must be in writing, in order to entitle the assignee to maintain an action on the case for piracy. Power v. Walker, 3 M. & B. 7; 4 Comp. 6.

And an agreement for consideration, that one shall have the exclusive publication and sale in England, does not entitle him to bring an action for pirating the work. Id.

But in an action by an author, where the witness had heard him declare that he had parted with all his copyright, a valid assignment was presumed, and the plaintiff was nonsuited. Moore v. Walker, 4 Camp. 9, n.

In an action for pirating a work, evidence that the plaintiff acquiesced in the defendant's publication six years ago is no proof of an assignment of the copyright. Latour v. Bland, 2 Stark. 382.—Abbott.

Nor a receipt given by the author for money received by him as the price of his copyright. Id.

Where an author who has sold his copyright, by living more than fourteen years, obtained the resulting right for fourteen years more, under the stat. of Anne, it was held to belong to his assignee, and not to himself. Carnan v. Bowles, 2 Bro. C. C. 80; 1 Cox, 283.

An author having given a work to a publisher, who, by the sale of it, reimbursed his expenses and made considerable profit, cannot, at the end of the first fourteen years, restrain him by injunction from continuing the publication. Rundell v. Murray, Jacob, 311.

Quære, whether on an assignment, the name of the inventor or the assignee should appear? Thompson v. Symmonds, 5 T. R. 41.

5. Rights of Author and Publisher.

Semble, where an author agrees with a bookseller to publish his work, and to allow him interest for the money he shall advance, and also a share of the profits, the bookseller has a lien on the copyright for his disbursements. Brook v. Wentworth, 3 Anst. 881.

An author may maintain an action for an injury to his reputation, against the publisher of an inaccurate edition of his work, falsely purporting to be executed by him, though the publisher be the owner of the copyright. Archbold v. Sweet, 1 M. & Rob. 62; 5 C. & P. 219—Tenterden.

If A., being the author of a law book, sell the copyright to B., and B. publish a third edition of the work edited by another, but not stated to be so, and which purchasers were likely to suppose was edited by A., such edition having errors and mistakes in it calculated to injure the reputation of A. as an author:—Held, at Nisi Prius, that, for this, an action lies by A., against B. The question, whether an edition purports to have been edited by A., is a question for the jury; but the question whether the alleged errors and mistakes be so or not, and whether they are such as are calculated to injure the reputation of A. as an author, are questions for the court. Id.

A. having printed a work, sold 300 copies to B., a bookseller, at 40s. a copy, binding himself not to sell to others, in quires, under 48s., and in single copies under 50s. a copy, until B.'s 300 were sold, or his consent was obtained. In his letter, which constituted the agreement, he said to B. "I do not expect you to sell under 48s. and 50s., but do as you like." When B. had sold a part of the 300 copies, he went into partnership with C., and transferred all his stock at the cost price. He also sold some copies at 45s. and

46s. A. in contravention of his agreement, sold under the stipulated prices, but, on being threatened with proceedings by B., persuaded D. who had purchased the principal part, to consent to give them back, if it would satisfy B. D. had an interview with B., and told him this. D. said that he understood the arrangement was a settlement of the difference, and that B. went away from the interview perfectly satisfied:—Held in an action by B. against A., for a breach of the agreement, that neither the underselling by B., nor the transfer of the stock to the partnership, were grounds of nonsuit; but that the arrangement with D. was an answer to the action, if the jury thought that it made an end of the dispute between the parties. Held, also, that, on the question of damage, it might be considered whether B.'s own underselling had or had not contributed to affect the price of the work in the market. Benning v. Dove, 5 C. & P. 427—Den.

6. Piracy.

What amounts to.—An action will lie if parts of a book of chronology be servilely imitated, though other parts of the book be different. Trusler v. Murray, 1 East, 363, n.

But not for publishing sea-charts on an improved and more useful principle, with material corrections, though many of the lines were copied from old charts. Sayre v. Moore, 1 East, 361, n.

A count for pirating generally, is not supported by evidence that there are in the original work particular errors and mistakes, with which the pirated edition corresponds verbatim. Cary v. Kearsley, 4 Esp. 168—Ellenborough.

But such evidence would support a count for transcribing particular matter, without the plaintiff's consent. Id.

It is lawful to incorporate part of the works of a contemporary writer in a new work, provided it be not a pretext for stealing the original copyright. Id.

But it is otherwise, if so much be copied as to form a substitute for the original work. Roworth v. Wilkes, 1 Camp. 94—Ellenborough.

A fair abridgment is no infringement of copyright. Anon. Lofft, 775: S. P. Bell v. Walker, 1 Bro. C. C. 451.

Quære, what difference between two books will be sufficient to resist an application for an injunction to restrain the publishing of the latter work? Garnan v. Bowles, 1 Cox, 283; 2 Bro. C. C. 80.

An abstract published in an annual register or magazine is not piracy, especially if the author himself has published extracts in a periodical paper. Dodsley v. Kinneraley, Amb. 403.

Upon an action by several plaintiffs for piracy of copyright, it appeared that the defendant had published the work in question, pursuant to the conditions of a cognovit given by him to one of the plaintiffs and one P., in an action for not performing an agreement to write the work in question:—Held, a sufficient defence. Sweet v. Archbold, 10 Bing. 133; 3 M. & Scott, 299.

The defendant had previously contracted to prepare for S. (one of the plaintiffs,) and one P., an edition of a work on the practice of the Common Pleas; and in pursuance of that contract, a small portion of this latter work was sent to the press by the defendant on account of S. & P., containing extracts from the King's Bench practice, in some of the instances wherein the practice of the two courts was similar. S. and P. being dissatisfied with the progress made by the defendant in the Common Pleas practice, it was agreed between them that the latter should be released from his engagement, and should refund the purchase money which had already been paid him. The defendant accordingly gave S. and P. a cognovit for the amount, containing a clause "that nothing therein should extend to license or permit the defendant to publish or sell any copy or copies of the said intended work," until he should have fully paid the damages and costs therein mentioned. The defendant, in completing the C. P. practice on his own account, embodied therein a large portion of the plaintiff's work on the practice of the court of K. B. Upon a motion to dissolve an injunction that had been granted to restrain the sale of the C. P. practice on the ground of piracy, the Lord Chancellor directed an action to be brought to try the question of piracy:—Held, that the above clause in the cognovit given in the action between S. & P. and the defendant, amounted to an implied consent on the part of the plaintiffs, that the defendant should use their copyright of the K. B. practice. Id.

Proceeding by Action.—Sembles, that the first publisher of a book may sue a stranger who pirates it, although he has improperly obtained the copy in the first instance. Cary v. Kearsley, 4 Esp. 168—Ellenborough.

Sembles, that a person having been seen correcting the MS. is not sufficient evidence that the copyright of a work is his. Stockdale v. Omphryn, 7 D. & R. 625; 5 B. & C. 173; 2 C. & P. 163.

Proceeding by Injunction.—An injunction against an invasion of copyright, depending upon the effect of an agreement, was refused till there was a recovery in an action. Walcut v. Walker, 7 Ves. jun. 1.

A copyright not asserted against violations by several persons for fifteen years, will not be protected by injunction until established at law. Plett v. Batten, 19 Ves. jun. 447; Coop. C. C. 303.

If the proprietor of a work gives permission to several to publish it, and then others copy it, he must bring his action before he can have an injunction to restrain the pirating his copyright. Id.

An injunction obtained by the assignee of an author after the expiration of the two terms of years allowed by the statute of Anne was dissolved, the common law right of the author will leave the plaintiff to seek his legal remedy, where the matter, which is the subject of the alleged piracy, is but a very inconsiderable part of the plaintiff's work, and contains merely calculations; and when the work complained of has been published some years. Beiley v. Taylor, 1 Russ. & Mylne, 73; 1 Tam. 295.

Injunction refused to restrain publication of a work which had been left for twenty-three years by the author, in the hands of a bookseller, to whom it was originally sent with an intention of its being published; that intention being afterwards relinquished, and the work having passed into the hands of the defendants, who published it without the consent or privity of the author. Southey v. Starnwood, 2 Mer. 435.

An injunction was granted to restrain the printing of an unpublished MS. which had been by the representative of the author, given to a person under whom defendant claimed, but not with the intention that he should publish it. Queensbury (Duke) v. Shebbeare, 2 Edm. 329.

An injunction was granted until answer or further order, to restrain the publication of a work, as the plaintiff's, upon affidavit by the plaintiff's agents (the plaintiff himself being abroad) of circumstances making it highly probable that it was not the plaintiff's work; and defendant refusing to swear as to his belief that it was so. Byron (Lord) v. Johnson, 2 Mer. 2.

The court does not give an account of the sale of a pirated copy of a work, unless it grants an injunction. Beiley v. Taylor, 1 Tam. 295; 1 Russ. & Mylne, 73.

The injunction is the ground of the account and the account is consequential. Id.

II. DRAMATIC PRODUCTIONS.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 15, the author, or his assignee, of any tragedy, comedy, play, opera, farce, or other dramatic piece or entertainment shall have, as his own property, the sole liberty of representing the same for twenty-eight years; and if the author shall be living at the end of that time, for the rest of his life.

Before the statute, the proprietor of the copyright of a tragedy, which had been printed and published for sale, could not maintain an action against the manager of a theatre for publicly acting and representing such tragedy in an abridged form for profit. Murray v. Elliott, 1 B. & R. 299; 5 B. & A. 657.

An injunction, however, had been granted to restrain the publication in a magazine of a few occasionally suffered by the author to be acted, but never printed or published. Macklin v. Macklin, Amb. 694.

Evidence that the defendant had acted a piece on the stage, of which the plaintiff had bought the copyright, is not evidence of a publication.

within the meaning of stat. 8 Anne, c. 19. Coleman v. Wathen, 5 T. R. 245.

An injunction was granted to restrain the performance of a comedy, the copyright of which had been afterwards assigned by writing to the plaintiffs, although it did not appear whether the original assignment was in writing. Morris v. Kelly, 1 J. & W. 481.

The defendant having, in two numbers of a periodical work of theatrical criticism, inserted detached extracts to the extent of six or seven pages from a farce, the property of the plaintiff, containing forty pages interspersed with criticism, a bill for a perpetual injunction and account of the profits of the numbers, which did not amount to 3*l.*, was dismissed with costs. Whittingham v. Weoler, 2 Swans. 428.

III. PRINTS AND ENGRAVINGS.

By 8 Geo. 2, c. 13, the property in prints and engravings is vested in the proprietor for fourteen years, if the proprietor's name and the date of the publication be affixed on each print.

By 7 Geo. 3, c. 38, the time is extended to twenty-eight years.

By 17 Geo. 3, c. 57, persons who pirate prints are liable to damages and double costs.

An engraving on a reduced scale of a specification of a new invention, inrolled at the patent office, may be the subject of copyright. Newton v. Cowie, 12 Moore, 457; 4 Bing. 234. But see Wyatt v. Barnard, 3 Ves. & B. 77.

In order to sustain an action for pirating prints, the proprietor's name, and the date of the publication, must appear on the original print, pursuant to 8 Geo. 2, c. 13; but it is not necessary that the designation "proprietor" should be added to the name. Id. Overruling, Roworth v. Wilkes, 1 Camp. 94, contra. And see Sayer q. t. v. Dicey, 3 Wils. 63.

The assignee of a print may maintain an action on stat. 17 Geo. 3, c. 57, against any person who pirates it. Thompson v. Symonds, 5 T. R. 41.

In such an action, it is not necessary to produce the plate itself in evidence; one of the prints taken from the original plate is good evidence. Id.

The date must always appear on the print. Id.

It is no piracy of one engraving, to make another from the original picture. Berenger v. Wheble, 2 Stark. 548—Abbott.

The mere seller or publisher of a pirated copy of a print, is liable to an action under the 17 Geo. 3, c. 57, although it be not an exact copy of the original, and though the seller did not know it to be a copy. West v. Francis, 1 D. & R. 400; 5 B. & A. 737.

A. being employed by B. to engrave plates from drawings belonging to B., took off from the plates so engraved by him a number of proof impressions, which he retained for his own use. A. afterwards became bankrupt, and the proofs of which he had so possessed himself, were advertised by his assignees for sale:—Held, that neither he nor his assignees were liable by 17 Geo. 3, c. 57, to an action for having disposed of pirated prints without the consent of the proprietor, inasmuch as that statute applied to impressions of engravings pirated from other engravings, and not prints taken from a lawful plate. Murray v. Heath, 1 B. & Adol. 804.

IV. BUSTS.

By 38 Geo. 3, c. 71, s. 1, the sole property of models or casts is vested in the original proprietor for fourteen years.

And by ss. 2 & 4, persons making copies of any model or cast without the written consent of the proprietor, are liable for damages in an action of case, to be brought within six calendar months after the discovery of the offence.

By 54 Geo. 3, c. 56, s. 1, the inefficiency of the former act was attempted to be remedied, and the sole right and property of all new and original sculptures, models, copies, and casts, is vested in the proprietor for fourteen years: provided that the name of the proprietor, with the date of publication, be put on each article.

S. 6 gives the original proprietor an additional term of fourteen years, if he is living at the expiration of the first.

The selling of a pirated cast of a bust was no offence under stat. 38 Geo. 3, c. 71, before the passing of 54 Geo. 3, c. 56, if the piracy had any addition to or diminution from the original; and, semble, that it was no offence to make a pirated bust if it was a perfect fac-simile of the original. Gahagan v. Cooper, 3 Camp. 111—Ellenb.

V. LINENS AND CALICOES.

By 27 Geo. 3, c. 38, (continued by 29 Geo. 3, c. 19,) the proprietor of original patterns for printing linen, cotton, calico, or muslin, is to have the sole right of printing them for two months from the first publication; and whoever shall, within that period, print the same, is to be liable to an action for damages.

The 34 Geo. 3, c. 23, extends the time to three months, so that the name of the proprietor and the date of publication be printed at each end of the piece of goods: the statute also gives a remedy by action.

Equitable jurisdiction upon the 34 Geo. 3, c. 23, is not excluded by the special remedy thereby provided. Independent of that remedy, the statute vests in the inventor a right of property which, though only of three months' duration, equity will protect by injunction, if the title be satisfactorily established. Sheriff v. Coates, 1 Russ. & Mylne, 159.

In one case the evidence as to the title not being conclusive, the injunction was dissolved, and an issue directed, the defendants keeping an account. Id.

The court will, itself, compare and decide upon alleged piracies by inspection, where that can be easily and safely done. Id.

In an action on the 34 Geo. 3, c. 23, for pirating a pattern for printing calico, the omission of an averment in the declaration, "that the day of first publishing the pattern was printed at each end of the piece of calico," (which, together with the name of the proprietor, is required by that statute, the monopoly being limited for three months from the first day of publishing the pattern,) was holden to be aided by verdict; it being stated in the declaration, that the defendants pirated the pattern within the term of three months from the day of the first publishing thereof, and while the plaintiffs were entitled to have the sole right of printing the same, &c. Mackmurdo v. Smith, 7 T. R. 518.

CORN.

The act at present in force, by which the importation of foreign corn is regulated, is the 9 Geo. 4, c. 60.

That act, authorizing the importation of foreign corn upon payment of duties in proportion to the price of British corn, recites, in s. 8, that it is necessary for regulating the amount of duties, that provision should be made for ascertaining from time to time the average prices of British corn; and then enacts, that weekly returns of the purchases and sales be made in the manner thereafter directed; s. 25 enacts, that every person who shall deal in British corn within the cities and towns therein mentioned, &c., shall, before he shall so deal in or purchase any British corn, make a declaration that the returns made by him of the quantities and prices which shall be bought by or for him, shall contain the whole quantity, and no more, of the British corn, bonâ fide bought within the periods mentioned; and s. 27 enacts, that all persons who are therein-before required to make, and who shall have made such declarations, shall, on the first market-day which shall be holden in every week within every city or town, or within which they shall respectively deal in or purchase corn, return to the inspector of corn returns for such city or town, an account in writing of each and every parcel of each sort of British corn, so by them respectively bought during the week ending on the day next preceding such first market-day as aforesaid, with the price thereof, &c. &c.; and by s. 42, a penalty is imposed upon corn-dealers not making such returns:—Held, that the principal object of the statute being to ascertain the average price of British corn weekly, the words "purchase and bought," in the twenty-seventh section, imported bargains actually bonâ fide made, and not only contracts made according to the provisions of the statute of frauds; and, therefore, that the above-mentioned return was to be made on the first market-day after a bargain was actually and bonâ fide made; and where A., on the 22d day of September, at the town of N. (the next market-day being Wednesday, the 23d,) bought twenty quarters of oats at 26s. per quarter, being part of a larger parcel lying in the warehouse of the seller, and part were delivered on the 24th, the remainder on the 28th; but there was no note or memorandum in writing of the bargain, nor any acceptance of part by the buyer before the 24th, nor earnest given or part payment, and no return of the bargain was made to the inspector on Wednesday the 23d:—Held, that A. was liable to conviction under the 42d section. Rex v. Towers, 1 B. & Adol. 465.

I. CORPORATE NAME AND LIVERY.

Where it manifestly appeared from the different clauses of several local acts of parliament, that conservators of a river navigation should take land by succession, and not by inheritance, although they were not created a corporation by express words, they were so by implication, and that being so, they were entitled to sue in their corporate name for an injury done to their real property. Toss Conservators v. Ash, 10 B. & C. 349.

Samble, that the conservators of the river Tone were a corporation not merely for the purpose of holding lands, but for the purpose of receiving the tolls. Bridgewater Canal Co. v. Blunt, 10 B. & C. 393.

To prove the existence of an aggregate corporation, consisting of different trades, entries of admission into the separate trades, as "into the company of carpenters, into the company of plasterers," &c., are evidence to be left to the jury. Carpenters' Company v. Hayward, 1 Dougl. 374.

A misdescription of a corporation, in omitting the name of the funder, in a conveyance of part of their estates for the redemption of the land tax, is immaterial; and if it had been material, it would have been cured by stat. 54 Geo. 3, c. 173, s. 12. Croydon Hospital v. Purley, 2 Marsh. 174; 6 Taunt. 467.

The mayor, jurats, and commonalty of the ancient town of Rye, were held to take lands by a devise to the right worshipful the mayor, jurats, and town council of the ancient town of Rye. Att. Gen. v. Rye, 7 Taunt. 546; 1 Moore, 367.

The "mayor, aldermen, and commons, in common council assembled," are not sufficiently described in the proceedings under a private act of parliament, by "the mayor and commonalty, and citizens," though in fact the latter include the former. Rex v. Creke, Corp. 29.

A company by prescription may have more than one corporate name. Shrewsbury v. Hart, 1 C. & P. 113—Hallock.

Where a corporation, declaring in covenant by their modern name, stated that the citizens, &c., were from time immemorial incorporated by divers names of incorporation, and at the time of making the indenture by A. B., declared on, were known by a certain other name, by which name A. B. granted to them a certain watercourse, and covenanted for quiet enjoyment:—Held, that the deed granting the watercourse to them by such name was evidence as against the defendants, who claimed under the grantor, that the corporation was known by that name at the time, upon an issue taken on that fact. Carlisle v. Menier, 8 East, 487.

Plaintiffs were incorporated by the name of "the mayor and burgesses of the borough of Stafford, in the county of Stafford," and sued by the name of "the mayor and burgesses of the borough of Stafford":—This is an abatement, and not in bar. Stafford v. Bolton, 1 B. & P. 40.

In ejectment, the demise was laid to be by the mayor, burgesses, &c., of the borough town of M.

and, on the trial, it turned out from the charter, that the name of the corporation was "the mayor, &c., of M.":—Held, that this was no variance, it appearing from the charter which was in evidence that M. was a borough town. Decd. Malden v. Miller, 1 B. & A. 299.

A company's right to have a livery must be founded on charter or custom: the court cannot presume they have it; and if the declaration in debt upon a by-law fails to show it, it is a fault defendant may take advantage of, upon general demurrer. Vintners' Company v. Passey, 1 Barr. 235; 1 Ld. Kam. 500.

II. ACTS OF CORPORATIONS.

1. Corporate Seal.

Though the affixing of the common seal to the deed of conveyance of a corporation be sufficient to pass the estate without a formal delivery, if done with that intent; yet it has no such effect if the order for affixing the seal be accompanied with a direction to their clerk to retain the conveyance in his hands till accounts were adjusted with the purchaser. Derby Canal Company v. Wilmet, 9 East, 360.

By statute 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 117, incorporating a gas-light company, it was enacted, that the directors should have the custody of the common seal, and power to use it for the affairs of the company, who were themselves by another clause empowered to make orders under seal at their meetings, for the government of the company, and for regulating the proceedings of the directors. No power was expressly given by the act to grant annuities. At a special meeting of the company, a committee, previously appointed for certain purposes, reported that it was expedient that the then clerk, whose health was bad, should be invited to retire upon a pension, on condition of abstaining from acts prejudicial to the company; that such proposal had been made to him and that he had accepted it. The meeting moved that the report should be received and entered on the minutes, and that the directors should carry into effect the committee's recommendation. No order to this effect was made under seal. The directors by deed, in the name of the company, granted an annuity to the clerk on his retirement, subject to conditions of the nature above stated, and they put the corporate seal to it:—Held, that the seal was properly affixed by the directors; that the granting of such annuity was warranted by the statute; that it was a concern of the company, within the first-mentioned clause; and that no order of the company under seal was necessary to authorize it. Clarke v. Imperial Gas Company, 4 B. & Adol. 315; 1 Nev. & M. 306.

The act prescribed that nothing should be done at any special general meeting, but the business for which it was called; and certain forms were required for calling it. On a special case stated, which set out entries of the proceedings whereby the grant was authorized, it did not appear that those forms had been gone through, and the company, who were sued on the above deed, alleged this irregularity in answer:—Held, that it lay on them to give strict proof of the default; and this not being done, but a possibility appearing that the forms might have been complied with, the court of K. B. would not presume the contrary. Id.

By the statute, the orders and proceedings entered in the company's books were to be considered as originals, and read in all courts, &c. Quære, whether this rendered them admissible evidence as between the company and a stranger? Id.

If a regular corporate resolution has been passed for granting an interest in the corporate property, and upon the faith of it expenditure has been incurred, the court will compel the corporation to make a legal grant in pursuance of the resolution, although it is not under the corporate seal, semble. Marshall v. Queenborough, 1 Sim. & Stu. 520.

If the mayor of a town order weights and measures, and when supplied, they be examined at a full meeting of the corporation: this is such a recognition of the contract as will make the corporation liable to pay for them, although the order for them was not under the common seal of the corporation; and the fact that the mayor was afterwards ousted from his office by a judgment of the court of K. B. makes no difference. De Grave v. Monmouth, 4 C. & P. 111—Tenter.

2. Power to delegate.

Whether the power of making voluntary elections be incidental to the corporation at large, or exist in them by prescription, it is competent for them to delegate it to a select part of themselves, but they cannot delegate such power to any stranger; and the recorder of the town must be taken to be such, if he be not stated to be a burgess. Rex v. Bird, 13 East, 367.

As such select body is the creature of the corporation, its constitution and mode of acting may, it seems, be modelled (with the exception before stated) according to the pleasure of its maker. Id.

Where a power of doing corporate acts is not specially delegated to particular members, the general mode is for the members to meet on the charter days, and the major part who are present to do the act. Rex v. Varlo, Cowp. 248.

The crown, by letters patent, granted full power to the master and wardens of the corporation of bakers, (there being four wardens,) by themselves and their deputy or deputies, to overlook and correct the trade of baking:—Held, that the master and one warden could not justify entering the house of a baker to overlook bread; for, if they acted as principals, they did not amount to a majority of persons to whom the power was given; and, if they acted as deputies, they were bound to show that they were appointed by the majority. Cook v. Loveland, 2 B. & P. 31.

Where a power of creating freemen is shown to have been once vested in the body at large of a prescriptive corporation, the exercise of it cannot be sustained in a select part of the same corporation continued by charters, under other names of incorporation; there being no express grant of such a power to the select body by any such charters, nor even any by-law to that effect, even supposing such a power could be transferred by a by-law from the whole to a part of the same corporation; although it be stated in the plea and admitted by the demurrer, that the same power which was immemorially exercised by the whole body down to the period of the granting and acceptance of charters of James 1, and Charles 2, had been since those charters, &c., continually exercised by the select body in question; and although such charters contained a confirmation of all formal privileges, &c., under whatever names of incorporation theretofore enjoyed. Rex v. Holland, 2 East, 70.

3. Suing by Action.

A corporation cannot sue in assumpsit on an executory contract unless empowered by the act of incorporation. East London Waterworks Company v. Bailey, 4 Bing. 283; 12 Moore, 533.

But a corporation may maintain assumpsit on an executed contract; therefore they may sue in assumpsit for use and occupation, where the tenant has held premises under them and paid rent. Stafford v. Till, 4 Bing. 75.

Quære, whether a company incorporated for the purpose of manufacturing, can contract otherwise than under seal, for service, work, and the supply of goods for carrying on the business? Dunston v. Imperial Gas Co., 3 B. & Adol. 125.

The master, wardens, and commonalty of a company cannot sue for a penalty forfeited to the master and wardens, to the use of the master, wardens, and company. The first count in a declaration in debt for a penalty under a by-law set forth the charter empowering the company to make by-laws, the by-law made, and the breach of it; the second count, omitting the above particulars, stated the penalty as being forfeited "under and by virtue of a certain by-law of the company before that time duly made," &c., and this count was on special demurrer held bad. Feltmakers' Company v. Davis, 1 B. & P. 98.

A suit by a corporation does not become defective on the death of some of the members; otherwise of a suit by the members in their individual character. Blackburn v. Jepson, 3 Swin. 138.

A penalty of 20s. having been imposed by one of the by-laws of the butchers' company on all persons selling meat on a Sunday, within their jurisdiction, it was declared by a subsequent clause, that if any offender should deny, refuse, or neglect to pay the penalty, he should be liable to an action of debt:—Held, that it was not necessary to prove a previous demand in order to maintain such action, although averred in the declaration. Butchers' Company v. Bullock, 3 B. & P. 434.

Where a prescriptive ecclesiastical corporation of vicars choral of the cathedral of Chichester had, besides other estates in common, four vicarial houses, with their appurtenances, which had always been appropriated to the several use and residence of the four vicars; and by ancient custom, upon every vacancy, the vicars, according to seniority, made their option of taking in severally any one of such vicarial houses, with the appurtenances; of which option an entry was made in the corporation act book, and signed by the vicars:—Held, that a new vicar having made an option, which was entered in the act book, and signed by all, to take one of the vicarial houses with certain appurtenances, then in the possession of J. S., which were not all the appurtenances formerly annexed to, and enjoyed with the same house by his predecessors therein, could not maintain an ejectment for the other appurtenances, such as part of the ancient garden which had been leased off by the corporation before his appointment: for supposing him entitled to make an option of the entire premises, and to have entered it in the act book, as against the corporation; yet no such option having been made and entered in the act book, according to the custom, he had no separate legal title to the premises in question, on which he could maintain an ejectment. Goodtitle d. Miller v. Wilson, 11 East, 334.

A corporation in a foreign country may sue as such in the courts of this country, but they must prove that they are incorporated in that country; and it will be left to the jury to say, whether the body so incorporated is the same which sues. St. Charles (Bank) v. De Bernales, 1 C. & P. 569; R. & M. 190—Abbott.

The plaintiffs sued by the name of "The National Bank of St. Charles," the name given by the charter of the King of Spain was "The Bank of St. Charles:—Held, no variance, the bank being in fact a national one. Id.

A corporation must prosecute criminally in their corporate name; and the addition of such name as a description of the persons of which the corporation is composed, is not sufficient in an indictment. Rex v. Patrick, 1 Leach, C. C. 253; 2 East, P. C. 1059.

4. Being sued.

Assumpsit will lie on a bill of exchange against a trading corporation, whose power of drawing and accepting bills is recognised by statute. Murray v. E. I. Comp. 5 B. & A. 294. And see Broughton v. Manchester Waterworks, 3 B. & A. 1.

Quære, whether a local act, enabling a corporation to issue promissory notes under their seal, enables them to make a promise, and subjects them to an action of assumpsit as incident to the making of promissory notes. Slark v. Highgate Archway Comp. 5 Taunt. 792.

Trover lies against a corporation, and if it be essential to their conversion of the property (i. e. in this instance the detainer of bank-notes by the Governor and Company of the Bank of England) that they should have authorized it under their seal, such authority will be presumed after verdict; but it does not seem necessary that the act of detention, done by their servants within the scope of their employment, should be authorized under their seal. Yarborough v. England (Bank), 16 East, 6.

It seems that an incorporated company may be guilty of a conversion by the act of their agent, acting under the direction of a committee appointed for managing the affairs of the company under an act of parliament. Duncan v. Surrey Canal Proprietors, 3 Stark. 50—Abbott.

An ejectment against the bailiffs pro tempore of a corporation, cannot be maintained by proving payment of rent for the premises by the annual predecessors of the defendants in the same office for several years before, and service of the notice to quit on the defendants, the existing bailiffs; for the payment of such rent by the bailiffs in succession is merely evidence of a tenancy in the corporation: but, at any rate, such tenancy may be determined by a notice to the corporation to quit, served on its officers; after which, the owner of the premises may distrain the cattle of any person trespassing on his ground, or bring his action against them, or maintain ejectment against any person in the actual possession of the premises. Doe d. Carlisle (Earl) v. Woodman, 8 East, 228.

By indenture between A., B., and C., bailiffs, and D., E., and F., aldermen, with the assent of the burgesses of the borough of M., of the one part, and J. S., of the other part, the said bailiffs, aldermen, and burgesses, demised lands to J. S. for years, to be holden of the said bailiffs, aldermen, and burgesses; and the deed was executed by A., B., and C.; D., E., and F.; but not sealed with the corporation seal; J. S. having paid rent to the bailiffs as chief officers of the borough:—Held, that their servant might make cognizance for taking a distress under a demise by the corporation, notwithstanding a notice had been given by the aldermen (one of whom was a party to the indenture) to pay the rent to them; for the payment of rent to the bailiffs admitted a tenancy from year to year under the corporation. Wood v. Tate, 2 N. R. 247.

Where a corporation are defendants, they are not entitled to any essoin. Argent v. St. Paul's (Dean), 2 T. R. 16; 16 East, 8, n.

5. Other Matters.

The corporation of the Royal Exchange Assurance Company in London, are liable to be assessed to the land tax, in their corporate capacity as a corporation. Exchange Assurance Company v. Vaughan, 1 Burr. 155; 1 Ld. Ken. 320.

By letters patent, the king granted to the mayor and burgesses of Lyme Regis, the borough or town so called, and also the pier, quay, or cob, with all liberties and profits, &c., belonging to the same, and remitted also twenty-seven marks of their ancient rent, payable to the king; and he willed, that the mayor and burgesses and their successors, all and singular the buildings, banks, sea shores, &c., within the said borough, or thereto belonging, or situate between the same and the sea, and also the said pier, &c., at their own costs and charges thenceforth for ever, should repair, maintain, and support, as often as it should be necessary:—Held, first, that the mayor and burgesses of Lyme having accepted the charter, became legally bound to repair the buildings, banks, sea shores, and mounds: secondly, that this obligation being one which concerned the public, an indictment would lie, in case of non-repair, against the mayor and burgesses for their general default, and an action on the case for a direct and particular damage sustained in consequence by an individual. Lyme Regis v. Henley, 3 B. & Adol. 77; 5 Bing. 91; 3 M. & P. 278.

Case lies against a corporation for not repairing a creek into which the tide of the sea flowed and reflowed, (but not saying it was a navigable river,) as from time immemorial they had been used; the action lies, though no special damage be stated; and saying "as from time immemorial they had been used," is well enough, without alleging that they were bound, &c., ratione tenuræ, or other special cause. Lynn v. Turner, Cowp. 86.

A corporation may be liable to repair the banks, &c., of a river, by prescription. Anon. Lofft, 556.

Corporations have a general right at law to alienate their lands, held in fee, subject as to ecclesiastical corporations to the restraining statutes; and there is no instance of a trust attached upon the ground of misapplication, as not to corporate purposes, except the case of corporations holding to charitable uses. Colchester v. Lowten, 1 Ves. & B. 226.

III. CORPORATE CHARTERS.

1. Explanation by Usage.

Contemporaneous documents, proceedings in causes relating to a charter, and parol testimony, may be resorted to in order to explain and give to the charter a construction, but not to contradict it. Lucton School v. Scarlett, 2 Y. & J. 330.

Where the words of a charter are doubtful, they may be explained by long usage. Blankley v. Winstanley, 3 T. R. 279; S. P. Gape v. Handley, 3 T. R. 288, n.; Rex v. Osbourne, 4 East, 327; Rex v. Johns, Lofft, 76; Rex v. Varlo, Cowp. 250. And see Rex v. Tate, 4 East, 337.

Quære, whether evidence of usage may be given to assist the court in the construction of a doubtful charter? Rex v. Miller, 6 T. R. 268. And see Rex v. Bellringer, 4 T. R. 810.

The words of a grant from the crown, by contemporaneous exposition and constant usage, may be extended beyond their natural import, so as to confer a right to exercise an office within a city and the liberties thereof, granted only to be exercised within the city. London v. Long, 1 Camp. 22—Ellenborough.

A grant of immunity to burgesses, their heirs and successors, was expounded by the usage to be a grant to burgesses, corporators only, and not to the burgage tenants and their heirs. Tucker v. Bricknell, 2 Taunt. 120.

Prescription presumes a charter. Anon. Lofft, 556.

A by-law cannot explain a doubtful charter; if there be any ambiguity on the face of the charter, it is the province of the court to expound it. Rex v. Tucker, 2 Selw. N. P. 1144.

2. Construction generally.

If there are words of permission in a charter, to do an act which is clearly for the public benefit, they are obligatory; therefore, where a charter declared that the mayor and jurats of an ancient town might hold a court of record for the holding of pleas, but which had been long disused, the court of K. B. granted a mandamus to compel such court to be held, at the instance of an inhabitant of the town, though he was not a corporator. Rex v. Hastings, 1 D. & R. 148; 5 B. & A. 692, n.

Words in a charter in restraint of trade are very unfavourably received, and, if doubtful, that meaning will be taken which is least inimical to commerce; and even where they are clear, a renunciation of the privileges will be presumed unless there is evidence of usage to support them. Berwick v. Johnson, Lofft, 334.

A charter granting jurisdiction to borough magistrates over a district not within the borough does not exclude the county justices without express words. Blankley v. Winstanley, 3 T. R. 279.

And though such charter contain words of reference to former charters, in which exclusive jurisdiction is given to the borough justices within the borough, and add that they shall have jurisdiction within the new district in tam amplio modo et formâ, &c., yet if there be in the latter charter a saving clause of the rights of the crown, and of all other persons, the borough magistrates have only a concurrent jurisdiction with the county justices. Id.

Although the charter of the tobacco-pipe makers' company may be inadequate to bind all the tobacco-pipe makers in the kingdom, it is sufficient to bind such of them as become members of the corporate company. Tobacco-Pipe Makers' Company v. Woodroffe, 7 B. & C. 530; 5 D. & R. 530.

And this charter, by fixing the place of meetings to London or Westminster, or within three miles thereof, sufficiently establishes local limits for the corporation. Id.

The nomination of a corporation officer in a modern charter, by necessary intendment makes him a free burgess of the borough, if he were not so before. Rex v. Downes, 7 D. & R. 177; 5 B. & C. 182.

So, where the modern charter of a corporation, after directing that the corporate officers should for ever thereafter be nominated and chosen out of the free burgesses, proceeded to nominate the common councilmen, and amongst them one who was not at the time of his nomination, a free burgess:—Held, that he was entitled, by virtue of his nomination, to all the privileges, and to exercise the office of a free burgess of the borough. Rex v. Perkins, 4 D. & R. 427.

Under the words of a charter of incorporation of the dean and chapter of the cathedral church of H. T. Dublin, ordaining that "the archdeacon &c., can and may enjoy a stall in the choir, and a voice and place in the chapter in all chapter acts," &c.; he has a voice in all its corporate acts, and not merely in the acts of that chapter considered as the archbishop's council; and it seems he may vote by proxy: Kildare (Bishop) v. Smith, 5 Dow, 225.

A clause in a charter, which directed that the aldermen should be chosen annually, was held to be only directory, and not to determine the office at the end of the year after election; but that the person legally elected and sworn into the office should continue until his death or removal, in the same manner as a person elected into the office of mayor. Prowse v. Foot (in error), 2 Bro. P. C. 289; S. P. Pender v. Rex (in error), 2 Bro. P. C. 294.

Where a charter directs that the mayor shall continue in office until another is duly elected and sworn, the successor although duly elected, cannot act until sworn, and, if he does, judgment of ouster may be given against him. Id.

Where a charter granted to the mayor and commonalty that "any alderman being wanted, the rest of the aldermen might nominate two burgesses, for the choosing of one of them as alderman by the commonalty (per communitatum):—Held, that "commonalty" included the whole corporation, and that an alderman so elected by the votes of the other aldermen, as well as the burgesses at large, was properly elected. Rex v. Osbourne, 4 East, 327.

Where the charter of a borough directed, that when any of the capital burgesses should happen to die, or dwell out of the borough, or be removed, it should be lawful for the remainder to elect others in the place of those so happening to die or be removed, omitting the intermediate circumstance of dwelling out of the borough:—Held, that these words were not so unambiguous as to warrant the court to interfere, by granting a mandamus calling on the mayor and burgesses to elect and swear in two capital burgesses in the room of two non-resident capital burgesses, who had not been previously removed by the corporation from their offices, for the purpose of taking this matter into consideration. Rex v. Truro, 3 B. & A. 590; 2 Chit. 257.

Where a charter of incorporation authorized the election of a mayor on the charter day, with power to the mayor to hold over, and on the mayor's death within the year after his election and swearing in, and in the mean time, the alderman next in order to officiate as mayor:—Held, that in the case of a mayor's holding over and dying more than a year after his election and swearing in, the charter did not authorize a new election of mayor, nor the alderman next in order to officiate as mayor; but it was casus omisi. Rex v. Smith, 2 M. & S. 583.

By a charter of the 31st Eliz., her majesty granted to the inhabitants of T. to be incorporated by the name of "the mayor and burgesses of the borough of T.," and also granted and confirmed to the said mayor and burgesses, and the successors, "all messuages, lands, tenement customs, privileges, immunities, advantages, &c. within the said borough, which the said mayor and burgesses or inhabitants, by whatever name or name, corporate or incorporate, by reason of colour of any prescription, &c., for fifty years past had held; and that the burgesses and inhabitants of the said borough, and their successors, from thenceforth for ever should be free from toll, passage, pontage, murage, &c., anchorage, coynage, wharfage, cranage, keyage, &c., for all goods, &c., which were their own, throughout the whole kingdom of England, except the city of London:—Held, that this exemption from tolls and dues did not extend to tolls and duties arising and due by prescription to the corporation of T. within that borough. Truro v. Reynalds, 1 M. & Scott, 272.

3. Construction as to Appointment of Deputies.

The borough of St. Alban's having first received a recorder by a charter of Car. 1, a subsequent charter of Car. 2, after nominating J. S. to be the first and modern recorder under that charter declared that it should be lawful for the aforesaid J. S., the modern recorder to nominate a sufficient person to be his deputy in the office, and to have the same powers:—Held, that this did not extend the power of appointing a deputy to the successors of J. S. in the office of recorder. Rex v. St. Alban's, 12 East, 559.

By charter the corporation of Gravesend were to have a capital seneschal, or high steward, and a sub-seneschal, or under steward, by the latter of whom the judicial ministerial functions of a recorder were to be performed, but no authority was given him to appoint a deputy; and although a by-law of the corporation required that the under-steward, or his sufficient deputy, should be attendant at every court, to discharge the duties of his office:—Held, that the under-steward could not appoint a deputy generally to discharge all his ministerial duties. Rex v. Gravesend, 4 D. & R. 117; 2 B. C. 602.

Semble, that he might appoint a deputy to do some particular ministerial act, with the assent of the corporation. Id.

A charter provided that there should be two aldermen in the borough of D. who should act for one year, by themselves, or their deputies; that on their death or removal, other aldermen should be elected, who should act for the rest of the year, by themselves, or their deputies; that in the absence of the aldermen, new aldermen, might be elected in their room; and that the aldermen for the time being should be justices of the peace for the borough.—Held, that the deputy of an alderman was not a justice of the peace for the borough. Jones v. Williams, 5 D. & R. 654; 3 B. & C. 762; 1 C. P. 459, 669.

4. Renewed Charter.

A new charter granted where there is a prior subsisting one, is void ab initio; because two corporations, for the same purposes of government, cannot legally exist within the same place, and at the same time. Rex v. Amery (in error), 2 Bro. P. C. 336.

But a new charter of incorporation, granted after a judgment of seizure quousque, &c., to a new body in the same place, is good, notwithstanding a charter of restitution be afterwards granted to the old corporation; and such charter of restitution is absolutely void. Rex v. Amery, and Rex v. Monk, 2 T. R. 515; 1 T. R. 575. But see S. C. 4 T. R. 122.

A corporation being disabled to act, accepting a new charter, is not dissolved, but dormant; and after such acceptance the new corporation is the same as the old one. Colchester v. Seaber, 3 Burr. 1866; 1 W. Black. 591.

By an ancient parliament roll, it appeared that the commons, by their petition exhibited in parliament, prayed King Edward III. that the charter made to his liege subjects, burgesses of the town of Bristol and the Franchises by him granted to his said burgesses, should be ratified and confirmed in that parliament. The answer to the petition was, that it was assented to and agreed in parliament that the franchises whereof the petition made mention, should be ratified and confirmed under the king's great seal. The charter was ratified by King Edward III. accordingly:—Held, that the crown was not prevented by this proceeding in parliament from granting a new charter to the burgesses of Bristol, varying the mode of electing the mayor from that provided for in the charter recited in the petition to the king in parliament. Rex v. Haythorne, 5 B. & C. 410; 8 D. & R. 228.

Queen Anne, by charter granted to the burgesses of Bristol that they should be a body corporate, &c. &c., and released to the corporation that power of removing its members which had been reserved by a former charter of King Charles II., and released any just cause of complaint which might be against the corporation for having acted in opposition to it;—Held, that it did not thereby appear that the queen granted this charter in consideration of the former charter granted by King Charles II., and that the queen's charter was not therefore void, although the supposed charter of Charles II. did not exist. Id.

5. Acceptance of Charter.

The acceptance of a charter, whereby the election of burgesses is directed in a manner different from what had obtained by ancient usage, which is inconsistent with the charter, abrogates the usage, which is determined by the acceptance of the charter; and that must afterwards be the only measure by which the election of burgesses is to be governed. Powell v. Rex (in error), 2 Bro. P. C. 298.

The constitution of a corporation as settled by act of parliament, cannot be varied by the acceptance of any charter inconsistent with it. Rex v. Miller, 6 T. R. 268.

A charter granted by the crown to a corporation cannot be partially accepted, whether it be a charter of creation, or granted to a pre-existing corporation. Rex v. Westwood, 2 Dow & Clark, 21; 4 Bligh, N. S. 213; 7 Bing. 1; 7 D. & R. 267; 4 B. & C. 781.

Unless it should appear to be the intention of the crown that the grantees should have the option to accept in part and reject in part. Id.

By a new charter, an old corporation, consisting of a mayor and burgesses, was made to consist of a mayor, aldermen, chief burgesses, and burgesses; the three former to constitute the common council. The common council and a majority of the burgesses expressed their assent to the new charter, some by voting at an election held under it, and others by a written declaration:—Held, that this was a sufficient acceptance of the new charter. Rex v. Hagger, 1 B. & R. 625; 7 B. & C. 708.

Quære, whether a majority of the burgesses need have concurred in such acceptance? Id.

The proclamation of James II., in the 4th year of his reign, for restoring corporations to their ancient charters, &c., operates (when accepted) as a grant of revival to such of the old corporations as had surrendered their corporate franchises to Charles II., (but which surrenders were not inrolled,) who had granted new charters; and overturns such new charters. Nesling v. Francis, 3 T. R. 189.

The corporation of Cambridge did accept and act under the proclamation. Id.

Where a person has been admitted a member of a corporate company, and has acted as such, it is not competent to him, in an action for infringing by-laws, to dispute the acceptance of the charter by a majority of those whom it is incorporated. Tobacco-Pipe Makers' Company v. Woodroffe, 5 D. & R. 530; 7 B. & C. 838.

The surrender of a charter is void for want of inrolment. Rex v. Osbourne, 4 East, 327.

IV. WHO ENTITLED TO BELONG TO CORPORATIONS

An inhabitant of a borough is not merely by force of his inhabitancy, without any inchoate right, entitled to be a corporator. Rex v. Wat Loe, 5 D. & R. 590; 3 B. & C. 677; 2 D. & R. 178.

An infant cannot be elected a burgess of a corporation, nor can a person so elected act as a burgess on being sworn in on obtaining his full age of twenty-one. Rex v. Carter, Lofft, 516; Cowp. 58, 220.

A custom to exclude foreigners in a corporation, and a by-law made to support it, are good but the penalty given by a by-law cannot be to a stranger. Bodwic v. Fennell (in error), 1 Wils. 233.

The title of a person, having an inchoate right to be admitted a free burgess of a borough, est-not be impeached on the ground of a defect of title in the officer by whom he was admitted. Rex v. Slythe, 9 D. & R. 226.

V. WHO COMPELLABLE TO BELONG TO CORPORATIONS.

A company by prescription and by custom may compel all of their trade to become members. Shrewsbury v. Hart, 1 C. & P. 113—Hullock.

Under a charter of 7 W. 3, by which the mayor of Liverpool is appointed to be elected out of the forty-one common councilmen, and every mayor is appointed an alderman:—Held, that the defendant, who was a common councilman, and had once served the office of mayor, and acted as justice for the town, but had since quitted the town, and resided four miles distant, having only a bank there, and was an acting magistrate for the county, was not entitled to refuse to stand at a subsequent election of mayor, though the serving that office would compel him to remove his residence to the town, and prevent his acting as magistrate for the county; and therefore the court granted a mandamus to take upon himself the office, he having been elected at such subsequent meeting. Rex v. Leyland, 3 M. & S. 184.

An attorney is privileged from serving corporation offices, although resident within the corporation town. Norwich v. Berry, 1 W. Black. 636; 4 Burr. 2109.

VI. QUALIFICATION OF CANDIDATES.

1. Residence and Estate.

When the defendant having prior connexions with a borough-town previous to his election to the office of bailiff, for which residence is a necessary qualification, took a house at first for four years, but afterwards at his landlord's request, for one, and slept there one night before the election, and did not return again for near a month afterwards, when he stayed two days, but retained possession of his house under his lease the whole time; the taking of the house appearing to the court to be bona fide, that was held a sufficient legal residence to satisfy the qualification required. Rex v. Sargent, 5 T. R. 466.

A charter which requires that the mayor should be an inhabitant resident within the borough, on pain of forfeiting such sum as should be imposed by the mayor, recorder, and major part of the common council, not exceeding 100*l.*, does not require residency as a qualification for holding the office, but only under a penalty. Rex v. Williams, 2 M. & S. 141.

Residence is not a precedent qualification for a burgess of Portsmouth, to entitle him to be elected an alderman. Rex v. Monday, Cowp. 539.

Where a charter of incorporation directs that certain officers shall be elected out of the burgesses and inhabitants, an usage to elect non-inhabitant burgesses is void: nor is such usage rendered valid by a charter of restoration, granting "all elections and rights of election previously enjoyed by virtue or pretence (virtute vel pre-textu) of any charter, or by any other lawful manner or title." Rex v. Salway, 4 M. & R. 314; 9 B. & C. 424.

A new trial was refused, because a jury had found a customary right for persons born in a place to be admitted freemen, upon paying 5*l.* Baxter v. Shrewsbury, Loft, 27.

Where by charter it was granted that the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses should thereafter be a body corporate by the name of mayor, jurats, bailiffs, and burgesses, that there should be one of the more honest and discreet burgesses or inhabitants, called "mayor," to be elected as therein-mentioned; and four honest and discreet burgesses or inhabitants called "jurats," and two other honest and discreet burgesses or inhabitants called "bailiffs; that the jurats and bailiffs should hold their offices for life, unless removed for reasonable cause; and when it should happen that either or any of the jurats or bailiffs for the time being should die, or be removed, or withdrawn from his or their office or offices, it should be lawful for the surviving and remaining jurats and bailiffs for the time being, or the greater part of them, (of whom the mayor should be one,) within convenient time, to nominate another or others of the burgesses or inhabitants of the borough for the time being to be jurat or jurats, bailiff or bailiffs, of the borough:—Held, that according to the true construction of the charter, it was competent to the corporation to elect the jurats from the inhabitants of the borough, or from the burgesses. Rex v. Great, 8 B. & C. 363; 2 M. & R. 391.

A charter ordained that no person should be admitted a burgess, except he had for three years before been seised and possessed of an estate of freehold for the term of his life, or some greater estate in land of a certain value, with an exception of such as should be seised of such estate of such yearly value, which had come to him by descent or marriage:—Held, that one who by virtue of his marriage became seised of an estate in right of his wife for her life, was not within the exception, and therefore not qualified. Rex v. Powell, 8 T. R. 639.

2. Apprenticeship.

By the constitution of the corporation of Hedon, a person having served a seven years' apprenticeship to a freeman residing in the town, is entitled to his freedom; and by a by-law, the indentures must be inrolled by the town-clerk within four months from the date; an apprentice who is bound to a freeman, resident only occasionally, and whose service is to be performed at another place, is not entitled to have his indentures inrolled; nor will the court grant a mandamus to the town-clerk for that purpose. Rex v. Marshal, 2 T. R. 2.

A by-law, which directed that a sum of money should be paid for the use of a corporation, on inrolling indentures of apprenticeship to one of its members, is bad. Nevesby v. Webster, 1 Ld. Ken. 243.

A by-law of a corporation, by which indentures of apprenticeship to freemen must be inrolled within four months from the date, was not objected to on an application for a mandamus. Rex v. Marshall, 2 T. R. 2.

Though a by-law of the corporation of Cambridge requires an indenture of apprenticeship to be inrolled; yet, if it has been exhibited to the town-clerk, who marked it as being inrolled, it is sufficient, notwithstanding it is not inrolled in the corporation books. Rex v. Cambridge, 2 Chit. 144.

But, under another by-law, service at another place is not sufficient, unless the trade there was subservient to the trade at Cambridge. Id.

A by-law, made by a company in a corporation to restrain the number of apprentices to be taken by any of the members, is void. Rex v. Coopers' Comp. of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, 7 T. R. 543.

A by-law, altering the qualification of persons to be taken as apprentices by the members of a corporation, in order to acquire their freedom by a certain servitude, is not warranted by a custom in such body, which claimed by prescription to make by-laws regulating the number of persons to be taken as apprentices. Rex v. Tappenden, 3 East, 186.

By custom in a corporate town, all persons having served an apprenticeship for seven years to a free burgess, carrying on trade there, were entitled to be admitted to the office of a free burgess:—Held, that a person who had served under articles of clerkship to an attorney, a free burgess of the borough, and residing within the same, was not entitled to be admitted to his freedom. Rex v. Doncaster, 7 B. & C. 630; 1 M. & R. 545.

A prescriptive right in the eldest son of every burgess born in N., and in the younger sons of every burgess born in N., and having served a seven years' apprenticeship to any trade; and in every person having served a seven years' apprenticeship in N. to any burgess of N., to be admitted a burgess of N. on his attaining twenty-one, was held by the court not to exclude the incidental power arising by implication of law to the corporation at large, to secure their perpetual succession, by voluntary elections of burgesses ad libitum; and this, though it was averred that N. had always been and is a populous town, containing numerous resident and trading burgesses; and that, by the prescriptive modes of supply by birth and servitude, the succession of a sufficient and large number of burgesses is fully secured: for non constat that these sources had at all times been sufficient during the existence of the corporation, without occasional supplies of burgesses by election, or even that they were so at the time of the defendant's election, and they could not have operated at all for some years after the creation of the corporation; and, therefore, no presumption can be raised from thence, that the crown meant to exclude the incidental power of the corporation, to make voluntary election of burgesses in aid of such prescriptive modes of supply. Rex v. Bird, 13 East, 367.

What binding and service is sufficient to entitle an apprentice to be admitted a free burgess of Colchester, under a particular custom of that corporation, respecting apprentices being sworn burgesses, see Rex v. Rowe, 4 Burr. 2287.

3. Incompatible Offices.

A jurat of the corporation of Hastings may be elected town-clerk of the said corporation. Edward v. Thatcher, 2 T. R. 81.

But the two offices are incompatible, and the acceptance of the latter, though an inferior office, will vacate the former. Id.

Where the town-clerk's accounts are allowed by the aldermen, or where a town-clerk acts ministerially under the aldermen, who are judicial officers, the offices are incompatible, and the appointment of an alderman to be the town-clerk vacates his former office. Rex v. Pateman, 2 T. R. 777.

And, if the person so appointed continue to exercise the office of alderman, the court of K.B. will grant an information in the nature of a quo warranto against him. Id.

A justification in trespass stated, that by custom a court of record had, from time immemorial, been holden before the steward and portreeve of a borough, or their sufficient deputy or deputies; and that a court was holden according to such custom before A., then being the deputy of B., who was then steward and portreeve of the borough:—Held, that upon this plea the two offices must be taken to have been compatible, and that the steward and portreeve might be united in the same person; and that the appointment of the deputy by the person holding both offices was sufficient. Green v. Davies, 3 B. & A. 60.

In the borough of C., by charter, the mayor, burgesses, and commonalty were to elect a town-clerk, who was also to be clerk of the peace, clerk of assizes, and prothonotary; and the mayor, recorder, and town-clerk were to hold plea of certain actions. The mayor, recorder, and common-council (twenty in number) were to enact by-laws for the good order and government of the borough. None of the common council held any judicial office in any court where the town-clerk officiated. His accounts were audited by a committee, named by the mayor and burgesses in common hall. No fixed salary was allowed by the corporation; but he was remunerated by certain fees of right payable to him:—Held, that the offices of common-councilman and town-clerk were not incompatible. Rex v. Jones, 1 B. & Adol. 677.

A corporator, accepting a new office incompatible with the old one, thereby absolutely vacates and surrenders the latter; and if he is ousted of his new appointment by quo warranto, he is not re-admitted to his original character; nor can a vote given at a corporate meeting, whilst he filled the higher office de facto, be referred to his original office of an inferior degree. Rex v. Hughes, 8 D. & R. 708.

By the governing charter of a borough, there were to be ten aldermen, and ten capital burgesses; and vacancies in the body of aldermen were to be filled up out of the capital burgesses:—Held, that the acceptance of the office of alderman by a capital burgess, even under a void election, operated as a surrender of the latter office; and that a person so elected, and afterwards ousted on quo warranto, was not thereby restored to the office of capital burgess: and therefore, where a capital burgess became an alderman de facto, by means of a void election, and in the character of alderman attended and voted at an election of a mayor, but was afterwards ousted on quo warranto:—Held, that he could not be considered as having attended and voted as a capital burgess. Rex v. Hughes, 6 D. & R. 443; 5 B. & C. 886. And see 4 B. & C. 360.

Quo warranto information for usurping the office of justice within the borough of S. Plea, that defendant was elected at a corporate meeting, where a majority of the aldermen and capital burgesses were present: replication, that at the supposed election five capital burgesses (naming them) and no others were present, and that they were not the major part of the capital burgesses: rejoinder, that at the election, besides the five capital burgesses named in the replication, there were present K. and T., being then capital burgesses; and that the five capital burgesses named in the replication, together with K. and T., were the major part of the capital burgesses: sur-rejoinder, that K. and T., before the election of the defendant, had been elected, admitted into, and exercised the office of aldermen, and at the election of the defendant were present as aldermen: and that, before the defendant's election, two other persons were elected, and admitted as capital burgesses, in the room and stead of K. and T.: rebutter, that at the election of K. and T., as aldermen of the borough, the major part of the aldermen were not assembled; and that after the election of K. and T., and before the election of the defendant as justice, and whilst K. and T. exercised the office of aldermen, quo warranto informations were filed against them, and judgment of ouster given, with a denial that K. and T. ever were aldermen:—Held, on demurrer, that K. and T. were not good capital burgesses, though they had been ousted from the office of alderman, and judgment for the crown. Rex v. Hubball, 9 D. & R. 143; 6 B. & C. 139.

The common clerk of a borough is appointed by the mayor, aldermen, and bailiffs, removable at their pleasure, and with a salary variable at their pleasure; and it is his duty to attend the corporate meetings, and take minutes of the proceedings. The office of such common clerk, and that of alderman, are incompatible; and the acceptance of the former vacates the latter. Rex v. Tizzard, 4 M. & R. 400; 9 B. & C. 418.

Where a rule is obtained for a quo warranto, upon the ground that a party has vacated a corporate office, by having accepted a second incompatible office, the affidavits must show a valid appointment to the second office, the acceptance of which is made the ground of motion. Rex v. Day, 9 B. & C. 702; 4 M. & R. 541.
VOL. I. 4 H

The acceptance by a person holding a corporate office of another incompatible office, does not operate as an absolute avoidance of the corporate office, though it might be ground of motion; and acceptance of an incompatible office does not operate as an absolute avoidance of a former office, in any case where the party could divest himself of that office by his own act, and without the concurrence of another authority to his resignation or motion, unless such authority be privy and consenting to the second appointment:—Held, also, that the defendant, as long as he was an alderman and justice of peace of the city of N., was not a person capable of being appointed county treasurer. Rex v. Patteson, 4 B. & Adol. 9.

4. Exercising Trades.

Where a charter of incorporation ordained that the mayor, &c., should yearly be chosen justices within the borough, and that the said justices should not permit any one to retail ale or beer within the borough, without a license under the hands of two of the said justices, whereof the mayor to be one:—Held, that the defendant, who was a dealer in spirituous liquors, and by that means disqualified by 26 Geo. 2, c. 13, from concurring in granting licenses, was not disqualified from being elected mayor. Rex v. Smith, 2 M. & S. 583.

A retail baker is not ineligible as mayor, although the officers of the borough for which he is appointed settle the assize of bread there. Rex v. Deane, 2 Chit. 370.

5. Taking Sacrament.

As to when it is, and when it is not, incumbent upon a corporate officer to prove that he has taken the sacrament within a year before his election, see Crawford v. Powell, 2 Burr. 1013; 1 W. Black. 229.

One who has not taken the sacrament according to the rites of the church of England, within a year before his election in fact to a corporate office, is disqualified by the Corporation Act, 13 Car. 2, st. 2, c. 1, s. 12, from being elected; and if such disqualification be notified to the electors at the time of election, votes afterwards given to such person are then thrown away; and any candidate having the most legal votes, though in fact inferior in number to the first, is duly elected and entitled to be sworn in; but until he be sworn in, the office is not legally filled up and enjoyed by him, within the exception of the Annual Indemnity Act; and therefore, if the disqualified person who had the greatest number of votes be sworn into the office, and afterwards qualify himself by taking the sacrament, &c., within the time allowed by the Indemnity Act, he is thereby re-capacitated and freed from all disability, and his title to the office thereby protected, such office not having been then already vacated by judgment, or legally filled up and enjoyed by another person. Rex v. Parry, 14 East, 550. And see Rex v. Bridge, 1 M. & S. 76.

At a meeting duly held for the election of an alderman for the borough of Saltaah, A. and B. were candidates. Two votes were given for each, when they were interrogated whether they had qualified by taking the sacrament within the year before the election, pursuant to 13 Car. 2, stat. 2, c. 1, s. 12. A. admitted he had not, B. answered that he had. Public notice was then given of A.'s disqualification; but the poll proceeded, and after the notice twenty voted for A. and sixteen for B.: the mayor swore in A.; two of the aldermen (as they might by the constitution of the borough) swore in B.; A. took the sacrament within the time limited by the Annual Indemnity Act:—Held, by the court below, first, that though notice of the disqualification of A. was not given till after the commencement of the election, all the votes for him after such notice were thrown away; secondly, that B. having the greatest number of legal votes, was duly elected, and having been sworn in by the proper officers, the office was legally filled up by him, so as to exclude the operation of the Annual Indemnity Act in favour of A.; thirdly, that B. must be presumed to have been qualified according to his own declaration, there being no evidence to the contrary. And the court below appeared to have considered it of great weight that the majority (thirty-six out of forty) were unpolled at the time of the notice, though not prepared to say that it would have made any difference, though the notice had not been given till a more advanced period of the poll, if the votes for B. had exceeded the number given for A. before notice. And this judgment was affirmed by the House of Lords, the Lord Chancellor thinking that those who had voted for a disqualified person without notice, might, if they chose to demand permission, vote again for another person, but that no one was bound to call upon them to do so. Hawkins v. Rex, 2 Dow, 124; 10 East, 211. And see Rex v. Bridge, 1 M. & S. 76.

A freeman of the city of London is elected one of the sheriffs, but refusing to take the office, on account of his being a dissenter, and as such not having received the sacrament according to the rites of the church of England within a year before his election, an action is brought against him for the penalty incurred by such refusal, and a judgment recovered. The action being brought in the Sheriff's court, a writ of error was brought in the court of Hustings, where the judgment was affirmed. But the defendant having obtained a special commission of errors, the judges delegated reversed both the judgments; and on a writ of error in parliament, the judgment of reversal was affirmed. Harrison v. Evans (in error), 3 Bro. P. C. 465.

The Annual Indemnity Act is prospective as well as retrospective, and extends to persons who may be in default during the time for which it is made, and is not limited to those who had incurred penalties or disabilities before it was passed; it being the intention of the legislature to extend the time for taking the oaths and performing the other acts required of persons filling certain offices. In re Stevenson, 2 B. & C. 34.

VII. ELECTION OF MEMBERS AND OFFICERS

1. Day of Election.

By 11 Geo. 1, c. 4, where the election for mayors or other chief officers shall not be made on the days appointed by charter or usage, the corporation are not disabled from electing.

No elections in corporations made by surprise on a by-day can be valid. Rex v. May, and Rex v. Little, 5 Burr. 2681.

Where by custom or charter a particular day is fixed for the election of burgesses of a corporation, it is the duty of the burgesses to take notice that the election will take place on such particular day, and attend to exercise their elective franchises, if they be so minded; but where no specific day is fixed by custom or charter, and the business of electing burgesses, as well as other business, may be many days in the year, notice must be given to the resident burgesses of a corporate meeting for such purpose, and in such reasonable time as to give them all an opportunity of attending and voting at the election. Notice, therefore, by ringing a bell fixed at the top of the guildhall of a corporation, the liberties of which extend three miles, and in which there is an indefinite number of burgesses, is not a sufficient notice of a corporate meeting for the election of burgesses, nor can either a custom or a by-law render such a notice binding, unless it appears that all the burgesses have attended for the purpose of electing burgesses. Rex v. Hill, 6 D. & R. 593; 4 B. & C. 426.

On the appointed charter day for the special purpose of the election of lord mayor of the city of London, the business of such election must have precedence of all other business; therefore, it was held illegal, after the lord mayor and aldermen had retired from the hustings, (having assembled for that purpose,) to propose any other business inconsistent with such election, the discussion of which might have the effect of preventing the election altogether. Rex v. Perkins, 3 B. & A. 668. And see Mackell v. Binson, 11 East, 84, n.

It is not a general proposition of law, that there cannot be any lawful assembly for the purpose of election, without previous notice of the purpose of the meeting having been given to every member of a select definite body, who are the electors; for if all such members were present at, and concurred in any particular election, such notice would be unnecessary. Rex v. Chiswold, 7 B. & C. 695; 1 M. & R. 534.

Therefore, where, to a quo warranto information, defendant pleaded that he was elected by the major part of the common council duly assembled, a replication, stating that notice of the purpose for which the assembly was to be held had not been given, was held bad on demurrer. Id.

Where certain powers are vested in a select body, appointed to be aiding and assisting the mayor of a city, touching matters concerning the same, a notice by the mayor to the members of that body to attend a corporate meeting, need not specify the purpose for which the meeting is convened; and an election at such meeting is valid. Rex v. Pulsford, 2 M. & R. 384; 8 B. & C. 350.

2. What a Majority.

Where a charter directs an election to be by a majority of the whole number of subsisting burgesses, an election by a minor part of them is void. Rex v. Grimes, 5 Burr. 2598.

If a majority dissent from an election, but vote for nobody else, the election by the minority is good. Oldknow v. Wainwright, or Rex v. Foxcroft, 2 Burr. 1017; 1 W. Black. 229.

Where an integral part of a corporation, composed of a definite number, is required to vote at an election of a corporate officer, a majority of such integral definite part must attend, otherwise there can be no elective assembly, although other parts of the corporation also join in such election, and a majority of the whole existing body actually attend; but a majority of those present, when legally assembled, will bind the rest. Rex v. Miller, 6 T. R. 268.

A charter, directing an election to be made by the remaining members of a definite body of a corporation, is good in law. Rex v. Hoyte, 6 T. R. 430.

In a prescriptive corporation, an usage to this effect is evidence of such a charter. Id.

Consequently, in either case, a person is well elected by a majority of the subsisting members, as distinguished from a majority of the full body. Id.

A charter of incorporation empowered the mayor and aldermen for the time being, or the greater part of them, to choose and name four of the burgesses or inhabitants, "out of which four so to be named and chosen, the mayor, aldermen, bailiffs, principal burgesses, and other burgesses and inhabitants of the borough, for the time being, (they being also for that purpose upon the same day congregated and assembled together), or the greater part of them as should be so congregated and assembled, might have power and authority, by the greater part of the voices of them so assembled together, to choose and make one to be the mayor:"—Held, that the election of a mayor by a majority of the whole elective body taken collectively was invalid, it appearing that there was not a majority of each definite body of principal burgesses present at the time of the election. Rex v. Bower, 2 D. & R. 761; 1 B. & C. 492.

So, where the charter of a corporation, consisting of a mayor and twenty-four capital burgesses, granted that when and so often as it should happen that any one or more of the offices of these capital burgesses should be vacant, it should be lawful to the other capital burgesses, "at that time surviving or remaining, or the greater part of the same, of whom the mayor for the time being should be one, to elect another or others of the burgesses of the said borough into the place or places of the capital burgess or burgesses so happening," &c.; and a burgess having been elected to fill up a vacancy by twelve capital burgesses only, who were alleged to be the capital burgesses at that time surviving and remaining:—Held, that the election was void, it not being made by a majority of the whole definite body of capital burgesses, to which the words, "or the greater part of the same," were referable. Rex v. Wyllyama, 3 D. & R. 75; S. P. Rex v. Devonshire, 3 D. & R. 83; 1 B. & C. 609.

Where a notice of a meeting for corporate purposes is regularly given, a majority of those present have power to do any corporate act; but if the meeting be accidental, they can only proceed to business if they are unanimous; for if one member only dissents, he has an absolute negative. Rex v. Kynaston, 2 Selw. N. P. 1143.

Where the whole corporation are summoned for a particular purpose, (e. g. to receive the resignation of a common councilman), a select body, who are all present and consenting, may at the same meeting, without any particular summons to them for that purpose in their select capacity, proceed to an election of a common councilman, in the place of the other resigned; the power of election being in such select body, and the charter not requiring any previous summons. Rex v. Theodorick, 8 East, 543.

A charter directed that a borough should consist of a mayor, four jurats, and two bailiffs; and that when any bailiff or jurat should die, &c., the remaining jurats and bailiffs, or the greater part of them, of whom the mayor should be one, should elect another or others of the burgesses or inhabitants to be a jurat, &c.; one vacancy occurred in the office of jurat, and an inhabitant was elected a jurat, by a meeting at which the mayor, two jurats, and two bailiffs were present:—Held, a good election; the rule requiring the presence of a majority of each definite part of the elective body not applying, where in case of one vacancy, viz. in the office of bailiff, it would be impossible for a majority of the bailiffs to be present. Rex v. Greet, 2 M. & R. 391; 8 B. & C. 363.

Upon the nomination of two aldermen of a borough, in order that one of them might be afterwards elected mayor, pursuant to charter:—Held, that votes which were given before notice of the ineligibility of one of the candidates, on account of his not having received the sacrament within one year, were not thrown away, so as to authorize the returning officer to return another candidate, who was in a minority. Rex v. Bridge, 1 M. & S. 76. And see Rex v. Parry, 14 East, 549; Hawkins v. Rex, 2 Dow, 124; 10 East, 211.

Where a charter required that the mayor and common clerk for the time being, and the common council for the time being, or the major part of them, should elect, and the common council was a definite body consisting of thirty-six:—Held, that a majority of the whole number must meet to form an elective assembly; and that if the corporation be so reduced as that so many do not remain, no election could be had at all. Rex v. Bellringer, 4 T. R. 810.

Where, at a corporation meeting, for the purpose of electing honorary freemen, a list of names was proposed, upon the whole of whom the vote was taken collectively, instead of individually:—Held, that such election was void, even where the corporation consisted of an indefinite number. Rex v. Player, 2 B. & A. 707.

Where a charter provided for the election of fifteen chief burgesses, and supplying the vacancies from time to time by the votes of a majority, a return to a mandamus that there was not a sufficient number of such as had been themselves legally elected, to form a majority, was held bad, for there might be a competent number of burgesses whose titles, though not originally legal, might yet be unimpeachable by lapse of time. Rex v. Monmouth, 4 B. & A. 496.

A corporation, by prescription, consisted of a mayor, recorder, and thirty-six chief burgesses, of whom twelve were also called counsellors. A charter, recognizing that constitution, directed that "the mayor, recorder, and chief burgesses, (of which chief burgesses some were called chief burgesses counsellors,) or the greatest part of them, should have power to elect one of such chief burgesses and counsellors to be mayor," and also to elect other officers and burgesses. The charter also gave powers to the mayor, recorder, and twelve chief burgesses alone:—Held, in the absence of evidence of any other usage, that, by these charters, the twelve burgesses counsellors did not form an integral part of this corporation for the purpose of election, and that therefore, to make a good election, it was sufficient that there were present the mayor, recorder, and a majority of the whole thirty-six chief burgesses. Rex v. Headley, 7 B. & C. 496; 1 M. & R. 345.

To an information for usurping the office of justice within a borough, defendant pleaded that he was elected at a corporate meeting, where a majority of the aldermen and capital burgesses were present. Replication, that at the supposed election, five capital burgesses (described by their names), and no others, were present; and that they were not the major part of the capital burgesses. Rejoinder, that at the election, besides the five capital burgesses named in the replication, there were present K. and T., being then capital burgesses, and that the five capital burgesses named in the replication, together with K. and T., were the major part of the capital burgesses. Sur-rejoinder, that K. and T., before the election of the defendant, had been elected, admitted into, and exercised the office of aldermen, and at the election of the defendant were present as aldermen, and that before the defendant's election, two other persons were elected, and admitted as capital burgesses, in the room and stead of K. and T. Rebutter, that at the election of K. and T. as aldermen of the borough, the major part of the aldermen were not asssembled and that after the election of K. and T., and before the election of the defendant as justice, and whilst K. and T. exercised the office of aldermen, informations in quo warrantu were filed against them, and judgment of ouster given, with a traverse that K. and T. ever were aldermen. Demurrer:—Held, that notwithstanding the judgment of ouster, K. and T. could not be considered as having attended at the election of the defendant as capital burgesses, and the judgment must be for the crown. Rex v. Hubball, 6 B. & C. 139; 9 D. & R. 143; S. P. Rex v. Hughes, 6 D. & R. 443; 5 B. & C. 886.

The majority of the mayor and aldermen at the time being is sufficient to constitute the corporate assembly of Portsmouth. Rex v. Monday, Cowp. 530.

When duly met, corporate acts may be done by the majority of those constituting the meeting. Id.

Where a person is proposed for election, as an alderman, the corporation may vote against him without voting for another. Id.

A corporation has no power to exclude an integral part of the body, where a charter gives them a right of election. Rex v. Head, 4 Buz. 2513.

3. Who to preside at Meeting.

It is necessary that a presiding officer, who by the charter of a borough forms an integral part of an elective assembly, should be present up to the time when the election is completed; and the election cannot be proceeded in during his absence, although he should improperly absent himself. Rex v. Williams, 2 M. & S. 141.

If a presiding officer, who, by the constitution of the borough, forms an integral part of an elective assembly, depart from it after the meeting has been regularly formed, and the election entered upon, but before it is completed, an election made after his departure is void. Rex v. Balle, 8 East, 389.

Assuming that under the stat. 11 Geo. 1, c. 4 an election began at a corporate meeting, where the mayor presided, may be completed, in case of his absenting himself pending the proceedings, under the presidency of the next in place and order to him; yet, where a question arose upon the right of a voter, on which the mayor, as presiding officer, decided by rejecting the vote; and thereupon, the remaining votes being equal, he declared the same, and that no election could be made; and thereupon ordered the meeting to be dissolved, and no objection was made at the time, nor any notice given to the electors present, that any of them intended to proceed in the election, notwithstanding the decision (which turned out to be erroneous); but after suffering the mayor and many of the freemen to depart, without notice, the rest who remained together proceeded to complete the election: it was held by the Court of K. B. that such election was void even under the statute, as a surprise and fraud.

other electors. Rex v. Gaborian, 11 plea was proved, but it appeared, in addition to the custom there set out, that it had been usual for the elect jury to present in writing the candidate who had the majority of votes at the morning court, to be sworn in by the steward at the evening court, and that the jury had done so in the present instance:—Held, that this was a mere ministerial act, on the part of the jury, and that such presentment was no essential part of the appointment, and need not be alleged in the plea; and consequently that there was no variance between the statement in the plea, and the proof adduced at the trial. Rex v. Rowland, 3 B. & A. 130.

The charter of Saltaah empowers the mayor, justice of the peace, and the rest of the aldermen (seven in all), or the major part of them, of whom the mayor and justice to be two, when it shall seem to them convenient and necessary, to elect as many free burgesses as shall please them, and together, and pre- to the same free burgesses, so elected, to administer an oath, &c. The defendant was elected a free burgess in October, 1804, and in December, 1806, at a meeting of six out of the seven aldermen, in consequence of a mandamus to them to fill up the vacant place of alderman, and an, apart which meeting the mayor said was held for that sole purpose, the defendant tendered himself to be sworn in; against which three aldermen protesting, tested, one of whom immediately left the assembly; but before the other two protestors withdrew, the mayor, with the assent of two other aldermen, administered the oath of office to the defendant:—Held, first, that the swearing in of the burgess might well be at a time subsequent to the election, he having had a present legal capacity to be sworn in at the time of election, and therefore not like the case of an elector. Secondly, that the act of swearing, being merely ministerial, may be done by the mayor, as presiding officer, in the presence of a majority of the mayor and aldermen, by which act was required to be done, whensoever assembled, and without any summons for this purpose; there being a majority at the time when the oath was administered; and, thirdly, though a number of those first assembled, the defendant's being sworn in, tendered himself to take the oath; the protestors having withdrawn, it was the majority who remained to whom no vote having been come first assembled to preclude the act at the meeting. Rex v. Ellis, may be compelled to take the office, either by mandamus or indictment; but when it is admitted that the election has been merely a pretence and contrivance, the court will grant a mandamus, under 11 Geo. 1, to proceed to another election. Rex v. Colchester, 4 Dougl. 14.

5. By-laws to regulate.

Where the mode of electing officers is not regulated by charter or prescription, the corporation may make by-laws to regulate the election. Newling v. Francis, 3 T. R. 189.

The general body of a corporation may lawfully delegate the power to elect burgesses to a select body of the corporation. Rex v. Westwood, 2 Dow & Clark, 21; 4 Bligh, N. S. 213; 7 Bing. 1; 7 D. & R. 267; 4 B. & C. 781.

A charter vests the right to elect burgesses in the general body of an ancient corporation, and gives a power to make by-laws to a select body. The general body makes a by-law delegating the power to elect burgesses to the select body:—Held, that this is a good by-law; for the power given by the charter to the select body to make by-laws, does not divest the general body of the right to make such laws, which is incident to it at common law. Id.

Where, by charter, a select body in a corporation had power to make by-laws for the good rule and government of the borough, letting of its lands and other matters and causes whatsoever concerning the borough; and by the charter it was also directed, that the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses should from time to time elect other burgesses:—Held, that the general body of mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses, might make a by-law that the burgesses should be elected by the select body. Id.

A by-law, that any person should be admitted to the freedom of the corporation, upon payment of money, together with the fees, is bad. Rex v. Northampton, 4 Burr. 2260.

The number of electors may be narrowed by a by-law, but not the number of the eligible. Rex v. Spencer, 3 Burr. 1827; S. P. Rex v. Tunwell, 3 Dougl. 207.

Nor can the number and description of persons declared eligible to an office by the royal charter of a corporation be changed by a by-law; nor the sale of a distress directed. Lee v. Wallis, 1 Ld. Ken. 292.

Where a charter directed the mayor to be annually chosen out of four of the burgesses or inhabitants, and a by-law ordained that all these four should be aldermen:—Held, that it was void, as being repugnant to the charter; and judgment of ouster was given against a mayor elected in consequence of such by-law. Tucker v. Rex (in error), 2 Bro. P. C. 304.

Where a charter expressly gave the power of election to the mayor and commonalty, together with the aldermen, a subsequent by-law which gave it to the mayor and aldermen only, was held illegal and void. Hoblyn v. Rex (in error), 2 Bro. P. C. 329.

Where a charter gave the right of electing an alderman to the mayor and burgesses at large from themselves; a by-law, stated to be made in 1577, by the then mayor and burgesses, but not now extant in writing, whereby the right of electing was restrained to "the mayor and certain of the burgesses of the town, viz. the recorder, aldermen, coroners, common councilmen, and such of the burgesses of the said town as had served or did serve the office of chamberlain or sheriff of the said town, and called the livery or clothing burgesses for the time being, or so many of them as should be duly assembled together for that purpose, whereof the mayor to be one, or the major part of them, was held to be a reasonable and valid by-law; and the office of chamberlain of the town, as stated in such by-law, was taken to be a corporate office as well as the other offices, the serving of which was made the qualification of the electing burgesses. Rex v. Ashwell, 12 East, 22.

Where a charter directed the election of a bailiff to be made by a majority of a select body, held that a by-law giving a casting voice to the presiding officer in case of an equality of votes was bad. Rex v. Ginever, 6 T. R. 732.

Where the corporation (consisting primarily of the mayor and burgesses, who were directed by charter to elect aldermen from among themselves) transferred the right of electing burgesses to a select body, consisting of the mayor and aldermen, of whom the major part must attend, eighteen livery or clothing burgesses, of whom nine were sufficient to attend; together with the recorder, if a burgess, and if choosing to attend, and six of the burgesses at large, if they chose to attend; but the select body might proceed without either the six burgesses or the recorder, if they did not attend:—Held that this was a reasonable and valid by-law. Rex v. Bird, 13 East, 367.

By charter the capital burgesses and common council of a borough were authorized every year, on Monday next before Michaelmas, to elect and nominate one of the capital burgesses to be mayor for one whole year thence next ensuing; and he, before he was admitted to execute that office, or in any way to intermeddle in the same office, was on Friday next after the feast of St. Michael next ensuing such nomination and election, not only to take his corporal oath well and faithfully to execute the office, but also all the oaths appointed to be taken by a mayor; and after such oath so taken, he might execute the office of mayor of the borough for one whole year then and next ensuing. It was then provided, that none who should have once borne the office of mayor should be again elected and preferred to be mayor within the space of three years next ensuing the end and determination of his office of mayoralty:—Held, that the words "three years," mentioned in the prohibitory clause, imported years of office, and not calendar years, and therefore a person who had once served the office of mayor might be again promoted to the same office as soon as three mayoralties had intervened:—Held, also, that a party became mayor, not when he was elected, but when he was sworn in; and that it was sufficient if three mayoralties intervened between the time when he ceased to be mayor, and the time when he was sworn into office a second time. Rex v. Stoyer, 10 B. C. C. 486.

Where a charter of incorporation authorizes the corporation to elect a master de seipsis, a by-law narrowing the body of electors is valid. Rex v. Attwood, 1 Nev. & M. 286.

The existence of such a by-law may, without the intervention of a jury, be judicially inferred from an ancient usage for the election to be so conducted. Id.

Though the by-law would be void if it also lessened the number of persons eligible to the office, such a view in the presumed by-law will not be inferred from the circumstance of the election by the limited body having almost uniformly fallen upon members of the limited body. Id.

Nor will the court on that ground give leave to file an information in the nature of a quo warranto for the purpose of investigating the title of a master elected agreeably to such usage. Id.

A by-law to prevent any person from being made free of a company, until he shall have been called at three several meetings of the mayor, and certain aldermen of the city, and the wardens and stewards of the several companies in it, before his admittance, and to be approved of by them, or a majority of them, is good. Rex v. Durham, 1 Burr. 127; 1 Ld. Ken. 512.

The words "shall be lawful," when found in the by-law of a corporation, are not to be construed as obligatory. Therefore, where a by-law of a corporation ordained that under certain circumstances "it should be lawful" for the bailiffs to admit to the freedom of the town certain persons:—Held, that this by-law was only optional, and that the admission of such persons to the freedom of the borough could not be enforced by mandamus. Rex v. Eye, 2 D. & R. 172; 1 B. & C. 85; 4 B. & A. 271.

By-laws for compelling, by means of pecuniary penalties, the attendance of members of a corporation, at corporate meetings, and the acceptance of corporate offices, are reasonable, and may be enforced by action at law. Tobacco-Pipe Makers' Company v. Woodroffe, 7 B. & C. 838; 5 D. & R. 530.

But a by-law, imposing a tax on the members of a corporation by the name of a quarterage of money, cannot be supported, unless it is shown that the necessities of the company require such contributions, and that the latter are commensurate with the former. Id.

By charter, the company of patten-makers were made a corporation, having a master, two wardens, and twelve assistants, and the company were to elect yearly one of the two wardens to be master. By a by-law afterwards made and agreed to by the whole company, the master was thenceforth to be elected by the master, wardens, and assistants for the time being, in a particular mode, (not prescribed by the charter), out of two or three meet and sufficient persons, being of the number of the master, wardens, and assistants, and selected by the master and wardens. In case of an equality of voices, the master was to have a double vote:—Held, that the by-law was bad, because it extended the number of persons eligible by the charter to the office of master; and (per Parke, J.) semble that it was also bad because the election was required to be in a particular mode not prescribed or sanctioned by the charter. Rex v. Bumstead, 2 B. & Adol. 699.

6. Other Matters as to Election.

Quære, whether, if a mayor de facto intervenes, the mayor of a former year, who is returning officer, and is entitled to hold over by the charter till a legal successor is chosen, can be chosen the third year under 9 Anne, c. 20, s. 8? Rex v. Godwin, 1 Dougl. 397.

The king is not bound by 9 Anne, c. 20, s. 8, and therefore, in granting a new charter to an old corporation, he may appoint a person as the officer who presides at the election of members of parliament, though he had previously held that situation. Rex v. Hughes, 7 B. & C. 708; 1 M. & R. 625.

A charter granted to the mayor, bailiffs, and burgesses, or the greater part of them, to choose one of themselves to be mayor; but the same charter appointed the first mayor to continue for a year, and until some other burgess should be elected and sworn, and the two first bailiffs to continue until two other burgesses should be elected and sworn; and it also directed the new mayor to be sworn in before the last mayor, his predecessor, and the bailiffs for the time being, and the burgesses present; and in like manner the new bailiffs to be sworn in before the mayor and the last bailiffs and the burgesses present. These latter provisions explain the first, and show that the mayor must be chosen out of the burgesses at large, and not out of the bailiffs; and this avoids any question as to the validity of a swearing in an officer before himself, by his name of office. Rex v. Harper, 5 East, 208.

An election of A. to a corporate office, in place of a supposed vacancy, created by B., cannot be referred to an existing vacancy created by C. Rex v. Smith, 2 M. & S. 406.

Where a recent charter of an ancient borough contained a clause expressly disqualifying certain persons from voting for corporate offices, but at the same time ratified and confirmed the ancient usages of the borough, by which certain other and different persons were also disqualified from voting at any nomination or election of corporate officers, and a person was elected to a corporate office in pursuance of the words of the charter, but not conformably to the ancient custom:—Held, that such election was void. Rex v. Abell, 3 D. & R. 390.

By several charters, the sheriffs of Norwich were to be chosen by the citizens and commonalty "from themselves;" a subsequent charter confirming former privileges, and regulating the time and mode of electing sheriffs, omitted the words "from themselves." The usage, however, both before and since had been to elect from among the freemen:—Held, that the last charter was not meant to vary the qualification; and that the restriction in the former charter could not be dispensed with; and that the election of a person not free was irregular. Rex v. Groul, 1 B. & Adol. 104.

The common council of London have not any jurisdiction to inquire concerning the election of any person to be one of the common councilmen of the city, for, by the immemorial custom of the city, the cognizance and examination of such elections belong to the king's court of record, held before the lord mayor and aldermen. Bolton v. Jeffes (in error), 2 Bro. P. C. 463.

To a mandamus to the lord mayor and aldermen of London, to admit and swear in A. B. to the office of alderman, they returned that the court of mayor and aldermen had, from time immemorial, the authority of examining and determining whether or not any person returned to them by the court of wardmote as an alderman, was, according to the discretion and sound consciences of the mayor and aldermen, a fit and proper person and duly qualified in that behalf, whensoever the fitness and qualification of the person so returned had been brought into question by the petition of any person interested therein; and that it was a necessary qualification of the person to be admitted to the office of alderman, that he should be a fit and proper person to support the dignity and discharge the duties of the office: that A. B. having been returned to them by the court of wardmote as duly elected, a petition by persons interested in the election was presented to them, charging circumstances which rendered A. B. an unfit person to be admitted to the office of alderman; and that they took the petition into consideration, and having heard witnesses, did adjudge according to their discretion and sound consciences, that A. B. was not a person fit and proper to support the dignity and discharge the duties of the office:—Held, that the custom set out in the return was good and valid in the law: held, secondly, that, as the fitness of the person to be admitted was to be determined according to the discretion of the mayor and aldermen, it was sufficient for them to state in the return that they had exercised their discretion, and adjudged that A. B. was unfit, without giving particular reasons. Rex v. London, 3 B. & Adol. 255; 2 Nev. & M. 126: S. C. contra, 9 B. & C. 1; 4 M. & R. 36.

Where the right of election of an alderman is by custom in the citizens, but the court has the power of rejecting the party returned to them as elected, it is not inconsistent to return to a mandamus to admit to the office of alderman, that the prosecutor was elected by the citizens according to custom, but was rejected by the court of aldermen, and so was not duly elected. Id.

Where at an election of aldermen in London, three poll clerks were first appointed, and two of them afterwards dismissed, and it appeared that, upon a scrutiny being demanded, the wardmote was adjourned to meet again on a fresh summons; that the mayor then went out of office, and the new mayor assembled a wardmote by a fresh summons, took the scrutiny, and declared A. B. duly elected, and that upon a return thereof being made to the court of mayor and aldermen, they upon petition declared the election void; it was held that the dismissal of the poll clerks, and the change of the mayor, were no objections to the validity of the election; and that the mode of adjourning the wardmote was not a dissolution, and did not affect the proceedings at the scrutiny. Id.

VIII. DUTIES OF CORPORATORS.

Payment of a fine, imposed by the by-laws of a corporation, for refusing to accept a corporate office, does not exempt the party elected from serving the office, and he may be compelled to do so by mandamus. Rex v. Bower, 2 D. & R. 862: S. C. not S. P. 1 B. & C. 492.

If a corporation choose only one bailiff, when the charter directs two, the one alone cannot act. Rex v. Smart, 4 Burr. 2241.

An alderman is not bound to reside within the borough, unless that is necessary to the discharge of the duties of his office, or he is so required by the charter. Rex v. Portsmouth, 4 D. & R. 761: 3 B. & C. 152.

Quære, if on the Corporation Act the onus probandi lies on the person elected? Crawford v. Powell, 1 W. Black. 229; 2 Burr. 1613.

The words, "other offices," in stat. 9 Anne, c. 20, means offices ejusdem generis with those before mentioned, which are confined to corporate offices; and, therefore, the office of registrar and clerk of the court of requests, though in a corporate town, is not a corporate office. Rex v. Hall, 2 D. & R. 341; 1 B. & C. 237.

A corporation having a customary duty on corn imported, it is a good custom that factors, free of the corporation, shall receive to their own use that part of the duty which arises from corn consigned to them as factors. Cocksedge v. Fanshawe, 1 Dougl. 119.

An undertaking in the court of aldermen to become a freeman of the city of London, within a certain time, was held to be equivalent to a covenant in writing for the same purpose. Frederick v. Frederick, 1 Bro. P. C. 257.

A proxy made by a canon to act for him in his absence, in all corporate business, is not revoked by the canon making the proxy having, in an intermediate period, appeared and acted for himself. Eyre v. Lovell, 3 Dougl. 67.

IX. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF CORPORATORS.

Corporators are not individually answerable for acts done in their corporate capacity, from which detriment happens; at least not without proof of malice. Harman v. Tappenden, 1 East, 555; 3 Esp. 278: S. P. Rex v. Wadham College, 1 East, 560, n.

The court of K. B. will not grant a criminal information against the members of a corporation for the misapplication of the corporation money. Rex v. Watson, 2 T. R. 199.

The highest bidder for certain lands sold by auction, and the mayor of a corporation on behalf of himself and the rest of the burgesses and commonalty of the borough, the vendors of the lands, signed a contract, in which they mutually promised to fulfil the conditions of sale on their respective parts; the conditions stated the title of the corporation to the premises, and stipulated that they should convey and might resell on default: the only act therein mentioned to be done by the plaintiff was the receiving the deposit:—Held, that the plaintiff could not maintain an action in his individual capacity against the purchaser for breach of this contract. Bowen v. Morris (in error), 2 Taunt. 374.

By an act, 42 Geo. 3, c. 56, for enlarging the poor-house of the parish of Chatham, certain persons therein named, and their successors, were appointed guardians of the poor in C., and trustees for putting the act in execution; and in order that there might be an impartial succession of guardians, and to keep the specified number, it was provided that eight should go out of office yearly, and that the parishioners should re-elect the same persons, or other inhabitants of the parish in their stead. By other sections, the guardians were empowered to raise money by mortgage or grant of annuity, to purchase land, and to take a conveyance to themselves and their successors: and they were to sue and be sued in the name of their treasurer for the time being, who was to be reimbursed by the guardians all costs and damages to which he should be put as plaintiff or defendant in such action. A. was treasurer to the said guardians under the provisions of the act from 1805 till 1811, and from 1811 to 1828. By a decree of the court of Chancery in 1808, the parish of C. was adjudged to be entitled, in respect of such part of it as was within the city of Rochester, to two thirty-second parts of certain revenues bequeathed for the use of the poor of that city, and a sum of 1115*l.* was paid over to A. as such treasurer on that account. That sum he, by order of the then guardians, paid over to them in 1822, and then applied it to the use of the poor of the whole parish. On the petition of the inhabitants of that part of the parish which was within the city of Rochester, the plaintiff, after he ceased to be treasurer, was ordered by the court of Chancery to pay the above-mentioned sum, which he had received as treasurer, into court, in order that it might be applied to the exclusive use of Chatham intra. He accordingly paid the amount, and brought an action against the guardians to recover it:—Held, that the guardians were, for the purposes of suing or being sued, in the nature of a corporation, and that A. was entitled to recover in an action, against the now treasurer, the sum paid by him into the court of Chancery, as money paid to the use of the guardians. Jeffreys v. Gurr, 2 B. & Adol. 833.

incorporation to amove, by order of council, one or more of the corporators, which declared that all or any of them so amoved should actually, and without further process be amoved, and which also provided, at the same time, that upon such amotion the remaining corporators might proceed to fill up the vacancies, cannot be exercised to such an extent as not to leave a sufficient number to make a re-election; and therefore an amoval of all is illegal and void. Rex v. Amery, 2 T. R. 515; 1 T. R. 575. But see 4 T. R. 122.

Where the charter of a corporation declared that "it should be lawful for the mayor and capital burgesses to remove any of their body for non-residence within the borough:"—Held, that this gave them a discretionary and not a compulsory power of amotion. Rex v. Westlooe, 5 D. & R. 414.

Where non-residence is a ground for removing a corporator, it is unnecessary to summon him previously to come and reside. Rex v. Lyme Regis, 1 Dougl. 149.

A mandamus was refused to compel a corporation to meet for the purpose of considering the propriety of removing non-resident members, where the charter in terms required residence. Rex v. Totness, 5 D. & R. 481.

If a corporation amove a member upon a non-charter or prescription day, it is as necessary that each member should be summoned, and have notice of the particular business intended to be proceeded upon, as in the case of a select number. Rex v. Doncaster, 2 Burr. 738; 2 Ld. Ken. 391.

A particular summons of a corporation assembly is requisite to amove a member. Rex v. Liverpool, 2 Burr. 723; 2 Ld. Ken. 424.

Bankruptcy is no cause for the amotion of a common councilman of Liverpool. Id.

When amotion out of a corporation is returned, the return must set forth the particular facts precisely. Id.

An alderman of London in custody in execution, and under an escape warrant without probability of discharge, may be amoved. Rex v. London, 4 Dougl. 361.

A., having the office of town clerk of a borough, to hold and exercise for life by himself or his sufficient deputy, appointed a deputy in 1823. A bill of indictment having been found against A. for forgery, he, in April, 1829, quitted the country. The deputy died on the 23d of April, 1830. At a meeting of the corporation held on the 31st of May, 1830, by adjournment from the 27th of April, one of the grand common days, it was resolved to remove A. from office, on the ground that he had neglected to attend, by himself or deputy, at that adjourned meeting, and at other meetings of the corporation:—Held, 1st, that the want of summons to A. was no objection to the removal, he not being within reach; 2dly, that no previous notice to the members of the corporation of the purposes of the meeting was necessary, inasmuch as it was held by adjournment from one of the grand common days, when every member of the corporation is supposed to be present; 3dly, that A. was properly removed from his office, inasmuch as under the circumstances he must be presumed to have left the country without any intention to return, and therefore, on the death of his deputy, there was no person capable of executing the office. Rex v. Harris, 1 B. & Adol. 936.

A by-law to give power of amotion for just cause is a good by-law, though the corporation that made it had no power of amotion expressly given by charter, or claimed by prescription. Rex v. Richardson, 1 Burr. 519; 2 Ld. Ken. 85.

XI. BY-LAWS.

1. Power of making.

A corporation by charter cannot make by-laws inconsistent with the intention, or counteracting the directions of their charter. Rex v. Cutbush, 4 Burr. 2204.

All by-laws made by corporations must be consistent with, and subordinate to, their constitution by charter. Hoblyn v. Rex (in error), 2 Bro. P. C. 329.

Upon the principle of variation from a charter:—Held, that a by-law directing that no person shall be elected mayor a second time within six years, was void. Rex v. Cambridge, 2 Selw. N. P. 1144.

A corporation created by letters patent, with a power of making by-laws, cannot make any laws to incur a forfeiture. Kirk v. Nowill, 1 T. R. 118.

Neither can a corporation, created by act of parliament, unless such a power is expressly given. Id.

In a company constituted by letters-patent, with power to make reasonable by-laws, a by-law for the steward to provide a dinner for certain members of the company on Lord Mayor's day, with an allowance for so doing, or to pay a fine of 20*l.*, or excuse himself by swearing he is not worth 300*l.*, is a bad by-law. Carter v. Sander-son, 5 Bing. 79; 2 M. & P. 164. And see Frame-work Knitters v. Green, 1 Ld. Raym. 113.

At all events, the allowance is a condition precedent, and ought to be averred in an action of debt for the penalty. Id.

The power to make by-laws is incident to the whole body of every corporation; and, therefore, if a charter give to a select body a power to make by-laws touching certain matters therein specified, that does not take away from the body at large their incidental power to make by-laws touching other matters not specified in the charter. Rex v. Westwood, 2 Dow & Clark, 21; 4 Bligh, N. S. 213; 7 Bing. 1; 7 D. & R. 267; 4 B. & C. 781.

Every by-law may be repealed by the same body which made it. Rex v. Ashwell, 12 East, 22.

In the absence of any precedent, the court refused a rule nisi for a mandamus calling on the mayor of a town to propose a resolution to the burgesses, in guild assembled, for repealing certain by-laws, though it was alleged that by-laws and ordinances might by charter be made, and had formerly been made at such guilds. Garrett v. Newcastle, 3 B. & Adol. 252.

In the city of York, which was incorporated before the time of memory, there had been a court from very ancient times, held first before the mayor and bailiffs, and, after a charter of Richard II., before the mayor and sheriffs. By a by-law made in the 3 & 4 Philip and Mary, by a select body of the corporation who had immemorially made rules and regulations as to the practice of the court, and who had at their discretion selected the persons admitted to practise as attorneys there, it was ordered, that thenceforth there should be no more than four persons admitted to be attorneys of the sheriff's court; and from that time it did not appear that any more than that number had ever been allowed to practise:—Held, that the by-law was reasonable, and that the usage limiting the number of attorneys to four was sufficiently ancient to satisfy the statute 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, s. 11. Rex v. York, 3 B. & Adol. 770.

2. In Restraint of Trade.

A by-law in restraint of trade is bad, unless there be a custom to support it. Heaketh v. Bredock, 3 Burr. 1847.

Where there is a custom to exclude foreigners from exercising a trade within a corporation, a by-law to support the custom, which gives a penalty to any but the corporation, is bad. Tetterdell v. Glazby, 2 Wils. 266.

A power granted by charter to a company exercising a particular trade in a certain place, to make by-laws for the government of all persons exercising that trade in that place, enables it to make by-laws binding on persons so exercising the trade who are not members of the company, as well as on those who are. Butcher's Company v. Morey, 1 H. Black. 370.

A by-law founded on a custom that no stranger person of right ought to use the craft of a tailor within a city, except he be free thereof, is a good by-law. Woolley v. Idle, 4 Burr. 1951.

A custom that none but a freeman, or the widow or partner of a freeman, shall sell by retail in a city, or the suburbs thereof, is valid. Yee v. Welbank, 4 B. & A. 438.

A by-law, that no person not being free of the Pewterer's Company shall exercise the trade of a pewterer within the city of London, is a by-law in restraint of trade, and is void, without proof of a special custom to support it. London v. Compton, 7 D. & R. 597.

And a by-law to oblige a person who has a right to be free of the city, to take up his freedom in some particular company, is in restraint of trade, and bad. Harrison v. Goodman, 1 Burr. 12.

But a by-law that a butcher in London shall be free of the butchers' company, is good. Rex v. Harrison, 3 Burr. 1322.

A by-law in a corporation that no person should slaughter animals within the walls of a city under certain penalties:—Held good, because merely a regulation of trade, and not a restraint, and other inhabitants bound, as well as the members of the corporation. Pierce v. Bartrum, Cowp. 269.

Semle, that a by-law made by a company carrying on trade in partnership, to prevent any one of the members carrying on a separate trade on his own account, is good. Rex v. Faversham, 8 T. R. 352.

A by-law made by the freemen of a company of oyster fishermen, prohibiting any freeman from being engaged in the trade of sending oysters to market from any other ground on the Kentish shore than the oyster ground of the company, under a penalty of 10*l.* and in case of refusal to pay the same, that such freeman shall thenceforth, and until the fine be paid, be excluded from all share of the profits to be made thereafter by the joint trade of the company, is void by law; there being no usage stated to that extent, but only a usage for the freemen to make orders for regulating the company and fishery, with fines and penalties for the breach of such orders, and for prohibiting the freemen from being engaged on other oyster grounds, under penalties to be stopped out of the money arising by the sale of the stint of oysters of such freemen. Adley v. Reeves, 2 M. & S. 53: S. C. nom. Adley v. Whitstable Company, 17 Ves. jun. 304.

The common council of the city of London have by custom a right to make ordinances for regulating carts worked within the city for hire, restraining their number, licensing them, and regulating the manner in which they should be licensed. A by-law was made in common council, that 420 of such carts, and no more, should, by the president and governors of Christ's Hospital, be allowed or licensed to work for hire within the city:—Held, that such by-law was supported by the custom; and that the discretionary power of licensing was rightly and ex necessitate delegated by the common council to a smaller body; and (on motion for a procedendo, after a return to a habeas corpus, obtained by a party sued on the by-law,) the court refused to inquire whether or not the number of 420 was reasonable. Shaw v. Pope, 2 B. & Adol. 465.

A custom of the city of London, that no person not being free may sell or put to sale any wares within the city or liberties by retail, or keep any shop or other place for show, sale or putting to sale, of wares by retail, or for use of any art, trade, &c., within the city, liberties, or suburbs, is sufficient ground for a by-law forbidding any non-freeman to show, sell, or put to sale, wares by retail within the city, liberties, or suburbs, or to use any art, trade, &c., within the same. To use an art, trade, &c., signifies here, to use as a master or principal. Clark v. Denton, 1 B. & Adol. 92.

A by-law that no person shall exercise the art of a painter in the city of London, not being free of the Company of Painters, is a by-law in restraint of trade, and void, unless there be a special custom to warrant it. Clark v. Le Cren, 9 B. & C. 52.

The Beer Act (1 Will. 4, c. 64,) does not abrogate a custom in a borough, that no one shall sell beer within the borough, except a freeman licensed by the mayor and aldermen. Leicester v. Burgess, 2 Nev. & M. 131.

A by-law of a corporation founded on a custom to exclude foreigners, and authorizing a distress for a penalty in case of a breach of the by-law, without a previous demand or refusal of such penalty, is bad. Davis v. Morgan, 1 C. & J. 587; 1 Tyr. 457; 1 Price's P. C. 77.

A defendant, justifying the taking of goods as a distress for a penalty incurred by breach of a by-law of a corporate company, must aver a previous demand and refusal of payment, and he must prove that averment, although the by-laws do not exact any such preliminary. Id.

A recital of demand, and refusal of penalties incurred by a breach of a by-law, in the warrant of distress put in evidence by plaintiff to prove the fact of the distress, and the persons by whom it was ordered, is not evidence of the facts therein recited, although put in as part of the plaintiff's evidence to support his action. Id.

Semle, that the declarations of deceased corporators are evidence by reputation of a custom to exclude strangers from trading in a particular town. Id.

Corporators are not competent witnesses to prove a custom of excluding strangers from exercising trades within a town, where a moiety of the penalty imposed by a by-law for breach of that custom goes to the corporation. Id.

So, semle, though the moiety be granted away by them, by by-law, to a company. Id.

Sixty years' usage has been considered as evidence of a by-law. Perkin v. Cutlers' Company, 1 Selw. N. P. 1145—Mansfield.

3. Other Things.

A by-law may be good in part and bad in part, if the two parts be distinct from each other and separately entire. Rex v. Faversham, 8 T. R. 352.

A by-law shall not be objected to in a summary way, upon motion, on the return to a habeas corpus, except in cases from London. Bal-lard v. Bennett, 2 Burr. 775.

Where a by-law made at the feet, in an action for a penalty for acting contrary to that by-law and all former by-laws, is relied on, they must all be set forth. Gerrish v. Rodman, 3 Wils. 155, 164.

An averment, in an information for contemptuous behaviour to a court, that the court consists of A. B. and C., is made out by a by-law enacting that A. B. and C. are sufficient to hold the court, although others may be present, and act as members of it. Rex v. Campbell, 1 Camp. 91—Ellenborough.

A gas-light company was incorporated by act of parliament, which provided that eighteen shareholders should be directors, and, as such, should use the common seal, manage the affairs of the company, lay out money, purchase lands, &c., and make contracts for lighting, and for the sale of materials. The company was empowered to make by-laws under seal for its government, and for regulating the proceedings of the directors, officers, servants, &c. At a meeting of the company, a resolution was passed, not under seal, that a remuneration should be allowed to every director for his attendance on courts, committees, &c., viz. one guinea for each time:—Held, that a director who had attended courts, &c., could not maintain an action for payments according to the above resolution; for that it was not a by-law within the statute, nor a contract (if such could have been available) to pay the directors, or any of them, for their attendances, and the directors could not be considered as servants to the company, and, as such, entitled to remuneration for their labour, according to its value. Dunston v. Imperial Gas Company, 3 B. & Adol. 125.

XII. DISSOLUTION OF CORPORATIONS.

The king may, at his discretion, seize the franchise of a corporation guilty of an offence amounting to a forfeiture. Rex v. Ponsonby, 1 Ves. jun. 8.

But he cannot by his prerogative destroy a corporation. Rex v. Amery, 2 T. R. 515; 1 T. R. 575; 2 Bro. P. C. 336. But see S. C. 4 T. R. 122.

A judgment of seizure quousque, &c., against a corporation, in default of appearance, operates as a final judgment to dissolve the corporation, if they do not appear in the same term, or the next at farthest. Id.

When an integral part of a corporation is gone, and the corporation has no power of restoring it, or of doing any corporate act, the corporation is so far dissolved that the crown may grant a new charter. Rex v. Pasmore, 3 T. R. 199.

The major part of an integral part of the corporation whose attendance is required at the election of officers being gone, it operates as a dissolution of the whole corporation, which has thereby lost the power of holding corporate assemblies for the purpose of filling up vacancies, and continuing itself. Rex v. Morris, 3 East, 213; 4 East, 17.

Therefore, where the election of mayor was to be made by the majority of an assembly, composed of several integral definite parts of a corporation, and other burgesses and inhabitants for the time being:—Held, that one of such definite integral parts, being reduced below a majority of its proper number, could no longer be represented in such corporate assembly, and the whole corporation was thereby dissolved, being no longer capable of continuing itself. Id.

In an action for tolls due to a corporation, the defendant, who had acquired the character of a corporator after the cause of action arose, but before trial, has no right to inspect the corporation books, and must still be considered as a foreigner quoad this action. Bristol v. Viger, 8 D. & R. 434.

I. GENERALLY.

By 6 Edw. 1, c. 1, (statute of Gloucester); in all cases where a party recovers damages he shall recover costs also.

By 23 Hen. 8, c. 15, where the plaintiff, after appearance of the defendant, shall be nonsuited, or have a verdict pass against him, the defendant shall be entitled to his costs.

The 24 Hen. 8, c. 8, excepts actions to the king's use.

The 8 Elix. c. 2, gives costs to the defendant on discontinuance and nonsuit.

The 4 Jac. 1, c. 3, extends the provisions of the 23 Hen. 8, so as to include actions of trespass, ejectione firmæ, and all other actions whatsoever; and applies to other courts as well as to the superior courts at Westminster.

The 13 Car. 2, st. 2, c. 2, s. 3, gives the defendant costs in the same manner, if the plaintiff is nonprossed for want of a declaration.

The 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, s. 3, gives costs to the plaintiff in actions of waste, debt for not setting out tithes, where the single value or damage found does not exceed twenty nobles, writs of scire facias, and suits upon prohibitions on judgment for him either on plea or demurrer; and to the defendant on verdict for him, or on non-suit or discontinuance.

By 58 Geo. 3, c. 30, in actions for assault and battery in inferior courts, if the damages given are under 40s., the plaintiff is to receive only so much costs as the damages given.

By s. 2, in courts not holding plea to the amount of 40s., if the jury, in actions for assault and battery, or for slanderous words, assess damages under 30s. the plaintiff is to recover costs to the amount only of the damages given.

The statute of Gloucester gives costs where damages are given by any statute made after that parliament. Jackson v. Calesworth, 1 T. R. 71: S. P. Creswell v. Houghton, 6 T. R. 355. And see Tyle v. Glode, 7 T. R. 268.

Wherever a plaintiff would be entitled to costs, the defendant is so reciprocally. Greetham v. Theale, 3 Burr. 1723.

Costs accruing upon process partake of the nature of the original debt. Anon. Loft, 617.

"Costs out of pocket" is a term for the largest costs. Id.

The court knows no distinction between costs generally, and full costs. Irwin v. Reddish, 1 D. & R. 413; 7 B. & A. 796.

By 10 Hen. 8, it is enacted, that no person shall practise the faculty of physic within the city of London, or seven miles thereof, unless licensed by the president, college, and commonalty of the faculty of physic, under the penalty of 5*l.* for every month he shall exercise the same faculty, without being so licensed:—Held, in an action of debt, brought to recover penalties incurred under this act, that the plaintiffs would be entitled to costs if they succeeded, because where a right is vested in an individual or corporation, the withholding that right, and thereby compelling a party to sue for it, is an injury for which damages may be recovered, and consequently, that, under the 4th of Jac. 1, c. 3, the defendant having succeeded was entitled to costs. College of Physicians v. Harrison, 9 B. & C. 524.

A plaintiff who has obtained a verdict against a defendant is entitled to his full costs, although the person who conducted his cause was not an attorney. Reader v. Bloom, 10 Moore, 261; 3 Bing. 9.

II. INTERLOCUTORY.

1. Motions and Rules.

Costs cannot be given on the refusal of a rule to show cause. Weldron v. Norris, 2 W. Black. 769.

Costs of showing cause against a rule in the first instance are never given. Rex v. Long, 1 M. & R. 139.

Though notice of motion was given. Gerrard v. Gaskill, 2 Chit. 401.

Where a party gives notice of an intended motion, and no one appears on the appointed day to make it, the court of Exchequer have no rule enabling them to give the other party, who has attended the court during the day for the purpose of opposing it, the costs of such attendance, where there has been only one notice given. Wara v. Bickford, 9 Price, 14.

Where a rule is not moved with costs, and nothing is said about them at the time of discharging it, they are not payable to the successful party. Anon. 1 Chit. 398.

If a rule is obtained to show cause why proceedings should not be set aside for irregularity with costs, and such rule is afterwards discharged, without special directions as to costs, it is discharged with costs, and the latter rule must be drawn up accordingly. Reg. Gen., K. B., M. T. 37 Geo. 3, 7 T. R. 82.

A plaintiff who arrests a defendant improperly, and contrary to the practice of the court, must pay the costs of a motion to cancel the bail-bond. Lear v. Heath, 1 Marsh. 19; 5 Taunt. 201.

The court discharged a rule which had been obtained for showing cause against delivering up a bail-bond, on entering a common appearance, in the case of a guarantie for the payment of goods sent to a third person, with costs, without ordering those of the motion to be paid by the defendant. Cope v. Jones, 9 Price, 155.

Where a rule to set aside proceedings is moved without costs, and the affidavits are answered, it must be discharged with costs. Tilley v. Henly, 1 Chit. 136.

Where a rule prays for several things, to some of which the party is entitled, and to others not, but cause is shown against all, no costs are given on either side; though, if cause had been shown against the bad part only, the party showing cause would have had costs. Aliven v. Furness, 2 Dowl. P. C. 49.

Costs of rules for enlarging the returns to writs in the Exchequer and the King's Bench, refused to the sheriff, the enlargement being made on his application, and for his benefit. Rex v. Coste, M'Clel. & Y. 196.

Where an affidavit answered a rule nisi for setting aside proceedings for irregularity, with costs, but was written in a cramped and slovenly hand, the court on that ground refused to grant the costs of the application. Bene v. Jones, 3 D. & R. 114.

The crown may receive costs on the refusal of a motion. Rex v. Hassel, M'Clel. 105.

On a motion for costs upon affidavit, a rule nisi only is granted. Rex v. Smith, 1 Ld. Ken. 378.

2. Summons and Orders.

Before the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, it was considered doubtful whether a judge had power to give costs at chambers: thus, in one case, it was held that a judge cannot grant costs at chambers. Anon. 1 Dowl. P. C. 52; 2 C. & J.

165; 2 Tyr. 172: S. P. Spicer v. Todd, 2 C. & J. 165.

And, accordingly, the costs of a summons at a judge's chambers were not allowed by the court. Read v. Lee, 2 B. & Adol. 415.

In another case it was considered that a judge at chambers had power to make an order for payment of costs upon a summons. Doe d. Prescott v. Roe, 2 M. & Scott, 119; 9 Bing. 104; 1 Dowl. P. C. 274.

Now, however, it would seem that a judge at chambers has power to order costs to be paid by either party according to his discretion. Hughes v. Brand, 2 Dowl. P. C. 131.

3. Setting aside and staying Proceedings.

It is a general rule that costs are allowed on setting aside proceedings for irregularity, but under very particular circumstances the court will make the rule absolute without costs. Anon. 1 Chit. 398, n.

Irregularities in practice are not excused from liability to costs on the ground of the party having been misled by Impey's Practice, or other unauthorized works. Crew v. Attwood, 7 Taunt. 70; 2 Marsh. 337.

Where, on moving to set aside proceedings for irregularity, the rule does not pray for costs, the court cannot give them. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriff), 2 Dowl. P. C. 5.

Where a rule for setting aside proceedings, on the ground of the defendant's Christian name being omitted, was moved without costs, and the defendant had received the writ without objection, the court of K. B. set aside the proceedings without costs. Tomlin v. Preston, 1 Chit. 397.

Semble, where proceedings have been set aside for irregularity, the plaintiff is not bound to pay the costs thereof, before he is at liberty to commence a fresh action. Anon. 2 Chit. 146.

Semble, that, upon setting aside a plea in abatement for irregularity, no costs are allowed. Poole v. Pembrey, 1 Dowl. P. C. 693.

On setting aside a verdict for a misdirection of the sheriff, the defendant will not be allowed costs. Anon. 1 Chit. 645, n.

Where an inquisition of damages before the sheriff was excessive, and the court granted a rule for setting it aside, leaving it to an arbitrator to say for what sum the verdict should stand, (nothing being said at the time as to costs), and the arbitrator reduced the damages considerably:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to the costs of setting aside the inquisition. Lewis v. Harris, 4 D. & R. 129; 2 B. & C. 620.

If, after rule obtained to set aside proceedings for irregularity, the other party offer to waive proceedings and pay the costs of the rule nisi, costs subsequent to the offer must fall on the side which does not accept it. Halton v. Stocking, 2 Tyr. 165; 2 C. & J. 60; 1 Dowl. P. C. 296; S. P. Ex parte Ardens, 1 Price's P. C. 149.

Where a party moves to set aside proceedings for a mere irregularity in process, which is amendable as of course, he is not entitled to costs. Popkins v. Amory, 5 M. & P. 319.

The costs of setting aside an interlocutory judgment, obtained in breach of good faith, ordered to abide the event of the suit. Anon. 3 Price, 489.

Costs of the application to set aside an interlocutory judgment signed for want of a plea, where the defendant pleaded non assumpsit, instead of nil debet, were, under the circumstances, ordered to be costs in the cause. Gray v. Swing, 1 Price's P. C. 35.

4 Payment of money into Court.

Where Plaintiff proceeds.—If defendant pay money into court, and plaintiff nevertheless proceed to trial, where a verdict is given against him, he is not entitled to the costs up to the time when the money was paid into court. Stevenson v. Yorke, 4 T. R. 10.

Nor when a juror is withdrawn. Stodhart v. Johnson, 3 T. R. 657.

Nor when the defendant has obtained judgment as in case of nonsuit. Crosby v. Olorenshaw, 2 M. & S. 335. But see contra, Seamour v. Bridge, 8 T. R. 408.

Nor in C. P. where the plaintiff proceeds, and suffers the defendant to sign judgment of nonpros against him. Postle v. Beckington, 1 Marsh. 510; 6 Taunt. 158.

But in C. P., if plaintiff proceed to trial after money paid into court, and the verdict is against him; he is, notwithstanding entitled to costs up to the time of the money paid in. Wilton v. Place, 2 B. & P. 56; S. P. Muller v. Hartshorne, 3 B. & P. 556; and Edwards v. Harrison, 11 Price, 533.

So, it was formerly held in K. B. that a plaintiff was entitled to all costs till the time of the defendant's paying money into court, notwithstanding he afterwards proceeded in the action. Hartley v. Bateson, 1 T. R. 529. And see Griffiths v. Williams, 1 T. R. 710.
